Gold making raw materials in short supply

THE old gold scrap and jewellery are refined into the pure gold bar as the raw material from gold mining has not come to the gold market, said Chair U Myo Myint of Yangon Region Gold Entrepreneurs Association (YGEA).

“We haven’t received the raw material supplies from the region. The land from mining areas also collapsed due to the heavy rain. It is raining all over the places and some of the labourers were starting to suffers from sickness. As a result, we could not produce the raw materials from gold mining. Another thing is that all the shops haven’t reopened yet because of COVID-19. If all these shops were reopened, the shop would come and sell two or three viss of raw materials a day. Those raw materials could fulfil our market demand. Now, we could not buy the old jewellery from the gold shop because the shops are not open yet and the raw material hasn’t come from the gold mining,” he said.

On the past few days, there has been a lot of demand in the gold market, hence the gold purchase orders were accepted appointment system.

“Currently, the global gold price is falling again. The dollar exchange rate against the Myanmar kyat has decreased when the Central Bank of Myanmar (CBM) is constantly selling the dollar at an auction rate. Consequently, the domestic gold price fell again. However, the raw materials are still less supplied,” said U Myo Myint.

Currently, the pure gold price is about K1,840,000 per tical (0.578 ounce, or 0.016 kilogram) on 17 September in the domestic market while global gold price touches a high of above US$1,759 per ounce. Further, the dollar to kyat exchange rate was at K1,900 per dollar on 17 September.

Gold prices were volatile in the domestic market during this month, fluctuating more than in any other months so far this year. The domestic gold price unprecedentedly reached its highest record of K1,900,000 per tical on 11 September 2021.

As a result of this, YGEA urged its members to regulate trade in order to deal with market volatility.

To regulate unsustainable rally in the domestic gold market, the association called for the members to make the gold transaction with only immediate payment, avoid the verbal transactions over calls and halt trading outside the Yangon region, according to YGEA. — NN/GNLM

In the 2021-2022 financial year, a total of 50 acres of long-staple cotton are targeted to grow in the Kawlin district, including 25 acres in Kawlin township and 25 acres in Wuntho township.

EXPERIMENTAL cultivation of long-staple cotton in Kawlin Township, Sagaing region will complete at the end of September, said U Win Thein, Head of Kawlin District Agriculture Department.

In the 2021-2022 financial year, a total of 50 acres of long-staple cotton are targeted to grow in the Kawlin district, including 25 acres in Kawlin township and 25 acres in Wuntho township. Those are being cultivated by the 40 farmers beginning from the first week of September and it is expected to complete at the end of this month.

“The cotton was started growing in the first week of September. To date, about 10 acres have been grown in Wuntho township and 9 acres in Kawlin township. The cultivation period is a little bit longer because it is raining. We expected to finish at the end of this month. The crop can be harvested in next January,” said U Win Thein.

Kawlin Township Agriculture Department provided the cotton seeds to grow 50 acres of cotton crops on a trial basis.

The department’s staff will also provide awareness to the farmers to improve cotton yields. If there is no buyer, the department is arranging to sell them in Mandalay and Monywa markets.

Myanmar rice export registers $642 mln this FY

MYANMAR generated US$642.2 million income from exports of rice and broken rice in the past ten months (October-July) of the current financial year 2020-2021, according to Myanmar Customs Department.

The volume of rice and broken rice exported in the past eight months was estimated at over 1.2 million metric tons.

Border trade disruption led to a sluggish market yet the flat price occurs in the border export market.

The prices of white rice varieties range US$375 to 405 per metric ton, the price of glutinous rice price was priced $600-610 per MT and the broken rice fetched $300-335 per MT depending on the different varieties and quality, according to the Myanmar Rice Federation (MRF).

This year, rice shipment to European countries is declining. However, Myanmar is delivering rice and broken rice to China and Bangladesh. The market cools down for now owing to the transport difficulties amid the closure

The prices of staple rice have stayed in the upward trend since May. Additionally, the restriction measures to contain the spread of COVID-19 and natural disasters affected the prices. The price is expected to remain bullish in the coming months, as per MRF.

High-quality rice is demanded in the domestic market and the price moves in the range of K36,000-68,000 per bag depending on different varieties. The low-quality rice is priced between K23,000 and K28,800 per bag at present. The price indicated a gradual increase.

The federation conducted the virtual meeting with the committee members in the regions and states, exporters and the companies concerned regarding the rice production and price stability on 14 August 2021. They discussed matters related to the possible production drop in the 2021-2022 monsoon season amid the COVID-19 impacts and high input cost and plans for rice donations to those people in need and selling rice at an affordable price near the industrial zones.

Consequently, MRF, Myanmar Rice and Paddy Traders Association, rice wholesale centre (Wahdan), traders and brokers sell the rice at a fairer price in Yangon Region starting from 14 September 2021.

Ayeyawady Pawsan, Shwebo Pawsan, Pawkywel, short matured rice varieties (90 days) and sticky rice will be sold at a cheaper price between 23,500 and K54,000 per bag.

Myanmar set the rice export target at only 2 million tonnes in the current FY as summer paddy growing acreage drops. Weather changes affected irrigation water resource availability in agriculture, as per MRF.

Myanmar generated over $800 million from rice exports in the previous FY2019-2020 ended 30 September, with an estimated volume of over 2.5 million tonnes. — KK/GNLM

Thailand tops among trading partners in regional countries this FY Myawady border trading zone.

THE bilateral trade with neighbouring Thailand, Myanmar's major trading partner among ASEAN, amounted to US$4.117 billion in the past ten months (October-July) of the current financial year 2020-2021, the statistics issued by the Central Statistical Organization under the Ministry of Planning and Finance indicated.

Thailand has been Myanmar's largest trade partner among the regional countries, followed by Singapore and Malaysia. Moreover, Myanmar's exports mostly go to Thailand after the main trade partner outside the region, China.

The ministry reported that exports surpassed imports in trade with Thailand, with exports reaching over $2.548 billion and imports valued at over $1.569 billion.

Thailand accounted for 18.48 per cent of total trade in the 2016-2017FY with an estimated trade value of US$4.6 billion, 19.17 per cent in the 2017-2018FY with a trade value of $5.57 billion, 40.38 per cent in the 2018-2019FY with $5.46 billion and over 40 per cent in the 2019-2020FY with $5.117 billion, respectively.

Exports of natural gas from the Taninthayi Region contributed to the enormous increase in border trade with Thailand in the previous years. The corn exports to Thailand has shown a significant increase since 2019, the Ministry of Commerce stated.

Myanmar primarily exports natural gas, fishery products, coal, tin concentrate (SN 71.58 per cent), coconut (fresh and dried), beans, corns, bamboo shoots, sesame seeds, garment, footwear, plywood and veneer, broken rice and other commodities to Thailand. It imports capital goods such as machinery, raw industrial goods such as cement and fertilizers, and consumer goods such as cosmetics, edible vegetable oil and food products from the neighbouring country.

Myanmar is carrying out border trade with the neighbouring country Thailand through Tachilek, Myawady, Myeik, Mawtaung, Hteekhee, Kawthoung and Meisei border areas respectively. Among them, Myawady performed the largest trade in border trade with Thailand, followed by Hteekhee.

Nevertheless, the trading activity via the border is sluggish amid the COVID-19 surge. Consequently, the trade via land borders slightly declined in the current FY (2020-2021) as against last year. Apart from its main trade partner China, Myanmar's external trade was mostly carried out with the regional trade partners. — KK/GNLM

Hlaing Oo.

Don't believe in rumours, fake news and misinformation

RUMOURS, fake news and misinformation are based on incorrect and inaccurate reasons which never come true. Those who believe in such rumours, fake news and misinformation will face terrible disadvantages in their lives.

Everybody can accept nothing even though true or untrue issues will affect their property and ego. However, they tremble at the events that may cause loss to their ego because they are afraid of losing their ownership for all.

Recently, a fake notification spread on the social network, especially on Facebook, mentioning that K5,000 and K10,000 currency notes issued by the Central Bank of Myanmar were declared illegal. It can be considered that the rootless rumour might be based on the perpetration of unscrupulous persons.

In fact, the State Constitution (2008) is an existing mother law of the country. Section 36 of the State Constitution (2008) clearly guarantees the economy of the country. Sub-section (e) of Section 36 of the State Constitution (2008) stipulates that the Union shall not demonetize the currency legally in circulation. So, everybody should not be concerned about the demonetization of the current circulating currency.

There have been similar incidents in the past that K10,000 currency notes would be abolished. The State Constitution (2008) grants the people to trustfully use the currency notes till today. The people should not believe in such rumours and chaos. Whatever it may be, these rumours shook the hearts of the people to cause the frets.

Actually, people need to analyze the root causes and sources of any incidents and information. They should have the knowledge to assess the root causes of information whether it is true or not. They need to analyze the background history and trustful acts of the information whether should be reliable or not.

To have the capability to analyze the background history and trustful acts of the information and the participants in the information whether should be reliable or not.

To be able to analyze the information sources, the people must have the knowledgeable capacity. Decisions and remarks for any events should not be adopted hurriedly. It is necessary to take adequate time for analyzing the events and information to successfully have the correct answer. If so, they will overcome any mistakes in their lives and will achieve success in all processes, rather than others. Hence, all people should not forget to assess and analyze everything for all.

Actually, people need to analyze the root causes and sources of any incidents and information. They should have the knowledge to assess the root causes of information whether it is true or not. They need to have the capability to analyze the background history and trustful acts of the information and the participants in the information whether should be reliable or not.

Tawthalin, the month of Regatta Festival and boat races

By Dr Khin Maung Nyunt (Maha Saddhamma Jotika dhaja, Sithu)

THE sixth month in the Myanmar Lunar Calendar is Tawthalin [September] when the monsoon has receded turning nature calm and pleasant. All aqua life bodies are filled with monsoon rain but no stormy waves, only sparking ripples dance in shine. Water surfaces look like a large mat spread out. Hence Myanmar saying တော်သလင်း မြစ်တွင်း သင်ဖြူးခင်း In Tawthalin rivers look like a large mat spread out. The clam atmosphere is fragrant with the sweet smell of Yinmar blooms designated as a flower of this month.

Though geographically called a tropical country and its central part marked as Dry Zone. There is not deserved in the true sense of that term. Aquatic bodies are everywhere naturally formal or created by both nature and man. To give but a few of such aquatic bodies are Indaw Kyi Lake in Kachin state and Inlay Lake in southern Shan state, Maing Ton Kan in northeastern Shan state, Meiktila Kan in Mandalay region, Taung Tha Man Inn in Amarapura and many man-made water services irrigations in other states and regions in addition to moats surrounding old capitals. Besides a long sea coastline gives Myanmar people waterly life and culture since time immemorial.

Both for pre-Buddhist and post-Buddhist traditions, culture has given Myanmar ethnic races aquatic tradition and activities Myanmar Kings [Pyu, Mon, Myanmar, Rakhine, Shan etc...] believed that they were descended from Saka Deva King of Tavatisma in Celestial Land. Just as Saka Deva annually holds Boat Festival in the Gunga River up there, Myanmar Kings hold a similar festival in the Kingdom down belong on Earth.

The main purposes of the festival are: -

- (1) To display
- (2) To exercise and
- (3) To recruit.

Preparations are made two months ahead. Royal orders were issued. Ministers and officials were assigned specific duties. Announcements were made to the public near and far to participate in yearly festivals and events. Royal Brahman Priests chose the most auspicious weeks, days and times to celebrate the great event.

A space and long water body were chosen: river, lake, tank etc. for a long line of watercraft of all sizes. It would be too long to mention all watercraft for display in the article. Just to mention but a few are as follows. For Yey Khin Taw you need an aquatic body of at least one mile long and half a mile wide at 6 feet to 12 feet deep. Besides element wealth and good sunshine. Burges and boats, exercise boats and rain boats are given in this article. A total number of display boats is the total number of exercise boat displays. Total numbers of racing boats were on display. Pyi Gyi Mon Royal Burge is the major display. It is a replacement of Zey Tawun Hall with Lion Throne on which their Majesties were seated in full dress to receive guests and foreign ambassadors. All sat on the floor in far runs right and left to song composes presented loot a stanza. If the weather is clement the display would take a round of up and down streams – if not in one round. The public thickly lined up on both sides of the river and cheered long live your Majesties of the people. Peace, Progress 37 difficult styles of rowing with that short and long singing 37 music and songs.

The next follow races of watercraft. Myanmar tradition of Royal march ရေအား၊ ကျည်းအား နှင့် ချီတော်မူ သည်။

Regatta Festival in Burmese is called Yey Khin Taw [ရေခင်းတော်]. Not Yey Kin Taw [ရေကင်းတော်]. Khin [ခင်း] means to display ခင်းကျင်းပြသ Kin ကင်း means to patrol ကင်းစောင့်. All Myanmar palace cities at the capitals are brick-walled and surrounded on all four sides with moats of water supplied by dug canals. In these moats, patrol boats were on duty to watch security and safety. No enemy swim across the moats to get into the walled city to do harm to Palace dwellers. To break the monotony of duty they led music bands and songs Yey Kin band and Yey Kin song. The new generation of Myanmar should take care that Yey Khin and Yey Kin are two different functions. Yey Khin ရေခင်း is held once in 9 years in the month of Tawthalin [September] Yey Kin is on duty the whole year.

US medical experts to vote on Pfizer Covid boosters

US MEDICAL experts will meet on 17 September to debate and vote on the controversial question of giving out booster doses of Pfizer's Covid-19 vaccine to the general population.

President Joe Biden's administration announced in August a plan to roll out third shots to everyone, not just the immune compromised already able to receive them, starting from 20 September.

But experts have since expressed reservations about whether they are required, amid concerns over global inequity, the greater need to vaccinate the unvaccinated, and possible increased risk of side effects.

The skepticism extends to scientists at the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), who struck a cautious tone in documents released ahead of Friday's meeting where an independent panel has been convened.

“Overall, data indicate that currently US-licensed or authorized COVID-19 vaccines still afford protection against severe Covid-19 disease and death in the United States,” the FDA said in a briefing document.

The outside experts — including vaccinologists, infectious disease researchers, and epidemiologists — will be tasked with voting on whether there is sufficient proof of a booster's safety and efficacy.

While their recommendation isn't binding, it is normally acted upon.

If the FDA panel votes yes, it will fall to another committee convened by the Centres for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) on 22-23 September to decide who should receive the booster first and when they should get it.

The CDC has previously indicated it sees the elderly, nursing home residents and healthcare workers as likely first in line. Any expressions of hesitancy or calls for limits on who should get boosters may be taken as a rebuke of the Biden administration, which announced the measure prior to consulting its science agencies.

Two senior FDA officials signed on to a letter in The Lancet this week that said “booster doses for the general population are not appropriate at this stage in the pandemic.” Pfizer's briefing documents show it plans to cite studies that demonstrated waning immunity against infection several months out from the first two doses.

But a growing body of US research has shown two doses continue to confer high protection against severe outcomes — albeit at slightly diminished levels for the elderly. Pfizer will also present data showing boosters increased antibody levels against the Delta variant, as well as research from Israel, which ran a booster campaign for the general population, to help make its case.

For its part, the FDA said in its document that not all studies are reliable and it believes US-based research “may most accurately represent vaccine effectiveness in the US population.” — AFP

World leaders will hold closed-door climate meet at UN

UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres and British Prime Minister Boris Johnson will host a closed-door meeting of world leaders at the sidelines of the General Assembly in New York on Monday to boost climate commitments.

The roundtable comes less than six weeks before a major UN climate meeting, COP26, in Glasgow, aimed at ensuring the world meets its goal of holding century-end warming to 1.5 degrees Celsius.

"UNGA is the last big moment in the international calendar ahead of COP26," said Britain's ambassador to the UN, Barbara Woodward, in a statement. "Climate change will be the UK's top priority."—AFP ■

Ebola virus in survivors can trigger outbreaks years after infection

EBOLA survivors can relapse and trigger outbreaks at least five years after infection, and long-term follow-up of former patients is needed to prevent devastating flare-ups, according to new research.

Scientists already knew Ebola could lie dormant in survivors, who test negative because the virus is in tissue rather than circulating in the blood.

But analysis of an outbreak this year in Guinea, published Wednesday in the journal Nature, found these "virus reservoirs" appear able to awaken and cause new infections and transmission years on.

To trace the source of the Guinea outbreak, which involved 16 confirmed cases, 12 of whom died, researchers analyzed the genomes of samples from several patients.

Ebola outbreaks are usually thought to result from the virus "spilling" from an animal host to a human.

But the analysis showed the Guinea strain was virtually identical to that from a 2013-16 wave. If the virus had been circulating actively in the community since then, it would have accumulated a certain number of mutations as it spread.—AFP ■

Chinese astronauts return to Earth after 90-day mission

THREE Chinese astronauts returned to Earth Friday after completing the country's longest-ever crewed mission, the latest landmark in Beijing's drive to become a major space power.

The capsule carrying the trio deployed its parachute and landed in the Gobi desert at 1:34 pm local time (0534 GMT).

"It feels very good to be back!" Tang Hongbo told state broadcaster CCTV after the 90-day mission, a record for China.

"I want to say dad, mom, I'm back! In good health and good spirits!" he said after emerging from the capsule within 30 minutes of landing. The crew of the Shenzhou-12 spacecraft were in good health, China Manned Space Agency (CMSA) said in a statement.

"The first manned mission to the (Chinese) space station is a complete success," it said.

The taikonauts — as Chinese astronauts are known — will undergo a 14-day quarantine before they can go home "because their immune systems may have weakened after the long mission," Huang Weifen, chief designer of China's manned space project told CCTV.

The mission was part of China's heavily promoted space programme, which has already seen the nation land a rover on Mars and send probes to the moon. The launch of Beijing's first crewed mission in nearly five years coincided with the 100th anniversary of the ruling Communist Party on 1 July, and was the highlight of a massive propaganda campaign.

The crew stayed for 90 days at the Tiangong space station, conducting spacewalks and scientific experiments.—AFP ■

Computing pioneer Clive Sinclair dies at 81

CLIVE Sinclair, the British inventor who pioneered the pocket calculator and affordable home computers, reportedly died on Thursday at the age of 81.

He passed away at his home in London after fighting cancer for more than a decade, UK media said, prompting tributes from many who fondly recalled their first experience of computing in the early 1980s.

He was still working on inventions last week "because that was what he loved doing", his daughter Belinda Sinclair told the BBC.

"He was inventive and imaginative and for him it was exciting and an adventure, it was his passion," she added.

Clive Sinclair's groundbreaking products included the first portable electronic calculator in 1972.

The Sinclair ZX80, launched in 1980 and sold for less than £100 at the time, brought home computing to the masses in Britain and beyond.

Other early home computers such as the Apple II cost far more, and Sinclair's company was the first in the world to sell more than a million machines.

Follow-up models included the ZX Spectrum in 1982, which boasted superior power and a more user-friendly interface, turbo-charging the revolution in gaming and programming at home. British movie director Edgar Wright, whose latest film "Last Night in Soho" premiered in Venice this month, paid tribute to Sinclair on Twitter.—AFP ■

Desolate villages face famine in Madagascar drought

NOTHING to eat, nothing to plant. The last rain in Ifotaka fell in May, for two hours.

Across Madagascar's vast southern tip, drought has transformed fields into dust bowls. More than one million people face famine.

Across tens of thousands of acres, the countryside is desolate. Harvest season begins in October, leaving long, lean weeks before the meagre crops come in. Some villages are abandoned. In others, people should be working the fields, but instead are languishing at home. There's nothing to reap.

Hunger weighs people down, both in mind and body. They move slowly, and struggle to follow conversation.

"I feel sick, and worried. Every day I wonder what we're going to eat," says Helmine Sija, 60 and a mother of six, in a village called Atoby.

Eating cactus and weeds

A petite woman with grey hair and a hardened face, Sija tends a boiling pot of cactus in front of her home. She chopped the pricks off with a machete to prepare them for cooking.

It can't really be called food. The concoction has little nutritional value, but it's a popular appetite suppressant, even though it causes stomach aches.

Her three oldest children have left home to look for work in other towns. She's caring for the young ones.

China fully vaccinates more than 1 billion people

CHINA has fully vaccinated more than one billion people against the coronavirus — 71 per cent of its population — official figures showed Thursday.

The country where the virus was first detected has mostly curbed the virus within its borders, but is racing to get the vast majority of its population vaccinated as a new outbreak flickers in the southeast. “As of 15 September, 2.16 billion vaccine doses have been administered nationwide,” said National Health Commission spokesman Mi Feng at a press briefing. Chinese health authorities said late last month that 890 million people in China had been fully vaccinated and two billion doses administered.

The government has not publicly announced a target for vaccination coverage, but top virologist Zhong Nanshan said last month that the country is likely to have 80 per cent of its population inoculated by the end of the year, reaching herd immunity.

China is currently battling an outbreak of the Delta variant in the southeastern province of Fujian that has infected almost 200 people so far in three cities, dozens of whom are schoolchildren. The Fujian cluster is the biggest rebound in weeks and comes after the country declared the Delta variant under control, in a test of China's “zero-case” approach to the pandemic.

China reported 49 new domestic transmissions on Thursday, the vast majority in Fujian.

Authorities said the cluster's suspected patient zero was a man who had recently returned from Singapore to the city of Putian, and developed symptoms after completing a 14-day quarantine and initially testing negative for the virus. The man's 12-year-old son and a classmate were among the first patients detected in the cluster last week, shortly after the new school term began.

The variant then raced through classrooms, infecting more than 36 children including 8 kindergartners, city authorities said Tuesday, in the first major school-linked spread the country has seen since the start of the pandemic.

Despite rolling out its vaccine campaign to include minors aged 12-17 in July, most young children remain unvaccinated in China, sparking fears that the latest Fujian outbreak could hit the most vulnerable people in the country disproportionately.

Authorities have rushed to quash the outbreak with targeted lockdowns, travel restrictions, mass testing and school closures before the upcoming 1 October public holiday, a week-long tourism peak.—AFP ■

3,000 unvaccinated health workers suspended

THOUSANDS of health workers across France have been suspended without pay for failing to get vaccinated against Covid-19 ahead of a deadline this week, Health Minister Olivier Veran said Thursday.

“Some 3,000 suspensions were notified yesterday to employees at health centres and clinics who have not yet been vaccinated,” Veran told RTL radio.

He added that “several dozens” had turned in their resignations rather than sign up for the jobs. That compares with 2.7 million health workers overall, Veran said, adding that “continued healthcare is assured”.

President Emmanuel Macron gave staff at hospitals, retirement home workers and the fire service an ultimatum in July to get at least one shot by September 15 or face unpaid suspension.

Many nurses in particular have been reluctant to get vaccinated, citing safety or efficacy concerns, posing the risk that France's inoculation drive could stall.

France's national public health agency estimated last week that roughly 12 per cent of hospital staff and around six per cent of doctors in private practices have yet to be vaccinated.

Overall, 70 per cent of the French have received both doses required to be fully vaccinated, which are available to everyone over age 12 — one of the highest coronavirus vaccines it hopes to commercialize widely.

A vetting process will start

Thursday with WHO experts examining the nation's Abdala and Soberana 02 jabs, said Rolando Perez of state pharma group BioCubaFarma.

Perez said the experts would examine the vaccines' “safety, immunogenicity (the ability of a vaccine to provoke an immune response) and efficacy.”

The WHO's representative in Cuba, Jose Moya, told AFP there would be “a first virtual meeting” Thursday between experts in Havana, Geneva and Washington.

Romer decries lack of 'integrity' under
Georgieva at World
Bank

NOBEL Prize-winning economist Paul Romer said the current head of the IMF, in her previous senior role at the World Bank, engineered a "whitewash" of his concerns surrounding the bank's flagship report.

In an interview with AFP on Thursday, Romer said there was a "lack of integrity" among the World Bank leadership, including then-CEO Kristalina Georgieva.

Earlier in the day the World Bank announced it was immediately discontinuing its Doing Business report after an independent investigation commissioned by its board found irregularities in the 2018 and 2020 editions and concluded that Georgieva pressed staff for alterations to avoid angering China.

Romer said that during his time at the World Bank he was not aware of Georgieva pushing staff on China. But "I had some suspicions that things like this might be going on." — AFP ■

SINGAPORE'S non-oil domestic exports (NODX) grew at a slower pace in August, as the year-on-year growth narrowed from 12.7 per cent in July to 2.7 per cent, Enterprise Singapore, a government agency, announced on Friday.

The electronic NODX expanded by 16.7 per cent year on year in August, extending the 15 per cent increase in the previous month. The non-electronic NODX declined by 1.4 per cent in August, a reversal from the 12 per cent rise in July.

On a month-on-month seasonally adjusted basis, Singapore's NODX decreased by 3.6 per cent in August to 15.5 billion Singapore dollars (about 11.52 billion U.S. dollars), after a 0.9 per cent decrease in the previous month.

Singapore's non-oil re-exports (NORX) grew by 19 per cent year on year in August, following the 13.9-per cent rise in July. Both electronic and non-electronic NORX grew. —Xinhua ■

Canada sees funds inflow of billions of INTERNATIONAL transactions in securities caused a net inflow of funds of 18.9 billion Canadian dollars (about 14.9 billion U.S. dollars) in the Canadian economy in July, according to Statistics Canada on Thursday.

Foreign investors acquired 14.2 billion Canadian dollars of Canadian securities in July while Canadian investors reduced their holdings of foreign securities by 4.7 billion Canadian dollars, following a record investment of 28 billion Canadian dollars in June. As a result, international transactions in securities generated a net inflow of funds of 18.9 billion Canadian dollars in July. Non-resident investors acquired 14.2 billion Canadian dollars of Canadian securities in July, the 12th consecutive month of investment in these instruments, for a total of 118.1 billion Canadian dollars.

Foreign investment targeted government debt securities. A foreign divestment in Canadian equities moderated the overall acquisition activity in the month.

Foreign investors added

13.5 billion Canadian dollars of government debt securities to their portfolios in July. This activity largely reflected acquisitions of federal government debt instruments with 8.1 billion Canadian dollars and provincial government bonds with 5.4 billion Canadian dollars.

In addition, non-resident investors added 6 billion Canadian dollars of Canadian private corporate bonds to their holdings, mainly foreign currency-denominated instruments of Canadian chartered banks.

Austria hears first lawsuit over virus outbreak in ski resort

THE first civil lawsuit begins in a court in Vienna on 17 September over a notorious outbreak of coronavirus at the popular ski resort of Ischgl in March 2020, where thousands of people from 45 countries claim to have become infected.

The case is the first of 15 lawsuits filed by plaintiffs from Austria and Germany, accusing the authorities of not responding quickly enough to Covid-19 outbreaks in Ischgl and other resorts in the province of Tyrol.

It is being brought on behalf of the family of 72-year-old Hannes Schopf, who died after contracting the virus in Ischgl.

Lawyer Alexander Klausner, acting for the Schopf family and the VSV consumer organisation helping them and others bring their cases to court, said the official shortcomings that allowed Ischgl and the surrounding area to become a virus hotspot were manifold.

He pointed to a report last October by an independent commission of experts which found that local officials had "reacted too late" and made "serious miscalculations" when alerted by Iceland on 5 March that several of its nationals had tested positive on returning home. Local officials "had at least 48 hours to react" after the warning, Klausner told AFP.

They also missed an opportunity to prevent more tourists coming to the valley that weekend, and the regional government cast doubt on whether the Icelandic tourists had been infected in Ischgl, he said.—AFP ■

IMF chief denies altering World Bank report to appease China

IMF Managing Director Kristalina Georgieva disagreed with an investigation showing she pushed for changes to a World Bank report to favour China. PHOTO: POOL/AFP

IMF chief Kristalina Georgieva on Thursday disputed an independent investigation which found that in her previous job at the World Bank, she pressed staff to alter a report to avoid angering China.

Based on the findings, the World Bank announced it was immediately discontinuing its Doing Business report after the investigation found irregularities in the 2018 and 2020 editions.

Georgieva, a Bulgarian national who took the helm of the International Monetary Fund in October 2019, rejected its conclusions regarding her role.

"I disagree fundamentally with the findings and interpretations of the Investigation of Data Irregularities as it relates to my role in the World Bank's Doing Business report of 2018," she said in a statement.

The allegations could damage her reputation, and provide grist for long-time US critics of the multilateral organizations and their treatment of China.

"These are serious findings," the US Treasury said in a statement, noting it is "analyzing the report."

"Our primary responsibility is to uphold the integrity of international financial institutions."

Georgieva said she briefed the IMF's board on the situation. The board is expected to meet to discuss the issue but it is unclear when.—AFP ■

China seeks to join TPP free trade pact to boost Asia clout

CHINA on Friday began in earnest work to advance its application to become a member of the Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade deal, a day after filing a bid to join the pact in an attempt to increase its economic clout in the Asia-Pacific region.

Chinese accession would significantly impact trade in the region, and its bid is aimed at countering moves that the United States and other partners are pursuing to decouple from the Chinese economy. It remains uncertain, though, whether China will be allowed to join the pact.

To join the deal, formally known as the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership, China will need the unanimous approval of the 11 member countries. One hurdle China faces is its strained ties with Australia, one of the TPP members. In June, China said it had filed a complaint with the World Trade Organization over Australia's anti-dumping tariffs, apparently retaliation against Canberra's decision to complain to the WTO over China's anti-dumping duties on wine exports. Australia signaled on Friday that it is unwilling to accept the start of talks on China's possible participation. The country's Minister for Trade, Tourism and Investment Dan Tehan said in a statement on Friday that China would need to convince members that it has a "track record of compliance" with its commitments in the WTO and existing trade agreements, once again reiterating the need for China to restart ministerial-level talks between the two nations.—Kyodo ■

Shipbuilder Hyundai Heavy sails away on market debut

SHARES in the world's biggest shipbuilder Hyundai Heavy Industries more than doubled from their initial public offering price when they made their stock trading debut on Friday.

Hyundai Heavy's IPO follows a restructuring of the wider group linked to a deal to take a majority stake in global number two Daewoo, although that is still waiting regulatory approval.

The Hyundai Heavy flotation price was set at 60,000 Korean won (€43.39), but they rocketed to 135,000 won in the first hour of trading in Seoul, up 125 per cent. By early afternoon the price had slipped back to 115,000 won, giving it a market capitalisation of more than 10 trillion won (€7.2 billion).

More than 1,600 domestic and foreign institutional investors applied for shares during the flotation process earlier this month. The offering raised 1.08 trillion won.

Hyundai Heavy said it planned to use around 760 billion won of the flotation proceeds to invest in next-generation vessels and environment-friendly technologies.

The Daewoo transaction was announced in 2019 but still needs approval from authorities in South Korea, Japan and the European Union. If it goes ahead it will consolidate Hyundai Heavy's position as the dominant global shipbuilder, giving it more than 20 per cent of the market. —AFP ■

US moves to block Purdue Pharma opioid settlement

THE US Justice Department has challenged a plan that would dissolve Purdue Pharma, manufacturer of the OxyContin drug that has been blamed for the country's opioid crisis, while shielding its founders from lawsuits.

The government wants the settlement, which was approved this month by a federal judge, to be put on hold while prosecutors challenge it in a federal appeals court.

Under the deal, the Sackler families that founded and profited from the company would have to pay $4.5 billion, but they could not be taken to court again over the drug.

In a court filing released Wednesday, Justice Department Trustee William Harrington argues the deal falls short of providing accountability for the nationwide addiction crisis that caused more than 500,000 overdose deaths in the United States over the past 20 years.

The agreement "harms both the public and countless individuals by extinguishing the rights that opioid victims hold against possibly thousands of Sackler Family members and associated parties."—AFP ■

South Korea: new kid on the SLBM block

MISSILE test headlines on the Korean peninsula are almost invariably about the nuclear-armed North, but this week the South fired a submarine-launched ballistic missile of its own as it rapidly scales up its military capabilities.

The successful test puts the South among the elite flotilla of nations with proven SLBM technology, and Seoul is on a multi-billion-dollar drive to develop its defence forces.

On the other side of the Demilitarized Zone that splits the peninsula, the North maintains the world's largest standing army and has made rapid progress in its nuclear weapon and ballistic missile programmes, earning it multiple international sanctions.

But Seoul's SLBMs shift the strategic balance, enabling it to respond with a surprise second strike even if its land-based forces were destroyed in a conflict.

Wednesday's launch took place from the Ahn Chang-ho, a new 3,000-ton missile submarine named after an independence campaigner.

Afterwards President Moon Jae-in — who has long pursued engagement with Pyongyang to bring it to the negotiating table — told the vessel's commander: "Activist Ahn Chang-ho remarked in 1921 that 'The only thing we can trust and wish for is our strength'."

South Korea maintains a conscript army to defend it against the North, which invaded in 1950, and this month unveiled a blueprint to raise its defence budget to 70 trillion won ($60 billion) by 2026, with a focus on developing "cutting-edge advanced technologies".

It is adding more Aegis-class destroyers to its navy and building more SLBM submarines, as well as replacing ageing F-4 and F-5 jets with indigenously-designed KF-21 fighters. The state Agency for Defense Development (ADD) also unveiled a supersonic cruise missile on Wednesday and said it was pursuing a high-powered ballistic missile able to deliver a significantly heavier warhead—AFP ■

N. Korea tested "railway-borne missile system" on Wed.: KCNA

NORTH Korea has tested a "railway-borne missile system," state-run media reported Thursday, a day after Japanese authorities said the nuclear-armed nation launched two ballistic missiles in defiance of UN Security Council resolutions.

The objective was to strike a target area 800 kilometres off North Korea's east coast, according to the Korean Central News Agency. Japan said the two missiles flew around 750 km before falling into the sea within its exclusive economic zone, in the first launches of ballistic missiles by North Korea in nearly six months. The missiles launched Wednesday are regarded as an updated version of the KN-23, a new type of short-range ballistic missile known to fly on an irregular trajectory. It is similar to an advanced ballistic missile manufactured in Russia, military experts said.

iment on Wednesday, the news agency said. He was reportedly promoted to the Politburo of the Central Committee of the ruling Workers' Party of Korea earlier this month.

"The railway-borne missile system serves as an efficient counter-strike means capable of dealing a harsh multi-concurrent blow to the threat-posing forces through separate performances of firepower duty in different parts of the country," KCNA said.

But the experts said it is uncertain whether the missile system will actually work well as train tracks in North Korea have become decrepit and a railcar carrying a ballistic missile may be unable to run at high speed.

Moreover, the latest test would help the United States and other nations detect where North Korea might launch a ballistic missile, they said. Washington and Seoul are expected to scrutinize the railway network in the country ahead.—Kyodo ■

Navalny app removed as Russians vote after crackdown

JAILED Kremlin critic Alexei Navalny's app instructing Russians how to vote to unseat President Vladimir Putin's ruling party disappeared from Apple and Google Friday as three-day parliamentary polls marked by a historic crackdown on the opposition opened across the country.

Parliamentary and local polls in the world's largest country spread over 11 time unavailable on Google and Apple stores after Russia ramped on pressure on US tech giants to remove it, accusing them of election interference.

Navalny's allies denounced the move as an "act of political censorship."

"They caved in to the Kremlin's blackmail," exiled Navalny ally Leonid Volkov said on Telegram. Google and Apple have not commented on the

The run-up to the parliamentary polls has been marred by an unprecedented crackdown on Kremlin critics and independent media, with Putin's top foe Alexei Navalny jailed in January and his organisations subsequently outlawed.

Australia says more US troops to come, eyes missile work

AUSTRALIA said Thursday that more US troops will rotate through the island nation and that the allies will cooperate on missile development, the latest joint steps amid shared concerns over a rising China.

Australia announced a three-way alliance with the United States and Britain in which Canberra will acquire nuclear-powered submarines, enraging France whose own major contract for conventional submarines was scrapped.

Outlining further measures on a visit to Washington, Defence Minister Peter Dutton said Australia will be "significantly enhancing" cooperation including working together on the development of missiles and explosive ordnance.

He said Australia was willing to see more US Marines in a decade-old rotation through the northern city of Darwin.

"I do have an aspiration to make sure that we can increase the numbers of troops through the rotations," Dutton said.

"The air capability will be enhanced, our maritime capability enhanced and certainly the force posture enhanced."—AFP ■

US reassures livid France after Australia scraps submarine deal

THE United States on Thursday struggled to contain the fallout after France furiously protested Australia's scrapping of a major arms deal in favor of US nuclear submarines.

President Joe Biden on Wednesday unveiled a new three-way alliance among the United States, Australia and Britain that features the submarines — a key asset to challenge an increasingly assertive China in the decades to come.

China voiced anger — as did France, which called off a Washington gala to celebrate America's oldest alliance and accused Biden, in whom it placed high hopes, of being no different than his "America First" predecessor Donald Trump.

Foreign Minister Jean-Yves Le Drian said he was "very angry" over the loss of what he once called "the contract of the century," which was worth Aus$50 billion (31 billion euros, $36.5 billion) when signed in 2016.

"This unilateral, sudden and unforeseeable decision very much recalls what Mr Trump would do," Le Drian told France Info radio.—AFP ■

According to the adopted Joint Communication on the EU Strategy for Cooperation in the Indo-Pacific, the Indo-Pacific region's growing economic, demographic, and political weight makes it a key player in shaping the international order and in addressing global challenges.

The EU intends to increase its engagement with the region to build partnerships that reinforce the rules-based international order; address global challenges and lay the foundations for a rapid, just and sustainable economic recovery that creates long-term prosperity.

EU foreign policy chief Josep Borrell told a press conference that the EU will seek no confrontation but cooperation with everybody, and the strategy is inclusive to all actors in the region.

Borrell said in a statement issued later that "The world's center of gravity is moving towards the Indo Pacific, both in geo-economic and geo-political terms. The futures of the EU and the Indo-Pacific are interlinked."—Xinhua ■

LDP's acting Secretary-General Noda aims to be 1st female PM

SEIKO Noda, the executive acting secretary general of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, is known as a strong-willed lawmaker who has professed determination to become the first female prime minister of Japan.

Noda, 61, was among the LDP lawmakers who pushed for insurance coverage of fertility treatment and other support. She gave birth to a boy at the age 50 in 2011 through in vitro fertilization using a donated egg in the United States.

A graduate of Sophia University and granddaughter of a former construction minister, she has served as the minister of internal affairs and communications as well as consumer affairs minister, among other roles.

A nine-term House of Representatives lawmaker who does not belong to any faction in the LDP, Noda has expressed willingness to appoint women to half of the Cabinet posts if she becomes prime minister.—Kyodo ■

Dutch foreign minister resigns over Afghan crisis

DUTCH Foreign Minister Sigrid Kaag resigned on Thursday after parliament formally condemned her handling of the Afghanistan evacuation crisis.

Lawmakers approved a motion criticizing the government for failing to evacuate some Afghans, and for missing signs of an imminent Taliban takeover.

Kaag's resignation comes a day after Britain's Dominic Raab was demoted from his position as foreign minister over the way he dealt with the situation in Afghanistan.

"The House considers that the government has acted irresponsibly," Kaag said in a statement to parliament after parliament voted by 78 votes to 72 to condemn her.

"And although I stand by our commitment, I can only accept the consequences of this judgement as the minister with ultimate responsibility," she added.

"In my view on democracy and the culture of our administration, a minister should go if the policy is disapproved of. I will therefore submit my resignation as minister of foreign affairs to his majesty the king." Dutch Defence Minister Ank Bijleveld however refused to resign despite also being hit with a so-called censure motion by parliament.—AFP ■

Peru Congress approves law to cremate late Shining Path leader

PERU'S Congress approved a bill allowing authorities to cremate the body of late guerilla leader Abimael Guzman Thursday, as debate rages over what to do with his remains.

Guzman, the founder of the brutal Shining Path guerrilla group, which spread terror across Peru in the 1980s and 1990s, died on Saturday in a military prison at age 86.

His also-imprisoned widow, Elena Iparraguirre, the Shining Path's former second-in-command, has requested that Guzman's body be turned over to her for burial.

But officials were concerned that Guzman's gravesite could become a rallying point for his followers, and there is widespread support for his body to instead be cremated and the ashes spread in the Pacific Ocean.

The law authorizes judges and prosecutors to decide the fate of the body of a person convicted of terrorism who dies in prison while serving his sentence "in case of possible harm to security and public order," according to the text.

The bill received 70 votes in favor, 32 against and 14 abstentions during the plenary session broadcast by the Congressional Television Channel. It still needs to be approved by the executive branch.

The body of the former guerrilla is in a morgue of the port of Callao, west of Lima, since his death caused by double pneumonia, an infection that inflames both lungs and has been associated with Covid-19. The body must still undergo more testing.—AFP ■

SEA Games' fixture expected to be confirmed by year-end

VIET NAM, the host of the XXXI SEA Games (Southeast Asian Games), is expected to approve the detailed fixtures of the event later this year.

The tournament was scheduled to run from 21 November to 2 December 2021 but was postponed to next year due to the COVID-19 epidemic.

The Viet Nam Olympic Committee is scheduled to reconvene it in late April or early May 2022, depending on the epidemic situation. Due to the inability to hold this year, the Viet Nam Olympic Committee must make arrangements to ensure that the 2022 SEA Games do not coincide with other international tournaments next year. The SEA Games officials will not change the format of the Games, which will include 40 sports categories as previously scheduled. Myanmar will compete in the upcoming SEA Games and plans to compete in 18 sports.

Most of the athletes who will compete in the SEA Games are already taking in their training camps, and some sports teams are training abroad, officials said. — Ko Nyi Lay/GNLM

FIFA poll claims majority of fans want 'more frequent' World Cup

According to FIFA, most fans want a more frequent World Cup. PHOTO: AFP

A majority of football supporters support the idea of a "more frequent" World Cup, according to an online poll published Thursday by FIFA in the midst of a debate on its biennial World Cup project.

According to the IRIS/You-

Gov study carried out among 15,000 people "with an interest in football", 55 per cent of respondents want to see the top international competition more often than every four years, says football's world governing body.

The survey showed that 30 per cent would like the World Cup to be held every two years, 11 per cent every year and 14 per cent every three years, a highly unusual frequency in international sport.

The survey nevertheless reveals strong differences according to the geographical areas and the age of the respondents.—AFP ■

Heat on Koeman as Barca drift creates concern over loss of identity

RONALD Koeman is adamant Barcelona will be better soon but he heads to Granada in La Liga on Monday under pressure, with his team accused not just of losing but of losing their identity.

Barca were outplayed in a 3-0 defeat by Bayern Munich on Tuesday, the gulf in class so obvious that Bayern eased off in the second half. By the end the home fans at Camp Nou were more interested in keeping up an inflatable ball than keeping up with what was on the pitch. Koeman's team failed to muster a single shot on target, had less of the ball – once the club's signature statistic – and have now registered three consecutive losses at home in the Champions League, with 10 goals conceded.

After the string of summer sales and the departure of Lionel Messi, nobody was shocked Bayern were better. Few expect Barcelona to trouble either the Champions League's latter stages or any of its chief contenders this season.

But as Barca look ahead now to some kinder assignments – Granada on Monday, then Cadiz and Levante – the debate has begun about the manner of the decline and whether Koeman is the right coach to close the gap.

"It is what it is, we are what we are," said Gerard Pique after the game in midweek, a sentiment Koeman said he agreed with. "We have to be realistic," he added.—AFP ■

Ronaldo's Man Utd seek response, Chelsea look to Lukaku in Spurs clash

Cristiano Ronaldo has three goals in two games since returning to Manchester United. PHOTO: AFP

ALL eyes are once again on Cristiano Ronaldo as Manchester United aim to make amends for a shock Champions League defeat to Young Boys when the Premier League leaders head to West Ham on Sunday.

Second-placed Chelsea are behind United only on goals scored and will look to extend their unbeaten start in a London derby at Tottenham. Liverpool and Manchester City will not expect to be troubled when Crystal Palace and Southampton visit Anfield and the Etihad respectively on Saturday. But the pressure is on under-fire Arsenal boss Mikel Arteta when the Gunners travel to fellow strugglers Burnley.

United must do better

Ole Gunnar Solskjaer has demanded an immediate response from United after the optimism engendered by Ronaldo's return was punctured in Bern. Solskjaer's side had won three of their first four matches in an unbeaten start to the Premier League campaign, including a Ronaldo-inspired rout of Newcastle on the Portuguese superstar's Old Trafford return last weekend. Ronaldo was on target again in Bern, but United succumbed after Aaron Wan-Bissaka's red card to lose to the lowest seed in their Champions League group.—AFP ■
