India pulse companies stock up on Myanmar beans

May Thet Hnin

WITH the expectation that Myanmar beans will be imported into India by the end of March, some bean companies in India are starting to stock up on Myanmar beans, according to U Min Ko Oo, the secretary of the Myanmar Pulses, Beans and Sesame Seed Merchants Association.

Four months ago, India restricted the import of non-domestic pulses and beans, which dramatically affected the pulses sector in Myanmar.

"Some India bean companies started buying Myanmar beans in order to be ready to sell in the market and expect the bean price to rise, if India's Restricted Pulse Import Policy changes at the end of March," U Min Ko Oo said.

"The current purchases by the companies in India are not imported, but stored in Myanmar for the short-term until the restrictions are lifted," he added.

According to the India import amended policy issued in August, India could buy only 200,000 tons of pigeon bean and 300,000 tons of mung bean and green bean from other countries, including Myanmar.

India pulse companies stock up ...

Following India’s import restriction on pulses in August, mung bean and pigeon peas prices plummeted. Before this announcement, a ton of pigeon peas fetched up to Ks650,000, while mung bean price was Ks800,000 per ton. Moreover, around 100,000 tons of pigeon peas and nearly 200,000 tons of mung bean were stockpiled in August when India suspended pulses importation.

Currently, the price of mung bean and pigeon peas increased slightly with demand from Bangladesh, Nepal, Malaysia, Indonesia and Dubai, even though India has suspended pea purchases.

“The stocks will gradually decrease because we export around 30,000 tons of beans per month to other countries. At present, a huge stock of around 30,000 tons of pigeon peas and 120,000 tons of mung beans are piling up,” said U Min Ko Oo, the secretary of the Myanmar Pulses, Beans and Sesame Seeds Merchants Association.

Currently, the price of mung bean is Ks545,000 per tons while the pigeon peas are selling for Ks375,000 per tons. To be able to control the bean market, traders have formed a committee and purchased 10,000 tons of pigeon bean and over 3,800 tons of mung bean. During the time that India has suspended pea purchases, the government will buy directly from local growers with a Ks15 billion fund in January. The bean cultivators are also planning to grow other crops instead of mung bean and pigeon bean next season. The market of mung bean, pigeon bean and green which are cultivated in Myanmar relied on only India bean market. Myanmar has exported around 1.5 million tons of bean to India annually. ■

12th Pyin Oo Lwin flower festival to feature 200,000 flowers

THE 12th Pyin Oo Lwin Flower Festival held in the National Kandawgyi Botanical Garden, Pyin Oo Lwin, Mandalay Region from 16 to 31 December will showcase close to 200,000 flower species.

Officials said that if the situation of the flowers is good, the festival will be extended. The flower festival will also include musical entertainment and shops. Tens of thousands of people usually visit the annual flower festival, said Ko Kyaw Lin Oo, in charge of the National Kandawgyi Botanical Garden.

"There were more visitors this year, and if the conditions of the flowers and the weather are good, the festival will be extended beyond 31 December", added Ko Kyaw Lwin Oo.

About 200,000 flowers of differing colours from 48 different types of flowers will be displayed. The entry is Ks500 for children and Ks1,000 for adults. About 10,000 visitors are expected to visit daily. Due to recent rain, there were some difficulties in planting the flow-

"About 20 per cent of the flowers displayed are fakes, but 80 per cent are real. Even the flower festival in Chiang Mai, Thailand is unable to display 100 per cent real flowers. The real flowers for the festival were planted in October, so almost everything is ready" said U Wai Phyo Aung, the executive director of National Kandawgyi Botanical Garden.

Rain also caused a problem for the 2016 flower festival, where more than 200,000 flowers were planted, but only 30,000 survived the weather. Flowers are planted four times a year for at the National Kandawgyi Botanical Garden for the festival, including flowers from Thailand and China, it is learnt. — Aung Thant Naing ■

Ocean liner sailing in Attayan River causes shortage of fish

FISHERMEN in Kyaikmayaw Township, Mon State have been catching fewer fish because of ocean liners entering the Attayan River, according to the report in the Myawady Daily. Philippine leader declares unilateral ceasefire for Christmas

MANILA — Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte has declared a 10-day unilateral ceasefire with communist rebels to allow Filipinos to celebrate a “stress-free” Christmas season, two weeks after peace talks with the insurgents were formally scrapped.

Presidential spokesman Harry Roque said Duterte had ordered the army and police to suspend offensive operations from 24 December to 2 January “to lessen the apprehension of the public this Christmas season”.

He said he expected the Maoists and their political leaders to “do a similar gesture of goodwill.”

There was no immediate comment from the communist rebel movement, whose top leaders and negotiators have been living in exile in The Netherlands since the late 1980s.

Duterte restarted a stalled peace process and freed several communist leaders as a gesture of good faith when he came to office last year but he recently abandoned talks due to escalating rebel attacks.

He has vented his fury on a near-daily basis at what he considers duplicity by the Communist Party of the Philippines

(CPP) and its armed wing, the New People's Army (NPA). He has collectively declared them a “terrorist organization” and has ended the three-decades peace process.

The rebel forces, estimated to number around 3,000, have been waging a protracted guerrilla warfare in the countryside for nearly 50 years in a conflict that has killed more than 40,000 people and stifled growth in resource-rich areas of the Philippines.

The guerrillas have been targeting mines, plantations, construction and telecommunication companies, demanding “revolutionary taxation” to finance arms purchases and recruitment activities.

Duterte on Tuesday night said he only wanted Filipinos to celebrate a “stress-free” Christmas. “I do not want to add more strain to what people are now suffering,” he told reporters. —Reuters ■

Crews battling California wildfire make headway in third day of fair weather

LOS ANGELES — Crews battling a devastating California wildfire that now ranks as the state's second-largest on record capitalized on a third straight day of favourable weather conditions on Tuesday as they made greater progress corralling the flames.

With the so-called Thomas fire blazing into its third week in the coastal mountains, foothills and canyons of Ventura and Santa Barbara counties northwest of Los Angeles, officials scaled back evacuation orders, sent home some visiting firefighters and reported improved air quality.

“I would definitely say things are looking better today than they have in the last two weeks,” Rudy Evenson, a spokesman for the incident command center, told Reuters by telephone.

Higher humidity, combined with diminished winds and temperatures to ease firefighters' jobs since Sunday, but the region remains “critically dry,” a group of agencies said in a statement.

More than 1,000 homes and other buildings have gone up in flames and about 18,000 structures remained listed as threatened from a late-season firestorm that kept crews on the defensive for the better part of two weeks. One firefighter died last Thursday near the town of Fillmore in Ventura County.

Still, fire managers are “cautiously optimistic” of having gained sufficient ground this week to protect populated areas against the return of high winds forecast for Wednesday night and early Thursday.

“We feel pretty confident about that for now,” Evenson added. By Tuesday night, firefighters had carved containment lines around 55 per cent of the blaze's perimeter — up from 50 percent earlier in the day. But the fire has still spread by several hundred acres a day since the weekend.

In total the fire has scorched 272,000 acres (110,074 hectares) of drought-parched chaparral and brush since igniting on 4 December, covering an area equivalent to nearly a third of Rhode Island.

The latest tally makes the Thomas blaze one of the two largest single wildfires documented in California, second only to the 2003 Cedar fire in San Diego County, which consumed a record 273,246 acres (110,600 hectares) and killed 15 people.

The Thomas fire was initially stoked by hot, dry Santa Ana winds blowing with rare hurricane force from the eastern desert, spreading flames across miles of rugged coastal terrain faster than firefighters could keep up. —Reuters ■

Thailand seeks air safety rating upgrade by US aviation body

BANGKOK — Thailand aims to get its air safety rating upgraded by the US Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) by March, the country's transport minister said on Wednesday, after the FAA downgraded the rating in December 2015.

Thailand's Department of Civil Aviation (DCA) was downgraded to Category 2 from 1 because it fell short of the FAA's standards. “We aim to be restored back to Category 1 by March,” Transport Minister Arkom Termpittayapaisith told reporters.

Arkorn's comment came three months after the United Nations International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) removed a red flag against Thailand over safety concerns in October.

He said Thailand will speed up its inspection of pilot qualifications and aim to have more aviation personnel and qualified pilots to be considered for the safety ratings upgrade.

Bangkok is a regional airline hub and Thailand targeted a record 33 million to 34 million tourist arrivals this year. —Reuters ■

Myanmar Companies Act, 2017 of great virtues

THE new Myanmar Companies Act which entrepreneurs at home and abroad have been waiting for a long time has already been promulgated on 6th December 2017. Just prior to its promulgation, the former Burma Companies Act which was enacted in 1940, has now reached 77 years. Being promulgated under colonial rule, undoubtedly it needs amending.

One characteristic of the presently promulgated Myanmar Companies Act is letting foreign investors invest up to 35 percent in local companies. In other words, it means that the said local company is acknowledged as Myanmar citizen-owned one though foreign investment includes 35 percent whereas in the abolished old act it was acknowledged as a foreigner-owned company if a foreigner owns just one percent of the shares in the company. Here, someone may ask a question as to what benefits we will have over the acknowledgement as Myanmar citizen-owned company, though the equity held by the foreign partner is 35 percent.

The first-ever result we will acquire is that the local companies will accept foreign direct investments willingly.

ments technical knowhow greatly needed by local companies, for acquisition of much profit for them. In addition, foreign investors will wholeheartedly cooperate with local companies to get markets for the produced outputs.

Being the long-awaited setting/scene of Myanmar companies, it is the setting which the newly-promulgated Myanmar Companies Act, 2017 will bring about. Another characteristic of the New Act is that foreign investors have the right to possess 35 percent shares and simultaneously they will have rights to sell their shares at the Yangon Stock Exchange. It is the first and rare chance given by the Myanmar Companies Act, 2017 and it will strengthen Myanmar's sole Yangon Stock Exchange. Here, we would like to express our heartfelt welcome towards the Myanmar Companies Act, 2017 of great virtues. ■

Make medicines accessible for all

Everyone everywhere should have access to essential medicines

Dr Poonam Khetrapal Singh
(Regional Director, World Health Organization South-East Asia Region).

By Dr Poonam Khetrapal Singh

ACCCESS to medicines is a critical factor to ensure healthy lives and promote well-being of all people of all ages. Medicines exist. But are often inaccessible for reasons beyond control. They may be too costly - purchasing them may burden household finances, risking poverty or debt. They may be in short supply due to delivery issues in distribution channels, making continuity of treatment difficult. They may be of substandard quality - when medicines are falsified or poorly produced, they are not only ineffective, but also dangerous.

The sentinel role of countries for access to medicines has become more challenging than ever before, given the nature of the pathogens and reduction in time and space on travel. The rising concern of noncommunicable diseases requiring life course management makes access to medicines key to good health and prosperity. Ensuring all people everywhere can access essential medicines is one of

WHO South-East Asia's priority areas of work, and a key tool for achieving the Sustainable Development Goals agenda 2030 of health and wellbeing for all.

In recent years, many countries have made notable progress. Affordability of priority medicines has increased. Supply of priority medicines has become steadier.

Flexibilities in global trade agreements have been leveraged to reduce prices in several countries; there are numerous regional examples of improved public sector purchasing. The countries in the Region have updated their Essential Medicines lists; supply chain management systems have improved to be more effective and reliable. And action by countries to improve quality of medicines has accelerated. Many countries have included health as top priority in national goals. We could do better.

Certain persisting inadequacies are yet to be addressed: Out-of-pocket spending - including on essential medicines - remains high. Further, supply chains in some areas remain weak; countries lacking manufacturing capacity often cannot leverage competitive prices from suppliers.

Despite challenges, the Region's economic status is changing for the better; a positive sign that, however, will lead to reduced access to external financing for medicines and vaccines.

This calls for self-reliance and collaboration by the countries in the Region. The South-East Asia Region member countries, supported by WHO, launched South-East Asia Regulatory Network (SEARN) to enhance information sharing, collaboration and convergence of medical product regulatory practices across the Region to guarantee access to high-quality medical products to their people.

There are three key areas of action by the countries for

of game-changing medicines - most notably for hepatitis C. This must change.

increasing access to essential medicines and accelerate progress towards health and wellbeing for all. First, countries keep their Essential Medicines List (EML) and medicines policy current. By developing clear accountability systems for medicines selection and procurement, health authorities can harness opportunities for access to affordable medicines.

Despite the rising antimicrobial resistance, purchasing and supply of antibiotics is seldom rationalized. In a major revision of the antibiotics section in the EMLs 40-year history, WHO experts have grouped them into Access, Watch and Reserve —three categories, with recommendations on when each category should be used. This is a good yardstick and starting point for antibiotic use. Also, across the Region, countries are yet to capitalize on the massive drop in price of a range linked to health insurance programmes, especially where national schemes are in place is equally important. Further, countries can actively exploit flexibilities in global trade agreements when negotiating with medicines manufacturers. They can also bargain collectively to increase market buying power.

The SEARN can help make regulation more efficient by developing the Region's diverse capacities and strengths, with significant gains.

Third, generating high-quality information on access to essential medicines within the countries so that the problems may be better addressed.

Knowing where and why people are facing shortage, where unsafe or ineffective medicines are being sold, is essential to developing lasting solutions. From smartphone apps to household surveys, the array of tools at health authorities' disposal is considerable. By using them effectively authorities can garner the information needed to make smart, high-impact interventions that drive life-changing gains.

Essential medicines should be accessible for all, to achieve universal health coverage.

Supported by a clear vision, the dream of health equity and the Sustainable Development Goals of health and wellbeing for all are within reach. A healthier, more equitable and sustainable South-East Asia Region can be ours. ■

Why gender is important for biodiversity conservation

A recent meeting in Bangkok hosted by the Secretariat of the Convention on Biological Diversity developed training materials to advance gender inclusion in biodiversity planning in the Asia-Pacific region.

"If we do not consider gender we increase the loss of biodiversity, due to mismanagement and unsustainable use, [and] the loss of important traditional knowledge, skills and experiences," says one of the workshop participants, Soseala Saosaoa Tinilau, Tuvalu's Director of Environment. "For example, women in one of the Pacific Island countries [unspecified] were not consulted in coastal fisheries management for the reason that men are responsible for fishing, but it was found that women are involved in agriculture activity which had a downstream impact on a reef through increasing sedimentation," he adds. Disregarding gender can aggravate poverty and inequality, so it is wise to try to do something about it.

UN Environment has been stepping up its work on gender and biodiversity in the region. At the end of November it supported the Convention on Biological Diversity in bringing together 25 biodiversity and gender experts to develop training materials for the region at a three-day workshop in Bangkok.

Gender professionals, national biodiversity stakeholders, civil society, research institutes, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) Centre for Biodiversity, and UN agencies attended the workshop. The training materials developed will help integrate gender and biodiversity into government planning.

This will be a major contribution to implementing the Strategic Plan for Biodiversity 2011-2020, including the Aichi Biodiversity Targets. "The material will serve as a bridge between gender and biodiversity to train government staff and national and regional practitioners responsible for supporting the National Biodiversity Strategies and Action Plans," says UN Environment gender and environment expert Annette Wallgren.

Among men and women in the region, biodiversity is closely connected to development, access to resources, income-generating activities, food, and essential household products. From this perspective, the disciplines of biodiversity and gender overlap, and indeed are intrinsically linked. "While collecting, utilizing and selling plant and animal products is a daily routine for many women and men in the world, the concepts of gender and biodiversity remain abstract and unconnected to many policymakers and practitioners in the environment field," says Wallgren.

"Adding to the challenge is the need to tailor knowledge materials to specific region and country contexts," she notes.

Gender perspective

Asia's remarkable economic growth has brought many benefits through higher incomes and employment but this growth has also fuelled threats to ecosystems and biodiversity through habitat degradation and biodiversity loss. These threats affect men and women differently so to plan for the best sustainable solutions, a gender perspective is required. This perspective allows practitioners and policymakers to consider everyone's capacity, skills and knowledge in the design and implementation of sustainable solutions.

Currently gender professionals have insufficient knowledge and experience on biodiversity conservation strategies, while biodiversity specialists do not have the awareness of national policies and priorities for gender equality.

Country support for Lao PDR, Myanmar

In partnership with the ASEAN Centre for Biodiversity and the German Society for International Cooperation (GIZ), UN Environment is rolling out country support in Lao PDR and Myanmar to build capacity and set up institutional arrangements for gender inclusive National Biodiversity Strategies and Action Plans. Key partners in the initiative are the International Union for the Conservation of Nature, and the UN Environment-World Conservation and Monitoring Centre, which will provide support on developing gender indicators. During the third session of the United Nations Environment Assembly, UN Environment and the ASEAN Centre for Biodiversity signed a Letter of Intent highlighting the areas of future cooperation between the two institutions, including the integration of gender considerations into National Biodiversity Strategies. —UN Environment ■

US House to vote again on tax bill, Trump on verge of win

WASHINGTON — The Republican-controlled US House of Representatives on Wednesday was expected to give final approval to a sweeping tax bill and send it to President Donald Trump to sign into law, sealing his first major legislative victory in office.

In the largest overhaul of the US tax code in 30 years, Republicans in mere weeks have steamrolled over the opposition of Democrats in an effort to slash taxes for corporations and the wealthy, while offering mixed, temporary tax relief to working American individuals and families.

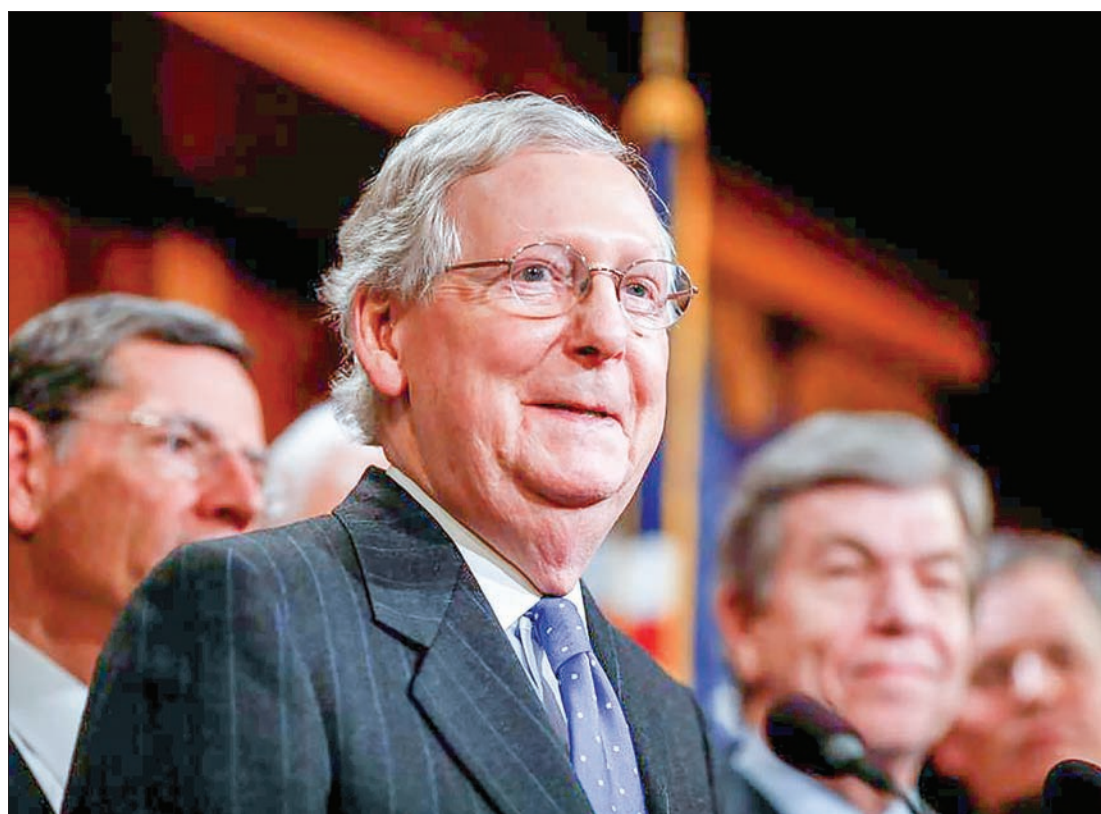

The Senate approved the bill in the wee hours of Wednesday morning on a 51-48 vote, but had to send it back to the House, which had passed it on Tuesday, for a re-vote due to a procedural foul-up that embarrassed Republicans, but was not expected to change the outcome. The re-vote was expected to take place before noon in the House on Wednesday.

The sprawling, debt-financed legislation cuts the US corporate income tax rate to 21 per cent from 35 per cent, gives other business owners a new 20 per cent deduction on business income and reshapes how America taxes multinationals along lines the country's largest businesses have recommended for years.

Millions of Americans would stop itemizing deductions under the bill, putting tax breaks that incentivize home ownership and charitable donations out of their reach, but also making their tax returns somewhat simpler and shorter.

It keeps the present number of tax brackets, but adjusts many, though not all, of the rates and income levels for each one. The top tax rate for high earners is reduced. The estate tax on inheritances is changed so far fewer people will pay.

In two provisions added on to secure needed Republican votes, it also repeals part of the Obamacare health system and allows oil drilling in Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, accompanied by members of the Republican Conference, speaks at a news conference about the passage of the Tax Cuts and Jobs Acts at the US Capitol in Washington, US on 20 December, 2017. PHOTO: REUTERS

Democrats have railed against the legislation as a giveaway to the wealthy and the business community that will widen the income gap between rich and poor, while adding $1.5 trillion over the next decade to the $20 trillion national debt, which Trump promised in 2016 he would eliminate as president.

Democratic Senator Chris Van Hollen said the bill "will harm millions of middle-class families ... It contains huge, permanent giveaways for big banks and corporations, and asks our children, millions of working Americans and senior citizens, and future generations to pay the price."

A few Republicans, whose party was once defined by its fiscal hawkishness, have protested deficit-spending entailed by the bill. But most of them have voted for it anyway, saying it would help businesses and individuals, while boosting an already expanding economy they see as not growing fast enough.

"We've had two quarters in a row of 3 per cent growth. The stock market is up. Optimism is high. Coupled with this tax reform, America is ready to start performing as it should have for a number of years," said Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell after the chamber's vote.

Despite Trump administration promises that the tax overhaul would focus on the middle class and not cut taxes for the rich, the nonpartisan Tax Policy Center, a think tank in Washington, estimated middle-income households would see an average tax cut of $900 next year under the bill, while the wealthiest 1 per cent of Americans would see an average cut of $51,000.

The prospect of a Republican victory came tinged with embarrassment. House lawmakers initially voted 227-203, largely along party lines, to approve the bill on Tuesday afternoon.

That sent the measure to the Senate, where the Senate parliamentarian ruled three minor provisions in violation of an arcane Senate rule. To proceed, the Senate deleted the three provisions and then approved the bill.

Because the House and Senate must approve the same legislation before Trump can sign it into law, the Senate's late Tuesday vote only ping-ponged the bill back to the House.

Democrats pounced on the mistake as evidence of the hurried, often secretive process used by Republicans in developing the bill. Ignoring Democrats and much of their own rank and file, Republican congressional leaders and White House officials drafted the bill behind closed doors, unveiling it on 27 September.

No public hearings were held on the measure. Numerous narrow amendments favored by lobbyists were added late in the process, tilting the package more toward businesses and the wealthy.

"When future generations look back at the short and messy history of the Republican tax bill, its most enduring lesson will be what it has taught us about how not to legislate," said Senate Democratic Leader Chuck Schumer on the Senate floor.

"After only a few months of frantic backroom negotiations by only one party, we are left with a product as sloppy and as partisan as the process used to draft it... What a disgrace." —Reuters ■

US takes India back to WTO in solar power dispute

GENEVA — India has failed to comply with a World Trade Organization ruling on solar power, the United States will tell the WTO dispute settlement body next month, triggering a fresh round of litigation, according to an agenda published on Wednesday.

WTO appeals judges ruled in September last year that India had broken the trade rules by requiring solar power developers to use Indian-made cells and modules. India had until 14 December to comply with the ruling and said last week that it had done so. —Reuters ■

Zimbabwe's Mnangagwa drops hint military chief set for vice presidency

HARARE — Zimbabwean President Emmerson Mnangagwa gave his clearest signal yet on Tuesday that he would appoint as vice president the military leader who led the de facto coup that ousted former leader Robert Mugabe last month.

At a ceremony marking Constantino Chiwenga's retirement and hand-over of the military reins to Phillip Sibanda at an army barracks near Harare's international airport, Mnangagwa lauded Chiwenga for his consistency and steadfastness.

"I therefore urge you to maintain the same loyalty, robustness and dedication to duty as you move to your next assignment which is quite prominent," he said without elaborating.

Mnangagwa said on Friday he would fill the two vice presidential posts in the following few days. Chiwenga is the top contender in what is seen as a reward for helping to end Mugabe's 37-year rule.

Mnangagwa has appointed several senior military officers to his cabinet and the ruling party's executive politburo since he was sworn in as president on 24 November in what some political analysts say reflects the army's consolidation of power since it turned against the 93-year-old Mugabe.

Chris Mutsvangwa, special adviser to the president and the influential leader of the war veterans' association, rejected criticism of the military appointments, saying they were not unique to Zimbabwe. He pointed to the former generals in US President Donald Trump's cabinet.

He also denied a report by the privately owned NewsDay newspaper that he had said the army would play a role in elections due next year.

"It's a lie ... I said there was a team which helped to undo the dynastic tendencies of geriatric Mugabe and his mid-wife (sic)," he told reporters at his offices in Harare.

"I promised to the new president that we are going to deliver an electoral victory but that team specifically excludes the army because the army had played a role earlier and because the army is a professional army and does not get involved in election campaigns."

The elections are due by July 2018 but Mnangagwa has said they may be held sooner than expected.

Mnangagwa told members of his ruling ZANU-PF party on Friday they would have to start fixing the economy if they wanted a chance of winning next year's vote.

The southern African nation's economy collapsed in the latter half of Mugabe's rule, especially after the violent seizures of thousands of white-owned commercial farms.

Terror attack on provincial governor foiled in SW Pakistan

ISLAMABAD — Pakistani security forces on Wednesday successfully foiled a terror attack targeting the Balochistan provincial governor and arrested two terrorists during a raid in the Pakistani province, an official said.

Balochistan Home Minister Sarfraz Bugti said that two suspected suicide attackers were arrested for making a plan to attack Balochistan Governor Muhammad Khan Achakzai in the Gulistan area of Killa Abdullah in the province.

The security forces also seized two suicide vests along with a huge amount of arms and ammunitions, said Bugti.

The terror plot was crafted in Afghanistan and the timely action had saved many lives, the provincial home minister said, adding that the detainees belong to the group involved in a suicide attack on Punjab Home Minister Shuja Khanzada back in August, 2015, which killed 22 people including Shuja Khanzada.

The operation came days after four suicide bombers attacked a church in the provincial capital of Quetta, killing nine people and injuring some 57 others.

Three advanced early warning radars enter service in Russia

MOSCOW — Three Voronezh-type early warning radars entered combat duty in Russia, the commander of the Russian Aerospace Defence Forces, Col Gen Alexander Golovko, said in an interview published on Wednesday. “For the first time in history of the Russian Federation’s armed forces, three advanced Voronezh-type radars of the early warning system <...> entered combat duty simultaneously, in respective areas,” he said in an interview with the Krasnaya Zvezda newspaper.

The new radars were deployed in Siberia’s Krasnoyarsk and Altai regions and the Orenburg Region in southern Urals. This brings the overall number of Voronezh radars on duty to seven. Until recently, four new Voronezh radars were in operation: near Russia’s second largest

EU seeks to end Brexit transition no later than end-2020

BRUSSELS — The European Union wants a transition period after Brexit to end no later than 31 December, 2020, according to the European Commission’s negotiating directives agreed on Wednesday.

“The transitional arrangements should apply as from the date of entry into force of the Withdrawal Agreement and should not last beyond 31 December 2020,” the published text showed.

Coinciding with the end of the EU’s current seven-year budget period, the end of 2020, 21 months after Brexit at the end of March 2019, had long been expected as the target end date of the transition but this was the first official confirmation that this is the official goal of the Union negotiators.

British Prime Minister Theresa May had formally asked for a transition to last around two years.

The four pages of new directives for EU chief negotiator Michel Barnier were in line with guidelines issued by EU leaders at a summit on Friday and will form the basis of talks on the transition which Barnier hopes to start next month.—Reuters ■

US President Trump to visit Britain in February — Daily Mail

LONDON — President Donald Trump plans to visit Britain in February to open the new US embassy in London but will not meet Queen Elizabeth, the Daily Mail newspaper reported on Wednesday.

Trump’s planned visit to Britain has proved controversial since Prime Minister Theresa May invited him for a state visit, which typically involves lavish pageantry and events hosted by the queen.

However nearly 2 million people have signed a petition saying Trump should not be invited because it “would cause embarrassment” to the queen, and protests could be expected to greet the

US leader.

The Daily Mail cited a source in Westminster as saying Trump had told May during a call on Tuesday that he planned a working visit to Britain to open the new embassy, a billion-dollar building which overlooks the River Thames, in late February.

A spokesman for May’s Downing Street office declined to comment on the report. He said the position on the state visit had not changed. An offer had been extended but no dates have been arranged.

May originally invited Trump to visit by the end of 2017. Britain regards its close ties with Washington as a “special relationship” and a pillar of its foreign policy as it prepares to leave the European Union.

However the ties have been strained in recent months, most recently when Trump sparked outrage by rebuking May on Twitter after she criticised him for retweeting British far-right anti-Islam videos.—Reuters ■

Expansion of Japan's missile defence shield poses no threat to Russia — Foreign Ministry

TOKYO — Japan's plans to install the US Aegis Ashore missile defence systems are entirely defensive and pose no threat to Russia or any other neighbouring states, the Japanese Foreign Ministry's press service told TASS while commenting on concerns voiced by Moscow and Beijing.

"The efforts that our country has been making in the missile defence field are purely defensive, Japan operates such systems independently," the ministry's spokesman said. "They pose no threat to Russia or any other neighbouring state. By using various opportunities, we have many times notified Russia about that, particularly at the recent meeting between the two countries' foreign ministers," he added.

On Tuesday, Japan's government made a decision to expand the country's missile defence shield with the US-made Aegis Ashore missile defence systems, which are supposed to help ensure the country's security from possible ballistic and cruise missile attacks.

China's Foreign Ministry on Tuesday expressed concern over Tokyo's decision, which, according to Beijing, may affect global security and trust among nations. Russia has also many times voiced concern over Japan's plans to introduce the Aegis Ashore systems. South East Asia Disaster Risk Management Project

Project ID. P160931

Assignment Title: Component 3 Preparation of Detailed Engineering Designs and Bidding Documents for the seismic retrofitting of 20 buildings in Yangon, and Construction Management and Supervision of the Works

Reference No. C3 CS1

The Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar has applied for financing from the World Bank toward the cost of the South East Asia Disaster Risk Management Project, and intends to apply part of the proceeds to finance the Works for seismic retrofitting of 20 buildings in Yangon and the cost of Consulting Services.

The Consulting Services ("the Services") shall consist of two stages: Stage 1 covering Detailed Design; and Stage 2 covering Contract Management and Construction Supervision. A single proposal (technical and financial) covering both stages will be requested. Separate contracts will be awarded for each stage with award of the contract for Stage 2 being conditional on satisfactory performance on Stage 1. Stage 1 shall include carrying out a risk assessment of the targeted buildings, detailed structural analysis and engineering designs for the retrofitting of 20 buildings (all of which are of heritage significance), preparation of an environmental and social impact assessment (ESIA) in conformity with an existing Environmental and Social Management Framework (ESMF); detailed cost estimates; prioritization of retrofitting works; proposals for procurement packaging and preparation of Bidding Documents for a number of priority bid packages using World Bank Procurement Guidelines and Standard Bidding Documents. Stage 2 shall cover Contract Management and Construction Supervision of the works including assisting Yangon City Development Committee (YCDC) with overall coordination, including during the Defects Liability Period of the works.

The duration of services for Stage 1 and Stage 2 are estimated at about eight (8) months and twenty-four (24) months respectively excluding Defects Liability Period. The Defect Liability Period is expected to be 12 months.

The budget available for the priority seismic retrofitting works is approximately US$18 million.

The Yangon City Development Committee with the Engineering Department (Buildings) (EDB) will be implementing the Project and now invites eligible consulting firms ("Consultants") to indicate their interest in providing the Services.

Interested Consultants must provide specific information demonstrating that they have the required qualifications and relevant experience to perform the Services.

The short listing criteria: (1) At least 10 years of experience in the field of seismic structural analysis and design and retrofitting of existing structures; (2) At least 3 projects of similar scope and nature; (3) Substantial experience in developing construction documents, bidding documents and plans; (4) Substantial experience in the management of large construction projects, including supervision of construction activities and contractual financial management processes; (5) Prior experience in developing and monitoring effective QA programs and compliance records; (6) The ability to interact with a varied set of stakeholders, ranging from government partners to the private design community; (7) Experience developing and delivering capacity and knowledge transfer programs; (8) Proven experience in carrying out similar assignments within the past 5 years.

Interested Consulting firms are requested to provide specific information and past project examples to demonstrate their ability to meet each the shortlisting criteria above. Individual CV's of proposed 'team members' need not be supplied at this stage (individual team members will be evaluated at RFP stage) and will not be taken into consideration. Proven ability to undertake seismic analysis, detailed seismic design (for retrofitting) and project/construction management activities are of critical importance and must be clearly demonstrated. Examples of past project experiences (including contract reference and scope undertaken) should be provided. Failure to do so may result in Consulting Firms not being evaluated.

The attention of interested Consultants is drawn to paragraph 1.9 of the World Bank's [Guidelines: Selection and Employment of Consultants \[under IBRD Loans and IDA Credits & Grants\] by World Bank Borrowers](#) dated January 2011 and revised in July 2014. ("Consultant Guidelines"), setting forth the World Bank's policy on conflict of interest. Consultants may associate with other firms in the form of a joint venture or a sub consultancy to enhance their qualifications. The "association" may take the form of a joint venture or a sub consultancy. In case of a joint venture (JV), all members of the JV will be evaluated jointly for the purpose of short listing and shall be jointly and severally liable for the assignment and shall sign the contract jointly in case of award is made to that JV. Lady Gaga heads for Las Vegas concert residency

LOS ANGELES — Pop star Lady Gaga is swapping touring for a two-year stint in Las Vegas, joining the likes of music divas Celine Dion, Britney Spears and Shania Twain who have recently taken up concert residencies in the entertainment mecca.

Gaga, 31, said on Tuesday she will start a two-year engagement at the 5,300-seat Park Theater at the Park MGM resort on the Las Vegas strip in December 2018.

"It's the land of Elvis, Tony Bennett and Frank Sinatra, the Rat Pack, Elton John, Judy Garland and Liza Minnelli. It has been a life-long dream of mine to play Las Vegas," the singer said in a statement. "I am humbled to be a part of a historical lineup of performers, and to have the honor of creating a new show unlike anything Vegas has ever seen before," she added. Gaga made her name almost 10 years ago with catchy pop songs, arresting dance routines and outrageous stunts like setting her piano on fire and wearing a raw meat dress.

In February, she kicked off her the halftime show at the annual Super Bowl by singing "God Bless America," from the top of Houston's NRG Stadium. But in September, the "Bad Romance" singer postponed until early 2018 the European leg of her "Joanne" world tour, citing severe pain. She was hospitalized in 2013 for a hip injury and more recently has said she suffers from the musculoskeletal disorder fibromyalgia. Las Vegas residencies have become a popular draw for top music stars because they allow performers to remain in one place and draw large crowd without the rigors of touring. Exact dates and ticket prices for Lady Gaga's residency will be announced at a later date.

Most men I've worked with are not sexual harassers: Matt Damon

LOS ANGELES — Actor-producer Matt Damon has said amid the climate of sexual misconduct allegations in Hollywood people should also talk enough about all the men in the entertainment industry who are not sexual predators.

The actor said the "preponderance" of men he has worked with are not predators and he would decide whether to collaborate with people accused of inappropriate behavior on a "case-by-case basis."

"We're in this watershed moment and it's great but I think one thing that's not being talked about is there are a whole s load of guys the preponderance of men I've worked with who don't do this kind of thing and whose lives aren't going to be affected.

"If I have to sign a sexual harassment thing, I don't care, I'll sign it. I would have signed it before. I don't do that and most of the people I know don't do that," Damon said in an interview with Business Insider.

The 47-year-old actor was asked if he would back out of a movie if someone prominent involved, such as an actor, director, or producer, had been accused of sexual misconduct.

"That always went into my thinking. I mean, I wouldn't want to work with somebody who life's too short for that. But the question of if somebody had allegations against them, you know, it would be a case-by-case basis. You go, 'What's the story here?'" Damon responded.

Last week, Damon ignited controversy after discussing the topic with critic Peter Travers.

He similarly championed the "watershed moment" of women coming forward while also cautioning against conflating "pating someone on the butt and rape or child molestation."

He mainly compared the allegations that have been made against Senator Al Franken, who recently announced he would be resigning from the US Senate, and Harvey Weinstein.—PTI ■

Michael Kors brand going cruelty free

LONDON — Fashion designer Michael Kors is making his brand cruelty free and has vowed not to use fur in his creations.

According to The Guardian, production of current designs using fur, such as coyote and rabbit, will be phased out by the end of 2018, the brand has confirmed.

This new model will also apply to the luxury footwear brand Jimmy Choo, which was acquired by Michael Kors Holdings this year.

"Due to technological advances in fabrications, we now have the ability to create a luxe aesthetic using non-animal fur. We will showcase these new techniques in our upcoming runway show in February," said the brands eponymous designer, referring to alternative materials that look and feel like leather and animal fur but are made from synthetic fibres.

The moves comes around six months after Kors, 58, was shout down by anti-fur protesters during his speech at New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art. Several protesters got on to the stage and encircled the designer, making sounds of animals being tortured and shouting at him for using fur.—PTI ■

London cafe unveils the 'selfieccino' — self portraits in froth

LONDON — A cafe in London is taking barista art to a new level by giving customers the chance to sip on their own self-portraits.

The Tea Terrace, based in House of Fraser's Oxford Street branch, has become Europe's first location to deliver the "Selfieccino," which features an image of customers' faces on the frothy topping of their drinks.

Patrons send their headshots via an online messaging app to the barista and are given the choice of either a cappuccino or hot chocolate as their canvas.

The image is uploaded to the "Cino" machine while the drink is placed in position. The picture is then scanned and reproduced onto the froth using a flavourless food coloring. The process takes around four minutes before an image is presented on the froth, ready to be photographed and sent to all points via social media before drinking, and costs around 5.75 pounds. ($7.5) "Due to social media, the dining experience has completely shifted," Ehab Salem Shouly, owner of The Tea Terrace told Reuters. "It's not enough any more to just deliver great food and great service — it's got to be Instagram worthy."

Over 400 of the personalized drinks have been sold since they launched on Saturday, with the hash tag "Selfieccino" going viral across various social media platforms. The Tea Terrace hopes to trademark the term as they expand the service across their other two locations in London Victoria and Guildford, Surrey. —Reuters ■

France pulls Marquis de Sade erotic novel from auction

PARIS — The auction of one of the world's earliest and most sordid erotic novels — the Marquis de Sade's "120 Days of Sodom" — has been halted after the French state declared it a national treasure and said it could not be sold to a foreign buyer.

De Sade's 1785 work, written in tiny script on 33 pieces of scroll while he was imprisoned in the Bastille, was due to be auctioned on Wednesday as one of the prize items in a vast collection of notes, letters and musical scores being sold off.

But De Sade's 12-metre long manuscript, along with four works by one of the founders of surrealism, Andre Breton, were this week declared national treasures by France's Ministry of Culture, keeping them out of contention.

The two lots, from a trove of documents and artifacts assembled by a now-defunct French company, had drawn interest from US and European private buyers, Paris-based auctioneers Aguttes said.

The French state will now have 30 months to raise the funds for the purchase from citizens or the help of private fortunes, or the items will be put back on sale.

De Sade's daring novel — left behind in his cell when he moved out in 1789, during the French Revolution, and only later discovered and published — had been expected to fetch between 4 million and 6 million euros ($7.09 million).

It recounts the story of four aristocrats who resolve to experience every sexual perversion.

The works by Breton on surrealism, which helped define the 20th century artistic movement, had been forecast to sell for up to 5.5 million euros for the lot.

The auction is the first in a series of attempts to liquidate a 130,000-strong collection of artworks and literary treasures pulled together by Aristophil, a group set up in 1990 that raised funds from some 18,000 investors in exchange for a share in the pieces.

The company went bankrupt in 2015, causing losses for its backers, while founder Gerard Lheritier was detained and put under investigation for fraud, a charge he denies.

Other items in the collection include original manuscripts by 'The Three Musketeers' author Alexandre Dumas and operatic scores drafted by Richard Strauss, and have drawn interest from Chinese buyers and European institutions, the auctioneers said. — Reuters ■

Arsenal's Giroud to miss Liverpool clash with hamstring injury

LONDON — Arsenal striker Olivier Giroud has been ruled out of Friday's Premier League match against fierce rivals Liverpool with a hamstring injury, manager Arsene Wenger has said.

Giroud, who has scored seven goals this season, was substituted in the second half of Arsenal's 1-0 victory over West Ham United in the League Cup quarter-finals on Tuesday and will undergo scans on Thursday to assess the damage.

"It doesn't look very good for him," Wenger told reporters after the victory. "I think he's out of Friday night..."

"We have to wait. Nowadays you do the scan 48 hours after the injury. That will happen on Thursday, then we'll have a precise kind of grade on what his hamstring is.

"When you listen to him, the pain is quite big, but the grade is not always linked with the intensity of the pain."

Midfielder Francis Coquelin

was also substituted in the final stages of Tuesday's match with a knock but Wenger expects the 26-year-old to be fit to face their fellow top four contenders.

Uzbekistan wins gold, Viet Nam bronze in M-150 Cup

THE Viet Nam U-23 football team secured third place in the M-150 Cup when they beat host country Thailand 2-1 in Buriram Stadium in Thailand on Friday.

Viet Nam striker Nguyen Cong Phuong scored the ice-breaker only seven minutes after the start of the match with a superb header, and then doubled his team's advantage at the 22-minute mark with a second goal from inside the box.

Thailand got a penalty shot at the 38-minute mark, but missed a golden opportunity when Nattawut Sombatyotha slipped and completely missed the ball, squandering a chance to get on the board.

Two minutes after the restart, Thailand's Supachok Sarachat pulled a goal back for the hosts to give them a fighting chance to draw the game even.

But luck was on Viet Nam's side as they hung on to the one-goal lead until time expired.

In the final match, Uzbekistan became champions of the M-150 Cup by defeating Japan, 4-3. The winner of the championship match was decided with a penalty shootout, as the score at the end of regulation was 2-2. Chelsea's Christensen can emulate Terry, says Conte

LONDON — Defender Andreas Christensen's rapid rise at Chelsea has impressed manager Antonio Conte, who believes the 21-year-old has the talent to emulate John Terry's success at the Premier League club.

Christensen, who spent the last two seasons on loan at Borussia Monchengladbach, has gained prominence in Chelsea's first team, helping the London side maintain nine clean sheets in 20 appearances across all competitions this season.

Former England international Terry progressed through Chelsea's youth system and made over 650 senior appearances, captaining the team since 2004 and winning five league and FA Cup titles along with numerous other trophies.

"This is a big comparison — John Terry wrote the history of this club and won a lot," Conte told reporters.

"I wish Christensen to have the same career as John. I think he has the right characteristics to play for this club for many years, to become an important player..."

"Every time I decided to give him the opportunity to play, he played with an amazing performance. These performances convinced me that Christensen has to play with regularity."

Terry, 37, joined Championship (second tier) side Aston Villa before the start of the current season.
