For economic development of Rakhine State

The Union of Myanmar with favourble weather conditions is rich in fertile soil. At a time when the Government is making all-out efforts for emergence of a peaceful, modern and developed nation, it is necessary for the country to possess a strong economy.

Rakhine State is one of the states that assists the economic development of the State. In Rakhine State, people are enjoying surplus of rice and at present, efforts are being made to put over one million acres under crops. Therefore, farmers are to strive for extended cultivation of the main crops and boosting the per acre yield.

Only monsoon paddy is grown once a year in Taungup Township and its neighbouring areas and thus to earn more income farmers are to cultivate vegetables and other crops after the monsoon paddy cultivation season. A study of cultivating beans and pulses shows that cultivation of pigeon pea exceeds the target and therefore, efforts are to be made to grow other beans and pulses apart from the pigeon pea.

Pepper is thriving in Rakhine State where there has enough rain in addition to good soil and favourable weather conditions. As there is a market for pepper which can benefit the farmers, extended cultivation of pepper should be carried out in Rakhine State.

As regards the meat and fish sector, fresh and sea water fishery industry is being carried out on a wide scale in Rakhine State. In the past, there were only about 60,000 acres of fresh and sea water prawn breeding ponds but now, the number has risen to over 150,000.

The unique location and richness in marine resources contribute much towards economic development of Rakhine State. Therefore, the Government, on its part, is building roads and bridges in Rakhine State for the latter's development.

In building roads linking Rakhine State and other adjacent divisions there emerged 628 miles long Yangon-Sittway Union Highway, 323 miles long Thandwe-Taungup-Yangon road and 235 miles long Thandwe-Gwa Ngathaingchaung-Yangon road and these facilities provide better transport.

In building major roads in the state which is teeming with rivers and creeks, building of bridges is no exception. As a result, altogether 1174 bridges including 25 river-crossing bridges with the length of 180 feet and above have emerged. People living in Rakhine State who had to mainly rely on air and water transport in the past are now able to access other regions in the Union by land.

For economic development of the state, people living in Rakhine State are urged to make earnest efforts for ensuring the yield of 100 baskets of paddy per acre while extending agricultural and livestock breeding tasks.

In my opinion, I'd say it is my pleasure that people can enjoy short stories that are now meeting with success. There is not only because of my qualification to win the award, but it is also because of the driving factors, for example; the experiences I have enjoyed or encountered, a wide range of lifestyles and characters in my surroundings, and the encouragement of some friends and colleagues. Kyemon: When did you start to try out for a pen name? TMA: It was in 1978. I con tributed just a little at that time. I started to contribute much in the 1990s. I started to enter the literary world in 1987 with short stories in the Taiyinmay Journal. After 1987, I wrote short stories under the pen-name of Than Myint Aung. I have written five works of collected short stories, five mediumlength stories and two novels.

I felt honoured to hear that novels depicting the huamn life and short stories reflecting real characters are popular among readers. With regard to social affairs, I am engaged in rehabilitation of orphans and conducting researches on new therapy for the psychiatric hospital. I have contributed a script regarding prevention of HIV. I am also working with the Mayangyaung Leprosy Control Centre. I am devoted to work for welfare of others in the committee for helping social affairs. My short stories are mostly based on social welfare work and real characters in human society

Upsurge of violence predicted for Iraq

BAGHDAD, 1 Nov- Security officials are preparing for a surge in violence against coalition forces in Iraq within the next few days, after receiving information that supporters of ousted president Saddam Hussein may be intending to co-ordinate a series of attacks in Baghdad.

Three days of violence are said by sources linked to the former president's Ba'ath party to be in the final planning stage, security officials in Iraq said on Thursday.

Internet

Foreign companies have tightened security measures, and are convinced that the information received on the impending attacks is reliable.

The United Nations announced on Thursday that it was temporarily withdrawing 30 expatriate staff from Baghdad, though it was not clear whether specific intelligence had been received suggesting that the UN was a target. On August 19, a truck bomb killed 22 people at the UN headquarters in the city.

Information suggesting that a series of attacks may be mounted by supporters of the ousted regime emerged as a US official identified Izzat Ibrahim al-Douri, Mr Hussein's former deputy, as the Saddam lovalist who is now co-ordinating violence against coalition forces and Iraqis working with the USled operation in Iraq.

Iraq rumours prompt US warning

BAGHDAD, 1 Nov—The US and Australian Governments have warned their nationals in Iraq to take extra care amid rumours of further violence in Baghdad this weekend.

The US consulate urged Americans to be alert following reports that a "day of resistance" was being planned. Scores of people, mostly Iraqis, have been killed this week.

Tension is high in Iraq where Saturday marks six months since President Bush declared an end to major hostilities.

"US citizens are encouraged to continue to maintain a high level of vigilance and continue to take appropriate steps to increase their security and awareness," the US consulate said in a statement.

Australian officials also warned their nationals to stay away from an area of central Baghdad where a hotel popular with foreigners, the al-Hamra, is located.

The Australian Government said it had received credible reports of what it called "imminent terrorist attacks" in the area. The BBC's Jonny Dymond says there have been such scares in the past which have come to nothing. But, he adds, if the aim of spreading such rumours is to cause fear and concern, then it is succeeding.

Ordinary Iraqis, who unlike most foreigners do not live in protected areas, are also nervous.

"People approach me all the time now and say they are afraid to walk anywhere," Mohammad Saleh al-Ubaidi, an imam at a mosque in Baghdad, told Reuters news agency. Security was tight across Baghdad as Iraqis attended the first Friday prayers of the Muslim fasting month of Ramadan. But anti-American fury erupted in a suburb of the capital after US troops entered a market place searching for those behind a grenade attack that had injured two soldiers, witnesses said. Two Iraqis - one a policeman, the other a six-yearold boy - were killed in the unrest which erupted in the western district of Abu Ghraib. Several other Iraqis and two US soldiers were also reported injured. "There was fighting and demonstrations in the area which lasted several hours," a US military spokeswoman said. This week has seen a surge in attacks, including a series of bombings in Baghdad on Monday that left 36 people dead, making it the bloodiest day since the start of the US-led occupation.

Faced with continuing attacks, US forces have stepped up their efforts to track down suspected former regime loyalists who they blame for much of the violence.

Some senior US officials even believe Saddam Hussein may be playing a major role in directing attacks on US troops from a base of operations near Tikrit, the New York Times reported on Friday. American troops have erected barbed wire around Saddam Hussein's home village near Tikrit.

Soldiers have set up checkpoints in and out of the village of Uja where residents have been ordered to register for identity cards.

"This is an effort to protect the majority of the population, the people who want to get on with their lives," Lieutenant Colonel Steve Russell said. "There are ties leading to this village to the funding and planning of attacks against US soldiers," he said. — Internet

Wen Jiabao says China to make development more sustainable

BELIING, 1 Nov—Premier Wen Jiabao Friday affirmed China's adherence to the principles of sustainable growth during its industrialization and modernization drive and said his government has set guidelines for China's endeavour to build a better-off society, which focuses on an overall, balanced and sustainable development.

"China will manage to fulfil a balance of urban and rural development, economic ans social development, as well as harmonious coexistence of humans and the nature," Wen said in his meeting with major Chinese and foreign members of the China Council for International Cooperation on the Environment and Development (CCICED).

He said it was the lesson from the summary China has drawn from over 20 years of practical experience in its reform, openingup and modernization.

China's industrialization would follow the principles of cost-effectivencess, low consumption of resources, low pollution and efficient use of human resources, said Premier Wen.

Launched in 1992 with support from the Chinese central government, the CCICED has given scope to a as a senior advisory body that set forth proposals on crucial environmental and development issues with the government.

It has becomes a tradition that senior Chinese leaders have face-to-face communication with the council members during each annual session.

Mans Lonnroth, former state secretary of Sweden's Ministry of Environment and also vice-chairman of the council, told Wen that China's rapid economic growth could be as hazardous as "riding a tiger" if the pollution-first-treatment-later mode was not changed. He said China has special advantages in facing challenges because its government has strong power to control industrialization and it is still not too late for the change.

Survey shows HK SMEs more confident of business prospects

HONG KONG, 1 Nov — The latest Business Operating Environment Index for Hong Kong small- and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs released by the SME Centre of the Hong Kong Productivity Council (HKPC) on Thursday showed that local companies are more confident of their business prospects.

The survey on "Business Operating Environment Index for SMEs," introduced in 1998, was conducted quarterly to gauge the views of Hong Kong's small- and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) in the areas of market opportunity, financial and investment situation, operating costs, human resources and risk assessment.

Caring for grandkids can cause heart attack

WASHINGTON, 1 Nov — Taking care of grandchildren can give women more than a headache — it can raise their risk of heart attack, US researchers reported on Thursday.

The study of more than 54,000 nurses found that those who cared for grandchildren at least nine hours a week had a 55-per-cent increased risk of heart attack.

It is probably the stress, said Sunmin Lee of Brigham and Women's Hospital, who led the study, published in the American Journal of Public Health.

"Although our study did not look at underlying factors, it is likely that caregivers have so many demands placed on them that they lose time and energy to take care of themselves," Lee said in a statement.

"It is possible that their role caring for these children makes it difficult for them to follow basic preventive health behaviors such as exercising, eating right and getting adequate sleep."

Lee's team at the Harvard School of Public Health and Harvard Medical School said statistics show that about one in seven US women have raised a grandchild for six months or more.

Report says Iraq contracts reek of cronyism

WASHINGTON, 1 Nov—Many of the US firms doing billions of dollars of work in Iraq and Afghanistan have been big donors to President Bush and his Republican Party and fill their boards with political and military heavyweights, a report on Thursday said.

The report by the watchdog group, the Center for Public Integrity, said most of the 70 firms and individuals getting up to $8 billion in contracts for post-war Iraq and Afghanistan donated more to Bush's presidential campaign — a little over $500,000 than any other candidate in the past decade.

"There is a stench of political favoritism and cronyism surrounding the contracting process in both Iraq and Afghanistan," said Charles Lewis, executive director of the group, which investigates public service and ethics issues. The report said 60 percent of the firms with contracts had employees or board members who served in previous administrations, for members of Congress and at the highest level of the military.

Winning companies were major political players overall and the group traced about $49 million in donations since 1990 from these companies to political parties, committees and candidates. The Republican Party committee got $12.7 million while Democrats got $7.1 million.

> WASHINGTON, 1 Nov— A second huge magnetic solar storm arrived at Earth on Thursday, just a day after an earlier one hit our planet in what one astronomer called an unprecedented one-two punch.

"It's like the Earth is looking right down the barrel of a giant gun pointed at us by the sun... and it's taken two big shots at us," said John Kohl of the Harvard-Smithsonian Centre for Astrophysics in Massachusetts.

Kohl, the principal investigator for an instrument aboard NASA's sun-watching SOHO spacecraft, said the probability of two huge flares aimed directly at Earth coming so close together, as they have this week, "unprecedented... so low that it is a statistical anomaly".

Kohl said the second solar storm, known as a coronal mass ejection, peeled off the sun around 4 pm EST (2100 GMT) on Wednesday. Charged particles from the ejection started arriving at Earth around 10 a.m. EST (1500 GMT) Thursday.

This was just a day after an earlier ejection was first detected on Earth, arriving around 1 a.m. EST (0600 GMT) on Wednesday.

The second blast from the sun was moving even faster than the first one did, and some particles from the first linger even as the second onslaught continues, Kohl said in a telephone interview. While such solar storms do not directly endanger humans, the charged particles can play havoc with electric grids, satellites and other equipment. They can also create spectacular displays of the northern and southern lights. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), which runs the US early warning centre for such solar events, said that Wednesday's storm prompted a report that northern lights had been seen as far south as El Paso. Life expectancy increases in France

PARIS, 1 Nov— The life expectancy in France increased by 2 years to 75.6 for men and 1 year to 82.8 for women from 1994 to 2002, said the country's state statistics bureau INSEE in a report published Thursday.

The life expectancy has been increasing more for men than for women in past years, said INSEE in its report "Social Portrait of France".

"But with a difference of 7.2 years, the gap of longevity between French men and French women is the largest in European countries," said the INSEE.

US Senate faults White House over Iraq documents

WASHINGTON, 1 Nov — The Republican chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee singled out the White House for failing to meet a noon (1700 GMT) deadline on Friday to turn over documents about intelligence on Iraq's weapons of mass destruction used to justify the US invasion.

But Senator Pat Roberts of Kansas said the CIA and State Department had provided a "good faith response" and the committee expected to receive "a quantity of documents" from both agencies by the end of the day.

"The White House has not met today's deadline. I am hopeful that the White House will recognize the importance of the committee's efforts and comply as soon as possible," Roberts said in a statement.

The Senate Intelligence Committee this week sent letters to top administration officials demanding documents be turned over and interviews with officials be scheduled by the deadline.

Congressional officials said that step was intended to prod the administration to provide information the panel had requested as long as five months ago for its review of the quality of US intelligence on Iraq leading up to the war.

At this point more drastic steps such as subpoenas were not being considered, but Senator John Rockefeller said if the response was lacking he would be prepared to take such action.

"We're not kidding around on this," the West Virginia Democrat told Reuters. Setting the deadline was "meant to be a very strong signal to them that we're tired of waiting. This is the nation's business, there is a lot at stake," he said.—MNA/Reuters

US special force soldier killed in Afghanistan

KABUL, 1 Nov — A US special force soldier has died of wounds suffered in a clash in volatile southern Afghanistan, a US military statement said on Friday, the third death involving US servicemen in less than a week.

The clash between US-led special operation forces and their Afghan allies and "a 10 to 15-member anti coalition element" took place on Thursday in an area about 35 miles west of the district of Deh Rawood in the province of Uruzgan.

"The US special operations soldier died from wounds received in combat," said the statement sent from Bagram, the hub of USled forces in Afghansitan, to the north of Kabul.

About 11,500 US-led forces are hunting remnants of the deposed Taleban, their al-Qaeda allies and followers of faction leader Gulbuddin Hekmatyar who have declared a 'jihad' or holy war against foreign troops in Afghanistan and US-backed President Hamid Karzai's government.

Expert says chances of containing SARS much improved

PARIS, 1 Nov—The chances of containing a new outbreak of SARS early are now much greater than last year due to improved alert systems, the director of the US Centres for Disease Control and Prevention said on Thursday.

Julie Gerberding said it would be possible to contain outbreaks of the severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS), which infected some 8,500 people and killed more than 700 in the past year. Success depended on a quick response, she said.

"We have a lot better chance of containing the virus early this time than we did when it arose last fall," she told reporters during a health conference in Paris.

"But it requires all global health care systems to act in a collaborative, fast way if the problem should appear again."

She said better alert systems to report early any possible SARS cases were already emerging in places such as China, where the disease first emerged in November last year. The World Health Organization declared the SARS outbreak over in July but said this month it was bracing for another outbreak this winter and was forming a rapid reaction centre at its Geneva headquarters.

The flu-like disease is caused by a virus from a family known as coronaviruses. They cause diseases in livestock and some cases of the common cold in people.

"It would be naive to believe that we will never see the coronavirus again affecting human beings," Gerberding said. Scientists needed to find a rapid diagnostic test to identify SARS, she said, adding that no convincing treatment regime had yet been found and it was still not clear where exactly the virus had come from.— MNA/Reuters

Barshefsky says US economy still faces many difficulties

WASHINGTON, 1 Nov—Former US Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky said that the US economy is still facing many difficulties although it is increasing at a strong pace.

"I'm not sure how the US economy will end up this year and the prediction now is very, very widely," Barshefsky told Xinhua in an interview earlier this week. She is going to take part in the annual meeting of the Boao Forum for Asia to be held in Hainan Province, China. early next month.

She said that the consensus is that the US economic growth will continue and is generally strengthening. However, "it is less clear now what the job picture is going to look like."

About 80 per cent of job dislocation in the United States "is the result of technology, not trade, not anymcreasing at a strong pace. thing else", she said. "It is the result of productivity enhancing measures taken by businesses, largely in the wake of very high information technology expenditures made by business several years ago."

She also said that the pretty significant overcapacity in a number of commodity products was still a problem in the US economy. It kept prices of some products, including the steel, at too low and posed a challenge of deflation. Meanwhile, the twin huge deficits — the federal deficit and the trade deficit are also difficulties facing the US economy, she said.

Chinese, Italian PMs vow to deepen cooperation

BEIING, 1Nov—Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao and Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi Friday pledged to expand the cooperation in diversified fields between China and Italy.

During the talks the two leaders held Friday morning, Wen made three proposals for this purpose. He said both sides should keep the frequent exchange of high-level visits and strengthen bilateral dialogue and consultation as well as the coordination within the United Nations and other international organizations.

Both sides should further tap the potential to expand trade and economic cooperation, promote cooperation between their small- and medium-sized enterprises, and strive to explore new fields, he said.

Wen said the two countries should strengthen the exchange and cooperation in the judicial field, culture and education, science and technology, environmental protection and tourism.

Berlusconi said Italy values the positive role China plays in the international arena, and is willing to deepen friendship He said Europe-China ties have entered a new stage and there are brilliant prospects for cooperation between Italy and China. According to Wen, Italy has become China's fourth trading partner among European Union nations, and China's trade with Italy is expected to surpass 10 billion US dollars this year.

After their talks, the two leaders attended a ceremony witnessing the signing of a memorandum between the two governments on the establishment of cultural centres in both countries.

Prior to the talks, Wen hosted a grand ceremony in honour of Berlusconi, who is here for an official visit.

Berlusconi attended the sixth China-EU leaders' meeting which was held Thursday in Beijing.

Border area development (Shan region)

Upstream the Thanlwin

When I asked my fellow staff of the Border Area Special Administration group (Homein) to accompany me on my visit to the Homein graveyard, they all refused.

When, I was transferred from the military to the civilian duties, I had to hand over all my military gear to the Tatmadaw. But my conviction, belief and discipline still firmly attached to my mind. A soldier needs to do anything after studying it from four different angles. For example. I had heard that U Moe Hein of SURA passed away at the border and that Sai Lake (Kalah) too died there. Then, a thought came into my mind - when and where they were buried? I had heard that U Moe Hein died at Panmaikson and was entombed at Peinlon. There was a two-storey red house in Homein, where Sai Lake once lived. I rented a motorcycle, went to the graveyard, and looked around the cemetery and there I found the tomb of Sai Lake. It was rather large. I was able to see and study the graveyard as I wished. But one thing I didn't know then was that the owner of the motorcycle I had rented was the niece of Sai Lake.

I was thinking about my friends of SSA peace group who had returned to the legal fold - U Moe Hein who died in Peinlon, Sai Lake, who died in Homein and U Naw Mein, U San Mai and U Kauk Tai, who were in the MTA. There, I came to remember the question of whether to break away or remain united among the SSA, the SURA and the BCP. The multi-coloured insurgency broke out due to the evil instigation of the colonialists. And the number of insurgent bands under various names increased in Kachin, Kayah, Pa-O and Shan regions because of the penetration and domination of the BCP in the areas and the plan No 7510 of the BCP central committee laid down in October 1975.

Another person came into my mine later. He was former chairman of the SSPP Sai Hla Aung who came back to the legal fold at Monai region on 20 July 1983. I wrote in one of my articles about a play - The truth of the Maw land. The play was about Sai Hla Aung.

I found some of the periods before 1973 interesting. During the period, the SSA was under the BCP domination. Because of the BCP, Homein broke away from SSA in 1969, and SURA came into existence. Two Palaung battalions broke away from SSA in 1968, and were active in the surrounding areas of Kyaukse. In the early 1965, SSIA and SNURF merged into SSA. I do not want to go back to the past much.

Strange little town

As Tangyan was just a small town, I often called it a palm-size town. For me, it was also a strange little town. I could inquire about Bo Maung, who once seized the little town for a very short period, as his children and grandchildren were living there. I could also study about U Khun Sa's biography and history of the MTA at the town. The town could tell me about the Kuomintang intrusion, citing Lwehse mountain range as the witness. It also had connections with the history of the BCP and that of the SSA.

Although it had only four or five wards, it had all the characteristics of a town. There were monasteries. pagodas, schools, a hospital, a market, a park and government offices in the town. But there were no trunk lines and television. Most walked from one place to another as the town was not wide enough to travel in a car. I had found only three cars in the town. They were two Mazda Jeeps of the Tactical Operations Commander and CO and one Willys Jeep of Township Peace and Development Council Chairman. A cinema hall in the town was just a showcase. However, it was so wonderful that many people including myself found it joyful to live in the little town which did not have anything to speak of.

Memorable 7th mile

Till I arrived at Tangyan, there was only one battalion stationed in it. The officers who were assigned duties at the battalion during the period from the end of 1987 to early 1988 were Maj Soe Lwin, Maj Kyaw Hsan, Maj Thein Soe, Maj Htin Aung Myint, Maj Soe Hlaing, Ko Chit Oo, myself, and Aung Naing Oo. The then commanding officer of the battalion was Lt-Col Tin Aye. He is now the chairman of the Myaungmya District Peace and Development Council. The area the battalion had to control was wide, and some areas were linking with the places where battalions and units of the No 77 Light Infantry Division were stationed. Mostly we were encountering with BCP, SSA, MTA. We had already been engaged in a fire fight with the SSA when our columns entered Mongkai, Panketu and Tonlaw. Under the arrangement of the Military Command, the company under the command of Maj Thein Soe was reinforced with men and weapons to penetrate the enemy lines. Thus, Tangyan region became noisy with the sound of guns and bombs. "Tangyan becomes noisy only after Maj Thein Soe has arrived," said the Command Commander and Tactical Operation Commander. Sometimes, the Tatmadaw members do want to live in a quiet place. But there are times that they can eat and sleep well only when they have to fight with the enemy. During the time, the No 1 SSA brigade led by U Pan Pha was active in the Tangyan region.

Efficient use of electricity

- Use daylight as the main source of light
- Use the least possible amount of electricity only if there is not enough natural light
- Use the least possible amount of electricity required in production and service enterprises
- Preventing waste of electricity benefits the user and others

There are about 500,000 households using electricity in Yangon. Thus, saving a four-foot fluorescent lamp every day by each household amounts to saving power that is equal to the capacity a 20-megawatt power station can supply.

Efficient use of fuel

- Saving one gallon of fuel per car per month will save the nation one US dollar taken with added momentum for raising the education standard of rural people, mounting literary campaigns, and enhancing the reading power of literate persons in rural areas.

If constant producing of highly-qualified human resources can be combined harmoniously with promotion of the education standard of the entire people, the national goal - building a peaceful, modern and developed nation-can be accomplished in a short time. Being convinced that strong economy and literacy for all is of paramount importance for building up a modern developed democratic nation, the government has been realizing short-term economic projects and at the same time establishing good foundations in education sector, he noted.

He called on the teachers to make endeavours with a wide view of national outlook for speeding up the development momentum in the education sector both quantitatively and qualitatively. He again urged the teachers to properly guide and nurture the students to become ones, possessing nationalist spirit and patriotism, fully equipped with the conviction that they will strive for enabling the nation and the people to stand tall and to keep abreast with the world nations, and the concept that they will defend and safeguard the Union for its perpetuation through national solidarity

Now, for the development of the nation, a great deal of buildings on economic, social and transport sectors have been constructed with own investments and technologies the length and breadth of the country. Indeed, it is the result of correct policies of the State and united cooperation of the State, the people and the Tatmadaw.

Human resources play a key role in building up of a modern nation fully utilizing the already-constructed basic foundations. Only when there are a sufficient number of intellectuals and intelligentsia, will a modern nation be built, he remarked.

Now, all States and Divisions have indicated mass rallies to support the State's seven-point roadmap on building up a democracy flourishing nation as the entire people's policies.

There is an interrelation among political, economic and social sectors. So, at a time when the State's future programmes are being implemented, peace and tranquillity are to have been restored and the nation must be economically strong. Moreover, in the process, it needs to produce more intellectuals and intelligentsia. The education sector also plays an important role in implementing the State's future policies, and so the teachers will have to be involved in the affairs of the State.

In conclusion, the Secretary-2 called on the trainees to try hard in the lectures throughout the term of the course to be able to make a vast view on the aims and essence of the national education promotion plans and to participate in the tasks for building up a new nation.

Before the opening ceremony, Rector of the CICS (Upper Myanmar) Col Aung Hsan Win reported on matters related to conducting the courses at the institute, tasks for greening of the institute.

Prime Minister attends dinner ...

(from page 16) Education, he said, is the sole and most important sector that can enhance the standard of the nation in the 21st century. The world is now facing with the rapid changes due to the development of technology. So efforts are being made to acquire highlyqualified human resources and to change Myanmar society into a learning society capable of facing and solving various kinds of changes and challenges He said education opportunities have been opened to enable Myanmar society to become an education-dominated society. The government reduced education limits and opened more schools, universities and colleges, and conducted under-graduate, post-graduate diploma, master degrees and doctorate degrees courses including MBA course. In the past, one could obtain such degree in a foreign country spending a large amount of money. Now, one can get MBA degree in the country at ease and it is beneficial to both graduates and the state, he added.

The minister said the MBA course was first conducted in Yangon Institute of Economics in 1995. Everyone who is qualified can take the course. Beginning 2002-2003 academic year, evening MBA course was opened. Yangon Institute of Economics produced 323 MBA graduates including 57 from the present course.

In upper Myanmar, Monywa Institute of Economics opened MBA course in April 2000 and it produced 45 MBA graduates. The number of MBA graduates and economic management experts has increased day after day and it is seen that they work in government departments, local and foreign companies, banks and economic enterprises as managers. Some run their own business, he said.

He said their efforts made at the various economic sectors contribute towards the stronger national economic life of the State. The government firmly believes that development of the nation relies on expertise of Myanmar citizens, efforts and efficiency in keeping with the international communities.

In conclusion, he urged the graduates to strive for national development making use of economic management for continued buildup of economic foundations and systematic development of national economic life.

Next, Rector of Yangon Institute of Economics U Kan Zaw spoke. On behalf of MBA graduates, Ma Su Nyan Lin spoke words of thanks. The guests enjoyed dinner together with the graduates.

NEWS OF THE WORLD China has no plans to change the current retirement age

BELIING, 1 Nov— Although some representatives have raised bills to change the different retirement ages for men and women, China's top legislature has no plans to make legislation regarding this issue, say sources with China's National People's Congress (NPC).

The Internal and Judicial Affairs Committee of the tenth NPC decided not to address the legislation regarding this issue, said its chairman He Chunlin, who was at the fifth meeting of the tenth NPC Standing Committee to elaborate the proposal to top legislators

In the first session of the tenth NPC this March, more than 100 representatives raised four proposals calling for the same retirement ages for men and women.

According to current government rules, professional women working for government institutions and companies are required to retire at 55 while men retire at 60, and female blue-collar workers quit work at 50 while men retire at 55.

The difference in retirement age sometimes stops women from enjoying equal rights, especially for women with high education working in government institutions. With the development of Chinese society, more women have developed their own careers and do not want to retire earlier than men

But there are still many women earning low wages in backward areas who are reluctant to retire at the same age as men, because they can earn almost as much after retirement

Because all walks of society in different areas have different ideas on retirement ages, the Committee thought it was not time to make legislation to change the current policy said He

NEW YORK, 1 Nov- Cell phone users have been known to complain about poor service, but one New York man's mobile literary went down the toilet.

The man was on a suburban train from Grand Central Station on Wednesday night when he went to the bathroom to make a phone call, dropped the phone into the toilet bowl and then his hand and arm became stuck trying to retrieve it, officials said.

Metro-North Railroad staff could not help the man, so they stopped the train and called police officers and firefighters to extricate him, a process that took 90 minutes using "jaws of life" rescue equipment.

The toilets are made of aluminum so I imagine he was down on hands and knees with his shirt rolled up and hand and arm down inside, trying to flush out his cell phone," said Jim Cameron of the Connecticut Metro-North commuter council.

He said that because of the design of the train toilet, the mobile probably ended up in a chemical holding tank

A spokesman for the railroad that serves the northern suburbs of New York and Connecticut identified the man as Edwin Gallard, 41, of New York, who suffered a minor injury to his arm as firefighters cut the toilet apart.

The track was closed and thousands of commuters were delayed during the evening rush hour. The phone has not yet been recovered.

Marseille appeal against FIFA ruling on Barthez

MARSEILLE (France), 1 Nov - Olympique Marseille have appealed against FIFA's refusal to allow the loan of French international goalkeeper Fabien Barthez from Manchester United, the club said on its website on Friday. FIFA disallowed the much-publicized move after deciding they could not make an exception by allowing a player to move outside the transfer window which reopens in January.

'Olympique Marseille have decided to appeal to FIFA's executive committee after the decision to reject the qualification of Fabien Barthez by the players committee revealed by the media on Friday", Marseille said in a statement. The appeal has been handed to the French Soccer Federation (FFF) who will in turn pass it over to FIFA.

Marseille said that as a result, Barthez, who has not played a match for United this season, would remain in Marseille and train with the squad pending a decision on the appeal.

"After considering returning to England, Fabien Barthez, in full agreement with Manchester United and Olympique Marseille, will continue to train with the Marseille squad until a decision is made on the appeal," Marseille said. Marseille had asked permission to sign Barthez because their second-choice goalkeeper Cedric Carasso injured his knee in a charity match earlier this month and will be out for the rest of the season. - MNA/Reuters

Shotputters may tread same ground as ancient Olympians

ATHENS, 1 Nov- Athens Olympics organizers said on Friday they not only hoped to hold the shotput event in the birthplace of the Olympics but also in the same stadium where athletes first competed in 776 BC.

We are looking into the added value of these Games," Culture Minister Evangelos Venizelos, the governement's top Olympics official said. "The proposal is for the shotput event to be staged inside the ancient stadium of Olympia.

Officials have been thrashing out the fine details of moving the event out of the capital and into the sleepy southwestern town for some time now before presenting the plan to the International Olympic Committee for rubberstamping.

"There will be no addition to this stadium, its archaelological value will be respected," he told reporters. He said the nearby grounds of the International Olympic Academy will be the athletes' base during the competition at a site where the games were first held.

"The conditions of the event will be almost the same with those of the ancient sport," Venizelos said.

Athens Games organizers will consult the International Amateur Athletics Federation in Monte Carlo next week before submitting their plan to the IOC.

If the move is sanctioned, it will be the only event -to take place outside of Athens.

When the Greek capital was awarded the Games, a main condition was that all events take place within the capital city

Nestled among lush olive groves and Cypress trees, Olympia, about a three hours' drive from Athens, nowadays is a far cry from the bustling ancient Greek sports capital which was the site of the first Games.

The sleepy town, with its spectacular ancient Olympic stadium, track and temples, might have expected a starring role in the proceedings.

But no such role had been offered until now, angering Olympians.

There is nothing happening in Olympia ahead of or during the 2004 Olympics," Olympia mayor Yannis Skoularikis told Reuters earlier this year. - MNA/Reuters nine games on Thursday following the ugly scenes in their 0-0 draw at Manchester United on September 21.

Wenger feels the punishment was severe but told reporters: "I am sure that there are also many people who are not happy because they feel we should have been punished more, but I don't think it could have been much worse

"But even if they hang us, some people will want us hanged twice and at Hyde Park in front of the whole country

Arsenal's Lauren was suspended for four games and fellow defender Martin Keown for three. Midfielders Patrick Vieira and Ray Parlour were banned for one game. The four, together with defender Ashley Cole, were also fined a combined total of 100,000 pounds.

"I accept that we did not behave in the way we would like for five seconds at Old Trafford, but it really was only for five seconds and I am proud to be the manager of these players," Wenger told reporters.

"We have been punished and now we want to try and leave it behind us and concentrate on winning games.

Arsenal are now considering whether to appeal, although Wenger hinted that such a move was unlikely. "I have a problem with both the fines and the suspensions and we are considering our right of appeal," Wenger said.

"However, we have to think about the negatives because if we appeal then people will still be talking about this and we want to try and put it behind us.

"Also, we don't know if the punishment will be decreased or increased on appeal. This has been a distraction and if players are not concentrated on the game then it can be a big handicap." None of the suspensions come into force until November 17, although Vieira and Keown are injured and will miss Saturday's trip to Leeds. MNA/Reuters
