State Administration Council Press Release

Re-invitation to Myanmar citizens who reside in various regions for many reasons

1. Some student youths, State service personnel and citizens, with worries, have evaded to areas of EAOs and foreign countries due to the incitements and intimidation of NLD members, extremist followers, unlawful associations and terrorist groups such as CRPH and NUG, stimulation of CDM, and persons and organizations at home and abroad not wishing to restore peace and stability of the State since Tatmadaw assumed the State responsibilities on 1 February 2021.
2. They are further worried about the dictatorship statement and speeches of unlawful association and terrorist group CRPH and NUG, and some relevant persons. As they face no security guarantee and difficulties in socio-economic life in those areas, they wish to return to their native lands.
3. The State Administration Council will specifically ease restrictions for service personnel, intellectuals and intelligentsia, and persons from various arenas and citizens who, with worries, absconded from the country except for persons who committed murders, robberies, setting fires, mine explosions and intentional attacks on security troops, those who crowded to attack public service personnel and some people, those who destroyed government and private-owned buildings and those who are highly involved in the CDM activities by providing monetary assistance and other means.
4. As those who evade their native areas are also citizens, the State Administration Council will arrange their returns from the evaded areas to various parts of Myanmar.
5. As such, the information was released that if those who evaded to various areas, except for persons who committed any kinds of crime, wish to return to their native lands in Myanmar of their own accord due to multiple worries, the citizens abroad can contact nearby ward, village, township and district administration bodies and relevant embassies, military attaché offices and consulates in accord with the easing restrictions under the law.

To build strength within the country!

1. In the first, our economy will be developed by our internal strength. We have abundant natural resources and human resources. We have weakness in the socio-economic development of the people as we have been relying on external products or import rather than our domestic production.
2. Secondly, we will build our political strength internally. Building a Union and multiparty democratic system based on democracy and federalism will certainly enhance our political strength.
3. Thirdly, the defence capability of the country should be strengthened with the participation of all ethnic national people. With united strength both in weals and woes, we all will build the defence capability of our country with modern military prowess (Army, Navy and Air).

(Excerpt from the speech made by the State Administration Council Chairman Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing on one-year State responsibilities discharged by the State Administration Council)

Only when the country relies on own strength rather than putting too much reliance on others will the country meet development Senior General

Only when the country relies on own strength rather than putting too much reliance on others will the country meet development, so efforts must be made for development of the nation based on internal strength.

Myanmar is a home to more than 55 million population, more than 37 million of whom are above 18 years old. Having abundant of human resources, the country needs to efficiently utilize underground and aboveground natural resources and human resources for development of the nation.

The regions and states need to give a helping hand with nationalistic spirit to Chin, Kayah and Kayin states for their some regions to overcome transport, education and health difficulties due to severe climatic conditions and rare cultivable lands. The government will prioritize the states having requirements in some sectors for ensuring peace and prosperity of the nation.

To do so, it is necessary to effectively utilize the human resources because some states

Experts estimate that generating of hydropower based on various creeks and rivers will be more than 40,000 megawatts. Electricity must be efficiently used. Fuel must be used in actual needed measures.

do not have adequate human resources. Hence, priority must be given to enhancement of education promotion at present.

The government firstly prioritizes learning education. Only when the students have rights of learning school education will they face easy access to techniques and knowledge. Hence, region and state chief ministers should encourage the local people for learning education in respective regions and arrange learning of all students.

If the staff wish to rejoin educational service term, it is necessary allow them under the ethics of service personnel. Education and health staff, who have been trained, should be urged to rejoin the service term. The government needs to protect education staff, more than 80 per cent of who are female, as they are under threat and coercion posed by unscrupulous persons who took advantages over the weakness of female teachers for their shamefulness and fear.

The Tatmadaw deployed military medical officers in remote areas of regions and states for ensuring smooth health care services for the local people. The Senior General expressed his deep recognition over the dutiful health staff loyal to the State. Officials need to organize the CDM health staff to rejoin the service term of health staff. Healthiness will contribute to learning education and working as well as to increasing the life expectancy of the State.

The country has been paying back to the foreign debts yearly. A larger amount of trade deficit depended on larger imports without encouraging the domestic production. Mismanagement affects a terrible loss of finance for the country. Hence, region and state chief ministers need to encourage local industries and domestic production.

As the period of taking State responsibilities is short, it is necessary to systematically manage the long term plans except education, health and regional development tasks.

Region and state chief ministers reported on regional development tasks, measures on rule of law and peace and stability, smooth flow of trade, opening of schools and universities, resumption of hospitals, vaccination process, control of Omicron infection, investment and job opportunities.

In his speech on development of the State and minimizing waste of the fund, the Senior General said the vast cultivable lands must be efficiently utilized in the country. If per-acre yield of paddy increases, crop production will be surplus rather than the sufficiency for the people. Experts estimate that generating of hydropower based on various creeks and rivers will be more than 40,000 megawatts. Electricity must be efficiently used. Fuel must be used in actual needed measures. Officials must place emphasis on thrift and systematic use of materials and funds in State building and development tasks.—MNA

Myanmar ships over 8,000 black eyed pea over past four months

MYANMAR has delivered US$6.6 million worth of more than 8,000 tonnes of black-eyed pea to the international trade partners as of 4 February 2022 in the current financial year 2021-2022 since October 2021, the Customs Department’s statistics showed.

The foreign trade partners prefer Myanmar’s black-eyed pea due to the low content of chemical residues. The prevailing price is estimated K115,000 per bag, whereas last year, the price inched up higher to K152,000 per bag.

It is mostly delivered to external markets; India, China, Japan and European countries. European countries prefer the black-eyed bean.

Following the uncertainty in markets of black bean and pigeon pea, Myanmar Pulses, Beans and Sesame Seeds Merchants Association suggested, in October-end 2020, that the growers cultivate black eyed bean more. It is primarily cultivated in Ayeyawady, Mandalay, Bago and Magway regions and Kayin State.—KK/GNLM

Myanmar mineral exports down by over 45 per cent as of 4 February

MYANMAR'S mineral exports have plummeted down by more than 45 per cent between 1 October 2021 and 4 February 2022 of the current mini-budget period (Oct 2021- Mar 2022).

The value of Myanmar's mineral exports has drastically sunk to US$203.95 million as of 4 February 2022 since 1 October 2021, reflecting a severe drop of $196.6 million as against a-year ago period, the Ministry of Commerce's data indicated.

The mineral exports hit over $373.76 million in the corresponding period of last FY.

The coronavirus related disruptions led to the slump in mineral exports. The heightened COVID-19 measures also shut down the events like gem emporium and expo last year, a trader said.

Additionally, Lonkhin, Phakant, Mawlu and Mawhan gem and jade lands in Kachin State have been suspended from 1 October 2021 to March-end 2022 with a view to supporting sustainable resource extraction, and ensuring safe and efficient operation of jade and gems mines, according to Myanmar Gems Enterprises.

So far, excavation of over 1,250 mining blocks has been permitted on a manageable, small, medium, and large scale, mostly in Mandalay and Sagaing regions, according to the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation.

Due to limited extraction of natural resources, exports of forest products and minerals had dropped significantly in the previous years.

Permits for mining blocks were suspended in 2016, but after a period of two years, Myanmar's mining sector has now been opened to local and foreign investors, according to the ministry.

Under the new regulations, foreign firms can invest in large blocks which cover up to 500,000 acres (about 202,000 hectares), while local firms can invest in all kinds of blocks.

Investors can seek permit to mine for minerals such as gold, copper, lead and tin. The permits cover prospecting, exploration, and production.

Myanmar's mineral exports touched $895.6 million in the previous FY2020-2021, showing a significant drop of $975.2 million compared with the year-ago period, according to data from the Ministry of Commerce.

About 80 per cent of mineral products are shipped to external markets through maritime trade, while 20 of them are sent to neighbouring countries through border trade channels.—KK/GNLM

Seek the best way for electrification and consumption

TODAY, various electricity projects are being implemented at hydropower plants, national gas power plants and recycling power plants as well as coal-fired power plants to meet the demand of local people. In fact, the electricity sector can produce some 4,200 megawatts at maximum. But the supply of electricity is lessening some 1,470 megawatts rather than the actual generation. Although the government is striving for generating electricity at full capacity, some 930 megawatts of electricity may be declining for various reasons. As a result, people partially face outages of electricity in limited times.

That is why the government and the people need to build an understanding of how to manage electrification and how to efficiently use electricity under the prescribed disciplines. It will be the best way for both.

to generate 390 megawatts. Moreover, efforts are being made to implement floating solar projects, rooftop solar projects, and small and medium-scale hydropower projects the length and breadth of the nation.

In addition, the government is striving for management of the electricity trade with neighbouring countries such as China, India, Laos and Thailand. As part of efforts for implementing the electrification projects, Myanmar, being a member of the ASEAN, decides to take out 23 per cent of the total primary energy supply from renewable energy in 2025 as planned by the ASEAN.

That is why the government and the people need to build an understanding of how to manage electrification and how to efficiently use electricity under the prescribed disciplines. It will be the best way for both.

Currently, 65 per cent of generating electricity is based on natural gas, 40 per cent from hydropower, three per cent from coal and one per cent from renewable energy such as solar energy and wind energy. The government sets the 30-year national electrification plan to electrify the whole nation in 2030. As such, plans are underway to generate nine per cent of electricity from renewable energy.

At present, about 6.6 million families across the nation are consuming electricity from the national grids. If they efficiently use the electricity, they can save some 432 megawatts in total. Hence, people need to seek the best way to fully consume electricity and for the way how to efficiently consume it. Currently, the use of LED electronic accessories is the most appropriate for consumers.

To be able to meet the missions, the government has launched 13 projects to generate 370 megawatts of electricity based on solar energy. Meanwhile, a plan is underway to implement three solar power projects

Cancer patients undergoing treatment are more susceptible to COVID-19 misinformation: Study

According to a new study, cancer patients undergoing treatment are more likely to believe misinformation related to COVID-19 than those without a history of cancer.

The findings of the study were published in the journal 'Patient Education and Counseling'.

"These findings help us better understand the threat of COVID-19 misinformation in an already vulnerable population," said lead author Jeanine Guidry, PhD, an assistant professor at the Richard T. Robertson School of Media and Culture in the College of Humanities and Sciences, director of the Media + Health Lab at VCU and a member of the Cancer Prevention and Control research program at VCU Massey Cancer Center.

Certain types of misinformation

"Understanding who is more likely to believe certain types of misinformation brings us closer to understanding why this is the case, which in turn may help us address this concerning issue."

Guidry and colleagues conducted a survey of 897 adults, with roughly one-third undergoing treatment for cancer, one-third cancer survivors not currently in treatment, and one-third respondents with no cancer history. They found that cancer patients currently undergoing treatment were more likely to believe false information about COVID-19 than the other two groups. Least likely to endorse COVID-19 misinformation were cancer survivors no longer in treatment.

"These results highlight that, compared to healthy adults without cancer, cancer survivors currently undergoing treatment may be more vulnerable to COVID-19-related misinformation, while those no longer in treatment are less vulnerable," the researchers wrote.

Why are cancer patients more likely to endorse COVID-19 misinformation? The reasons are not entirely clear, the researchers say.

Heightened anxiety

"It may be that survivors currently undergoing treatment have heightened anxiety about how the current pandemic will impact their course of survival, leading them to seek out more information on the internet or via social media where they are more exposed to misinformation," they wrote.

"Increased information seeking may impact cancer patients' information-processing abilities, making them more likely to use heuristics or cues, rather than more critical, central processing routes of assessing information credibility," they added.

The study also found that cancer survivors who are no longer in treatment may have more experience evaluating the veracity of the information they read online.

"Our cancer survivors, they've gone through this journey and come out the other end, knowing you can't believe everything you read on the internet - they know you have to talk to your doctor and other people who are knowledgeable about these issues," said study senior author Bernard Fuemmeler, PhD, associate director for population science and Gordon D. Ginder, MD, Chair in Cancer Research at VCU Massey Cancer Center as well as professor of health behavior and policy at the VCU School of Medicine.

Misinformation and unverifiable content

The results build on a previous study by the researchers that found that parents of children with cancer were more likely to believe misinformation and unverifiable content associated with COVID-19 than parents of children with no cancer history.

"Our previous study found that parents of pediatric cancer patients were more likely to consider misinformation about COVID-19 as true compared to parents of children with no cancer history," Guidry said.

"While neither of these groups was random population samples, and therefore the findings cannot be generalized, this is still concerning because these are both vulnerable groups, likely already under stress because of cancer diagnoses."

The new study's results suggest that oncologists and other providers working with patients undergoing treatment for cancer should be mindful of the patients' potential susceptibility to misinformation and should help address patients' concerns about the pandemic and how it relates to their treatment.

Vulnerable position

"Cancer patients are in an especially vulnerable position, and it's our duty as health care providers to help them weather the 'infodemic' of misinformation so they can have the best possible outcome under these challenging circumstances," said study co-author Robert Winn, MD, director and Lipman Chair in Oncology at VCU Massey Cancer Center and senior associate dean for cancer innovation at the VCU School of Medicine.

Data for the new study was collected prior to the rollout of COVID-19 vaccines. However, Guidry said, the findings are relevant today.

"The COVID-19 vaccines and boosters so far have been very successful in preventing severe disease and mortality because of COVID-19, but infection with the virus and its variants is still a possibility, and misinformation about COVID-19 prevention and treatment is still spreading quickly, both online and in-person," she said.

Exercise post vaccine shot boosts antibodies? Research suggests so Exercising post vaccination surely gets the heart pumping but can it increase one's antibodies? Researchers at Iowa State University suggested that 90 minutes of mild to moderate-intensity exercise directly after a flu or COVID-19 vaccine may provide an extra immune boost.

The newly published study in the journal 'Brain, Behavior, and Immunity', found that participants who cycled on a stationary bike or took a brisk walk for an hour-and-a-half after getting a jab produced more antibodies in the following four weeks compared to participants who sat or continued with their daily routine post-immunization.

Similar results

The researchers found similar results when they ran an experiment with mice and treadmills.

Antibodies are essentially the body's "search and destroy" line of defence against viruses, bacteria, fungi and parasites. Vaccines help the immune system learn how to identify something foreign and respond by bolstering the body's defences, including an increase in antibodies.

"Our preliminary results are the first to demonstrate a specific amount of time can enhance the body's antibody response to the Pfizer-BioNtech COVID-19 vaccine and two vaccines for influenza," said Kinesiology Professor Marian Kohut, lead author of the paper.

The researchers said the study's findings could directly benefit people with a range of fitness levels. Nearly half of the participants in the experiment had a BMI in the overweight or obese category. During 90 minutes of exercise, they focused on maintaining a pace that kept their heart rate around 120-140 beats per minute rather than distance.

In the study, the researchers also tested whether participants could get the same bump in antibody ies with just 45-minutes of exercising. They found the shorter workout did not increase the participants' antibody levels. Kohut said the research team may test whether 60 minutes is enough to generate a response in a follow-up study.

As to why prolonged, mild-to moderate-intensity exercise could improve the body's immune response, Kohut said there may be multiple reasons. Working out increased blood and lymph flow, which helped circulate immune cells. As these cells moved around the body, they were more likely to detect something that's foreign.

Mouse experiment

Data from the mouse exper-

The relationship between exercise and immunity is, in general, well established. Most studies show that being physically active helps protect us against catching colds and other mild, upper-respiratory tract infections. PHOTO: AFP

iment also suggested a type of protein (i.e., interferon alpha) produced during exercise helps generate virus-specific antibodies and T- cells.

China demand raises Babchi seeds price to double

CHINA'S strong demand hike up the price of Babchi seeds in Mandalay market, according to Mandalay Beans and Pulses traders.

This lucrative herb has grasped Chinese export prospects. The traders are receiving a handsome price in Mandalay market, traders stated.

They are naturally found in the fields of onion, chili and chick pea. Pale, Yinmabin, Wundwin, Thedaw, Thazi and Pyawbwe townships are the supplier of Babchi seeds to Mandalay market. Babchi seeds were priced only K1,800 per viss (a viss equals to 1.6 kg) during the year-ago period. The price has risen to K3,600 per viss at present, according to Soe Win Myint depot in Mandalay.

Earlier, the herbs in its natural habitats were destroyed. In the present, the growers see its market prospects and place them in Chinese market. Therefore, they are eyeing the seeds to convert to plantation areas from natural habitat. The depot owner suggested the growers to cultivate this marketable herb.

The seeds can be harvested in winter and they are mostly found in Taninthayi Region and Rakhine State. They are seldomly demanded in the domestic market. It is widely utilized in traditional medicine for its health benefits.—Min Htet Aung (Mandalay sub-printing house)/GNLM

Kabul's leisure resort Qargha Lake mired with economic difficulties

ONCE a popular recreational site, the Qargha Lake, situated on the western suburb of Kabul city, used to be crowded with visitors. But nowadays, it is almost deserted by raging economic problems.

"The number of visitors to the Qargha Lake amusement park has been drastically reduced," Zadran, a 50-year-old roadside food seller, told Xinhua, saying that his income was thus decreased.

"Last year at this time I could earn up to 4,000 afghanis daily but this year nowadays I can hardly earn 300 Afghanis a day," said Zadran, the sole bread earner of a family of eight, who started his roadside food shop in the lake area 10 years ago.

He said a high unemployment rate, poverty, among other economic problems, have sandwiched the people of Afghanistan and eventually reduced the number of visitors to the park. Zadran, however, said he feels safer working in his roadside shop everyday, praising the improving security situation in Afghanistan following the withdrawal of the US-led forces. Washington has imposed sanctions on the Taliban-led government after a hasty pullout in late August, which battered the economy in the war-torn country. — Xinhua ■

OPEC+ faces 'chronic' struggle to meet output target: IEA

Saudi Arabia possesses around 17 per cent of the world's proven petroleum reserves. The oil and gas sector accounts for about 50 per cent of gross domestic product, and about 70 per cent of export earnings. PHOTO: AFP

THE International Energy Agency on Friday raised its forecast for world oil demand in 2022 but warned of a "chronic" failure by OPEC and its allies to meet their output targets. The 13 members of the Saudi-led Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) and their 10 allies, including Russia, had cut production sharply in 2020 as prices collapsed after the Covid pandemic emerged.

The group, dubbed OPEC+, began to increase output last year, renewing every month a target of 400,000 barrels per day, as demand and prices recovered after countries began to lift Covid restrictions. OPEC+ agreed on a similar increase again earlier this month despite soaring crude prices and geopolitical tensions rattling the markets.

But analysts have said some members, such as Angola and Nigeria, have been unable to scale up their production and others, such as Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, are unwilling to do so. "Chronic underperformance by OPEC+ in meeting its output targets and rising geopolitical tensions have propelled oil prices higher," the IEA said in its monthly oil market report.

Prices of the benchmark US and international contracts hit seven-year highs in January and have hovered around $90 per barrel. "If the persistent gap between OPEC+ output and its target levels continues, supply tensions will rise, increasing the likelihood of more volatility and upward pressure on prices," the IEA said.— AFP ■

Novel crisis: Iran's books shrink as US sanctions bite

FOR literature lovers in sanction-hit Iran, a new novel has long provided a brief respite from a grinding economic crisis triggered by international pressure imposed over Tehran's contested nuclear programme.

But now losing yourself in a good book is becoming harder, as cash-strapped publishers struggle because the price of paper is soaring.

"If a 200-page novel sold for 400,000 rials ($1.60) last year, its price today is 1,000,000 rials ($4.10), most of which is the cost of production," said Reza Hasheminejad, who runs the Ofoq publishing house. Iran does not produce its own paper pulp for publishing so relies on imports, and while those are not under sanctions, they must be paid for in foreign currency. That means the price of a book depends directly on the fluctuation of Iran's rial.

So publishers are not only slashing the number of titles published, but also cutting the number of pages of those they do print by shrinking the font size. "Publishing has suffered a major crisis — which could become existential," said Emily Amrai, collection director at the Houpa publishing house. While publishers worldwide face growing challenges to the way people read and consume literature, Iran is facing an extra problem. — AFP ■

Japan venture to build country's first nuclear fusion power plant

A western Japan venture plans to build the first experimental plant in the country to generate power through nuclear fusion, the company said, as the technology is drawing attention as a new way of producing energy without emitting carbon dioxide.

Kyoto Fusioneering Ltd., a startup based in Uji, Kyoto Prefecture, is aiming to start operation of the plant in the next five years, having already procured some of the funds and started designing the plant, CEO Taka Nagao told Kyodo News in a recent interview. The experimental plant will be equipped with a heat exchanger and turbine in addition to a reactor that generates thermal energy to produce a small amount of electricity, with the generation capacity expected to be several dozen kilowatts, the company said. Though experimental reactors to prove the feasibility of nuclear fusion reaction exist in Japan and abroad, "a plant that actually generates power is rare even on a global basis," Nagao said.

The venture partly funded by an investment firm set up by Kyoto University, was launched in 2019 led by Nagao and Satoshi Konishi, a professor at the Institute of Advanced Energy of Kyoto University. — Kyodo ■

Sri Lanka outlaws strikes as unions cripple hospitals

A man leaves a hospital as health workers hold a work strike in Colombo on 11 February 2022. PHOTO: AFP

SRI LANKA'S president banned strikes in the health and electricity sectors on Saturday as trade union action that has crippled state-run hospitals entered its sixth day.

President Gotabaya Rajapaksa invoked a 1979 law prohibiting stoppages in the two sectors, declaring all related work "essential public services", his office said.

The tough regulations allow courts to hand down five-year jail terms and confiscate the assets of those refusing work.

The move followed health unions ignoring a court order Thursday instructing them to suspend their strike pending a hearing of a petition against their action.

Sri Lanka is in the grip of a foreign exchange crisis that has crippled the economy, and the unions are demanding better promotional prospects, restructuring of their pay scales and higher allowances.

The government has refused, saying the current economic situation did not allow it to increase the salaries budget.

Thousands of health workers have been taking part in the strike action, leaving only emergency services functioning at state hospitals and many routine services put off.

Electricity sector workers are not on strike, but they too have threatened trade union action if the government goes ahead with plans to sell a thermal power plant to a US company. — AFP ■

Its navy lost, Ukraine girds for Russian warship drills

UKRAINIAN captain Oleksandr Surkov looks askance at his patrol boat's machine guns and laments how futile they would be fending off an attack from Russian warships now steaming across the Black Sea.

"Our weapons are mostly designed to protect our state borders, not to wage war," the 32-year-old says as his boat bobs through grey mist enveloping the coast of Ukraine's industrial port of Mariupol. "But if they attack, we will defend ourselves with every weapon we have."

Surkov's worries reflect that of Ukraine as a whole as it girds for a feared invasion from more than 100,000 Russian troops who have encircled the ex-Soviet state from nearly every side.

Ukraine's old navy — stationed almost entirely in the Crimean port of Sevastopol — practically vanished when Russia annexed the peninsula and took all its ships in 2014.

Military analysts say Ukraine now has just one major warship and a dozen or so patrol and coastal craft of the type captained by Surkov. Russia has sent six more warships into the region for a week of naval drills involving dozens of navy ships starting this weekend. — AFP ■

Japan: Pilot's body found 2 weeks after fighter jet vanished from radar

JAPAN'S airforce said Sunday that it had recovered the body of one of two crewmen of a fighter jet that went missing two weeks ago.

The F-15 fighter jet was on a training mission on 31 January when it disappeared from radar shortly after taking off from Komatsu airbase in the central Ishikawa region, sparking a search for its missing crew.

The airforce said a body was found on Friday by the navy during search operations in the Sea of Japan. The military said it has confirmed the identity of the body, but did not release the name and added that the search for his co-pilot continued. Exactly why and how their plane crashed has not been made clear, but the defence ministry has not sought to ground F-15s in the wake of the incident. — AFP ■

Turkey detains 197 illegal immigrants, 10 suspected smugglers

TURKISH security forces detained Friday 197 illegal immigrants and 10 suspected human smugglers in Turkey's western province of Izmir, state-run TRT broadcaster reported.

Unmanned aerial vehicles were used in the raids, according to the report. As a key transit point for asylum seekers on their way to Europe, Turkey hosts more than 4 million refugees, 3.7 million of whom are Syrians. — Xinhua ■

Measles cases, deaths surging in Afghanistan: WHO

A raging measles outbreak in Afghanistan infected tens of thousands and killed more than 150 people last month alone, the World Health Organization said Friday, warning of more deaths.

The UN health agency said the outbreak was particularly concerning since Afghanistan is facing massive food insecurity and malnutrition, leaving children far more vulnerable to the highly contagious disease.

"Measles cases have been increasing in all provinces since the end of July 2021," WHO spokesman Christian Lindmeier told reporters in Geneva.

He said cases had surged recently, ballooning by 18 per cent in the week of 24 January and by 40 per cent in the last week of the month. In all, 35,319 suspected measles cases were reported in January, including 3,000 that were laboratory confirmed, and 156 deaths. Ninety-one per cent of the cases and 97 per cent of the deaths were children under the age of five. Lindmeier stressed that the measles-related deaths were likely underreported and the numbers were expected to swell.

"The rapid rise in cases in January suggests that the number of deaths due to measles is likely to increase sharply in the coming weeks," Lindmeier said.

Measles is a highly-contagious disease caused by a virus that attacks mainly children. The most serious complications include blindness, brain swelling, diarrhoea, and severe respiratory infections.

The latest surge in cases comes as Afghanistan is in the grip of a humanitarian disaster, worsened by the Taliban takeover in August — when Western countries froze international aid and access to assets held abroad. — AFP ■

Popular incumbent Steinmeier eyes new term as German president

GERMAN President Frank-Walter Steinmeier is poised to be re-elected on Sunday for a second straight term, after gaining a reputation as a tireless defender of democratic values at a time when resurging far-right extremism and the coronavirus pandemic were putting them to the test. The Social Democrat, 66, served twice as foreign minister in Angela Merkel's cabinet, stepping back from his duties as Germany's top diplomat to take on the ceremonial role as head of state in 2017.

With his snowy white hair, round glasses and dimpled smile, the trained lawyer has become one of Germany's most popular and trusted politicians.

The presidential role was an "honour" and an "enormous challenge" Steinmeier said in May last year when announcing his desire to stay in office until 2027. The former foreign minister has cast himself as the conscience of the nation, occasionally stepping into political debates and speaking at memorials.

He has repeatedly warned against the rising threat of right-wing extremism in Germany and criticised scenes at Kabul airport after the city's fall as "shameful for the political West".

Steinmeier's time in office has been marked by the outbreak of the coronavirus pandemic in Germany at the start of 2020, with the president sometimes playing the role of a moral arbiter in public debates on health issues. Earlier this year, Steinmeier held a public debate between health experts and coronavirus vaccine sceptics, a vocal minority in the country that has increasingly taken to the streets to protest against coronavirus rules.

The presidential election, normally held in the Bundestag building, will instead take place at Paul Loebe Haus, a post-modern office complex opposite the Chancellery in central Berlin, in order to meet pandemic distancing requirements. — AFP ■

'Unite and fight': Ukrainians march in face of Russia threat

WAVING flags and singing the national anthem, thousands of Ukrainians braved the winter cold to march across Kyiv on Saturday to show unity in the face of a feared Russian invasion.

"Panic is useless. We must unite and fight for independence," said student Maria Shcherbenko, expressing a sentiment similar to that voiced by Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky earlier in the day.

"I remain calm. I love Ukraine," said Shcherbenko's sign as the sun briefly peeked through the clouds on a cold and blustery day. Some carried signs reading "war is not the answer", while others held banners calling on the nation to "resist". Riven by an eight-year conflict that has claimed more than 14,000 lives across its Moscow-backed sepa-

THE foreign ministers of the United States, Japan and South Korea on Saturday held the door open to dialogue with North Korea, insisting they have no "hostile intent" toward the country. The trilateral talks in Honolulu came after Pyongyang conducted a series of missile tests since the start of the year and suggested it may restart nuclear and intercontinental ballistic missile tests. US Secretary of State Antony Blinken said after a meeting with Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshimasa Hayashi and South Korean Foreign Minister Chung Eui Yong that the three countries "remain open to dialogue without preconditions," expressing hope that North Korean leader Kim Jong Un will respond to the dialogue offer.

"We discussed ways that we can deepen trilateral cooperation to deter the DPRK, limit the reach of his most dangerous weapons (and) defend against his provocations for use of force," Blinken also said at a joint press conference in Hawaii.

DPRK is the acronym of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, North Korea's official name. The three nations last held in-person talks between their foreign ministers in New York in September on the fringes of the United Nations General Assembly sessions. It is Hayashi's first such meeting since he took office in November. North Korea on 30 January launched what its state-run media said was a Hwasong-12 intermediate-range ballistic missile capable of striking the US Pacific island territory of Guam.

It was the nuclear-armed nation's first such missile test since November 2017 and the seventh round of test firings since the start of 2022. The missile travelled about 800 kilometres before falling in the Sea of Japan and reached an altitude of 2,000 km. — Kyodo ■

THE Myanmar women's soccer team will start training in the third week of February for the 31st SEA Games, according to the football authorities.

The team is taking a break from the previous final round of the 2022 AFC Women's Cup to prepare for the SEA Games. The squad has been taking training for international competitions since the middle of last year.

The Myanmar women's team won the Asian Cup in the international competition and was eliminated from the group stage in the final round of the Asian Cup. The draw ended after a two-time lead over ASEAN leaders Vietnam. The Myanmar women's team will spend more than two months preparing for the SEA Games, which will be based on the finalists of the AFC Women's Cup.

Myanmar team head coach U Tin Myint Aung will organize the team with 30 preliminary players, while Win Theingi Tun, who plays for Indian club Gokulam, will not be able to join for the time being.

The team is trying to play international matches before the SEA Games, officials added. The Myanmar women's national team previously won the bronze medal at the 2019 Philippine SEA Games. The squad has won three silver medals plus seven bronze medals along the SEA Games tourney.

Odermatt silences critics with Olympic grand slalom gold

SWITZERLAND'S Marco Odermatt finally lived up to expectations by holding his nerve in snow and fog to win gold in the men's Olympic giant slalom on Sunday. Odermatt put the disappointment of two underwhelming outings in speed events behind him to clock a combined total of 2min 09.35sec over the two legs down the "Ice River" course in Yanqing, north of Beijing.

Slovenia's Zan Kranjec claimed silver thanks to the fastest second leg, 0.19sec off the pace, while reigning world champion Mathieu Faivre of France took bronze, 1.34sec behind the winner.

"It was a hard day, with the conditions, with such a long wait between the two runs," said Odermatt. "It was more than five hours for me, it was such a long time to re-think everything and it was hard to stay focused. I tried to sleep some minutes in between." Odermatt had come into the Beijing Games as current World Cup overall leader and one of the big favourites. —AFP ■
