The commission chairman also emphasized sustainable progress in fighting against corruption through two strategies of enforcing the legal framework and the harmonious promotion between public integrity and business integrity.

He added the commission will implement the remaining 20 per cent of tasks under the four-year plan, while the government has supported the plan of commission to draw 'the National-Level Anti-Corruption Strategy'.

The commission has formed the Corruption Prevention Units (CPU) to promote integrity at the public departments and offices. However, some of these units have not seen significant progress in their works.

Speech delivered by U Win Myint, President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar at the opening ceremony of the new office building of the Anti-Corruption Commission

(5 August 2020)

I send auspicious good wishes to all those who have come to the opening ceremony of the new office building of the Anti-Corruption Commission – Union Ministers, Union Attorney-General, Chairman of the Nay Pyi Taw Council, Chairman and members of the Anti-Corruption Commission, and all invited guests.

When I was serving as the Speaker of the Pyithu Hluttaw, I was able to approve the fourth revision of the draft Anti-Corruption Law submitted by the Anti-Corruption Commission, in the interests of the citizens of Myanmar and the State to further promote the effectiveness in prevention and combating of corruption. This law has granted wide-ranging powers to the Commission to combat corruption and powers to conduct its work independently. This Commission was also authorized as the body to combat corruption.

Furthermore, when I took the oath of office as the President in the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw, I said that we would have to exert more efforts to combat corruption. When I received the chairman and members of the Anti-Corruption Commission as President, I gave clear and precise instructions for the establishment of branch offices in Regions/States and in conducting its work to combat corruption without discriminating whether those involved were rich or poor and whether they were powerful or powerless. I recognize the strenuous efforts being made by the Commission to combat corruption from all angles.

Just as in other countries of the world, the efforts being made to prevent corruption, conducting awareness-raising campaigns, and initiating prosecutions in our country stand out as good examples of our efforts to reform in accordance with the changing times and changing political system.

I would also like to give my support to the efforts being made by the Commission to formulate a National Level Anti-Corruption Strategy to enable future governments to combat corruption without losing momentum. Just as in other countries of the world, the efforts being made to prevent corruption, conducting awareness-raising campaigns, and initiating prosecutions in our country stand out as good examples of our efforts to reform in accordance with the changing times and changing political system.

The fact that we are able to open this new office building for the Anti-Corruption Commission as a separate building, at a time when Union Government is trying to solve the problem of corruption which has taken root for so many years all over the country, with deep political commitment, will become a milestone in the history of Myanmar's efforts to combat corruption. This I believe. Why? This is because this new office building which has been built during the tenure of our Union Government is equal in stature as buildings owned by the anti-corruption bodies of ASEAN-PAC member countries.

During the tenure of our Union Government, we have opened new commission branch offices to conduct anti-corruption efforts with increased momentum. We have been able to fulfil the needs of the Commission in terms of its physical basic infrastructure and

Taw. Besides, to increase the effectiveness of anti-corruption activities, we have made authorizations to open branch offices in Mawlamyine of Mon State and Taunggyi of Shan State.

During this transition to democracy, our government has been working to achieve more progress in the areas of administration, legislation, judiciary, political affairs, economic affairs, social affairs, education and health. Corruption acts as a very significant stumbling block on the path of the nation's modernization, progress and development. It also impacts negatively on the country's economic development, the elevation of the people's socio-economic status, poverty reduction, and efforts to bring in foreign investments smoothly.

In conclusion, I wish to urge all government ministries, non-governmental organizations, civil society organizations, the media and all the people to join us in making increased efforts to prevent and combat corruption.

health and that the health of the people was the main responsibility of the Union Government and it was also the right of the people; the next matter was to have the right to participate and vote in the elections; this was also the right of citizens as well as their duty; in all this, the Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population, the administrative sector and the UEC – Union Election Commission all played a critical role.

The second stage was to ensure that all the rules and regulations of the Ministry of Health and Sports for COVID-19 were being followed for the citizens to cast their votes in safety; the first stage was to make sure that the voters lists were correct for voters to be able to vote; during the last two weeks, a lot of news emerged saying that the voters lists were incorrect and incomplete; this is something that needed to be done with great care; all citizens born of parents who are from an indigenous race and are 18 years of age have the right to vote; it is her belief that just as citizens have the right to vote they also have the duty to vote; everyone must want to be dutiful towards the country; they should vote in accordance with their choice; to say “I don’t like this or I don’t like that” and to refuse to vote is a very irresponsible act; all citizens should perform their duties by voting which is a matter of only one day every five years; she believed that the majority would wish to vote; the three departments who have the responsibility should make sure that citizens would be able to vote.

Discussion of Union Minister U Thein Swe

Union Minister for Labour, Immigration and Population U Thein Swe explained preparations for the successful holding of the 2020 General Election, the issuing of national scrutiny cards to a total of 5,720,000 people at schools, industrial zones and workplaces from 2016 to July 2020, the coordination of his ministry with the Union Election Commission, the General Administration Department in collecting accurate voter lists for the general elections at various levels.

He added that some errors have been reported on the voter lists after announcing its first edition on 25 July, however, the second edition of voter lists will be issued in October with the cooperation of local election commissions and the administration departments while the respective immigration office will help in ensuring accurate voter lists.

He also said measures to follow rules of Ministry of Health and Sports to prevent COVID-19, repatriation programme for Myanmar migrant workers at the border crossings, arrangements for voting of the returnees in the respective areas and foreign countries, difficulties in collecting voter lists in rural areas for many reasons and variation of voter lists due to the internal migration.

The Union Minister continued discussions about reaccepting Myanmar migrant workers at the border crossings with Thailand, China and India, as well as the returnees by relief and special flights in line with the directives of MoHS.

Discussions of UEC Member U Myint Naing, the member of Union Election Commission, explained collecting voter lists based on the family registrations in 2010 and 2015, however, the accurate lists could not be received at that time; the recent collection of voter lists was focused on the actual data of residents, and that it is expected the list of voters would be more realistic; however, it was also found some mistakes in the lists of 37.5 million eligible voters; out of 6.6 million people who checked the voter lists, over 210,000 persons requested Form 3, about 66,000 asked Form 4 for objection and over 150,000 asked Form 4 (c) for corrections.

He continued saying that the UEC will work together with the GAD and the MoLIP for accurate voter lists; explained COVID-19 measures at the poll stations and the process for free and fair elections.

Discussions of Deputy Director-General from GAD

Deputy Director-General from the General Administration Department U Htet Aung explained the works of GAD in working together with local UEC offices, the accuracy of voter lists, the plans to camaign for practising COVID-19 preventive measures, and the support of GAD staffs to the UEC offices in the electoral processes.

After that, in responding to the discussions made above, the State Counsellor said that efforts that were being made to conduct the elections successfully were not only for political reasons but because it was very important for the welfare of the State; it has been learnt that the UEC has made studies about elections held in Singapore and Korea (ROK); the whole world has accepted that the elections held in these countries were conducted very smoothly with a high level of competency; these countries were very rich countries; Myanmar was not a rich country like them; at the beginning when the COVID disease first erupted many were skeptical about how a country such as Myanmar with few resources would be able to control the COVID; later they accepted that Myanmar was able to control the COVID up to now; however the process to prevent, control and provide treatment for COVID-19 was not yet over; it was still not yet known when this would be over; she said, the elections have to be conducted during this time.

The State Counsellor said she wanted to show that Myanmar was able to conduct the elections successfully and safely from the health point of view, in accordance with the rights and duties of the citizens for the dignity of the country; she wanted to show that the calibre of Myanmar citizens did not depend only on financial wealth but also on being dutiful, being disciplined and being loyal towards the country and that they were able to pull this off successfully.

She added this was why she believed that the UEC, the Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population and the GAD – General Administration Department would all cooperate fully for the success of the elections, and to ensure that the rights of citizens could be exercised to the fullest extent and in a dutiful manner.

In the life of a person, if this person started voting at the age of 18, because elections are being held every five years, if this person lived to be 80, this person would only have the opportunity to vote 12 times. Therefore during the 80 years, the right of a person to vote for the future of the country and the progress of the country would be only 12 times during the lifespan. She said she wanted the citizens to use these 12 days in the best possible way; it was the duty of the Union Government to make sure that this was possible; she wanted to thank all those who participated in the videoconference; she hoped that all would participate and cooperate to win the trust of the people and live up to their expectations.

The fact that a large number of people were checking the voter lists to see if their names were in these lists was a good sign; this showed that the people were interested in the elections and that they recognized the importance of these elections; that was why she believed that the elections would be held successfully.

She concluded by saying that she wished to thank everyone because she has heard that everyone would participate and cooperate for the success of the elections.—MNA

No man is above the law in fighting scourge of corruption

WITH the opening of the Anti-Corruption Commission Office Building which meets the standard of other ASEAN-member of the South East Asia Parties against Corruption, the Union Government has taken further step to speed up the fighting against the corruption.

The opening of the building becomes the milestone in the history of anti-corruption of Myanmar as it comes while the Union Government is taking a lead in the fight against the corruption which has taken a root for decades in our country.

Corruption is posing a hindrance to emergence of a clean government with good governance.

That is why the incumbent government is committed to fighting corruption as a national duty.

Due to the action taken against corrupt civil servants, the public is increasingly more aware of the dangers of corruption. As democracy strides forwards during this transitional period, there is a better chance of exposing corruption.

during this transitional period, there is a better chance of exposing corruption.

The farther the journey of democratic transition takes steps forward, the larger will be the risk among people who are involved in corruption.

Corruption is more widespread in developing countries and those in transition—not because they are different from other nations but because the conditions are ripe.

State institutions are weak; government policies or regulatory agencies contain loop-holes that permit illegal activities; and institutions such as parliament, the judiciary, and civil society—including the press—that usually serve as safeguards are marginalized or themselves affected by corruption.

Therefore, these countries are locked in a vicious circle of corruption.

Corruption cannot be defeated if civil liberties are not firmly guaranteed. Hence, the Union Government is committed to fighting this scourge of humanity because it is the enemy of security, development, progress, and peace.

The fourth amendment to the Anti-Corruption Law, sub-section (A), Section-3, bars officials from abusing their power by using their position in the administration. Under the law, action can be taken against those who give and receive bribes.

No doubt. There will be no man above the law in our country.

ROBUST HEALTH INFRASTRUCTURE

How South Korea built a system to beat COVID-19

THE importance of a reliable and widely accessible healthcare system is never more apparent than during a pandemic. It is now painfully clear that countries cannot pursue economic development, and assume that the health system will develop in tandem. Instead, they must do what South Korea did: devise targeted strategies for effective healthcare delivery that go hand in hand with broader social- and economic-development efforts.

Over the last decade, South Korea's modern and robust health infrastructure has enabled it to cope with multiple major health crises. The COVID-19 crisis has been no different. Although South Korea faced one of the world's largest initial outbreaks outside China, it managed to contain the virus quickly, without imposing a nationwide lockdown.

This success was a long time coming. South Korea's rapid ascent from a low-income country to high-income status occurred alongside a drastic improvement in health outcomes. From 1960 to 1990, the infant mortality rate plummeted, from 80 deaths per 1,000 births to just 13, and average life expectancy at birth increased from 55 to 72 years.

This was no accident. South Korea's government began investing in healthcare—especially in ensuring that services were available to rural communities and the poor—very early in the development process. In the 1950s, the government established immunization centres in every town and village.

Beginning in the 1960s—when South Korea's economic rise was just starting—the government introduced incentives to ensure that doctors were available everywhere. Physicians in private practice were commissioned to be public doctors, for example, and medical students could receive scholarships in exchange for a commitment to work in an underserved area for 2-5 years after graduation.

But South Korea's government did not just ensure access to health resources; it made sure people used them. In 1954, it introduced a law requiring children under the age of 14 to be immunized. This, together with accessible community health centres and the support of World Health Organization (WHO) advisers, caused vaccination rates to soar, and many acute communicable diseases were contained. There have been no reported cases of smallpox in South Korea since 1961, of typhus since 1968, or of poliomyelitis since 1984.

Of course, progress on economic development gave public-health initiatives a major boost. As per capita gross domestic product (GDP) grew—from US$158 in 1960 to US$6,610 in 1990 to US$12,257 in 2000—so did the ability of workers and companies to pay into a compulsory health-insurance system, introduced in 1977. A voluntary insurance system had existed since the early 1960s, but a shortage of skilled staff and participating medical institutions undermined its effectiveness. The new scheme added financial resources and expanded to include the self-employed and informal-sector workers, ultimately achieving universal coverage in 1989. The compulsory insurance payments remain a major source of the health system's funding.

Health education also made a big difference. Even before most South Koreans had access to quality schooling, government agencies were disseminating crucial information—covering topics like sanitation, food hygiene, immunization, maternal and child health, and family planning—via newspapers, leaflets, and television broadcasts.

As education levels rose, particularly among women, health outcomes improved further, not only because people had more health-related knowledge, but also because the fertility rate plunged, from 6.1 children per woman in 1960 to 1.6 in 1990. This trend, together with economic growth and rising incomes, allowed for far greater investment in children's health. In fact, in the 1970s and 1980s, health expenditure grew faster than GDP. As demand for health services rose, public and private clinics and hospitals proliferated.

Today, South Korea continues to strengthen and refine its health-care system. For example, it uses the vast amounts of health data to which it has access to assess consumption of health services and improve efficiency and cost-effectiveness.

The pillars of the South Korean model—universal health coverage, equitable access, and cost-effectiveness—are applicable across developing countries. The key is to design deliberate strategies for healthcare that complement countries' economic-development agendas.

Such strategies should include investment in infrastructure like hospitals and clinics, as well as initiatives to attract the qualified staff needed to make those institutions function, including in poor and rural areas. To advance the goal of delivering universal health coverage, governments could consider creating a single national health-insurance system like South Korea's.

To promote progress, governments should establish specific targets—such as for neonatal mortality, access to clean water and proper sanitation, the eradication of disease, and health coverage—in line with the United Nations (UN) Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). And global development partners should support these efforts.

Effective healthcare systems enable longer and more productive lives, support human-capital development, and underpin sustained economic growth. They are also essential to protect people from major health shocks like the COVID-19 crisis and the inevitable pandemics to come. An effective model exists. Developing countries should emulate it.

SPORTS CROWDS AND CORONAVIRUS A RISKY COMBINATION

Large sports crowds 'unrealistic' this year: WHO

THE World Health Organization said Wednesday it was "unrealistic" to expect large crowds at sports events this year in countries suffering from community-level transmission of the new coronavirus.

WHO emergencies director Michael Ryan said it could be "disastrous" in such circumstances to allow the return of sports matches with tens of thousands of people attending. Asked in a live WHO social media chat when major sports events could come back, Ryan said it was impossible to predict.

"We don't know," the Irish epidemiologist said. "Large crowds of 40, 50, 60,000 people—it's not just the risk of being in the stadium, it's the risk of going to the stadium, the public transport, the bars and the clubs," he explained.

"Imagine all the problems we have now with nightclubs and bars, and you squeeze all of that together into a four- or five-hour experience, where thousands of people go on the same public transport to a venue, get involved in the social aspects before a game, be involved in the game and then all of the social aspects after. "In the context of community transmission, that could be disastrous."

The Tokyo 2020 Olympics and the 2020 European football championships have been postponed until next year, while major football tournaments like Europe's Champions League and the English Premier League have been forced behind closed doors.

"We may have to expect that as things open up, we go from having no-one at the games to maybe 1,000 and 2,000," said Ryan. "We all want our sport back. We're just going to have to be careful for a good bit longer. "It's very unrealistic in countries with community transmission that we're going to be seeing large gatherings like that this year."

"Right now, it's hard to see those fully re-opened venues."

China high demand hikes sesame prices in Mandalay market

Myanmar exports 90 per cent of sesame production to foreign markets. PHOTO: MIN HTET AUNG

THE prices of black and white sesame seeds are significantly rising in Mandalay market on the back of strong demand from China, Mandalay traders said.

This year, high sesame producing regions of Myanmar (Magway, Mandalay and Sagaing regions) experienced low yield due to drought impacts. During the meantime, China high demand hiked the prices, according to Soe Win Myint depot in Mandalay.

“Myanmar increasingly sends sesame seeds to China market. The price fluctuates a bit. The gradual increase in sesame prices since last week of July has been attributed to high demand by China when the drought reduced crop yield in the country. The various varieties of sesame are priced good, especially black and white sesame varieties,” said owner of Soe Win Myint Depot.

The prevailing price of sesame jumped to K205,000 per three-basket bag from K150,000. Similarly, the white sesame seeds have also priced a high of K103,000-138,000 depending on quality. As the sesame stockpile is thin, there is no way of the price drop in the coming weeks, he noted.

Myanmar exports 90 per cent of sesame production to foreign markets. China is the main buyer of Myanmar sesame, which is also shipped to markets in Japan, South Korea, China (Taipei), UK, Germany, the Netherlands, Greece, and Poland among the EU countries. The EU markets prefer organic-farming sesame seeds from Myanmar, said an official from the Trade Promotion Department. Japan prefers Myanmar black sesame seeds, cultivated under good agricultural practices (GAP), and purchases them after a quality assessment. Black sesame seeds from Myanmar are also exported to South Korea and Japan. Meanwhile, China purchases various coloured sesame seeds from the country.

The number of sesame acreages has increased in the country. Sesame is cultivated in the country throughout the year. Magway Region, which has gained a reputation as the oil pot of Myanmar, is the main producer of sesame seeds. The seeds are also grown in Mandalay and Sagaing regions.

Of the cooking oil crops grown in Myanmar, the acreage under sesame is the highest, accounting for 51.3 per cent of the overall oil crop plantation.

The volume of sesame exports was registered at over 96,000 tonnes, worth $130 million, in the 2015-2016 financial year; 100,000 tonnes, worth $145 million, in the 2016-2017FY; and, 120,000 tonnes, worth $147 million, in the 2017-2018FY.—Min Htet Aung/Ko Htet

The registration and re-registration of companies on the MyCO website commenced on 1 August 2018, in keeping with the Myanmar Companies Law 2017. Since then, 33,718 new companies and 46,377 existing companies have registered and re-registered on MyCO, bringing the total number of registered companies to 80,095 by July-end.

Normally, over 1,000 new companies are registered every month. When the online registry was launched in August 2018, 1,816 new companies registered on MyCO. The figure stood at 2,218 in September 2018, 1,671 in October, 1,431 in November, 1,364 in December, 1,733 in January 2019, 1,419 in February, 1,108 in March, and over 1,045 in April, 1,411 in May, 1,307 in June, 1,428 in July, 1,302 in August and 1,181 in September. The figures reached a fresh new peak of 2,059 in October 2019. Then, 1,615 new companies in November and 1,772 in December 2019 were recorded, data from the DICA shows.

This year, the figures of registered companies stood at 1,415 in January, 1,298 in February and 1,015 in March, only 348 companies in April, 798 in May, 1,314 in June and 1,650 in July, as per data of the DICA.

At present, 100 per cent of the applicants are using the online registration platform, according to data provided by the DICA.

Besides, all registered companies need to file annual returns (AR) on the MyCO registry system within two months of incorporation, and at least once every year (not later than one month after the anniversary of the incorporation), according to Section 97 of the law. According to Section 266 (A) of the Myanmar Companies Law 2017, public companies must submit annual returns and financial statements (G-5) simultaneously.

All overseas corporations must submit ARs in the prescribed format on MyCO within 28 days of the financial year ending, as per Section 53 (A-1) of the Myanmar Companies Law 2017. A total of 14,490 companies were suspended for failing to submit AR forms within the due date. Newly established companies are required to submit ARs within two months of incorporation or face a fine of K100,000 for filing late returns.

The DICA has notified any company which fails to submit its AR within 13 months will be notified of its suspension (I-9A). If it fails to submit the AR within 28 days of receiving the notice, the system will show the company's status as suspended. Companies can restore their status only after shelling out a fine of K50,000 for late filing of AR, K100,000 for the restoration of the company on the registry, and K100,000 for late filing of documents.

If a company fails to restore its status within six months of suspension, the registrar will strike its name off the registry, according to the DICA notice.

The construction, manufacturing, real estate development, hotels and tourism and agriculture sectors pull the largest investments made by Myanmar citizens this year. Although Myanmar's economy is affected by the coronavirus impacts, domestic and foreign investments are growing in the current financial year. The existing enterprises are also seen the expansion of capitals and an increase in the labour force, the MIC stated.

The Ministry of Investment and Foreign Economic Relations is inviting responsible businesses so the country benefits. The MIC is screening the investment projects at the soonest according to the COVID Economic Relief Plan.—GNLM

Modi enjoys twin triumphs for India's Hindu nationalists

NEW DELHI—Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi will on Wednesday lay the foundation for a temple at a flashpoint holy site exactly a year after imposing direct rule on Muslim-majority Kashmir -- twin triumphs for his Hindu nationalist government.

The site of Ayodhya and divided Kashmir have been two of the most divisive communal issues of the past 30 years in India, and Modi has attempted to draw a line under both in his second term. For his fans both steps confirm Modi as a decisive, visionary leader, and India's most important in decades.

His critics see him as remoulding the country as a Hindu nation, at the expense of India's 200 million Muslims, and taking it in authoritarian direction.

leader in recent memory," Michael Kugelman from the Wilson Center told AFP.

"This has made him wildly popular, but also highly controversial and quite divisive."

The holy city of Ayodhya in northern India has long been a fault line in India's religious divisions, and has been the spark for some of its worst sectarian violence.

Japan-S. Korea feud set to flare over wartime labour row

TOKYO—Tensions between Japan and South Korea could flare up in the coming months amid an ongoing feud over an issue of compensation for Koreans made to work in factories during Japanese colonial rule.

Neither Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe nor South Korean President Moon Jae In appears willing to back down, raising concerns about the prospects for ongoing security and economic cooperation between the close neighbours, both key U.S. allies in Asia.

A South Korean court on Tuesday began procedures to liquidate assets seized from Nippon Steel Corp., which had refused to comply with a Supreme Court decision awarding 100 million won ($8,400) each to four former workers.

Japan has condemned the ruling as a violation of international law, saying it runs counter to a 1965 bilateral agreement signed when the countries established diplomatic ties.

Under the agreement, Japan provided South Korea with $300 million in grants and $200 million in low-interest loans with the understanding that the issue of wartime compensation was being resolved "completely and finally."

The Supreme Court, however, ruled that the former workers were not properly compensated for emotional suffering endured under their conscription during the 1910-1945 period when the Korean Peninsula was under Japanese control.—Kyodo ■

75 years on, Japan bomb survivors make final pleas for abolition

NAGASAKI—As Japan marks 75 years since the devastating attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the last generation of nuclear bomb survivors are working to ensure their message lives on after them. The "hibakusha" -- literally "person affected by the bomb" -- have for decades been a powerful voice calling for the abolition of nuclear weapons.

There are an estimated 136,700 left, many of whom were infants or unborn children at the time of the attacks.

The average age of a survivor now is a little over 83, according to Japan's health ministry, lending an urgency as they share their testimonies and call for a ban on nuclear weapons.

"What we hibakusha are saying is we can't repeat (a nuclear attack)," 88-year-old Terumi

Tanaka, who survived the Nagasaki bombing, told AFP ahead of the anniversaries. "To this end, we have to let people know what we experienced, for them to hear the facts." Tanaka was 13 when the bomb hit his hometown. The attack on Nagasaki killed 74,000 people and came three days after a first bomb devastated the city of Hiroshima, killing 140,000.

He has spent much of his life sharing his experience, hoping that explaining the horrors of nuclear weapons will convince people to support a ban.

But he recognizes that the community of those who lived through the attacks is shrinking, and their message will have to be passed on by others in the decades to come. "We will all pass away, eventually," he said.

"We set up a group called No More Hibakusha Project, which works on preserving records as archives, including what we've written... so that (the next generation) can use them in their campaigns."—AFP ■

Utter devastation as toll from Beirut monster blast tops 100

BEIRUT—Rescuers searched for survivors in Beirut Wednesday after a cataclysmic explosion at the port sowed devastation across entire neighbourhoods, killing more than 100 people, wounding thousands and plunging Lebanon deeper into crisis.

The blast, which appeared to have been caused by a fire igniting 2,750 tonnes of ammonium nitrate left unsecured in a warehouse, was felt as far away as Cyprus, some 150 miles (240 kilometres) to the northwest.

The scale of the destruction was such that the Lebanese capital resembled the scene of an earthquake, with thousands of people left homeless and thousands more cramming into overwhelmed hospitals for treatment.

“We’ve had some dark days in Lebanon over the years but this is something else,” said Rami Rifai, a 38-year-old engineer, speaking to AFP from a hospital where his two daughters were receiving treatment after sustaining cuts despite being half a kilometre from the seat of the blast. “We already had the economic crisis, a government of thieves and coronavirus. I didn’t think it could get worse but now I don’t know if this country can get up again. Everyone is going to try to leave. I will try to leave,” he said, his voice choked by tears.

In the areas closest to the port, the amount of destruction caused by the long years of civil war between 1975 and 1990 was achieved in a second by a blast that levelled buildings within a radius of several hundred metres. One resident of Mar Mikhail, one of the most affected neighbourhoods, said she saw bodies strewn in the middle of the street, apparently thrown off balconies and rooftops by the blast.

Many people were watching and filming with their phones after an earlier and smaller explosion was heard in the port and ignited a fire.

Trickle of British tourists dashes Cyprus tourism hopes

LARNACA—The holiday island of Cyprus had hoped British tourists would give a badly-needed boost to its pandemic-hit tourism sector, but only a trickle of sun-seekers have arrived. “2020 is a lost season,” said beach bar manager Giannis Aggelopoulos in the resort town of Larnaca, which is usually busy with Brits enjoying sandy beaches but now largely empty of foreign tourists.

In a normal year, UK citizens make up the largest group of visitors to the former British colony in the eastern Mediterranean, where restaurants offer bacon and eggs for breakfast, pints of ale and televised Premier League games. “It’s a home away from home,” said one visitor, Paul, who arrived Tuesday on an under-booked Wizz Air flight from London with his partner Nastasha and their young son. “We are here to help a bit,” he said. “We like to go to the restaurants, to the bars, to do some shopping. We’re going to spend some money.”

But for Cyprus’ hard-hit tourism sector it’s all too little too late. Most arrivals from Britain since Cyprus eased bilateral restrictions last Saturday have been individual travellers and dual nationals, not the usual big tour groups.—AFP ■

Trump national security adviser says U.S. opposes foreign interventions in Libya

WASHINGTON—U.S. President Donald Trump’s National Security Adviser Robert O’Brien Tuesday said that the United States was “deeply troubled” by the conflict in Libya, urging against foreign military interventions.

“We strongly oppose foreign military involvement, including the use of mercenaries and private military contractors, by all sides,” O’Brien said in a White House statement.

He also noted that foreign powers that establish an enduring military presence or control Libyan resources posed grave threats to regional stability and global commerce while undermining the security interests of the United States and its allies.—Xinhua ■

Thousands evacuated as forest fires rage in southern France

MARSEILLE—Around 2,700 people have been evacuated, some of them by boat, to escape forest fires that were raging Wednesday across a vast area near the southern French city of Marseille, officials said.

Some 1,800 firefighters are battling the blazes, which broke out on Tuesday afternoon, fanned by strong winds.

The fires have ravaged about 1,000 hectares (2,500 acres) of vegetation and are threatening residential areas and campsites near the coast, the fire service said.

No casualties have been reported, “but material damage has still to be evaluated,” it said.

The blazes are not yet under control, but lighter winds are expected later Wednesday.

Eight campsites near the towns of Martigues, where the fire erupted, and Sausset-les-Pins have been evacuated “as a preventative measure”, the fire service said.

Some of the tourists at the sites were taken by boat and are being looked after by local authorities.

A care home for the elderly was also evacuated.

A second blaze in the same region broke out near an industrial park, and raged across 120 hectares, damaging a house and several businesses.—AFP ■

Scott Parker is determined there will be no repeat of the mistakes Fulham made the last they were promoted to the Premier League. PHOTO: AFP/FILE

History will not repeat itself, vows Fulham boss Parker

LONDON —Scott Parker says newly-promoted Fulham must avoid the mistakes they made when last in the Premier League two seasons ago after securing a return to the top-flight with victory over Brentford in the Championship play-off final.

The 39-year-old former Fulham and England midfielder's pragmatic approach got the better of the more adventurous style of Brentford counterpart Thomas Frank as his side won 2-1 after extra time Tuesday at an empty Wembley.

Parker's approach to tactics may not be crowd-pleasing but they could be the right recipe to prevent the Cottagers going straight back down like they did last time.

Huge investment in players was not rewarded with results on the pitch with many of the influx looking hideously over-priced.

Parker was a first-hand witness to the debacle having replaced Claudio Ranieri in February 2019 when they were all but doomed.

However, one of owner Shahid Khan's better investments was to hand Parker a two-year contract despite just three wins in his nine games in charge in the Premier League.

Parker has rewarded that faith plentifully and the Craven Cottage club will earn around £135 million ($176 million) from being promoted.—AFP ■

Tennis: Defending champion Nadal won't play US Open, slams schedule

NEW YORK—Defending champion Rafael Nadal said on Tuesday (Aug 4) he will not play the US Open, citing concerns over the coronavirus and slamming tennis' "barbaric" schedule.

"After many thoughts I have decided not to play this year's US Open," Nadal said on Twitter.

"The situation is very complicated worldwide, the Covid-19 cases are increasing, it looks like we still don't have control of it.

"This is a decision I never wanted to take but I have decided to follow my heart this time and for the time being I rather not travel."

The 34-year-old Spanish star also took aim at the international tennis schedule, which has been revised following disruptions sparked by Covid-19 shutdowns.

The US Open in New York, scheduled for Aug 31 through Sept 13, will be followed a fortnight later by the French Open at Roland Garros.

"We know that the reduced tennis calendar is barbaric this year after four months stopped with no play..." Nadal said.—AFP ■

Roles reversed as Guardiola seeks to follow trail blazed by Zidane

LONDON—Zinedine Zidane may never have been hired as Real Madrid coach but for the success of Pep Guardiola at Barcelona, but it is Guardiola who now must follow the Frenchman's example to complete his mission at Manchester City.

Zidane's Madrid travel to Manchester on Friday (Aug 7) looking to overturn a 2-1 first-leg deficit from February as the Champions League resumes after a five-month coronavirus shutdown. Much has changed since the sides last met. Then under pressure, Zidane, in his second spell in charge at the Bernabeu, has again interrupted Barca's dominance of La Liga with a run of 10 straight victories after Spanish football's return in June to take the title.

Even for the club where Champions League success matters more than anything else, the pressure is off Madrid as Zidane looks to protect his perfect record in the competition as a coach.

Three times he led Madrid to Champions League glory in his first spell in charge between 2016 and 2018 and Zidane is yet to be eliminated from the competition as a coach.

"When he has done what he has done, winning three Champions Leagues in a row, taking two La Liga titles from Barca when they - in this decade - have dominated this competition like no other club, it shows his ability," Guardiola told DAZN. "Although people may not believe me because he is from Real Madrid, I am very happy that things are going well because it is very good for football that things go well for people like him."—AFP ■
