Communities in Myanmar's Dry Zone Adapting to Climate Change

Communities in Myanmar's Dry Zone are benefitting new farming techniques, including crop spacing methods, drought resistant crop selection, water conservation and environmentally sensitive livestock husbandry practices, as part of a United Nations Development Programme program, according to a press release issued by the international organization yesterday.

The agricultural techniques are being implemented as part of a project called "Addressing Climate Change Risks on Water Resources and Food Security in the Dry Zone of Myanmar".

The project is targeting 250,000 people living in the townships of Shwebo and Monywa in Sagaing Region, Myingyan and Nyaung Oo in Mandalay Region, and Chauk in Magway Region.

The four-year US$7.9 million project is the first in Myanmar to receive funding from the Adaptation Fund. The project is being implemented by UNDP in partnership with the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation and the Dry Zone Greening Department based in Mandalay. The project started in 2015 and will conclude in 2019.

Through the project, freshwater is made available to communities during the dry season and skills and tools for climate-resilient agricultural and livestock practices and climate risk information are provided.

Last week, UNDP Country Director, Peter Batchelor and the Director General of MONREC's Dry Zone Greening Department U Htay Aung visited some villages in Shwebo township in Sagaing Region and met with communities which are beneficiaries of the project. Some farmers are rearing climate resistant goats, pigs and poultry, while others are planting specially developed climate resistant pulses and other crops. As part of the field visit, they also had the opportunity to see a field where scientists from the Yezin Agricultural University and local farmers are selecting a rice variety best suited to the current local climatic conditions.

During his visit, Mr. Batchelor also met with the Chief Minister of Magway, HE Dr Aung Moe Nyo; the Chief Minister of Sagaing, HE Dr Myint Naing; and the Chief Minister of Mandalay, Dr Zaw Myint Maung. During his meetings he briefed them on the progress of the project, and assured them of UNDP's commitment to improving the livelihoods, and building resilience, of communities living in Myanmar's Dry Zone.—GNLM ■

Yangon-Mandalay Highway is busiest and most dangerous highway with 276 vehicle accidents in 2017

A total of 276 vehicle accidents occurred on the Yangon to Mandalay Highway this year, resulting in 63 fatalities, including 19 female and 44 male victims, and 492 injured people, including 233 females and 259 males.

Causes of the accidents included reckless driving, poor visibility due to weather, road damage, and stalled vehicles, wandering cattle and other obstructions. Myanmar has attempted to improve traffic safety along its busiest thoroughfare by increasing the number of road safety police and opening 16 police stations along the road since 2012. The Ministry of Construction has also attempted to improve damaged and defective portions of the highway, which is under the supervision of Highway Vehicles Supervisory Committee.

Despite these efforts the number of accidents along the highway have only increased over time.

In 2013, there were 259 accidents resulting in 113 deaths and 622 injuries.

In 2014, there were 412 accidents resulting in 157 deaths and 766 injuries.

In 2015, there were 453 accidents resulting in 124 deaths and 1,033 injuries.

In 2016, there were 744 accidents resulting in 170 deaths and 1,304 injuries.—Than Oo (Laymyetnar) ■

Increased migrant workers led to labour shortage in vineyards

INCREASED migrant workers rendered grapevine farmers labour scarcity, according to a report in yesterday Myawady Daily newspaper.

The grapevine farmers are faced with labour scarcity difficulty when they extend their vineyards. Labour shortage hiked up the wages up to Ks4,000 a day from Ks2,000-3,000.

With the increasing globalization of world trade, local people choose to work abroad to pursue better work. In addition, the grapevine growers from Yamethin Township are also expanding their vineyards.

The erratic weather condition caused the low yield and low quality. The growers are also weak in using proper input methods; providing nutrition, protection from pests and insects and protection for disease.

The grapes are mostly grown in Kyaukpadaung, Meiktila, Mandalay, Sagaing, Monywa, Pakoku, Yenangyoung, Yamethin and Pyawbwe townships.—GNLM

Myanmar's rice penetrated new market- Azerbaijan country in second week of June, according to a report of yesterday City News.

All the stakeholders in this agro supply chain are exerting concerted efforts to triple export. However, Myanmar agro industry is still faced with challenges like low yield, high production cost, inadequate quality, high transportation charges, high logistic cost, etc.

Myanmar's rice is exported to 53 countries from EU, Africa and Asia. During 11 and 17 June, 225 tonnes of rice were shipped to Azerbaijan and 15,320 tonnes of rice and parboiled rice with estimated worth of more than US$4.5 million were exported to foreign countries; Singapore, Afghanistan, Russia, Sri Lanka, Hong Kong, Bangladesh, South Africa, European Union and Azerbaijan.

During this period, thousand tones of broken rice were also shipped to South Africa, Singapore, Indonesia, European Union, Bangladesh and Madagascar.—GNLM

Singapore stood in second place in overall FDI countries list

Singapore placed behind only China in overall highest foreign investment countries line-up, contributing US$16.9 billion in 240 permitted projects, according to official figure released by the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration (DICA). The foreign direct investments (FDI) flowing into Myanmar amounted to over $71.2billion with more than 1,200 enterprises. China's investment in Myanmar accounted for over 26 per cent of total foreign investment value. Singapore's investments made up of over 23 per cent of total FDI, followed by Thailand and Hong Kong at third and fourth place respectively.

Chinese merchants come to Monywa for onions

Chinese merchants have come to commodity depot in Monywa town to buy onions at prevailing price since past two months, said U Myint Swe, onion broker from Monywa Township.

For two months, the Chinese merchants came daily to Monywa Town to purchase onions at prevailing price. The onions produced from central Myanmar are of higher quality against China's onions.

Chinese merchants buy Myanmar's onions for domestic consumption as well as to export as canned onions. Currently, the demand is high at Monywa market. China's onions are also flowing into Myanmar market but the consumers do not prefer it. Those who are engaged in snack production industry chose China's onions because its price is half of Myanmar's.

The prevailing price of onions is Ks1,200 a viss, said U Myint Swe. Currently, onions are harvested and the stocks are in hands of depot owners.

With the steady demand from China, the onions fetch a good price. Both the depot owners and the onion growers reap a handsome profit this year. —Myo Win Tun (Monywa)

Today belongs almost entirely to the Myanmar people

By Dr Tha Sein

Workers from Myanmar make up the backbone of Thai manual labour forces. A large number of Thai industries including a multi-billion dollar seafood sector are heavily reliant on Myanmar workers. Undocumented migrants are sometimes subject to exploitation by employers who hire undocumented foreign workers should face a fine of up to 800,000 baths (K 31.92 million) under the decree that went into effect on 23 June.

Thailand has to import migrant workers to offset the shortage of labour, particularly in the services and construction sectors. The country delayed a new labour law after 6500 Myanmar workers returned, and their return continues, sending a signal to Bangkok what the workers can and are willing to go back home without anxiety.

Bangkok's actions are certain to run into a major problem, prompting a gradual decline in both the morale of the workers and the business environment. Other problems remain in Thailand, such as the ethical conduct and transparency of Thai companies, while corruption scandals suggest some migrant fishermen were forced to work and unpaid.

This is not the first time the Thai government has imposed restrictions on the Myanmar workers. Each time a probe is set up and nothing concrete comes of it, with the problem simply fading from public attention. Myanmar officials should engage in negotiations with their Thai counterparts in the first place, given legalizing made by Thai government for foreign workers.

Most recently, the United States kept Thailand on a trafficking list, saying it did not meet the minimum standards to end human trafficking. It may bring into question whether the latter properly deal with the issue. Thailand could use this as a lesson and make things right before it is too late.

Contrary to the past, Myanmar is seen as a promising place for infrastructural investment and a production base, with 6.5 per cent real-term economic growth in 2016. Since the country opened up in 2012, the influx of Foreign Direct Investment-FDI reached its peak in 2014 with a total of over US$ 8 billion in approved investment for the year.

Nowadays, the scene in Myanmar is completely different. Business atmosphere is vibrant with a steady emergence of special economic zones. Tourism is booming. New property projects are coming up along with new transport facilities, pushing land prices up to new heights. It means the country marks a new phase and today belongs almost entirely to the Myanmar people. ■

Blockchain pilots making waves in developing Asia

By Alisa DiCaprio and Steven Beck

Not just a fancy but impractical idea, blockchain is taking on a crucial role in supply chain management and finance in developing Asia. Here are some works in progress.

We've all heard the buzz about the potential applications of blockchain technology. But what's actually happening in developing countries in Asia and the Pacific?

Beyond bitcoin payments and remittances, blockchain exists largely in the pilot stage. Governments and banks are collaborating with technology firms to see if it can be used to solve persistent problems like traceability, identification, and trust.

Let's bring some clarity to the hypotheticals. But first, what exactly is blockchain? It's a type of database that takes records and puts them in a block (akin to, say, a sheet in your Excel file).

Each block is then "chained" to the previous block, using a cryptographic signature. This allows blockchains to be used like a ledger, which can be shared and corroborated by anyone with permission.

"Supply chain transparency for commodities where provenance may impact consumers is moving forward quickly, and using blockchain for this is gaining traction."

In short, it's peer-to-peer sharing of data – it does not require a trusted intermediary. Let's look at some ways our countries are using it.

Georgia - land registry

In 2016, Georgia and a US-incorporated provider piloted a blockchain-based platform for the National Agency of Public Registry to record land titles and integrate them into the existing digital records system.

Georgians can now register land titles and verify the dates of transactions, thereby increasing transparency and accountability. The original agreement was expanded in 2017 to include other government departments.

Technically, there are two parts to the system. A private blockchain, on which the government records data on transactions, and a public blockchain. The information on ownership is publicly available, although the data underlying it are not - in order to protect the owner's privacy.

Cambodia - payment systems

Last April, the National Bank of Cambodia (NBC) signed an agreement with a Japanese startup to design a new payments system. The testing phase is expected to be launched by the end of this year.

The objective is to design a system for interbank transactions that will offer a secure and cost efficient way to transfer money. This can benefit many in a country where the commercial banking infrastructure is still evolving, but which enjoys solid mobile technology and connectivity.

Unique to this project is the collaborative relationship between the partners. The technology provider will build the infrastructure, and the NBC will contribute to the startup's ongoing technology design.

Globally, many central banks have been exploring the potential of blockchain. The International Monetary Fund has encouraged this activity and urged banks to study its implications.

"Supply chain transparency for commodities where provenance may impact consumers is moving forward quickly, and using blockchain for this is gaining traction."

Indonesia - sustainable supply chains

During the first half of 2016, a UK company piloted a blockchain project that tracked the provenance of yellowfin and skipjack tuna caught by local fishermen as part of a sustainable supply chain.

This allows proof of compliance at origin, which in can potentially replace the current paper records which are difficult to verify and subject to corruption.

The system is a mix of mobile technology and blockchain. Fishers registered their catches to the blockchain via text message. Additional data are later verified and added by NGOs. Once the information is transmitted through the supply chain, it cannot be altered, and the data are visible through the product's whole journey.

Supply chain transparency for commodities where provenance may impact consumers is moving forward quickly, and using blockchain for this is gaining traction.

Myanmar - microfinance transactions

BC Finance, the biggest micro-finance institution in Myanmar, is working with a Japanese firm to record transactions on blockchain.

The partners hope that this initiative can propel the sector's growth by cutting costs and reducing the administrative complexity of tracking large numbers of small transactions.

It is expected that blockchain technology can be useful in a country like Myanmar, where advanced accounting systems are not yet in place. However, obstacles include frequent power outages and low-quality local circuits.

Finance in general and trade finance in particular, is one of the more active areas for blockchain development. Commercial banks throughout the region are participating in consortiums to come up with blockchain solutions to the very expensive, slow, and opaque trade process.

Bottom line

Blockchain pilots are making waves in countries in developing Asia for two reasons.

The first reason is that most developing countries don't have legacy systems that need to be replaced. Blockchain can provide the first upgrade of an existing inefficient system, or introduce infrastructure that didn't exist before.

The second reason for the widespread interest stems from the light regulatory infrastructure in many countries. So far, this has been an opportunity, but it also raises some concerns as this technology matures.

ADB can play an important role in ensuring that blockchain is implemented in a development-friendly way. We can bring together regulators, best practices, IT experts, and officials to ensure everyone is on the same page.

Saraniya Ovadakatha delivered by Abhidhaja Maha Rattha Guru Abhidhaja Agga Maha Saddhamma Jotika Dr Bhaddanta Kumarabhivamsa from Bhamo monastery at the Suddasama all – 47 – member meeting of the Seventh State Sangha Maha Nayaka Committee of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar held on 9th Waxing of Waso, 1379 ME (2nd July, 2017, Sunday)

REVEREND monks who are members of the State Sangha Maha Nayaka Committee attending the suddasama all – 47 – member meeting of the Seventh State Sangha Maha Nayaka Committee,

I'm delighted to see you in good physical and mental health attending this meeting, laying emphasis upon religious cause.

Reverend monks,

At the Suddasama meeting of the Seventh State Sangha Maha Nayaka Committee, I would like to supplicate to you concerning the ovadakatha of the Buddha which is mentioned in Apadan Pali and Cariya Pitaka Pali as follows:

“Vivadam Bayato Dissava
Avivadañca Khemato,
Samagga Sakhila Hotha
Esa Buddhanussasani.

In this gatha, Vivadam Bhayato Dissava means regarding arguments as harmful. In this regard, there is the following phrase in Atthakatha, “Vivadam Bayato Dissavati, Vivadam Kalam Bayato Dissava Apayabhaghiti Dissava ñattava”, which means realizing the danger of being reborn in four unhappy abodes (duggati bhaya) in addition to being inflicted with Attanuvada plus paranuvada plus danta bhayas (dangers) in this present existence.

“Avivadanca Khemato” means regarding non-argument as harmless. In this regard, there is the following phrase in Atthaka-tha, “Avivadam Vivadato Viramanam, Nibbhappatti ti Khemato Dissava nattava”, which means realizing the effect of attainment of nibbana in addition to freedom from dangers in this present existence. Judging by these two gathas, you should particularly avoid arguments.

Mahaniddesa Pali text mentioned three categories of Samaggis – Ganasamaggi, Dhammasamaggi and Anabhinibbattisamaggi, derived from the word Samagga.

Among them, those falling under the category of Ganasamaggi are united, being on good terms with one another, never being engaged in arguments, like the milk easily mixing with water.

Dhammasamaggi means proper co-existence of thirty-seven Bodhipakkhiya dhamma-while Anabhinibbattisamaggi means the nature of saturation of nibbanadhatu of the monks who have already entered parinibbanahood with Anupadisesa nibbanadhatu.

Judging by the interpretation of atthakatha, the phrase, “Samagga Ekacitta” and the term “Samagga” suggest that all those wishing to have peace and be free from danger shall be united. As long as all of you monks are united, our sasana will be free from danger, purified, perpetuated and propagated. As long as the entire mass of citizens are united, the entire nation will be free from danger.

The term Sakhila from the following pali verse, “Sakhila Silittha Mettaya Dhuragataya Sabhamana Hothatiatto” from Atthakatha pali text is referred to those who speak in an amiable manner, and who speak words pleasing to the ears of the listeners. The mahakusala, mahakriyacittuppad is called “Sakhahlya”, which make people speak in such manners.

Dhamma Sangani Pali text has the following verse, “Tattha Katamam Sakhalyam, Ya Sa Vasa Antaka Kakkasa Parakatuka Parabhisajjani Kodhasamanta Asamadhisamvattanika Tatharupim Vacam Pahaya Ya Sa Vaca Nela Kannasuha Pemaniya Hadayangama Pori Bahujana Kanta Bahujana manapa tatharupim Vacam Basita Hoti, Ya Tatta sanhavacata Sakhilavacata Apharusavacata, Idam Vuccati Sakhalyam”.

According to the above-mentioned Pali gatha, you, members of State Sangha Maha Nayaka Committee, including myself, are noble Sakhila monks, and we are, therefore, needed to speak in an amiable manner in our discussion and deliberation of religious affairs. In order for us to gain the great merit all the time, we should avoid the undermentioned six words – Antaka, Kakkasa, Parakatuka, Parabhisajjani, Kodha samanta and Asamadhi-samvattanika – and use only the following seven words – Nela, Kannasukha, Pemaniya, Hadayangama, Pori, Bahujanakanta and Bahujanamanapa whereas Antaka means unsmooth words like Kumsana and Vambhana; Kakkasa suggests rough words unpleasing to ears; Parakatuka means bitter words; Parabhisajjani means irritating, heart breaking words; kodha samanta means words outraging the people; and Asamadhi-samvattanika means words that do not create Upacarasamadhi and Appanasamadhi. And Nela means flawless words; Kannasukha means words pleasing to the ears; Pemaniya means words that are lovely and cherishable; Hadayangama means words that are to the liking of one's heart; Pori means words that are polite and used by the dwellers of metropolitan cities; Bahujanakanta means the words the majority of the people like; and Bahujanamanapa means those encouraging words that are cherished by the majority of the people.

Venerable monks,

These words of advice of Gotama Buddha are those delivered by all preceding Buddhas of astronomical figures who have already attained parinibbana. This being so, I would like to supplicate to you, members of State Sangha Maha Nayaka Committee, to heed these words of advice.

May I conclude my ovadakatha by reciting the following gatha, “Vivadam Bayato Dissava, Avivadanca Khemato, Samagga Sakhila Hotha, Esa Buddhanussasani”. This pali gatha means “Oh monks! Please realize that argument is harmful, and non-argument is harmless. Be aware of this, you live in unity, speak amiable words. This is the advice of all preceding Buddhas who have already attained parinibbana”.

Trump talks North Korea threat in calls with China, Japan leaders BRIDGEWATER, NJ — US President Donald Trump spoke to Chinese President Xi Jinping and Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe on Sunday and discussed the threat posed by North Korea, while putting pressure on Beijing over trade.

“Both leaders reaffirmed their commitment to a denuclearized Korean Peninsula,” the White House said of Trump’s call with Xi.

“President Trump reiterated his determination to seek more balanced trade relations with America’s trading partners,” it said.

Trump has become increasingly frustrated with China’s inability to rein in North Korea, and the reference to trade was an indication that the one-time New York businessman may be ready to return to his tougher-talking ways on business with Beijing after holding back in hopes that it would put more pressure on Pyongyang.

Trump and Abe, in their call, reiterated their commitment to increase pressure on North Korea.

“They reaffirmed that the United States-Japan Alliance stands ready to defend and respond to any threat or action taken by North Korea,” the White House said in a statement.

The phone calls, ahead of meetings he will hold with both leaders at the G20 summit in Hamburg, Germany, on 7-8 July, come at a time of heightened concern over North Korea’s nuclear and missile programs.

Trump’s separate conversations with the two leaders followed White House talks with South Korea’s new president, Moon Jae-in, last week in which the US leader called on Asian powers to implement sanctions and demand North Korea “choose a better path and do it quickly.”

During and after a Florida summit with Xi in April, Trump praised his Chinese counterpart for agreeing to work on the North Korea issue and has held back on attacking Chinese trade practices he railed against during the presidential campaign.

But Trump has recently suggested he was running out of patience with China’s modest steps to pressure North Korea, which is working to develop a nuclear-tipped missile capable of hitting the United States, and has been considering moving ahead on trade actions.

Trump has been weighing new quotas or tariffs on steel imports for national security reasons and plans to discuss his concerns at the G20. Washington sees excess global production capacity, particularly in China, administration officials say.

On Thursday, the United States targeted a Chinese bank and sanctioned Chinese individuals and a firm for dealing with North Korea and approved a $1.42 billion arms deal with Taiwan - decisions that angered Beijing.

And on Sunday a US warship sailed near a disputed island in the South China Sea claimed by China, drawing a rebuke from the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Trump, who held talks with Abe earlier this year at the president’s Mar-a-Lago resort in Florida, has forged a united front with the Japanese leader on the need to exert pressure on North Korea to curb its nuclear and missile development.—Reuters ■

UK government will respond this year on police and teacher pay — May’s spokesman

LONDON — The British government will respond to recommendations on pay increases for teachers, police and some other public sector workers later this year, Prime Minister Theresa May’s spokesman said on Monday when asked about pressure to drop pay caps.

Media have reported some members of May’s top team of ministers want her to drop long-standing public sector pay restraints in response to voter dissatisfaction at more than seven years of austerity — cited as one reason for her Conservative Party’s poor election showing last month.

The spokesman said the government had already accepted the recommendations of pay bodies representing professions such as nurses and doctors, and would consider others in the normal way as and when they presented their cases.

China’s defence ministry says US damaged stability in South China Sea

BEIJING, — The United States has seriously damaged peace and stability in the South China Sea after a US warship sailed near a disputed island in waters claimed by China, the Asian nation’s defence ministry said on Monday.

The ministry resolutely opposes the entry of US warships into Chinese territory, it said in a statement on social media.

The actions of the United States navy seriously damaged the “political atmosphere” around the development of military ties between the two countries, the ministry added.

Merkel’s conservatives promise full employment by 2025

BERLIN — Chancellor Angela Merkel’s conservatives promised Germany more police, more homes and full employment within eight years, as they presented their programme on Monday for an election in which she will seek a fourth term in office.

With Europe’s biggest economy growing robustly, Merkel’s Christian Democrats (CDU) and their Bavarian sister party, the Christian Social Union (CSU), have made assurances that they will not raise taxes and will invest more.

Democrats (SPD) but would still need to team up with another party to govern.

On Monday they added the goal of full employment — which they define as a jobless rate of less than 3 per cent — by 2025 to their list of campaign pledges.

“We think we can do this,” Merkel told a news conference with CSU leader Horst Seehofer convened to present the election programme.

Germany’s jobless rate is currently at a post-reunification low of 5.5 per cent, and a level of 3 per cent has not been seen since the “Economic Miracle” boom of the mid-1970s.

The conservative parties also want to add 1.5 million homes during the next parliamentary term, and expand Germany’s broadband network.

On foreign policy, Merkel said they want a ‘Marshall Plan’ with Africa.

They also said they are prepared to work with the new French government to develop the euro zone step by step, but oppose a mutualisation of debts.—Reuters ■

Suspected Boko Haram militants kill nine, abduct dozens in Niger

NIAMEY — Suspected Boko Haram Islamist militants killed nine people and abducted dozens more in southern Niger on Sunday night, the local mayor and a journalist said.

The attackers rode camels into the village of Ngalewa, about 50 km (30 miles) north of the border with Nigeria — home of the Boko Haram insurgency — said Maman Nour, the director of a community radio station in the nearby town of Kabelawa.

“They killed nine people and they kidnapped around 30,” said Nour, who had spoken to fleeing villagers.

Abba Gata Issa,

mayor of the district, confirmed the nine dead and said around 40 women and children had been kidnapped.

Boko Haram launches frequent cross-border raids from its strongholds in northeastern Nigeria and has killed more than 20,000 people during its eight-year insurgency.

Last week bombers killed two people and wounded 11 others at a UN-managed camp in the same region of Niger that houses thousands of people who have fled Boko Haram violence. It was the first suicide attack in Niger’s southern Diffa region in a year.

Syrian army announces ceasefire in southern Syria until Thursday

BEIRUT — The Syrian army said it would suspend combat operations in southern Syria until Thursday, including in Quneitra province where Israel has hit army outposts in recent days, according to a statement carried by state television.

The army general command said the ceasefire took effect from midday (0900 GMT) on Sunday and was being done to support “reconciliation efforts”, in the second unilateral ceasefire in the last two weeks.

On 17 June, the army announced a ceasefire that only affected fighting in the southern city of Deraa along the border with Israel. This latest announcement extends the ceasefire alongside Deraa city to the whole of southern Syria, including the strategic southwestern Quneitra province near the border with Israel and also Sweida province in the southeast.—Reuters ■

Saudi Arabia, allies give Qatar two more days to accept demands

DOHA/DUBAI — Four Arab states that accuse Qatar of supporting terrorism agreed to extend until Tuesday a deadline for Doha to comply with a list of demands, as US President Donald Trump voiced concerns about the dispute to both sides.

Qatar has called the charges baseless and says the stiff demands — including closing Qatar-based al Jazeera

TV and ejecting Turkish troops based there — are so draconian that they appear designed to be rejected.

Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Egypt and the United Arab Emirates (UAE) have raised the possibility of further sanctions against Qatar if it does not comply with the 13 demands presented to Doha through mediator Kuwait.—Reuters ■

Islamic State cornered in Mosul as Iraq prepares victory celebrations

MOSUL, (Iraq) — Islamic State fighters were battling to hold on to the last few streets under their control in the Old City of Mosul on Monday, in what looked like a hopeless last stand in their former stronghold.

In fierce fighting, Iraqi army units forced the insurgents back, cornering them in a shrinking rectangle no more than 300 metres (yards) wide and 500 metres long by the Tigris river, according to a map published by the military media office.

Smoke covered parts of the Old City, rocked by air strikes and artillery salvos through the morning.

The number of Islamic State (IS) militants fighting in Mosul has dwindled from thousands at the start of the government offensive more than eight months ago to a mere couple of hundred now, according to the Iraqi military.

full control over the city and is expected by the end of this week. Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi is expected to visit Mosul to formally declare victory, and a week of nationwide celebrations is planned.

Mosul is by far the largest city ever controlled by Islamic State. It was here, nearly three years ago to the day, that it declared the founding of its “caliphate” over parts of Iraq and Syria.

The city’s fall would mark the effective end of the Iraqi half of the caliphate, although the group still controls territory west and south of Mosul, where tens of thousands of civilians live.

The group is retaliating with suicide attacks in the parts of Mosul taken by Iraqi forces and elsewhere in the country.

A suicide bomber dressed as a veiled woman killed 14 people and wounded 13 others in a displacement camp west of the capital Baghdad on Sunday, security sources said. IS claimed responsibility. Russian commercial ties pose great potential

BEIJING — Sino-Russian business ties are on the ascent and they still offer considerable potential, President of China Xi Jinping told TASS in an interview on the verge of the visit to Moscow.

“(Russian) President (Vladimir) Putin and I attach great significance to trade and economic cooperation between China and Russia and proactively stimulate its development.

Trade and economic ties are far-reaching and offer enormous potential in practical cooperation between our countries,” the President of China said. China has maintained the status of Russia’s largest trading partner for the seventh year in a row, he said.

“Despite the impact of such adverse factors as a sluggish global economy and fluctuating prices for oil and other base goods, the downward trend in the Sino-Russian trade was reversed last year. Trade turnover amounted to $69.53 bln and grew by 2.2% when compared to 2015. The bilateral trade acquired high dynamics during the first 5 months of this year and surged 26%. Expectations are that trade turnover may be over $80 bln by the end of the year,” Xi Jinping said.

“The structure is currently being streamlined and additional growth opportunities are seen,” the Chinese President said. In particular, trade in machinery and high technology products is rising dramatically (by 20.8% and 19.4% respectively in the first quarter of this year). Investment cooperation is gradually gaining traction and financial cooperation is deepening. “The Central Bank of Russia opened its first overseas representative office in China. A Russian company has become the first among companies from countries along the One Belt and One Road in successfully floating Panda Bonds on China’s exchange. Beijing announced the creation of the China-Russia investment fund for cultivating regional cooperation between the northeastern districts of China and Russia’s Far East,” Xi Jinping noted. Trade in agricultural products is growing at a rapid pace, he added.

Beijing “has already become the largest trading partner for the Far Eastern region of Russia,” the president of China said.

“The parties are proactively working on promising cooperation projects in such spheres as deep conversion of resources, port logistics, modern agriculture and infrastructural cooperation,” Xi Jinping added.—Tass

Indian Navy content with Russian-made aircraft carrier

ST PETERSBURG — The Soviet aircraft carrier Admiral Gorshkov renamed as the Vikramaditya after its upgrade and transfer to India is in an excellent condition and the Indian Navy is content with its operation, Nevskoye Design Bureau CEO Sergei Vlasov told TASS on Thursday.

“As for the aircraft carrier’s design, the Indian side did not have and does not have any questions. The ship is in an excellent condition; it has undergone docking and its underwater part is also in a very good condition. Its operation will determine the possibility of extending its service life,” the chief executive said.

“The Vikramaditya’s docking has shown that the aircraft carrier can withstand almost a five-year inter-docking period of work in warm seas,” the Nevskoye design bureau chief stressed.

“If it is normally maintained and timely repaired, it can serve for 40 and 50 years,” Vlasov added.

India signed an agreement with Russia on acquiring the aircraft carrier in January 2004. The Indian side received the hull of the Admiral Gorshkov for free on condition that the aircraft carrier would be upgraded and equipped with Russian-made aircraft. At the same time, Russia committed itself to training the Indian crew.

During the upgrade, the displacement of the aircraft carrier Vikramaditya grew to 45,000 tonnes.

The aircraft carrier designed by the Nevskoye design bureau received an advanced flight deck, a ski-jump ramp for fighter jet takeoff, radars, navigation, communications and aircraft control systems and other equipment.

The ship can carry 30 planes and helicopters, including Mikoyan MiG-29K (NATO reporting name: Fulcrum) fighter jets that are delivered for Russia’s aircraft carrier Admiral Kuznetsov as well.—Tass ■

Spanish police rescue kidnapped man held for 11 days

CASARRUBIOS DEL MONTE, Spain — Spanish police launched a dramatic raid to rescue a man they said had been kidnapped, drugged and held for 11 days, minutes before a 1.5 million-euro ($1.7 million) ransom was to be paid.

Video of the raid, released by police on Monday, showed officers with riot shields and pistols drawn breaking down the door of an apartment and the bound victim being told: “Be calm. We’re police. You’re free”.

Police said they had arrested four people in the town of Casarrubios del Monte in the central province of Toledo and another in Madrid in connection with the incident.

The victim, who has not been named, was kidnapped from his home in the Catalan province of Girona in June by a gang who beat and drugged him before forcing him into a car at gunpoint, according to police.

The victim’s wife received a telephone call demanding 1.5 million euros in exchange for his being released alive.

Police said last week’s raid was launched moments before the ransom was due to be handed over to the kidnappers in a car park. The gang had previously operated in Eastern Europe, they said.

Its alleged ringleader is a Romanian citizen who had studied medicine in Madrid and was working in a hospital there. He is alleged to have procured the drugs used to sedate the victim, police said.

The victim was described as a Serbian who was also a naturalized Dutch citizen. He was taken to hospital to receive treatment for his injuries.—Reuters ■

China, Russia share opposition to US THAAD in South Korea: Xi

MOSCOW — Chinese President Xi Jinping set off on a visit to Russia on Monday stressing the grave threat a US anti-missile system in South Korea poses to both Chinese and Russian interests.

China has repeatedly stated its opposition to the US Terminal High Altitude Area Defence (THAAD) anti-missile system and has called for its deployment to stopped, and the missiles already installed to be removed. China says the system’s powerful radar can probe deep into its territory, undermining its security and a regional balance while doing nothing to stop North Korea in its relentless pursuit of nuclear weapons and the missiles to deliver them.

“The US deployment of an advanced anti-missile system in South Korea gravely harms the strategic security interests of China, Russia and other countries in the region,” China’s state Xinhua news agency cited Xi as saying. The United States and South Korea say the THAAD is solely aimed at defending the South from North Korea.

China and Russia have maintained close communication and coordination on the issue and held very similar views on it, Xi said in an interview with Russian media. “Beijing and Moscow are steadfastly opposed to the THAAD deployment and seriously suggest that relevant countries stop and cancel the installation,” Xinhua cited xi as saying. China and Russia would take “necessary measures”, either together or independently, to protect their interests, Xi said, without elaborating, according to Xinhua.—Reuters ■

Box Office: 'Despicable Me 3' rules, 'Baby Driver' shows strong, Will Ferrell's 'House' collapses

LOS ANGELES — Illumination and Universal's "Despicable Me 3" is cruising to an easy box office win during a busy holiday weekend. The latest in the franchise is opening to $75.4 million from 4,529 locations — the widest domestic release ever. That total is lower than earlier estimates, which pegged the film above $80 million (earlier tracking suggested it could land even higher), but nevertheless it remains the weekend's big winner.

Steve Carell plays double duty in "Despicable Me 3" as the series' protagonist Gru, and now also his twin brother, Dru. The plot centres on the brothers, as they team up for a criminal heist. "South Park" co-creator Trey Parker joins the franchise to voice the villain. Critics are generally on the movie's side, earning it a 62% on Rotten Tomatoes. The movie earned an A- CinemaScore from audiences, which is lower than the A earned by the first two installments and "Minions."

"With these characters that have reached a level of ubiquity in our culture, these movies continue to create this want to see," said Nick Carpou, Universal's domestic distribution chief, who added, "I think we have the best marketing group in the business."

Despite "Despicable's" rule, perhaps the more interesting stories for the industry reside further down the box office chart.

Starting with "Baby Driver," from Sony's TriStar Pictures, MRC, and Working Title. Edgar Wright's latest also appears to be his biggest box office hit, as it's cruising to $30 million from 3,226 locations — that's including the $5.7 million head start the movie got by opening early in previews on Tuesday.

The movie centres around a character named Baby (Ansel Elgort), who becomes the getaway driver for a kingpin named Doc (Kevin Spacey). Music plays an integral role in the film since Baby suffered a traumatic experience as a child that left him with tinnitus, which he blocks out with music. The rest of the cast includes Lily James, Jon Bernthal, Eiza Gonzalez, Jon Hamm, and Jamie Foxx.

"Edgar and our partners at MRC and Working Title have made one of the most original and entertaining films in recent memory, and we're so thrilled to see it received as a bonafide hit in a crowded summer season," said Sony's distribution chief Adrian Smith.

"Baby Driver," like "Get Out" earlier this year and "The Big Sick," currently showing strong in limited release, is the kind of project that gets Hollywood excited about the chance for original ideas to also be financially viable. Wright's film picked up buzz when it won the Audience Award and positive early reviews at the SXSW Film Festival. The movie's marketing capitalized on its colorful aesthetic and emphasis on music.

Amy Poehler and Will Ferrell's "The House," meanwhile, is having trouble attracting visitors. The R-rated comedy from New Line, Warner Bros., and Village Roadshow is opening to $9 million from 3,134 locations.

"The House" is the story of a husband (Ferrell) and wife (Poehler) who start an underground casino to help raise money for their daughter's college fund. Andrew Jay Cohen directed from a script that he wrote with Brendan O'Brien — the two previously collaborated on the "Neighbors" movies.

For the weekend's top five, Paramount's "Transformers: The Last Knight" should land in third with $17 million during its second weekend. "Wonder Woman" continues to be a force for Warner Bros., and is on its way to $15.6 million domestically during its fifth weekend. The movie has crossed $700 million worldwide and passed "Suicide Squad" and "Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice" at the domestic box office. And Disney and Pixar's "Cars 3" should take the five slot during its third week with $9.5 million domestically.

After a strong start to 2017, a rather slow summer box office overall has brought the year-to-date box office numbers down to about even with last year.

"A weak May followed by a June that failed to become the savior of the summer now puts July in the hot seat to deliver the goods and get us out of the summer season doldrums," said Paul Dergarabedian, senior media analyst at ComScore.

Outside of the major release circuit, the arthouse appears to have some juice for the first time this summer with strong numbers from "The Little Hours," "The Beguiled," and "The Big Sick."

Gunpowder and Sky's first theatrical release, "Little Hours" posted the highest per screen average from two locations this weekend. The nun-centric religious satire starring Alison Brie and Aubrey Plaza should open to $61,560. Meanwhile, Sofia Coppola's "Beguiled" expects to crack the top ten in limited release, after expanding to 674 locations. The Focus Features release should make an estimated $3.3 million over the three-day weekend. And Kumail Nanjiani's semi-autobiographical romantic comedy "Big Sick" expanded to 71 locations, posting a three-day total of $1.67 million. Lionsgate and Amazon Studios are planning to push the film to wide release on 14 July.—Reuters ■

Michelle Rodriguez clarifies 'Fast & Furious' comments in new

LOS ANGELES — Actress Michelle Rodriguez, who had threatened to leave the "Fast & Furious" franchise because of its treatment of women, has now called her co-star Vin Diesel the "biggest supporter of strong women".

In a video posted on Diesel's Instagram account, Rodriguez clarified that her recent comments were not directed at the actor, who is also a producer on the "Fast and Furious" films, reported Entertainment Weekly.

"Vin, for many years you've been the biggest supporter of strong women," Rodriguez said in the video.

"I've always appreciated that about you throughout the years. Just know that if I ever post anything, that it's not you I'm talking to."

Diesel, who kissed Rodriguez on the forehead mid-video, responded to the actress' words with a laugh. "Of course it's not me!" he said.

In the caption of the post, Diesel added, "Proud of Our saga but we must try to reach higher each time. The challenge is what makes it fun and exciting. It's also why this saga has reached the level that it has you have been the best fans in film history and we are forever grateful. Dom and Letty.—PTI ■

Gemma Arterton won't star in 'Christopher Robin'

LOS ANGELES — Actress Gemma Arterton is no longer attached to star in "Christopher Robin."

Representatives for the actress had been speaking with Disney for weeks, but talks did not progress from there, according to The Hollywood Reporter.

Ewan McGregor is starring as the title character, the now-grown child from AA.Milne's Winnie the Pooh stories, in the movie being directed by Marc Forster.

McGregor will play the adult Christopher Robin, who has lost his sense of imagination and is a businessman focused on work and success.

The movie is set to begin shooting later this summer in the UK. "The Jungle Book" producer Brigham Taylor is producing.—PTI ■

What happens in Vegas: Nevada puts pot on the menu for fun-seekers

LAS VEGAS — Nevada, the only state where both gambling and prostitution are legal, is adding recreational marijuana to its list of sanctioned indulgences for adults, with sales kicking off at more than dozen shops beginning on Saturday. As result of a legalization measure approved by Nevada voters in November, the state will join four other US states and the District of Columbia in allowing recreational sales.

Authorized marijuana shops will be able to sell up to one ounce (28 grams) for recreational use by customers 21 years and older, said Stephanie Klapstein, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Taxation.

Public consumption of marijuana is prohibited, and Nevada has enacted new regulations against edible forms of pot that could appeal to children, such as fruit-shaped candies infused with cannabis. Nevada is also imposing a 10 percent excise tax on pot sales in addition to the regular 4.6 per cent state sales tax. Nevada has yet to finalize the exact number of stores that regulators will approve. Sixty applications were submitted from across the state, according to Klapstein, whose department is overseeing the state's pot market. Only medical cannabis dispensaries, which became legal in the state in 2015, are eligible to apply for licenses for recreational sales. Many of them are expected to open in Las Vegas, Nevada's largest city and gambling magnet.

"Tens of millions of visitors per year from all over the US and around the world will see firsthand that regulating marijuana works," said Mason Tvert, a spokesman for the Marijuana Policy Project, a group that backed the November 2016 ballot measure. Voters in three other states — California, Maine and Massachusetts — have also approved marijuana legalization. In 2012, Washington and Colorado were the first states to legalize recreational marijuana, followed by Oregon and Alaska. Marijuana remains illegal under federal law. Most US states allow it for medical purposes, but not for recreation.

A US Department of Justice spokesman in an email declined to comment on Nevada's state-sanctioned marijuana sales and added that the department is reviewing its policies on marijuana enforcement.

US Attorney General Jeff Sessions has long opposed easing marijuana restrictions. At a speech in March, he described marijuana as "only slightly less awful" than heroin and said the United States needed to discourage drug use. —Reuters ■

Online literature booms in China

BEIJING — Online literature is booming in China, and its market size has exceeded 9 billion yuan (about 1.32 billion US dollars), authorities said.

By the end of 2016, there were 333 million online literature readers, accounting for 43.3 per cent of the total number of netizens in China, according to Beijing Municipal Bureau of Press, Publication, Radio, Film and Television.

Among them, 304 million users access literature through mobile phones. Over the last 20 years, China's online literature industry has registered explosive growth, with an annual growth rate of 20 per cent, the bureau said. An online literature convention will be held in Beijing from 11 to 13 August. "China's online literature has entered an era of golden opportunities. Much of the literature has gone beyond borders to overseas countries and regions," said Yang Shuo, head of the bureau. —Xinhua ■

Germany's Loew spoilt for choice with World Cup looming

SAINT PETERSBURG, Russia — After Germany's success at the Confederations Cup and Under 21 European championship over the last few days, coach Joachim Loew must feel like a kid in a candy store as he maps out his plans for next year's World Cup title defence in Russia.

Despite resting more than half a dozen key players this summer, Germany won the Confederations Cup for the first time on Sunday by beating South American champions Chile 1-0.

Two days earlier, the country's Under-21 team secured the European title, shocking favourites Spain by the same score and confirming the country's stellar work at youth level.

The 57-year-old Loew, now in his 11th year in charge, has a pool of more than 40 players to monitor as the clock ticks down to next year's World Cup finals. All of them battle-tested and with tournament experience.

"Joachim Loew now has the big chance, with a mix of experience and dynamism, to put together a strong squad (for next year)," said German Football Association (DFB) President Reinhard Grindel. "We have a big pool to choose from."

The biggest problem for Loew is likely to be who to leave out. Players like Confederations Cup top scorers Timo Werner, Lars Stindl and Leon Goretzka, who all netted three times at the tournament, have every right to believe their fine performances in Russia will be a stepping stone to the 2018 World Cup squad.

Antonio Ruediger, Sebastian Rudy and Mathias Ginter also rose to the occasion while Julian Draxler, who captained the team in the absence of Manuel Neuer, was voted player of the tournament. "We certainly have a lot of players who in those two tournaments have filled up on confidence," Loew said.—Reuters ■

Sugita in red-hot form ahead of Wimbledon

LONDON (England) — Fresh from claiming his first career ATP title at the Antalya Open in southern Turkey, Yuichi Sugita arrived in London on Sunday and said he could not hope to start Wimbledon on a better note.

Sugita moved up from 66th to a career-best 44th in the latest ATP rankings. The improvement puts him second behind Kei Nishikori on the list of all-time highest-ranked male Japanese singles players, surpassing Shuzo Matsuoka whose best was 46th, achieved in 1992.

Wimbledon nine seed Nishikori, who was drawn against Italy's Marco Cecchinato in the first round, remained unchanged at No 9 on the ATP rankings.

"I was able to achieve good results (in Turkey) and this is a perfect way to head into Wimbledon," said Sugita.

Instead of celebrating in Turkey after Saturday's final against Adrian Mannarino, Sugita opted to take a red-eye flight to London ahead of his first-round match at Wimbledon. On Tuesday, Sugita faces Brydan Klein of Britain who was granted a wildcard entry into the main draw for the 3-16 July Grand Slam event.

"The speed of the balls (off the court) was really high in Antalya so I have to adjust myself here," said Sugita.

Wimbledon and the Antalya Open are among the seven grass court tournaments on the ATP World Tour. "This is where I have to win. I felt myself bracing the moment I set foot in the facility (in Wimbledon)," he said.—Kyodo News ■

Djokovic winning Wimbledon should not surprise anyone — Agassi

LONDON — Novak Djokovic has lost his aura of invincibility but coach Andre Agassi says nobody should be surprised if the Serb goes on to claim his fourth Wimbledon title this month.

Djokovic has dropped to fourth in singles rankings after an inconsistent season and the 30-year-old's Aegon International triumph on Saturday was only his second title of the year. "Don't be surprised," eight-time grand slam winner Agassi, who joined Djokovic's team prior to French Open in May, was quoted as saying by the Guardian newspaper. "Can a guy like this objectively find his way back to the trophy? Heck, yeah he could....That's the plan, that's always the plan – to get better – and the belief in winning has to be yours and yours alone." —Reuters ■
