Dollar value touches over K2,100 at exchanges despite CBM reference rate of K1,850

THE unofficial exchange rate against the US dollar reaches over K2,100 on the over-the-counter market although the Central Bank of Myanmar (CBM) set the reference exchange rate at K1,850, according to local forex traders. To strengthen the Kyat value in the local forex market, the CBM set the exchange rate margin within 0.5 per cent of the reference rate for the transaction, selling or buying, according to a notification issued by the CBM on 9 November.

Consequently, financial institutions including the banks and informal money exchanges set a dollar value at K1,850 for buying and K1,855-1,899 for selling.

Nevertheless, the dollar was traded only between K2,105 and 2,115 on 27 June in the informal financial market.

The CBM sold US$95 million at its auction market within three months this year for edible oil, fuel oil and pharmaceutical sectors, to govern the market volatility. A total of $443.8 million were sold at an auction rate in 2021 as well. Last 28 September 2021, a dollar value hit an all-time high of over K3,000 in the black market and consequently, the pure gold reached a record high of K2.22 million per tical (0.578 ounce, or 0.016 kilogramme) in history. Under the guidance of the Central Committee on Ensuring Smooth Flow of Trade and Goods, the Monitoring and Steering Committee on Gold and Currency Market was formed on 17 December 2021 as gold and currency market stability play a crucial role in the trade facilitation.

The objectives of the committee are inspecting and prosecuting market manipulation, checking if there is compliance with payment rules or in the domestic market, and proceeding against those unscrupulous traders who intend to interfere with the free and fair operation of the market under the existing laws, by-laws and regulations in line with the official directives, illegal procurement of foreign currency, illegal trade and taking legal actions against price manipulators. Furthermore, the officials concerned will crack down on those people involved in charging a percentage for money withdrawals at banks as shadow money. — NN/GNLM

Let's Combat Together Against Narcotic Drugs Posing Serious Danger to the Country

By Aung Shinn

NARCOTIC drugs and psychotropic substances pose one of the common enemies of mankind. To present its brief history, the opium poppy originated in the Mediterranean region in the Neolithic era around 5000 BC and purchasing and collecting opium began around 3400 BC. Although people started to use opium for medical purposes, in the beginning, it has been widely used for recreational purposes from around the 11th century onwards.

The records say the recreational use of opium was noted in the 15th century in China, a neighbour of Myanmar. Since the harmful effects of opium became obvious, China initiated the opium prohibition starting in 1729. China also attempted to stop opium smuggling leading to the confrontation with Britain that imported opium into China. The First Opium War (1839-1842) and Second Opium War (1850-1864) between China and Britain were significant instances. However, China was defeated in the wars losing some parts of its sovereign territory including ports. As a result, China had been destroyed with opium by Britain in the name of free trade. The saying 'luo hou jiu yao ai da,' which literally means, 'if you are backward, you will take a beating' was left among the youths of Chinese along with the lessons learnt from the opium wars. Hence, 26 June, the day when the viceroy born in Fujian province burnt down and destroyed the opium smuggled by Western merchants just before the First Opium War in China was recognized as the International Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking.

Similarly, in Myanmar, the use and growing of opium became widespread as a result of British colonial rule. From the perspectives of historical background, legislation, religion, and socio-culture, Myanmar has never been a society that encourages the use of narcotic drugs. Opium, intoxicating brew, intoxicating preparation of fermented glutinous rice, and alcoholic drinks were strictly prohibited during the reign of Myanmar kings. Moreover, using alcoholic drinks and narcotic drugs is also forbidden in the Five Precepts of Buddhism practised by the majority of Myanmar people. From Myanmar's sociocultural perspective, those who use illegal drugs are generally named 'opium-eater (opium-addict)' and become self-conscious in society. Nevertheless, the use of opium and illicit drugs notably became widespread in Myanmar during the colonial era as the British government officially permitted the growing of opium poppy and its production.

However, since the time of Independence, successive administrations of Myanmar have steadily taken measures of anti-narcotic drugs deemed as a national duty. Operation Nga Ye Pan (the hell flower), Operation Taung Yan Shin, Operation Taung Htaka Pan and Operation Mae Lone conducted in the 1960s were particularly significant. Moreover, the phase 1 to 14 of Operation Moe Hein were conducted from 1976 to 1988. During Operation Moe Hein, 69 military officers sacrificed their lives and 451 were injured. The 1993 Narcotic Drug and Psychotropic Substances Law was amended in line with international standard and norms and it was enacted in 2018. So far, a total of 34 special operations against narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances have been conducted. In addition, long-term and short-term projects are being implemented by formulating strategies and tactics for the anti-narcotic drug measures.

The record-breaking seizures of illicit drugs witnessed in the time of the State Administration Council in the combined efforts of the Tatmadaw, Myanmar Police Force and Anti-Narcotic Task Force are tremendously gratifying. The seizures of narcotic drugs strongly prove that the State Administration Council is taking steady steps on the implementation of the Five-Point Roadmap and at the same time, emphasizing the anti-narcotic drug measures.

According to the statistics showing the seizures of narcotic drugs at the time of the State Administration Council, from January to December 2021, a total of K 970.289 billion (USD 524.48 million) worth of illicit drugs were confiscated. In 2022, there occurred 699 drug-related cases in January alone with seizures of over K113.9 billion (USD 61.57 million) worth of illicit drugs including opium, heroin, ICE (crystal meth) and stimulant tablets. In February, there were 556 drug-related cases in total with the seizures of narcotic drugs which has an estimated value of K130.5 billion (USD 70.54 million). Moreover, there were 655 cases in March and illicit drugs which hold the estimated value of over K117.3 billion (USD 63.4 million) were confiscated. In April, there were 525 cases and illicit drugs with an estimated value of over K175.1 billion (USD 94.65 million) were also seized.

In an interesting case, it was reported that a Japanese Yakuza leader and three Thai associates, who had planned to trade anti-aircraft weapons, small arms and explosives with a large amount of heroin and methamphetamine from Ethnic Armed Organizations-EAOs in Myanmar, were arrested in the US. This is the undeniable fact that humiliates the EAOs claiming they have never been involved in the illicit drug business. The opium poppy cultivation along with illicit drug issues and the existence of many armed groups as well as the low rate of development are deeply interrelated in Myanmar.

In May 2022, ICEs (crystal meth) worth around K16 billion (USD 2.79) transported to Kayin state from Shan state were confiscated in Hpa-an Township of Kayin State. Similarly, around five million stimulant tablets which have an estimated value of K5 billion (USD 2.7 million) being transported from Shan state to the Yangon region were seized in Mingaladon township. Moreover, a large quantity of heroin, which has an estimated value of K7,425 million (USD 4 million), was confiscated in Seik Mu village, Phakant township of Kachin State and 44 kilograms of heroin worth K660 million (USD 3.5 million) were also seized in Nawngkhio Township of Shan State. In the same month, ICE (crystal meth) with an estimated value of K6.2 billion (USD 3.35 million) to be shipped to Malaysia was also seized in the North Okkalapa Township of Yangon. Furthermore, a large quantity of Ketamine worth around K500 million (USD 0.27 million) was confiscated in Kunhing Township of Shan State while other illicit drugs, were seized in Phakant, Mudon, Bhamo and Myeik townships. It is notable that narcotic drugs which have an estimated worth of over K39.8 billion (USD 21.5 million) were seized in the month of May.

In the past, the opium trade had been openly conducted under the title of free trade during British colonial rule. But it is now the time when the synthetic drug producers and dealers without borders are producing and selling the drugs, that will lead to the extinction of humans, using advanced technologies. Hence, the countries weak in law enforcement with many armed groups accordingly become major hot spots for pro-enforcement units but also the conscientiousness and activities of every individual are critically important. Moreover, broad awareness campaigns are crucially required so that people can deeply perceive that not only can the narcotic drugs destroy the life of every individual but they also cause a serious risk of entire extinction of mankind.

The security forces concerned are well deserved to be appreciated for their relentless

Table Showing the Seizures of Narcotic Drugs in 2021 and 2022

Sr.	Narcotic Drugs and other Related Drugs	2021 (From January to December)	2022 (From January to December)
1.	Opium (kg)	2,632.00975	357.12439
2.	Heroin (kg)	2,526.1091141	556.385992
3.	Stimulant tablets (tablet)	198,188,715	116,466,952

9.	Sulphuric acid (litre)	18,340	4,600
10.	Ammonium Nitrate (litre)	74,434	87,350
Total worth (K million)		970,288.9714	576,416.6651
Total worth (USD million)		524.48	311.58

Note: The total worth of narcotic drugs including other related drugs was calculated at the rate of K1,850 per USD.

The table shows the figures for narcotic drugs seized in 2021 and 2022 during the time of the State Administrative Council. Overview of the aforementioned table shows that the value of illicit drugs seized in the first five months of 2022 has already surpassed half of the total value of the seizures in 2021. It obviously proves that anti-narcotic measures are speeded up in good momentum by the State.

The monthly seizures of illicit drugs clearly denote the relentless efforts of the State Administration Council Government to eradicate narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances. On review of the seizures, a larger quantity of synthetic drugs has been seized rather than opium and heroin. It shows the shift towards the production, trafficking and use of synthetic drugs which can be easily made by chemical substances without opium.

ducing drugs and psychotropic substances. Against the backdrop of the situation, it is worth wondering whether such countries are likely to become the victims of the neo-colonialism of mankind's extinction.

Therefore, in combatting the danger of narcotic drugs, not only the strength of law efforts to prevent the narcotic drugs from reaching the people and the youths in Myanmar society. Now, let me conclude by urging every individual of the people to prevent and combat narcotic drugs by joining hands together with conscientiousness.

Ailing oceans in the spotlight at major UN meet

A long-delayed UN conference on how to restore the faltering health of global oceans kicks off in Lisbon Monday, with thousands of policymakers, experts and advocates on the case.

Humanity needs healthy oceans. They generate 50 per cent of the oxygen we breathe and provide essential protein and nutrients to billions of people every day.

Covering more than two-thirds of Earth's surface, the seven seas have also softened the impact of climate change for life on land. But at a terrible cost.

Absorbing around a quarter of CO2 pollution — even as emissions increased by half over the last 60 years — has turned sea water acidic, threatening aquatic food chains and the ocean's capacity to pull down carbon.

And soaking up more than 90 per cent of the excess heat from global warming has spawned massive marine heatwaves that are killing off precious coral reefs and expanding dead zones bereft of oxygen.

"We have only begun to understand the extent to which climate change is going to wreak havoc on ocean health," said Charlotte de Fontaubert, the World Bank's global lead for the blue economy.

Making things worse is an unending torrent of pollution, including a garbage truck's worth of plastic every minute, according to the UN Environment Programme (UNEP).

On current trends, yearly plastic waste will nearly triple to one billion tonnes by 2060, according to a recent OECD report.

Wild fish stocks

Microplastics — found inside Arctic ice and fish in the ocean's deepest trenches — are estimated to kill more than a million seabirds and over 100,000 marine mammals each year.

Solutions on the table range from recycling to global caps on plastic production.

Global fisheries will also be under the spotlight during the five-day UN Ocean Conference, originally slated for April 2020 and jointly hosted by Portugal and Kenya. "At least one-third of wild fish stocks are overfished and less than 10 per cent of the ocean is protected," Kathryn Matthews, chief scientist for US-based NGO Oceana, told AFP.— AFP

Israel to invest 880 mln USD in climate technology innovation

ISRAEL'S Ministry of Environmental Protection announced on Sunday that the country will invest 3 billion shekels (about 880 million US dollars) to facilitate innovation in climate technologies.

The decision is aimed at accelerating innovation in Israel's climate tech ecosystem to support Israel's efforts to address the climate issue, according to the ministry.

Major quantitative goals to support climate innovation stated in the decision are expected to be met by 2026.

These goals include the doubling of climate tech applied studies, patents, startup companies, and pilot projects carried out on state infrastructure, increasing the number of fundraising deals and Israeli venture capital funds specializing in climate technologies, and the promotion of joint research with other countries.

The plan also includes the use of satellites to monitor climate change and environmental hazards, and the establishment of a technology incubator to promote projects, according to the ministry. — Xinhua

NASA blasts off from Australian Outback in 'historic' launch

NASA'S first-ever launch from a commercial site outside of the United States blasted off from Australia's Outback late Sunday, in a "historic" moment for the country's space industry.

In the first of three planned launches from the Arnhem Space Centre, the rocket, carrying technology likened to a "mini Hubble" telescope, lifted off — blasted about 350 kilometres (218 miles) into the night sky.

"It is a momentous occasion for us as a company in particular, but it's historic for Australia," Equatorial Launch Australia CEO Michael Jones told AFP ahead of the lift-off.

Jones, whose company owns and operates the launch site in the far north of Australia, described it as a "coming out" party for the country's space industry and said the chance to work with NASA was a milestone for commercial space firms in the country.

After a series of rain and wind delays, the suborbital sounding rocket soared into the sky to study x-rays emanating from the Alpha Centauri A and B systems. After reaching its apogee, the rocket's payload was to capture data on the star systems before parachuting back to earth.

According to NASA, the launch offers a unique glimpse of the distant systems and unlocked fresh possibilities for scientists.

"We're excited to be able to launch important science missions from the Southern Hemisphere and see targets that we can't from the United States," Nicky Fox, NASA's Heliophysics Division director in Washington, said on announcing the mission.

Jones said the unique location had made preparations hard, with years of work to get regulatory approval and the need to haul rockets on barges to the launch site — about 28 hours drive from Darwin in northern Australia.—AFP

Relaxed new mask usage guidelines barely spread among Japan public

MORE than a month has passed since the Japanese government relaxed its guidance on mask usage to reflect subsiding fears of the coronavirus, yet its call for removing masks whenever possible has not caught on widely among the public.

There has never been a mask mandate in the country, but more than two years of the pandemic has made mask-wearing the polite thing to do, even as heat-related illnesses are emerging as a concern as Japan readies for a boiling summer.

Experts say many people are unaware the government has been proposing since 20 May that masks can be taken off in certain circumstances, which may remain so until a well-known figure like Prime Minister Fumio Kishida outlines the new guidelines publicly.

The recommendation for outdoor mask usage now only applies to those conversing within two meters of each other. But most people continue wearing them outside regardless of circumstances.

The government has made some efforts to increase public awareness of the changes, creating leaflets and planning to broadcast the message through commercials.

There have been multiple cases of children who wore masks during gym classes being sent to hospital due to heat exhaustion or heatstroke.

The education ministry has asked schools to let schoolchildren go maskless during physical activities, and for younger children to take masks off on their school commutes.

For indoor masking, the public's embrace of looser mask "rules" is even slower. Masking is now unnecessary for those keeping more than two metres apart when there is hardly any conversation.

However, announcements in public spaces continue to call for strict mask-wearing, as companies remain vigilant against the coronavirus.

East Japan Railway Co, whose train service includes the Tokyo metropolitan area, continues to ask passengers to wear masks at all times. The company said its announcements will "remain unchanged unless there is a request from the government".

According to an online survey conducted in May by Laibo Inc., around 40 per cent of the 708 respondents said they believe mask-wearing requests can end, but nearly 90 per cent said they would continue wearing them.

More than 48 per cent said they would stop doing so if a "wonder drug" against COVID-19 was made.—Kyodo

WHO says monkeypox outbreak not yet global emergency

THE World Health Organization decided on Saturday not to declare the outbreak of monkeypox a global emergency for the time being, even as the number of confirmed cases in non-endemic countries continues to grow.

WHO head Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus was advised in his decision by a committee of international health experts that convened for an emergency meeting on Thursday, Tedros said in a statement.

The 16 experts decided by consensus that the situation does not constitute a Public Health Emergency of International Concern, though there were "differing views among the committee," Tedros said.

The outbreak nevertheless clearly represents an "evolving threat" that needs a collective response, he said.

According to the WHO, the monkeypox virus is endemic in parts of Africa where it has been noted to cause disease, including fatalities, for decades.

Infection cases in Europe and the United States have been on the rise since May, while in Asia, the first cases were confirmed over the last week in Singapore, South Korea and Taiwan.

Since the beginning of May, more than 3,000 cases have been reported to the WHO from 47 countries.

The majority of confirmed cases in non-endemic countries are male and most of them occur among gay, bisexual and other men who have sex with men in urban areas, it says.

The disease is spread through close physical contact.

Pregnant women and children are at risk of becoming severely ill if infected.

Symptoms include fever, extensive rash, skin lesions and swollen lymph nodes following an incubation period of five to 21 days.

Although monkeypox can be deadly, it is treatable. Smallpox vaccines are used against the disease, but WHO says mass vaccination is not required nor recommended at this stage.

The name of the virus refers to its discovery in a monkey during an animal experiment in Denmark in 1958. The first transmission to a human was confirmed in 1970.—Kyodo

Peru facing fourth wave of Covid-19: government

PERU'S government on Sunday declared that a fourth wave of Covid-19 infections had begun to hit the country, which has one of the highest mortality rates from the virus in the world.

"We are currently in a fourth wave, as we have seen the increase (of cases)... in different provinces of our country, such as Junin, Arequipa, Cusco and the capital," Health Minister Jorge Lopez told local broadcaster RPP radio.

According to official figures, infections increased from 1,800 per week at the beginning of the month to more than 11,000 in the last week.

The increase has not so far led to a significant rise in hospitalizations or deaths.

At least 65 per cent of the country's eligible population have received three doses of a Covid-19 vaccine, with more than 80 per cent having received at least two doses.

Those aged over 40 are eligible to receive a fourth dose.

Peru experienced its third wave of the pandemic between the end of 2021 and February 2022, with a peak of almost 50,000 infections per day on average in the third week of January.

There are currently 833 hospitalized patients with Covid-19 in the country, down from a record 15,547 in March 2021.—AFP

India, EU resume free trade talks after nine-year gap

INDIA and the European Union resumed talks Monday on a free-trade deal after a nine-year gap, as Western countries seek to wean New Delhi off its close economic ties to Russia.

Dubbed the “tariff king” by ex US president Donald Trump, India has become more open to lowering trade barriers in recent years and is negotiating pacts with several other countries.

The Asian giant has refused to condemn Russia’s invasion of Ukraine, even increasing oil purchases from its long-standing strategic ally and biggest supplier of arms.

The European Union is India’s second-biggest trading partner after the United States but talks with the bloc broke down in 2013 over issues including tariff reductions and patent protection.

Merchandise trade hit an all-time high of $116 billion in 2021-22, with India’s exports to the 27-member European Union hitting $65 billion, according to New Delhi.

“Both sides are aiming for the trade negotiations to be broad-based, balanced and comprehensive, based on the principles of fairness and reciprocity. There will also be discussions on resolving the Market Access Issues which are impeding bilateral trade,” India’s commerce ministry said earlier this month when announcing the first round of talks in Delhi, which were due to run until Friday.

India in February signed a major economic partnership agreement with the United Arab Emirates and in April agreed an interim free-trade deal with Australia, aiming to finish off a full pact by the end of the year.

India is also in trade negotiations with Canada, Israel and Britain. Prime Minister Boris Johnson said on a visit in April that Britain and India hoped to nail down an accord by October. — AFP

Turkey’s troubled lira rallies on ‘backdoor capital controls’

TURKEY’S beleaguered lira extended its biggest rally of the year on Monday in response to a new rule that effectively forces many banks to part with some of their foreign currency.

The banking regulation — announced after the market had closed on Friday night — represents Turkey’s latest attempt to prop up the lira without raising the main interest rate.

President Recep Tayyip Erdogan’s pressure on the central bank to keep borrowing costs well below the rate of inflation has sparked an economic crisis that has seen the lira slump and prices explode.

Erdogan rejects conventional economics and affirms that high interest rates cause inflation instead of slowing it down.

The annual rate of consumer price increases now officially stands at 73.5 per cent. Independent economists believe it could be nearly double that figure.

The dollar dropped to 16.1 liras early Monday before recovering slightly and trading around the 16.7 mark.

The US currency was worth around 17.4 liras before the measure was announced. It stood at 7.4 liras at the start of last year and 5.9 liras in January 2020.

Turkey’s real interest rate of minus 59.5 per cent provides a major incentive for consumers to spend money before it loses value and for banks to convert their holdings into dollars and euros.

The new rule attempts to put a stop to that by limiting banks’ foreign-denominated assets.

It requires banks with more than 15 million liras ($900,000) in foreign currency — should that figure represents more than 10 per cent of their assets or annual sales — to sell their dollars and euros before issuing any more loans.

The measure meant that some big banks whose lira loans matured Monday had to sell their foreign currencies in order to make the payments.

BlueBay Asset Management economist Timothy Ash called the regulation “backdoor capital controls”.

The banking regulator clarified Sunday that the measure did not apply to individuals or independent entrepreneurs. — AFP

Cambodia organizes consultation workshop on economic diplomacy in new normal

CAMBODIA on Monday organized a national consultation workshop on economic diplomacy in the new normal, aiming at promoting the effective implementation of the strategy in the post-COVID-19 pandemic era.

Supported by the Lancang-Mekong Cooperation (LMC) Special Fund, the hybrid workshop was attended by some 170 stakeholders in person and dozens of the country’s ambassadors and consuls-general abroad via video link.

Ouch Borith, minister attached to Cambodian Prime Minister Samdech Techo Hun Sen and foreign ministry’s standing secretary of state, said the economic diplomacy strategy (2021-2023) was essential to help develop the country’s economy.

“The strategy is crucial to help boost the economic growth, to reduce reliance on external aid, and to promote the interest of Cambodia in the region and in the world,” he said.

Borith added that the strategy was designed to attract more foreign direct investment, to further boost bilateral and multilateral trade growth, and to lure more tourists to the Southeast Asian nation. “Taking this opportunity, I’d like to express my profound thanks to the people and government of China for having provided a great amount of assistance to Cambodia for national development in the regional, sub-regional, LMC, and bilateral frameworks,” he said. — Xinhua

THE Mobile World Congress, the telecom industry’s biggest annual gathering, will be held in Barcelona until 2030, extending its current contract by six years, organizers said Monday.

The event, which draws more than 100,000 people to Barcelona, has been held in Spain’s second largest city since 2006.

The existing agreement between the GSMA association that hosts the congress and local authorities ran until 2024.

“We are thrilled to announce that MWC will remain in Barcelona through to 2030,” said GSMA director-general Mats Granryd said in a statement.

“Barcelona is so intertwined in the MWC experience, it’s hard for me to think about one and not the other,” he added

The gathering was one of the first events to be cancelled in 2020 as Covid-19 started to sweep across the world. A scaled back edition was held in 2021 in June instead of February as is usually the case, with many events staged online. — AFP ternational Land Port Development Co, Ltd, which is in charge of the freight train operations.

Markets extend rally as rate hike fears subside

ASIAN and European markets rallied again Monday, building on last week's advances and following a strong performance on Wall Street as speculation that inflation may have peaked tempered expectations about central bank interest rate hikes.

With prices surging at a pace not seen in a generation, finance chiefs have been forced to lift borrowing costs and wind back their ultra-loose monetary policies in recent months, sending a chill across trading floors.

But a string of weak data has led many investors to believe that inflation may have plateaued or is about to, giving room for banks to be less hawkish.

The prospect that rates will not go as high as initially expected helped send Wall Street stocks higher Friday, with the S&P 500 and Nasdaq ending up more than three per cent.

Hong Kong led gainers, climbing more than two per cent thanks to a strong performance in Chinese tech firms. Indications that China's crack-down on the sector could be coming to an end added to the upbeat mood in the city.

and Wellington were also well up.

London, Paris and Frankfurt were all up in early trade.

"Market conviction that perhaps the Fed won't now hike rates as aggressively as previously feared and/or that rate cuts before the end of 2023 are now an even more realistic prospect if recession-like conditions lay ahead, have had a big hand in last week's improvement in risk sentiment," said National Australia Bank's Ray Attrill.

He added that the rally had helped pare about two-thirds of the losses suffered in a painful sell-off from 9 to 16 June.

While Fed chiefs continue to flag further big interest rate hikes in the pipeline, expectations for a prolonged period of increases have waned, which has in turn taken some heat out of the dollar.

Bitcoin has also won some support, after falling to as low as $17,600 last week for the first time since December 2020.

"There's a feeling that things aren't as bad as we thought they were going to be," Carol Pepper, of Pepper International, told Bloomberg Radio.— AFP

New private financial exchange opens in Japan, first in 12 years

A new private financial exchange, hoping to be an alternative for the Tokyo Stock Exchange, opened Monday in Japan, becoming the third such exchange and the first to be launched in 12 years in the country, the operator said.

The Osaka Digital

Exchange or ODX offers trading of stocks and exchange-traded funds from 8:20 am to 4 pm on weekdays, longer than the TSE's trading hours of 9 am to 3 pm, with a plan to introduce next year blockchain, an advanced technology for preventing data hacking.

Online financial giant SBI Holdings Inc. owns a 70 per cent stake in ODX's operator, Osaka Digital Exchange Co, through its wholly owned subsidiary SBI PTS Holdings. Sumitomo Mitsui Financial Group Inc. holds a 20 per cent stake with the remainder equally split between Nomura Holdings Inc. and Daiwa Securities Group Inc.

"We would like to boost momentum for investment in collaboration with the Tokyo Stock Exchange and others," Kimio Mikazuki, president of Osaka Digital Exchange, said at an opening event at the company's Tokyo head office.

Mikazuki also expressed a willingness to contribute to efforts at turning its namesake, Osaka, into an international financial centre.— Kyodo

China's industrial profits see narrowed decline in May

PROFITS of China's major industrial companies saw a narrower decline in May as factories have restarted production lines amid improving business activities, official data showed Monday.

Major industrial firms, each with business revenue of at least 20 million yuan (about 2.99 million US dollars), saw their profits decline 6.5 per cent from a year earlier last month, narrowing from 8.5-per cent contraction in April, data from the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS) showed.

Zhu Hong, a senior statistician with the NBS, attributed the slower contraction to effective epidemic control, recovering business activities and progress achieved in smoothing logistics in the country.

In May, revenues of these major firms went up 6.8 per cent year on year, a faster growth pace compared with April, laying a solid foundation for profit improvements.

During the January-May period, these industrial firms raked in around 3.44 trillion yuan in total profits, up 1 per cent year on year, NBS data showed.

The revenues of these major firms went up 9.1 per cent year on year to 53.16 trillion yuan during the first five months.— Xinhua

G7, NATO summits face deeper cracks despite projected unity

A series of major Western diplomatic gatherings began with the Group of Seven (G7) leaders' meeting in the German mountain resort of Schloss Elmau on Sunday, while thousands of protesters marched in Munich.

Leaders who are attending the three-day G7 summit and those who will show up at the upcoming 2022 NATO summit in Spain are trying to present a show of unity on the Ukraine crisis. Yet the reality is that the closed club is faced with internal differences that are hard to iron out and a Cold War mentality that goes against the trend of the times.

DISPUTES REMAIN

Before the start of the G7 meeting on Sunday, German Federal Chancellor Olaf Scholz, who holds the G7's rotating presidency and is hosting the gathering, met with US President Joe Biden and the two leaders underlined "the unity of the West."

"The G7 nations must continue to close ranks," Scholz said.

In a statement issued on

Earlier, officials from Germany and Britain were reported to push for temporary waivers on biofuels mandates to mitigate soaring food prices. However, Germany had to drop the thought during the summit due to reported resistance from the United States and Canada.

Apart from the food crisis, the dispute over climate actions also grabbed headlines.

A 40-page communique, released in May after G7 climate, energy and environment ministers met in Berlin, said the G7 agreed to achieve "predominantly decarbonized electricity sectors" by 2035. However, the ministers failed to set a date for phasing out coal-powered energy due to objections from the United States and Japan.

The substantial effort to reduce carbon emissions remains a highlighted difficulty for G7 leaders at the summit, as the world's major industrialized economies, which are primarily responsible for the pollution warming the planet, continue to clash on coal.

POUR FUEL ON FIRE

At the beginning of this year, Germany listed several priorities for the G7 summit, such as striving for a sustainable planet, economic stability and healthy living. Now, the Russian-Ukraine conflict has moved to the top of the summit's agenda. Before the summit, Scholz said that G7 leaders would highlight their support for Ukraine "for as long as necessary". Biden tweeted that the G7 would ban Russian gold imports, "a major export that rakes in tens of billions of dollars for Russia."—Xinhua

Iran says to hold indirect talks with US on nuclear sanctions

Iran's foreign ministry spokesman Saeed Khatibzadeh holds a press conference in Tehran on 9 May 2022. PHOTO: AFP

IRAN said Monday that its indirect talks with the United States would resume this week in a Gulf country, as part of wider efforts to revive the 2015 nuclear deal.

The negotiations will be separate from broader talks in Vienna between Iran and major powers that are mediated by the EU, the bloc's top diplomat Joseph Borrell said Saturday in Tehran.

Iranian foreign ministry spokesman Saeed Khatibzadeh said the talks would focus on the lifting of sanctions imposed by Washington on Tehran and be held "in a Persian Gulf country in the coming days, later this week".

Iran's Tasnim news agency, quoting an unnamed foreign ministry source, reported sepaately that Iran's chief nuclear negotiator Ali Bagheri would visit Qatar on Tuesday for "negotiations on lifting sanctions", and that the US-Iranian indirect talks would be held there.

The landmark nuclear deal has been hanging by a thread since 2018, when then US president Donald Trump unilaterally withdrew from it and began imposing harsh economic sanctions on America's arch enemy.

US President Joe Biden's administration has sought to return to the agreement, saying it would be the best path ahead with the Islamic republic.

"What we will do in the coming days does not concern the nuclear dimension but existing differences (and) the lifting of sanctions," Khatibzadeh said.

"I hope that we will see positive results emerge from these talks," he told reporters.

"If Washington comes with answers, then we can do the work quickly ... The ball is in Washington's court."—AFP

RUSSIA-UKRAINE CONFLICT

Russia adds 43 Canadians to blacklist over sanctions

RUSSIA on Monday banned 43 more Canadians from entering its territory, in response to sanctions imposed by Ottawa over Moscow's offensive in Ukraine.

The new blacklist published by the Russian foreign ministry includes Suzanne Cowan, leader of Prime Minister Justin Trudeau's Liberal Party, and Mark Carney, former governor of the Canadian and British central banks.

Senior civil servants, political advisers and members of civil society are also penalized.

The foreign ministry in Moscow criticized the "belligerent Russophobia" of Trudeau's government.

It said the new bans were in retaliation for Canada's introduction in May of new sanctions targeting the heads of Russian companies and members of their families.—AFP

Ukraine terminates 2 nuclear safety deals with Russia

UKRAINE terminated two agreements with Russia concerning cooperation in the field of nuclear safety, Ukraine's state-run nuclear energy operator Energoatom said in a statement on Monday.

Gov't urges energy saving in Tokyo as demand surges amid hot weather

THE government called on households and businesses in Tokyo and surrounding areas to reduce electricity usage between 3 pm and 6 pm Monday due to heightened demand as Japan braces for a lengthy and hot summer after an early end to the rainy season.

The call came a day after the industry ministry issued its first-ever power supply advisory urging people in Tokyo Electric Power Company Holdings Inc.'s service area to take energy-saving steps such as turning off lights that are not in use.

As the capital braces for potential shortages of increasingly expensive energy, Japan's weather agency announced Monday that the rainy season in Tokyo and neighbouring areas appears to have ended, marking the shortest season since data became available in 1951.

But, despite the calls for power saving, the Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry is still urging continued and appropriate use of air conditioners due to the heightened risk of heatstroke.

TEPCO's service area covers Tokyo and eight nearby prefectures, including eastern Japan's Kanto region which endured record-high June temperatures on Saturday and Sunday. High atmospheric pressure has continued into Monday and numerous regions in the service area are expected to see temperatures of 35 C or higher.

The power supply advisory is issued when an area's reserve power supply capacity ratio is projected to fall below 5 per cent. The lowest level necessary for stable supply is said to be 3 per cent. For Monday, the reserve rates are forecast to be 4.7 per cent from 4 pm to 4:30 pm and 3.7 per cent from 4:30 pm to 5 pm.— Kyodo

S Korea still committed to dialogue with DPRK: minister

A South Korean minister in charge of inter-Korean affairs said Monday that the country was still committed to dialogue with the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK).

"We remain firmly committed to addressing all inter-Korean issues through dialogue," South Korean Unification Minister Kwon Young-se told a press conference with foreign correspondents in Seoul. "In that sense, our government will engage in consistent efforts to achieve change in the inter-Korean relations, which are in a stalemate, through the embracing of the path of dialogue," said Kwon. South Korean President Yoon Suk-yeol, who was inaugurated on 10 May, said at his inaugural ceremony that if the DPRK stops nuclear development and genuinely embarks on denuclearization, his government will be prepared to work with the international community to present an "audacious plan" that can improve the DPRK's economy.

The minister said South Korea wished to realize peaceful unification on the Korean Peninsula through the peninsula's denuclearization and the normalized relations between the two Koreas.— Xinhua

S African police seek clues after 21 teens die in bar

Police and investigators put on protective clothing before going into a township pub in South Africa's southern city of East London on 26 June 2022, after 20 teenagers died. PHOTO: AFP

POLICE in South Africa were combing a township tavern for evidence on Monday after the mysterious death of 21 teenagers after a night out.

Most of the victims, some as young as 13 years, were found dead inside a popular bar in the southern city of East London. Some died later in hospital.

They bore no visible signs of injury, sparking speculation among local officials and politicians that this was a case of under-age drinking that went tragically wrong.

Special investigators from Pretoria have been rushed to the scene.

"The detectives will be resuming their work at the crime scene today," regional police spokesman Thembinkosi Kina told AFP.

Many of the victims are thought to have been students celebrating the end of their high-school exams, officials said.

Autopsies are being conducted to see if the deaths could be linked to poisoning.

"Post-mortems (were) completed by last night and the bodies will be released to their families today," said Yonela Dekeda, provincial spokeswoman for the health department.

Forensic analysis will be conducted this week.

"Samples were taken and were on first flight today to Cape Town, where the tests will be conducted," said Unathi Binqose, a government official on safety.

Drinking in South Africa is permitted for over-18s.

But in township taverns which are often located cheek-by-jowl with family homes, safety regulations and drinking-age laws are not always enforced.

President Cyril Ramaphosa is among those who have voiced concern.

The teenagers reportedly "gathered at a venue which, on the face of it, should be off-limits to persons under the age of 18," he said.— AFP

Ecuador could halt oil production in 48 hours due to protests: official

ECUADOR could suspend oil production in 48 hours if the nationwide indigenous protests and road blockades continue, the South American country's Ministry of Energy and Mines said on Sunday.

The hydrocarbon sector was adversely affected by road blockades and the seizure of oil wells in the country's Amazon region, it said.

"If this situation continues, the country's oil production would be suspended in 48 hours due to acts of vandalism, oil well taking-over and road closures. It has not been possible to transport the supplies and diesel necessary to maintain the operation," said Xavier Vera, Ecuadoran energy and mines minister.— Xinhua

DEFENDING champion Novak Djokovic overcame a scare to notch up his 80th Wimbledon win on Monday with a four-sets victory over Kwon Soon-woo of South Korea. Six-time champion Djokovic triumphed 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 under the Centre Court roof. But the top seed was made to work after falling a break down in the opening two sets against his 81st-ranked opponent — losing the second of those.

comes the first player, man or woman, to record 80 singles wins at all four Grand Slam tournaments. "Now we have got to 80, let's get to 100," said Djokovic, a 20-time Grand Slam title winner.

"I didn't play any lead-up tournaments before Wimbledon so you always feel less comfortable. "Kwon stays close to the lines, hits clean forehands and backhands so I had to find a way to go through him. —AFP
