In the best interest of the people

The government has laid down short-term five-year plans and is implementing them and this year is the second of the fourth five-year plan.

In 2006-2007 fiscal year, the first year of the five-year plan, performance in the agricultural, industrial and service sectors improved.

In comparison with 1988, production of paddy increased two times, that of beans and pulses 11 times, that of oil crops three and half times, and that of fish and meat four times.

The volume of export and import services has risen year after year owing to the increased production of agricultural produce and industrial products. In 2002-2003, the volume of foreign trade was over US $ 5.3 billion beginning to show surplus and it reached over US $ 8 billion in 2006-2007.

Considering the increased volume of export every year, the merchants and entrepreneurs are allowed to import goods as they need. The government on its part encourages the development of Myanmar trade sector with a view to promoting the skills of the national entrepreneurs in trading that Myanmar products can penetrate the foreign markets.

The entrepreneurs are urged to better serve the national interest through the export of quality products and import of quality goods.

US and UK

'no longer inseparable'

LONDON, 14 July—One of Gordon Brown's new ministers has said the UK and the United States would no longer be "joined at the hip" on foreign policy.

Lord Mark Malloch Brown told the Daily Telegraph it was time for a more "impartial" foreign policy and to build relationships with European leaders.

Some analysts may consider the Foreign Office minister's remarks evidence of Labour distancing itself from the US.

Earlier, Downing Street denied another minister had criticised the US.

International Development Secretary Douglas Alexander warned in a speech against unilateralism and called for an "internationalist approach" to global problems.

Lord Malloch Brown's newspaper interview was his first since being appointed Foreign Office minister.—Internet

Chinese firm sues Google over name

BEIJING, 15 July — Google Inc is being sued in China by a Beijing company that claims the owner of the world's most popular Internet search engine is using the Chinese business's name.

"We want Google to change their commercial name, and are not suing for any damages," Tian Yunshan, company secretary for Beijing Guge Science and Technology Co, told Bloomberg News in an telephone interview yesterday. The case against Google's Chinese unit has been accepted by a Haidian district court in Beijing on 29 June, he said.

Mountain View, California-based Google said in April 2006 that its China unit would change its name to "Gu Ge" which means "harvesting song" in Chinese, to attract more users in the world's second-biggest online market.

General says US could draw down in north Iraq next year

WASHINGTON, 14 July—The United States could begin withdrawing troops from northern Iraq in January, the commander of US forces for the region said on Friday, as pressure mounts on the Bush Administration to end the war. Army Major-General Benjamin Mixon said a drawdown could take place over 12 to 18 months if US and Iraqi forces continued to make progress in establishing security in his area. But he cautioned against any reduction of forces in northern Iraq this year.

"I think that over time in a very methodical and well thought-out way—and I'm only speaking for Multinational Division North—that we could have a reduction of force that could begin in January of 2008," Mixon said.

Mixon's area of responsibility includes Iraqi cities such as Kirkuk, Tikrit and Mosul as well as the volatile province of Diyala, the scene of a major US military operation in recent weeks against the militant group al-Qaeda in Iraq.

Speaking by videolink from Iraq to reporters at the Pentagon, Mixon said he had about five or six brigades under his command and that number could be cut in half over 18 months if security improved and Iraqi forces became more capable.

Strong typhoon hammers southern Japan

SYDNEY, 15 July—A powerful typhoon has lashed Japan's southern main island of Kyushu, forcing thousands to flee their homes and killing two people, reportedly including an 11-year-old boy. Forecasters said Typhoon Man-yi, the worst storm to hit Japan since records began in 1951, would continue to wreak havoc as it moved north-east towards Tokyo and Osaka on the main island of Honshu.

The young boy and a 76-year-old man were reported dead after the typhoon made landfall on southern Kagoshima prefecture Saturday, and two others have been reported missing.

The elderly man was found unconscious after apparently falling into an irrigation ditch, while 11-year-old Keita Kamimura drowned after falling into a river.

"He apparently fell in the river as he tried to retrieve a ball, while playing with a cousin," a local police officer said.

The Japanese weather agency warned of torrential rain, forecasting up to 80 millimetres per hour pounding almost all of Kagoshima prefecture.

The typhoon, which packed winds of up to 216 kilometres per hour and made landfall on the Osumi peninsula of southern Kyushu, was expected to move along the Pacific coast of the archipelago towards the Tokyo region.

The Japan Meteorological Agency forecast Man-yi would arrive in the Tokyo region on Sunday, warning of torrential rain, flooding and landslides.

Bush admits administration officials leaked identity of CIA agent

WASHINGTON, 14 July — US President George W Bush admitted publicly on Thursday that administration officials might have leaked the identity of a covert Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) agent. “I’m aware of the fact that perhaps somebody in the administration did disclose the name of that person,” Bush said at a news conference.

“I’ve often thought about what would have happened if that person had come forth and said, ‘I did it.’ Would we have had this endless hours of investigation and a lot of money being spent on this matter?” he said of the CIA leak case.

The leak case started in the summer of 2003, when the identity of Valerie Plame Wilson, then a secret CIA operative, was disclosed in a newspaper column, days after her husband, Joseph Wilson, a former diplomat, criticized the Bush Administration for “twisting” intelligence to justify the Iraq war.

Wilson had said administration officials leaked Plame’s identity to retaliate for his public criticism of the President’s rationale for war.

The disclosure set off a chain of events that culminated in the appointment of special prosecutor Patrick J Fitzgerald and a grand jury’s indictment of I Lewis “Scooter” Libby, Vice-President Dick Cheney’s former chief of staff, for lying to investigators about his own conversations with reporters regarding Plame. US forces kill six Iraqi police in Baghdad raid BAGHDAD, 14 July — US soldiers killed at least six Iraqi policemen and seven suspected militants during a dawn raid in east Baghdad on Friday to arrest an Iraqi police lieutenant accused of militant links, the US military said.

India launches first open sea cage

NEW DELHI, 14 July — India has set up its first open sea cage in the near-shore sea off the south Indian city of Vishakhapatnam for culturing of Asian Sea Bass, the Indian Agriculture Ministry said Thursday.

The sea cage is expected to attract entrepreneurship development and market and open up a new era in the development of marine fisheries and mariculture in India.

The cage has been designed, fabricated and installed indigenously. The cage net is stocked with about 6,000 fingerlings of the highly priced sea bass, which are fed twice daily. A production of two tons of fish is anticipated within four to five months of grow out period from the cage.

ROK trade with China to top $200b in 2012

JINAN, 15 July — The Republic of Korea's Ambassador to China Kim Ha Joong said his country's trade with China will top 200 billion US dollars by 2012, when the two countries will celebrate 20 years of establishing diplomatic relations.

The ROK and China have maintained close cooperation in political, economic, trade and cultural sectors since they forged ties in 1992, Kim said at the China (Shandong)-ROK Friendly Week in Jinan, capital of coastal Shandong Province.

Bilateral trade, he said, has soared from an annual five billion US dollars in the early 1990s to 134.3 billion US dollars last year.

China is the ROK's largest trading partner and investment destination, he said.

By the end of last year, ROK businesses had invested nearly 35 billion US dollars in China. ROK's electronics giant Samsung alone had invested more than five billion dollars.

Shandong Province is a key destination for ROK investment with many Korean-funded companies located in Jinan, Qingdao, Yantai and Weihai.

Closer exchanges in recent years have caused a craze among Chinese for ROK barbecues, clothing, cosmetics and soap operas.

Emergence of the State constitution, the national duty

Kyaw Soe (Kyaikmaraw)

The sovereignty of national people resides in the State constitution. The State sovereignty derives from the people. In this regard, the existence of the soul of the State sovereignty depends on the State constitution. The three sovereign powers of the State enumerated in the State constitution are to be adopted according to the wishes of the people. This reflects the sovereignty of the people.

After regaining independence, the Union of Myanmar became the Republic of Myanmar under the 1947 constitution, and the Socialist Republic of the Union of Myanmar under the 1974 constitution. Both the 1947 constitution and 1974 constitution featured the foundation of democracy that the people vested the powers in the representatives they had elected in accordance with the State constitution. It is also said that the State constitution is drawn by the people and vested in the people.

In fact, the people's government system, which is the nature of democracy, is practised by the people for the people, is very good practice of social relations. Therefore it is said that democracy is not to be publicised but it is put into practice. In other words, it is a code of conduct and a technique; it is not a goal. It is a vehicle to be used for realization of a goal. It will be safeguarded with the sense of duty by the leaders. The people are responsible for safeguarding it with awareness. By doing so, they will enjoy the results of democracy which they deserve.

However, the parliamentary democracy period ended together with the 1947 constitution after 14 years from 1948 to 1962. Likewise, the 1974 Constitution and socialist democracy period came to an end after 14 years from 1974 to 1988. We should take lessons from these incidents.

The government organizations led by the State failed to prescribe the law of amendment concerning the weaknesses of the constitution in conformity with the situations in those days. They applied the constitution to gain power as they wished without abiding by the provisions of the existing constitution. These are the causes of the end of the constitutions.

For example, In 1958, the ruling AFPFL government split into two. Clean AFPFL government led by U Nu formed the Cabinet with over eight more votes in the Pyithu Hluttaw. According to the Article 125 (1) of the constitution, the Government shall prepare estimates of receipts and estimates of expenditure of the Union for each financial year, and shall present them to the Chamber of Deputies for consideration and approval. However, Clean AFPFL government dissolved the Chamber of Deputies and approved the State budget by the ordinance of the President. The reason for securing such approval was that the government might have to step down if the motion on the budget lost. That was why Clean AFPFL government dissolved the Chamber of Deputies and promulgated the State Budget by the ordinance of the president. The opposition Swe-Nyein AFPFL criticized that Clean AFPFL government violated the traditions of parliamentary democracy and assumed the constitution to be just a paper for gaining power. Moreover, in the constitution it was stated, every State shall have the right to secede from the Union after ten years. Sticking to these provisions, Shan Sawbwa feudalists and extremist national political parties that would not wish to relinquish their powers demanded the secession of Shan State from the Union. They also made a plot to break up the Union by joining the South East Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO). It was the weak point of the 1947 Constitution. According to the article 21/1 of that constitution, the Pa-ha-sa (Union) government substituted the expression, the State recognizes the special position of Buddhism as the faith professed by the great majority of the citizens of the Union, with the expression, Buddhism is the State religion as it was professed by the great majority of the citizens. They applied the religion for political purpose. As a result, racial and religious conflicts occurred and they harmed the national solidarity.

Although the 1974 Constitution was adopted through a referendum it was drafted by the Lanzin party in line with the single party system. This is the main weak point. Moreover, in exercise of the executive, administrative and legislative powers under the Constitution to be in line with the provisions, some party members themselves were meddling in such affairs and this was like breaching the Constitution. And the prohibition of those who were not party members from standing for election in order to discharge the State duties although the provisions stated that anyone who is a party member or not has the right to stand for election if he meets the prescribed qualification is against the Constitution and amounts to total disregard of the rights of a citizen.

The worst of it was that partiality and wielding of influence in the sharing of organizing and administrative powers among the township party units of Lanzin party that was adopted by the State constitution as a sole leading political party of the State. Consequently, there had emerged rivalries among parties and the trust and support of the people eroded. In the meantime, banknotes were demonetized three times in order to freeze black money in the hands of unscrupulous businessmen and insurgents. The move was a great blow to both unscrupulous businessmen and insurgents as well as the people including those who live from hand to mouth and the needy.

One of the reasons that caused such incidents is the weakness of those who did not practise rules and regulations in accordance with the provisions of the State constitution. The society and the system built on such faulty and defective laws could not exist.

Having reviewed the weaknesses of the 1947 constitution and the 1974 constitution and that of the world constitutions, the Tatmadaw government is making all-out efforts for the writing of a new State constitution, drawing lessons from the prevailing and past political, economic and social conditions of the State.

The 1947 Constitution was drafted by 111 persons in 108 days under the colonial rule. As the 1947 Constitution had to be drawn under the British government by a handful of people in a short period of time based on the wishes to regain independence as soon as possible and with the desires of the entire national people to march forward in unison believing that they would be able to foster trust and understanding among them in ten years, it hadn't become a complete and enduring constitution. In addition, the inclusion of only four states under the Constitution had caused mistrust and suspicion among some national races that Bamars were trying to influence others. Those mistrust and suspicion had turned out to be the best opportunity for colonialists to sow discord and dissension among national races.

Drafting of the constitution is a task of national concern. This task cannot be undertaken through discussion with a party organization or an individual. If a party or an individual believes otherwise, that party or individual may be out of mind under the influence of the strong wish to grab power.

The NC reflects the wishes of the people and the entire nation. It carries national essence. It undertakes the nation-building task, a noble one. The delegates, representing the political parties, national races, different strata, rich and poor, regardless of social status and religious faith, are laying the foundation for a new nation for the future after due coordination and consultation in unity and togetherness. This is national political development required by the historical trend of Myanmar; no one can hinder or oppose the process. If an individual or a party tries to do so, the person or the party will be documented as a culprit in the history of the nation.

Emergence of the State constitution, the national duty

In consequence, armed insurgencies of some national race groups erupted. Feudal Sawbwas fearing to relinquish their powers and privileges in collusion with extremist political parties of national races and foreign spy organizations forcibly demanded the federal principle. The Union was on the brink of collapse as secret operations were launched. And as a result, the 1947 constitution became null and void.

Similarly, the 1974 constitution came into being when one party system was in practice. After commissions at central, state/division, township and ward levels had been formed, public opinion was sought to draw the first and second drafts of the constitution. Then the constitution became effective after a national referendum was held in 1974.

However, it is the undeniable fact that when the 1988 disturbances occurred, that constitution also became null and void as it could not protect the public interest in practical daily life. If a constitution failed to serve and protect the interests of the State and the people, the following measures would have to be taken:

- (a) A new constitution shall have to be drawn in democratic way by calling a new Hluttaw or referendum.
- (b) When the State's administrative machinery breaks down due to civil unrest, new administrative machinery is usually adopted by the people.
- (c) There were the times when national forces like the Tatmadaw that were responsible for national security and defence had to take over State responsibility when the nation's situation deteriorated.

The above-mentioned incidents happened not only in Myanmar but also in other parts of the world. And these are indeed a natural phenomenon.

The Tatmadaw had to take over State power for two times — the first on 2 March 1962 and the second on 18 September 1988. Reviewing that, the Tatmadaw government believed that an enduring constitution was necessary as it did not want to intervene any more.

That was why the government convened the National Convention on 9 January 1993 after inviting delegate groups of political parties, representatives-elect, national races, workers, peasants, intellectuals and intelligence, State service personnel and other invited guests. During the period from 1993 to 1996 the National Convention was held for six times and 104 basic principles and detailed basic principles regarding the seven chapters were laid down.

Nonetheless, the NLD party that started attending the National Convention in 1995 walked out by order of Daw Suu Kyi, who was already dismissed from the party as general secretary. This situation caused the National Convention to adjourn temporarily and a standstill in political progress. The NLD turned its back on the National Convention in disregard of national cause and national interest but in favour of party interest while following the wishes of an individual and the colonialist bloc.

Be that as it may, the Tatmadaw government has not lost sight of the transition to democracy desired by the people although the NLD veered off the democratic process. With a view to serving the interests of the nation and the people, the Tatmadaw government reconvened a session of the National Convention from 17 May 2004 to 9 July 2004. A total of 1086 delegates representing political parties, representatives-elect, national races, peasants, State service personnel, the 17 national race armed groups that had returned to the legal fold, and other organizations attended and took part in the discussions. The delegates discussed and gave suggestions on the detailed basic principles concerning legislation on the power sharing in 11 sectors and five other matters. They compiled group-wise papers and submitted them to the National Convention.

The NC resumed on 17 February 2005 and laid down the detailed basic principles of the above-mentioned 11 sectors and five other matters.

The fourth session of the National Convention convened from 10 October 2006 to 29 December 2006 adopted the detailed basic principles on the legislative matters of the Union Hluttaw and Region/State Hluttaws plus that on the Tatmadaw and the citizens and fundamental rights of the citizens.

The NC is due to resume on 18 July 2007. As it will be the final session, we can say that it is within reach of completion of the drafting of the State constitution.

This has been the result of the leadership of the Tatmadaw government to organize the National Convention and solicit the wishes of the delegates to frame the constitution. In other words, the Tatmadaw government organized the NC to serve as a forum of the entire nation. In fact, this is a step taken to seek the opinions and attitude of the entire mass of the people.

Drafting of the constitution is a task of national concern. This task cannot be undertaken through discussion with a party organization or an individual. If a party or an individual believes otherwise, that party or individual may be out of mind under the influence of the strong wish to grab power.

The peaceful, modern, developed and discipline-flourishing new democratic nation is the national goal. To realize the goal, the seven-step Road Map has been laid and the National Convention is in session as the first step.

The National Convention will surely build a future state that will shape the people's socio-economic environment guaranteeing discipline-flourishing social relations.

Successful convening of the National Convention is laying the foundation for the realization of one of the four political objectives calling for the building of a new modern developed nation in accord with the new State Constitution. Hence the entire mass of the people are urged to ward off and crush all the schemes such as political intrigues, racial discrimination and exercise of religious influence and mobilize the united and consolidated strength of mass of people in order to bring about successful completion of the National Convention and emergence of the State Constitution as a national task.

Russian strategic aircraft fire missiles in Arctic exercise

Moscow, 14 July — The Russian Air Force said on Thursday a group of four strategic missile aircraft achieved their objectives in a major Navy and Air Force exercise off Russia's Arctic coast. "Four Tu-22M3 strategic missile aircraft made over 20 sorties, firing air-to-surface missiles and successfully hitting their targets in the Barents Sea," Colonel Alexander Drobyshevsky, an Air Force spokesman, was quoted by the RIA Novosti news agency as saying.

He said the exercise involved only young pilots who had not earlier trained with live missiles.

The spokesman said NATO air surveillance activities increased in the area. "Right now, we see two to three Orions, or Atlantics, or RS-135s every day where we have normally detected only one such (surveillance) plane," Drobyshevsky said.

According to the Defence Ministry, the Tu-22M3 (NATO code name Backfire-C) is a strategic aircraft carrying one to three Kh-22M (NATO code name Kitchen) air-to-surface missiles with a range of up to 500 kilometres. — MNA/Xinhua

Annan says US more willing to work with other nations

KUALA LUMPUR, 14 July — The United States is now more willing to work with other nations to achieve its global aims than when it led an invasion of Iraq in 2003, former UN chief Kofi Annan, who opposed the move, said on Friday.

Relations between the United States and the United Nations deteriorated after the UN Security Council refused to endorse the invasion and Annan agreed with the Council.

Annan has described the failure to prevent the Iraq war as the worst moment of his 10 years as UN leader. The invasion led to a series of clashes with the administration of George W Bush over the appropriate role of the United Nations.

During a visit to Malaysia on Friday, Annan said it was important for the United States to work together with other member states of the United Nations to make the body as strong as possible.

"Let me say that the UN needs the US and the US needs the UN," Annan told reporters in the Malaysian capital, where he delivered a talk on development issues.

"There is no doubt about that, and I think that has become patently clear."

He added, "I sense a shift in Washington where even this administration is becoming more multi-lateral than it was two years ago, more multi-lateral than it was in 2003, before the war, and I suspect the next administration will continue this trend."

On Thursday, Bush put off changing course in Iraq for at least two months but the US House of Representatives signalled its frustration by calling for combat troops — now numbering about 158,500 — to leave by April.

An interim White House report released just before Bush spoke gave the Iraqi Government a mixed review in meeting political and security goals — providing more ammunition for war opponents demanding that Bush start ending US military involvement.

UN says border maps may mean Israel-Lebanon talks

JERUSALEM, 14 July — A UN survey of the disputed Shebaa Farms on the borders of Israel, Lebanon and Syria should be complete by September, paving the way to talks on the fate of the Israeli-controlled area, a UN envoy said on Thursday.

A UN cartographer under special envoy Michael Williams' supervision has been working on the area for more than six months, using documents and maps, some of which date back to the French colonial period from the 1920s to 1940s.

Williams said the cartographer's role was limited to mapping the area using both old maps and documents and a physical survey. But it was not meant to determine which state has sovereignty over the Shebaa Farms.

Syria and Lebanon say the roughly 40-square-kilometre (15-square-mile) patch is Lebanese. The United Nations has long held that the Shebaa Farms were inside Syrian territory that was occupied by Israeli forces in their 1967 war.

The Lebanese guerillas of Hizbollah, which fought a war with Israel a year ago, has said Israel's occupation of the Shebaa Farms is one reason for the group to keep its arms.

"The question of ownership and sovereignty is not something that the cartographer is specifically looking at," Williams told Reuters in an interview.

Villager killed in Thailand's deep south

BANGKOK, 14 July — Suspected insurgents killed a villager in another drive-by shooting in Thailand's restive southern province of Narathiwat Friday morning, according to local media.

The 48-year-old man was found dead next to his motorcycle on a road in Rangae District, Narathiwat. Police later identified the man as an assistant to a village headman of the Tanyonglimor subdistrict of Rangae, according to a report on the website of the newspaper Bangkok Post.

The victim was riding the motorcycle, with his wife on the back, to a rubber plantation when they were ambushed. He was shot several times while his wife fell off the vehicle and survived the attack.

The fresh attack happened a day after Thai Prime Minister Surayud Chulanont returned from a two-day visit to the deep south, during which the Premier maintained the government would use peaceful means to solve problems in the three southernmost provinces — Narathiwat, Pattani and Yala, where insurgent violence has been staged on a daily basis for months and killed over 2,300 people since it erupted in early 2004. — MNA/Xinhua

Rainforest World Music Fest begins in Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR, 14 July — The award-winning Rainforest World Music Festival (RWMF) launched its 10th anniversary edition at Malaysia's Sarawak Cultural Village on Friday, promising to deliver on stage splendid performances, exotic sounds and a colourful mixture of indigenous music from all continents. The RWMF, which started in 1998, has earned wide international acclaim for its cultural uniqueness.

The three-day festival starts with daytime mini shows and workshops which include interactive sessions, ethno musical lectures, and dance workshops while, in the evening, the festival would feature shows under a canopy of trees and the night sky. The evening show on Friday began with a performance by a band from Sarawak. Other bands to perform at the festival are from Canada, Zimbabwe, England, the United States, Britain, and Lebanon.

In view of the festival's 10th anniversary this year, the Sarawak Tourism Board (STB) has brought the best groups from the 130 that had performed here since the start of the festival in 1998 for a "reunion concert". Randy Raine-Reusch, who was actively involved in the running of the festival in 1998 when he came to Sarawak to look for ethnic musical instruments to add to his collection, said the festival had become a grand one following its humble start. — MNA/Xinhua

China develops home-grown electric vehicle engines

BEIJING, 15 July — China has developed its own electric vehicle engines after more than a decade's research, a scientist with the Chinese Academy of Sciences (CAS) announced here on Saturday.

China has proprietary intellectual property rights for the synchronous drive motors and the permanent magnet synchronous motors for electric vehicles, according to Wen Xuhui, top researcher of the electric vehicle project of CAS' Institute of Electrical Engineering.

"Some of the newly-developed motors have been used in electric vehicles produced by major Chinese automobile manufacturers," Wen said.

Four electric buses driven by alternating current motors are being piloted on Beijing's No 121 bus line ahead of the upcoming 2008 Olympics.

"A dozen or so electric buses will hit the road soon," Wen said.

Wen said the current motorization systems are principally for use in buses. "Electric cars have more demanding motor requirements."

Chinese scientists have worked out technological standards for the engine systems to guide development of the electric vehicles, according to Wen.

Scaled production of the environmentally-friendly hybrid vehicles, including the fuel-cell bus, the hybrid-electric bus and a bus that runs purely on electricity, has been listed as a key task in China's 11th Five-Year Programme from 2006 to 2010. — MNA/Xinhua

Melting ice drives mother polar bears to land

WASHINGTON, 14 July — Melting sea ice is driving mother polar bears onto dry land to give birth in northern Alaska, US Geological Survey scientists reported on Thursday.

They found that just 37 per cent of polar bear dens were built on sea ice between 1998 and 2004, compared to 62 per cent between 1985 and 1994.

"Right now, pregnant females foraging offshore in summer must wait up to a month longer than they did even 10 years ago for new sea ice to form so they can travel to denning areas on land," USGS researcher Steve Amstrup said in a statement.

"Alternatively, they must swim ever greater expances of open water to reach suitable land denning habitat or they must den on ice that may not be stable enough to survive the winter."

Eventually, the researchers predicted, the ice will freeze so late that bears will be stranded at sea too far away to reach land safely.

Pregnant polar bears must create dens to protect new cubs from the Arctic winter. Arctic seas are warming and the ice is melting as global temperatures rise.

Most Americans think Bush's "surge" strategy for Iraq a failure

WASHINGTON, 15 July — Nearly two-thirds of Americans believe that President George W Bush's troop "surge" strategy for Iraq has been a failure, at a time when the President was trying to rally support for the strategy, according to a new poll released by Newsweek on Friday.

The poll, conducted by Princeton Survey Research Associates International for the weekly magazine, also found broad public support for cutting the number of US troops deployed on the battlefield in Iraq. But less than 20 per cent favoured immediate withdrawal.

Sixty-eight per cent of those surveyed disapprove of the way the President is handling the war in Iraq, and the public approval of Bush's handling of Iraq has remained below the 30-per-cent mark since January, when he announced his plans to increase the number of troops deployed there.

Sixty-four per cent of Americans feel the surge in troops has been a failure, while 22 per cent deem it a success. Bush's overall approval rating is 29 per cent, up three points from a Newsweek poll earlier this month.

Out of four possible options in the poll, 19 per cent of the respondents chose immediate total withdrawal, 13 per cent do not want any cutbacks at all, and 24 per cent would implement a gradual withdrawal plan that would start in the fall and extend until the spring. Forty per cent favour keeping a substantial number of troops on the ground there, on the condition that they fall back to their bases and focus solely on training Iraqis and targeting al-Qaeda.

The poll was conducted with 1,003 adults on Wednesday and Thursday and has the overall margin of error at plus or minus four percentage points.
