Over 20 must-see spots beyond pagodas, MoRAC director reveals

Some artistic works in pagodas and stupas that visitors have hardly seen.

TRAVELLERS to the ancient cultural zone of Bagan should visit over 20 pagodas, stupas and fine arts sites in addition to famous pagodas, suggested U Kyaw Myo Win, director of the Ministry of Religious Affairs and Culture (Bagan Branch).

Just as big sandstones were used as lintel beams in Cambodia's Angkor Wat temple, it is striking to see the similar use of wooden beams in the place of lintel in the western gate of Bagan's Nagayon pagoda.

"Putting one brick layer another on the beam is so artistic that it highlights the skill of the architects of the Bagan era in Southeast Asia over 1,000 years ago," he said.

Moreover, Pagoda No 1026 inside the Lawka Nanda reserve forest, located in a very remote and dense jungle, has a cracked side wall, and he went there himself to survey the urgent need for repair based on the information given by a friend, he added.

"When you arrive in Bagan, other places you should visit and observe include Nat Hlaung Kyaung temple, Shwegugyi, Pahtoethamya, Watkyi Lake Gupyaukgyi, Myinkaba Gupyaukgyi, Phayathonzu, Thanpynswa, Tayote Pyay Min or King Nara Thiha Patae, Thambula, Meenyeinkon pagoda, Zanthee pagoda group, Wuthtanataw pagoda group, Myaybontha pagoda group, Khayminga pagoda group, Yaohnna pagoda group, Inn Phayagyi, Hsinphyushin pagoda compound, Nagayon pagoda, Apelyadana and Phyatsa Shwegu, Kyaukku and Kyaukmyatmaw," he suggested.

Visitors to Bagan have rarely been there as they have been busy paying homage to famous pagodas, and these suggested places are suitable not only for pilgrimage but also for observing and enjoying the fantastic ancient fine arts of the Bagan era, he added. — MT/ZN

Moeyungyi Sanctuary hosts 30,000+ wintering birds, 123 species

MORE than 30,000 birds and 123 species of wintering birds from the Central Asian Flyway and the East Asia-Australasian Flyway have arrived in Moeyungyi Wetland Wildlife Sanctuary in Bago Region, according to Daw Thin Thin Yu, staff officer of Moeyungyi Wildlife Park.

Bird species from the North Pole of the world enter their wintering pastures in different countries from nine routes, and the wintering birds from the Central Asian Flyway and East Asia-Australasian Flyway usually enter Myanmar in mid-October before retreating to the North Pole in early April.

"Moeyungyi Sanctuary and its surrounding wetlands are frequented by wintering birds every year as they migrate from two major global flyways. Myanmar offers abundant feed and water resources, providing ample grazing grounds for these birds, which is why they consistently return to hibernate here. During winter, the northern regions of the world freeze over, and daylight hours shorten, resulting in scarcity of food and water. Thus, they seek refuge in countries with plentiful resources. Our department ensures the preservation of these birds to sustain their population over time. As per the list compiled in February of this year, there are 123 bird species, with more than 34,000 individuals living and grazing. Among the bird species frequently observed in Myanmar, Asian Openbill, Anatidae, water chicken, Andaman Teal, and black-winged stilt birds have entered the Moeyungyi Sanctuary early this winter," said Daw Thin Thin Yu.

According to the list collected last February, there are 53 species of water birds and 70 species of indigenous birds, totalling 123 species, with 16,600 hibernating birds and 18,000 endemic birds, making a total of 34,600 birds.

Wintering birds migrate into Myanmar through Siberia, Afghanistan, Mongolia, Russia, China, and 13 other countries along the East Asia-Asia-Australasian Flyway, while a total of 307 bird species are also entering Southeast Asian countries via the Central Asian Flyway, traversing through 30 countries.

Moeyungyi Sanctuary covers an area of 25,600 acres and was established as the Moeyungyi Nature Reserve in 1988 by the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry. Birdwatching enthusiasts and researchers can observe the highest number of wintering birds from November to February at Moeyungyi Sanctuary. State Administration Council Chairman Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing addresses the State Administration Council meeting 2/2024 in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

Initiating quick-win processes, such as agriculture and livestock sectors, will contribute to the development of manufacturing, said Senior General Min Aung Hlaing.

The State Administration Council meeting 2/2024 took place at the meeting hall of the Chairman of the State Administration Council Office in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday afternoon, with an address by SAC Chairman Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing.

In his speech, the Senior General underlined that the SAC could pull up the State economy from the minus to the plus trend since its establishment, but it needs to achieve deserved success as expected. As the incomes from the trade process comprise the manufacturing of products and the production of natural resources, it is important to manufacture products, he noted.

He said the current government has been emphasizing the production of agriculture and livestock sectors concerning the majority of citizens and the most fundamental situation of manufacturing in the nation by encouraging all to meet the target production of paddy, pulses and beans, oil crops and industrial crops.

The Senior General underscored that although Myanmar exports oil and natural gas to China and Thailand, these West-

Quick-win processes in agriculture and livestock sectors to contribute to manufacturing development

Salient points from the speech of the Senior General at SAC Meeting 2/2024

- Initiating quick-win processes, such as agriculture and livestock sectors, will contribute to development of manufacturing.
- The western countries impose sanctions against Myanmar for not spending the incomes from export of oil and natural gas.
- The government could pay back US$2.2 billion of foreign debts within three years.
- People from the regions with needs of peace and stability have to join hands with security forces as public participation is of importance in restoring peace and stability.

ern countries impose sanctions against Myanmar for not spending their income on the export of oil and natural gas. But, the government could develop the nation to some extent amid these difficulties.

But, he continued that during the three years, the government could pay back US$2.2 billion of foreign debts, the majority of which were based on capital finance borrowed by previously successive governments.

In more than 14 million acres of monsoon paddy, he highlighted that although monsoon paddy is expected to yield 100 baskets per acre, it actually produces more than 78 baskets per acre of monsoon paddy in the 2023-24 financial year, declining 22 baskets than the target.

The Senior General expressed his view that if other main crops, such as maize, pulses, beans, and other crops, can meet the target production, the State's economy will increase significantly.

He noted that Myanmar's main business depends on agriculture and livestock industries to manufacture value-added products in the agro-based industry. He elaborated that if existing sound foundations and human resources are utilized for the development of agriculture and livestock, production will change.

The Senior General stressed the need to allow the extraction and sale of underground and aboveground natural resources and forest resources under relevant disciplines.

He clearly said that as the government is striving to ensure a systematic multiparty democratic system, armed terror acts cannot be deployed on the route of democracy.

The Senior General reviewed all discussions and stressed the need for people from the regions with needs of peace and stability to join hands with security forces, as public participation is essential in restoring peace and stability.

Council members reported on development for agriculture tasks, needs of farmers, plans for sharpening the patriotic spirit of student youths during the long summer holidays, development of the tourism industry and fostering peace and stability in relevant regions.

SAC Vice-Chairman Deputy Prime Minister Vice-Senior General Soe Win discussed the quick process of restoring peace and stability in the regions with public participation.

The meeting was also attended by SAC Vice Chairman Deputy Prime Minister Vice-Senior General Soe Win, Secretary Lt-Gen Aung Lin Dwe, Joint Secretary Lt-Gen Ye Win Oo, council members and officials. — MNA/TTA

Central Committee addresses illegal immigration concerns

THE Central Committee on Repatriation of Illegal Immigrants held meeting 1/2024 at Areindama Hall of the Headquarters of Myanmar Police Force in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

State Administration Council Member Union Minister for Home Affairs Lt-Gen Yar Pyae, who also chairs the central committee, attended the meeting alongside responsible officials.

The chairman stated that since the committee's establishment on 8 November 2023, it has played a crucial role in identifying, evaluating, and fa-ilitating the repatriation of illegal migrants to their respective home countries in accordance with the law.

The authorities handle illegal immigrants under the Myanmar Immigration (Emergency Provisions) Act from 1947. The committee has facilitated the relocation of 53,089 undocumented migrants from 24 countries between 5 October 2023 and 25 March 2024. Among them, 51,010 were Chinese nationals.

respective countries, as well as various circumstances, such as immigrants being trafficked or coerced into criminal activities, the committee refrained from taking punitive action against any individuals. Instead, it collaborated with the relevant embassies to facilitate the relocation of these immigrants.

After the chairman's speech, attendees provided updates on ongoing processes. The meeting concluded with the chairman delivering closing remarks. — MNA/NT

Machine-made brick trade thriving despite slight price drop

THE price of machine-made brick, which has been widely used for construction these years, has fallen slightly, but the sales have been good, according to the market.

The machine-made brick sale has been better as a result of an increase in the number of sellers, and the decline in price is a result of a growing number of brick manufacturers and an abundance of supply. Demand and supply are in balance.

“The use of machine-made bricks is larger than cement brick. Machine-made brick is stronger. Some manufacture bricks in summer and pile them in monsoon. Previously, we sold about ten truckloads, but now we sell just about five truckloads. Actually, sales are normally active during this period. Normally, we predict the sales are better during monsoon season. In the monsoon season, the price of brick normally gets higher, K20-K30, but raw material production becomes low because bricks can't be dried when it rains. Now, the supply is larger, and the number of sellers is also larger. But the price declines,” said an official from Ko Aung Zaw Min machine-made brick trading in Taikkyi township.

Typically, machine-made brick prices are high during the monsoon.

“Machine-brick production has about 10,000 in monsoon season, and the current production is about 30,000. For example, brick manufacturers make 100 bricks in monsoon season and 300-400 bricks in summer, so the price gets higher and the sale is better in monsoon season,” he said. — Thit Taw/ZS

Expansion of water monitoring sensors planned

THE Department of Meteorology and Hydrology states that water monitoring devices will be installed nationwide in due course to aid with flood control.

Although both human and automatic systems are utilized to monitor water levels, most river water monitoring stations currently rely on human operation rather than automation.

“There are 18 river water monitoring stations along the Ayeyawady River. The river’s conditions are then monitored and reported every day. It is typically tested at 6:30 am, 12:00 pm, and 6:30 pm three times a day. Recently, plans have been made to install water monitoring sensors at all stations due to the necessity for real-time information due to changing weather conditions. Here, some stations will need to be replaced and installed, while some will need to be installed brand-new. This financial year, it will be put into effect,” said an official from the Department of Meteorology and Hydrology.

As a river water monitoring work, the water monitoring works launch at 14 significant rivers across the country, including 18 river water monitoring stations along the Ayeyawady River, eight stations along the Chindwin River, one station along Sittoung River and two stations along the Thanlwin River. — ASH/MKKS

Major rivers, including Ayeyawady, to rise in April

THE Department of Meteorology and Hydrology stated that the current water level may rise in some major rivers, including the Ayeyawady River, in April.

It is stated that the water level of the Ayeyawady River may rise by three to four and a half feet in the townships of Myitkyina, Bhamo, Shwegu, Katha, Thabeikkyin, Mandalay, Sagaing, Myinmu, Pakokku, and NyaungU. Additionally, in the townships of Chauk, Minbu, Magway, Aunglan, Pyay, Seiktha, Hinthada, and Zalun, the water level may increase by one and a half to two and a half feet.

Additionally, the department’s statement mentioned that the water level of the Chindwin River may rise by one foot to three and a half feet in the townships of Khamti, Homalin, Phaungpyin, Mawlaik, Kalewa, Mingin, Kani, and Monywa.

Similarly, the water level of Myittha River can rise by one foot in Kalay Township. The Dohtawadi River is expected to increase by about a half to one foot in Hsipaw, Shwesayan, and Myitnge. Sittoung River’s water levels in Toungoo and Madauk are about a half to one foot higher than usual, and the Shwegyin River’s water level will rise by one foot in Shwegyin.

The Bago River’s water level in Zaungtu and Bago

Meanwhile, the Thanlwin River in Hpa-an may rise by one and a half feet, the Thaungyin River near Myawady by a half foot, and the Ngawun River in Ngathaingchaung, Thaboung, and Pathein are expected to rise by nearly a half foot to one and a half feet. The Toe River in Maubin will likely experience a rise of about one foot, while the Bilin River’s water level in Bilin may rise by a half foot. — TWA/TRKM

Taninthayi Agriculture Dept planning to set up edible oil refinery plant

THE importation of low-quality cooking oil is spotted in the domestic market. Subsequently, Taninthayi Region's Agriculture Department stepped up to set up an edible oil refinery plant to ensure the quality and safety of edible oil.

Myanmar brings in 400,000-600,000 tonnes of palm oil from international markets. Yet, some are found to have low grades.

"As palm oil is cheaper, low-income people mostly consume it. As long as it is processed and qualified to be sold in the market, palm oil is safe to consume. Some unscrupulous traders import palm oil of low quality through illegitimate trade. Some utilized hazardous substances to prevent the palm oil from solidifying, posing health risks. Palm oil is widely consumed worldwide. However, it is important to test iodine value to measure saturation and unsaturation levels in oil," U Thein Soe, deputy head of the department, said.

"Oil palm can be grown only in Taninthayi Region. Myanmar needs an edible oil refinery to produce healthy cooking oil. The expansion of oil palm cultivation has land issues. We have to consider some factors: forest conservation, substituting unprofitable old rubber trees with oil palm, infertile land, and vacant, virgin and fallow land. The most commercially valued tree is oil palm, which is commonly found in Thailand and Malaysia. Growers are not interested in oil palm as the market is about 200 miles away from them.

Panoramic view of thriving oil crops plantation for edible oil production.

High transport costs hindered them from growing oil palm. To tackle this problem, a plan to establish an oil refinery in Myeik District is underway," he added.

According to the Agriculture Department, there are six crude edible oil processing factories in the Dawei, Myeik, Bokpyin, and Kawthoung districts.

"To construct a crude oil factory with a production capacity of 30 tonnes per hour, it costs about K5,000 million. For an edible oil refinery, the capital is estimated at US$15 million. That plant can produce 150 tonnes of refined oil, along with 30 tonnes of crude oil," an official of Myeik district elaborated.

The oil palm is primarily found in Myeik, Bokpyin and Kawthoung districts. The refinery and crude oil processing plants can promote oil palm cultivation. Growers suggested that the factories should be developed near the oil palm cultivation areas.

Taninthayi Region has favourable weather and land conditions to achieve oil palm cultivation, attracting both domestic and foreign investors. There are almost 400,000 acres of oil palm in the region. — Myint Oo (Myeik)/EM

Diesel price slightly dips in domestic market

DIESEL price slightly decreased to K2,400 per litre of diesel and K2,445 per litre of premium diesel on 29 March.

The prices stood at K2,435 per litre of diesel and K2,480 per litre of premium diesel on 28 March.

Domestic fuel prices are closely tied to the price index set by Mean of Platts Singapore (MOPS), the pricing basis for many refined products in southeast Asia, according to the Supervisory Committee on Oil Import, Storage and Distribution of Fuel Oil. The diesel oil prices hit the highest of K3,245 for premium diesel and K3,330 for diesel in August 2023.

The committee is, therefore, steering the market to ensure price stability and fuel oil security. Under the supervision of the committee, the Petroleum Products Regulatory Department has been issuing daily reference prices to ensure price stability for energy consumers.

The committee is inspecting the fuel stations to see whether they are overcharging. The authorities are taking action against those retailers of fuel stations under the Petroleum and Petroleum Products Law 2017 if they are found overcharging rather than the set reference rate. As per the statement, 90 per cent of fuel oil in Myanmar is imported, while the remaining 10 per cent is produced locally. Domestic fuel prices are highly correlated with international prices. The State is steering the market to mitigate the losses experienced by importers, sellers, and energy consumers. Consequently, the government is trying to distribute the oil at a reasonable price compared to those of regional countries.

Some countries levied higher tax rates and hiked oil prices than Myanmar's. However, Malaysia's oil sector receives government subsidies, and the prices are about 60 per cent cheaper than those of Myanmar. Every country lays down different policy patterns to fix oil prices. Myanmar also levies only a lower tax rate on fuel oil and strives for energy consumers to buy the oil at a cheaper rate. — NN/EM

Balance environment for living and non-living beings

MOUNT Popa stands as an oasis amidst Central Myanmar's arid lands, adorned with lush greenery and a diverse array of flora, including medicinal plants tracing back through successive eras. Embedded in the myths and oral traditions of locals, Mount Popa is believed to be a haven for those with supernatural abilities, hermits, and seekers of life's essence.

Environmentalists rejoice as the government announces the establishment of the first national Geopark in Mount Popa Park, located in Kyaukpadaung Township of the Mandalay Region, on 20 March 2024. This declaration fills the local populace with pride, recognizing their region as a national geopark within the heart of central Myanmar.

The Geopark encompasses intangible cultural treasures ranging from geological marvels and biodiversity hotspots to ancient cultural heritage sites, social traditions, local products, and natural splendours.

Establishing geoparks across the nation not only showcases the country's commitment to environmental conservation but also provides habitats for biodiversity and preserves cultural heritage, contributing to the delicate balance of the natural environment in Myanmar. If so, the geoparks will improve the climatic conditions of all parts of the nation.

Preserving these invaluable assets requires systematic conservation efforts coupled with public awareness campaigns to safeguard these treasures. Consequently, the Geopark serves as a crucial site for sustainable development, ensuring that residents can reap the benefits of preserving these irreplaceable heritages.

Comprising 15 geological zones, the Mount Popa Geopark falls under the stewardship of the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation. Their mandate involves safeguarding these areas to guarantee the long-term sustainability of natural resources and heritage sites through the establishment of conservation zones for biodiversity, ecosystem preservation, and maintaining geological integrity.

The establishment of Mount Popa National Geopark marks the initial stride towards enhanced conservation of natural resources. This precedent sets the stage for the creation of more geoparks across the nation, each blessed with abundant natural resources and rich cultural traditions, poised to become coveted tourist destinations for both domestic and international travellers.

With the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation aiming to designate 10 per cent of the nation's total area as environmental conservation zones, efforts are underway to expand the conservation footprint. Presently, 59 natural environmental conservation areas cover 6.42 per cent of the nation's territory. These endeavours also seek to position Mount Popa Geopark as a contender for inclusion in the World Geopark Sites roster.

Establishing geoparks across the nation not only showcases the country's commitment to environmental conservation but also provides habitats for biodiversity and preserves cultural heritage, contributing to the delicate balance of the natural environment in Myanmar. If so, the geoparks will improve the climatic conditions of all parts of the nation.

IF the December 2023 figures of 700 foreign visitors to Inle (pronounced Inn Lay) are anything to go by, it would be a case study of a major tourist attraction in 'perpetual recuperation mode'.

Recalling the heydays during the 2013 to 2016 periods, when boatmen had difficulties finding slips for their motorised sampans, said Aung Lin, one of the few remaining boatmen, playing their trade transporting visitors around the real Venice of Asia. Now, many of them have either given up or been toiling and praying for their daily continuance after getting bruised for four consecutive years due to the double jeopardy of COVID-19 and politics.

Gone were the days when thousands of domestic and foreign visitors descended upon Inn Lay Lake to enjoy the uniqueness of nature, putting this vast lake up on top of an enormous plateau. People have to queue just to get onto the sampans. Jetties were precious assets, and tourists waited for their turns to get on board. The expansive lake is bustling with activities, from the feeding of the seagulls, admiring fishermen on skiffs, stepping on floating strips of islets used for growing tomatoes, visiting many unique attractions, and simply waving each other from mechanised sampans.

I went to Inn Lay in the middle of January to check out the reality of the circumstances. Alas, the flight from Yangon was packed for both legs. A group of Korean tourists were spotted on the same flight with us. Sadly, on our boat ride to the hotel, during our three-night stay or on tours of the attractions, we ended up 'Waving into Thin Air', crisp and freezing, in this desolate beauty of nature, disheartened and dispirited by ineluctable causes, perforce.

As Confucius once said, 'We must accept finite disappointment, but never lose infinite hope'. The glimmer of hope arising just like a phoenix arising from the ashes of its previous life, starting with the resort that we stayed in. Only with a couple or so of villas occupied during our mini break, Villa Inle Boutique Resort is keeping its operational costs to a minimum by growing its own organic vegetables and operating a small poultry farm producing organic eggs - An ultimate combination of freshness and nature perhaps. I have spoken to a few other hoteliers around the lake; they also have upcoming batches of visitors from abroad to add whatever little vibrancy they can to the destination. I also spoke to car leasing operators. All have downsized their operations and possessions for their continued survival. One such operator, Thura, has already sold off two of his vehicles and is now just operating with one car. He said he did not have a choice and knew no other way of earning a living now.

Adding to their despair is the deficient infrastructure, poor law and order and present high-security environment. Electricity supply has always been a shortcoming in Myanmar, but the situation is made worse by NNCP terrorist attacks on electrical infrastructure and government dependency to implement any major infra projects during and after COVID-19. This is adding woes to the hotels as the first question most domestic tourists and local visitors typically ask would be, 'Would there be a 24-hour electrical supply during my stay?'. Even in boutique hotels such as Ville Inle, which charges around $100 a night, the cost of running a generator to affect uninterrupted power supply would be set back by more than per night revenues from a couple of rooms. More so for larger hotels. With a significantly reduced number of visitors during this peak season, this is a promise that hotels simply cannot fulfil.

Recent shortages in fuel supply have all the hotels and other businesses scrambling to get limited supply at exorbitant prices, exacerbating operational losses for all wanting to put on a better show during this holiday season.

Political changes and anti-government activities have made the law and order situation worse, too. Even crooked villagers became more daring, attempting a variety of methods to extort money out of good businesses operating in and around Inn Lay.

The security situation all across the country is demanding the creation of barbicans and barricades at multiple junctions around Inn Lay, and this is forcing visitors and the general public to stay home after sunset. This is a stark contrast to lively night scenes as late as five years ago.

Can Inle survive?

Just like in war, speed is essential to survival. Speed of action, strategy and successful implantation. The difficulty here is not in individual attempts but in teamwork that involves government (ministries), businesses, media and private individuals from here and abroad, pushing the wheels of improvements into motion.

Government help is needed in infrastructure (especially electricity), security, nationwide promotions and convincing people to support local attractions. Businesses must also find innovative ways to promote, survive, and generate alternative income. Media assistance is most needed to reflect the truth about Myanmar, combat fake news that infected the minds of international visitors and prevent tourist arrivals en masse. Visitors from home and abroad must also adjust their expectations and increase their support for the local economy of Inle through spending on handicrafts and tours and enjoying longer vacations.

Without such efforts, the laggard attraction will continue to remain in the doldrums for many years to come. It may end up being in a slow death and becoming a desert of dejection and despair, doomed due to dependency from all stakeholders concerned.

Working together for a healthier, safer world: WHO and IPU renew partnership

Martin Chungong and Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus signed the memorandum. Both organizations pledge to collaborate on global health initiatives, emphasizing universal health coverage, global health security, and addressing health inequities.

THE Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) and the World Health Organization (WHO) today signed a new memorandum of understanding (MoU), reaffirming the critical role that parliamentarians play in enabling good health to foster stable and equitable societies.

Five-year memorandum

The new five-year memorandum was signed by Martin Chungong, IPU Secretary General, and Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, WHO Director-General, at the 148th IPU Assembly, which is taking place in Geneva from 23 to 27 March 2024. Both organisations commit to continue working together to promote, provide and protect the health and well-being of all people, everywhere. It renews a historic commitment made in 2018 to leverage their respective scientific and political mandates to address persistent and emerging challenges facing populations worldwide.

The memorandum reinforces critical areas of cooperation that align with global health priorities, namely universal health coverage, global health security, health promotion and reducing health inequities, especially in relation to sexual and reproductive health and rights.

It also adds new cross-cutting areas of work, including responding to climate change, support to the government-led negotiations on a new pandemic agreement, and sustainable financing for health. This includes collaboration on this year's first WHO Investment Round to overcome the historic imbalance between assessed and voluntary contributions, the distortions this creates, and the issues WHO faces with insufficiently predictable and flexible financing.

Latest round of negotiations

WHO Member States are staging their latest round of negotiations on an international agreement on pandemic prevention, preparedness and response before scheduled consideration of a proposal for adoption at the 77th World Health Assembly in May 2024. The proposed agreement aims to provide a basis for international cooperation that was lacking during the COVID-19 pandemic. Parliaments are instrumental in supporting the process towards adoption, as well as in guiding the follow-up considerations at a national level.

Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, said: "Parliamentarians play an essential role in setting policies, prioritizing investments and ensuring accountability to advance public health. Political leadership in service of the public saves lives and protects health by ensuring communities and countries are better prepared and designed to be healthier and safer. WHO looks forward to working even closer with the IPU and parliamentarians worldwide to advance efforts to protect and promote people's wellbeing, from negotiating a pandemic agreement to prevent a repeat of the impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic, to investing in universal health coverage."

A key role

Martin Chungong, said: "The COVID-19 pandemic was not an isolated occurrence. Another pandemic will happen. It is not a question of if, but when. Parliaments have a key role, which is why we will continue working with WHO at all levels to raise awareness among parliamentarians on the pandemic agreement and other global health processes; to give parliamentarians access to technical expertise and information; and to support them to pursue their national health priorities and back them with the necessary legislation and resources."

Counter-argument to false information

Fake news: conscripted 11 youths in North Okkalapa

THE malicious media intentionally spread fake news, claiming that 11 youths were arrested to serve in the military in Dawna Street and Khaing Shwewah Street at (L) ward in North Okkalapa Township.

According to an official from the People's Military Servant Summoning Team, at 6:15 am on 29 March, 11 individuals who expressed their willingness to volunteer for military service in (L) Ward reported to the administrative office. The subversive media fabricated and spread false information to mislead the public regarding the 11 people who volunteered to join the military.

Bamboo growers increase as products rebound in markets

WITH bamboo markets rebounding due to both local and overseas orders for bamboo and its handicrafts, interest in bamboo cultivation has increased among farmers, according to U Kyaw Win, a bamboo expert.

Purchases of Wahbo (giant bamboo) from China and other countries increased this year, and some buyers have personally come to the field to procure, he said.

"Bamboo nurseries are now available in many places. Bamboo is becoming rare, and its market has become wider, so many people are interested in growing it. Bamboo seems to be more profitable for farmers compared to other crops. The bamboo market has become wider than before. In the overseas market, Chinese traders want to buy three-foot-long Wahbo bamboo by the millions. They buy as many bamboo strips as we can produce. We export bamboo slats in small quantities to Malaysia and Singapore. There are also many orders for bamboo shoots. The local market is doing well. It was good last year, but this year, we see many buyers in persons in the fields to physically inspect and buy," he said.

Due to the shortage of bamboo and high transportation costs, bamboo prices are rising this year compared to last year. "A piece of Kyathaung bamboo (a type used for mats and construction) now costs K1,200, up from K600/700. It is of good quality, but at K1,200, the price has almost doubled. The price of Htiyo bamboo (monastery bamboo) has also increased from K700/800 to K1,600," he said.

The growing interest in bamboo and bamboo products is an opportunity for innovators in bamboo handicrafts. At the same time, it can also be an advantage for bamboo farmers in the future, he commented. — MT/ZN

What is the economic impact of the Baltimore bridge collapse?

Efforts are underway among ocean shippers, other ports, and cargo owners to redirect ships originally bound for Baltimore.

The collapse of the Francis Scott Key Bridge will bring an economic hit but analysts say it is unlikely to make a broad-based impact. PHOTO: AFP

DIVERTED cargo and supply chain disruptions have left businesses rushing to avoid an economic hit following the collapse of a major bridge in Baltimore after it was hit by a cargo ship.

With vessel traffic at the Port of Baltimore suspended until further notice since Tuesday's accident, experts warn of knock-on effects but say these should be manageable in the near term.

Baltimore is the biggest vehicle-handling port in the country, including cars and heavy farm equipment, Transportation Secretary Pete Buttigieg told a press briefing.

He estimates there is between $100 and $200 million in value coming through the port daily, with "about $2 million in wages that are at stake every day".

He added in a CBS interview that ocean shippers, other ports and cargo owners are working to figure out where to divert ships headed that way.

Besides the direct hit to thousands of Baltimore port workers, Maryland Governor Wes Moore warned in a CNN interview that more than 140,000 people could be indirectly impacted by disruptions. — AFP

UNEP says food waste is derailing economic growth, green transition

THE crisis of food waste and loss has reached alarming levels globally, undermining efforts to eradicate hunger, poverty and environmental pollution, said the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) in a new report launched Wednesday.

The UNEP Food Waste Index Report 2024, the second edition of this kind, was launched in Nairobi, the Kenyan capital, ahead of the International Day of Zero Waste which falls on Saturday.

The world wasted 1.05 billion tonnes of food in 2022, equivalent to 132 kilogrammes per person and one-fifth of all food available to consumers, says the report which was co-authored by UNEP and WRAP, a British environmental charity.

Inger Andersen, the executive director of UNEP, decried the growing crisis of food loss and waste in a world where 783 million people are affected by hunger annually while 150 million children are stunted due to chronic malnutrition.

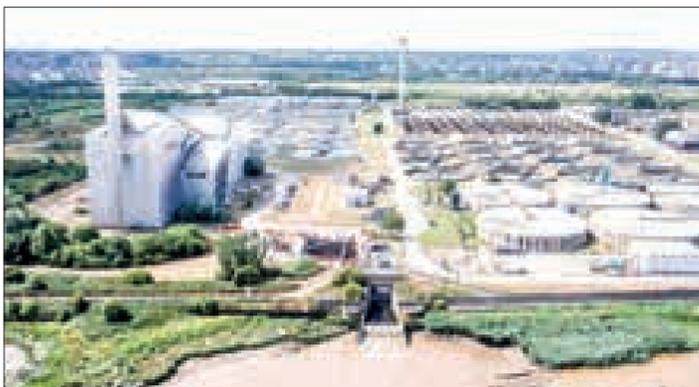

"Food waste is a global tragedy. Not only is this a major development issue, but the impacts of this unnecessary waste are causing substantial costs to the climate and nature," Andersen remarked.

The report says households accounted for 60 per cent of food waste in 2022, followed by food services players at 28 per cent and the retail sector at 12 per cent, adding that the toll of food waste and loss to the global economy stands at one trillion US dollars. — Xinhua

Japan enacts revised 112.57 tril yen budget for FY 2024

JAPAN'S parliament on Thursday enacted a 112.57 trillion yen ($744 billion) budget for fiscal 2024 starting in April, the second-largest, to better respond to security threats and demographic challenges, ease the pain of inflation and rebuild earthquake-hit areas.

The budget includes a record 7.95 trillion yen in defense spending. The government revised its initial plan and double the amount of emergency funds to one trillion yen after a deadly quake hit central Japan on New Year's Day.

Although the government has been seeking to trim its spending to pre-pandemic levels after it swelled in recent years to cope with the COVID-19 pandemic and the cost-of-living crisis, it faces high hurdles because it has already decided to sharply increase spending on defence and on child-related policy in the coming years. The rapid ageing of society is also boosting social security costs, which totaled a record 37.72 trillion yen, or about a third of the general-account budget for the next year. — Kyodo

Fallen crypto tycoon Bankman-Fried gets 25-year sentence

FOUND guilty following a five-week trial last November, Bankman-Fried was finally handed the quarter-century sentence this Thursday, which he is expected to appeal. US District

Judge Lewis Kaplan said the defendant, who became known by his initials "SBF", had shown no "real remorse", even in his final pre-sentencing remarks in which the former billionaire rued "a series of bad decisions" but did not acknowledge knowingly violating financial laws. Bankman-Fried said "mistakes were made, but never a word of remorse for the commission of a terrible crime", said

Kaplan, who characterized the violations as "brazen" and called out the defendant for his "exceptional flexibility" towards the truth. Kaplan set a sentence of 25 years in prison, followed by three years of supervised release. The defendant also was ordered to pay $11 billion, an amount reflective of what Bankman-Fried effectively stole from other parties, according to Kaplan's calculations. — AFP

Pope washes feet of 12 women prisoners on Holy Thursday

Seated in a wheelchair, the pope washed and kissed the feet of each prisoner, delivering a message of forgiveness and compassion during a mass held in the prison courtyard.

POPE Francis, who often pleads for compassion to prisoners, washed the feet of 12 incarcerated women in Rome on Thursday in a rite marking Holy Thursday before Easter.

The Argentinian Jesuit visited the Rebibbia women's prison in the northeastern outskirts of the Italian capital, where he performed the same rite in 2015.

Thursday, however, was the first time the 87-year-old pontiff had dedicated his annual ritual during Holy Week solely to women.

Seated in a wheelchair, the pope washed the feet of each of the prisoners, some of them in tears, before drying them off with a towel and kissing them.

"We all have small failures, big failures," said the pope in an impromptu homily during a mass held in the courtyard of the prison that holds some 370 women.

"But the Lord is always waiting for us, with open arms, and he never tires of forgiving," he added.

The washing of feet is "a gesture that draws our attention to the vocation of service," said Francis, who as a priest in Buenos Aires had already begun visiting prisoners.

A few minutes earlier, the pontiff was all smiles as he shook hands with the inmates.

Last month, the pope caught a flu that caused him to cancel some public meetings. During his subsequent recovery, he has on several occasions asked others to read his speeches. — AFP

Israeli strikes kill 42 in Syria's Aleppo province

Israel has launched hundreds of air strikes in Syria since civil war there broke out in 2011.

A war monitor said Israeli air strikes Friday on Syria's Aleppo province killed at least 42 including 36 Syrian soldiers, the deadliest toll for the army since the Israel-Hamas war began.

Israel has launched hundreds of air strikes in Syria since civil war there broke out in 2011, targeting army positions as well as Iran-backed forces including Hezbollah, an ally of Damascus and Palestinian militant group Hamas.

The strikes have increased since Israel's war with Hamas began on 7 October and Friday's was the second such attack in 24 hours.

"Israeli strikes" targeted

"a rockets depot belonging to Lebanon's Hezbollah" close to Aleppo airport, said the UK-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, which has a network of sources inside Syria.

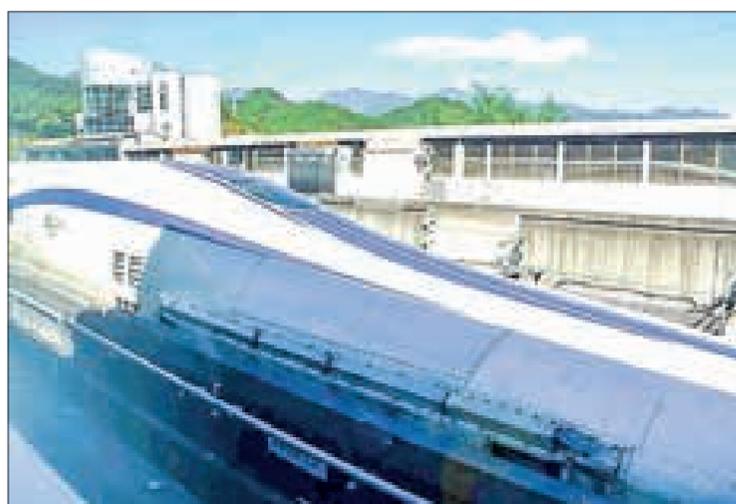

It reported "42 killed, including six from Lebanon's Hezbollah group" and "36 soldiers", the highest Syrian army toll in Israeli strikes since the Israel-Hamas war began.

State news agency SANA, quoting a military source, reported that "at approximately 1:45 am, the Israeli enemy launched an air attack from the direction of Athriya, southeast of Aleppo"— AFP

Japan rail operator gives up plan to launch maglev train in 2027

CENTRAL Japan Railway Co said Friday it has given up its plan to launch a new high-speed maglev train between Tokyo and Nagoya in 2027, amid long-running environmental opposition in Shizuoka Prefecture.

"While we cannot predict the new opening date at this point, we will continue to aim to launch it as soon as possible," the company said in a document released ahead of a meeting of experts at the transport ministry.

The Linear Chuo Shinkansen project is intended to link Tokyo and Osaka with trains travelling up to 500 kilometres per hour. But a small area on the section between the capital and Nagoya has proved a stumbling block for the project, due mostly to opposition by the central prefecture of Shizuoka.

Shizuoka Governor Heita Kawakatsu declined to comment on JR Central's confirmation it has abandoned the original opening date, telling reporters he has "yet to receive notification" of the decision. Kawakatsu has cited environmental impact concerns in opposing the project, which requires extensive tunnels for the vast majority of its 286-kilometre route to Nagoya. Construction of the around 8.9 km of tunnels through Shizuoka Prefecture has yet to begin. — Kyodo

Boao forum urges global cooperation in energy transition

ENERGY company executives attending the Boao Forum for Asia Annual Conference 2024 in Boao, South China's Hainan province, have pledged aggressive plans while also calling for more global cooperation to help accelerate energy transition.

At a sub-forum titled "Low Carbon Energy Transformation" held in Boao on Friday, Huang Yongzhang, president of PetroChina, revealed that China's largest oil and gas producer is actively developing its new energy business amid the country's green drive.

New energy is becoming one of PetroChina's main businesses, and is expected to account for seven per cent of its total output in 2025 and for one-third in 2035, according to Huang.

This is just one example of China's vigorous green transition as it pursues its dual carbon goals of peaking carbon emissions by 2030 and reaching carbon neutrality by 2060. — Xinhua

THE CENTURIES-OLD STATUE

Ancient statue in restoration at Phnom Bakheng temple in Cambodia's Angkor

CAMBODIAN archaeologists have begun to restore a larger-than-life sandstone statue in front of the southern library of Phnom Bakheng temple in the famed Angkor Archaeological Park, said the APSARA National Authority (ANA) in a news release on Friday. Soy Sophearin, a stone conservation expert, said the centuries-old statue was severely damaged, such as in the head, arms, and right leg, making it impossible for experts to identify the statue. "As for the time and cause of the statue's collapse, we do not know for sure. However, based on the remaining cement traces, we know that this statue was once restored by the French School of the Far East (EFEO) in the past," he said. — Xinhua
