Lest they may be left behind

It was found that the Tatmadaw government dealt with the situation in a patient way in order to ensure national reconsolidation at a time when the seven-step Road Map is in progress. However, Min Ko Naing and group holding negative view came to see the government as a weak one. Particularly, they became lost in the flattery of foreign media and diplomats and seemed to be conceited. Eventually, they were taken into custody and interrogated by authorities for sending a letter to the UN Secretary-General in favour of CRPP which announced a self-proclaimed road map opposing the ongoing National Convention and 92 NLD Hluttaw representatives-elect, and for getting involved in issuing declarations criticizing the NC and staging protests.

Extend cultivation of rubber

Increased manufacturing of products in industries like automobile in the world creates a tremendous demand for rubber.

Rubber is a raw material used mostly in the production of tyres and belts and other industries. Sale of furniture made of old rubber timber which produce less latex is a profitable industry commercially.

Rubber is grown most in Mon State. It is a fertile region for growing of rubber because of the favourable weather conditions.

Besides Mon State, extended cultivation of rubber is also undertaken on a commercial scale in Taninthayi Division and Kachin and Shan States.

Total cultivation acreage of rubber has increased up to over 700,000 in states and divisions in 2006-2007. Additional 200,000 acres of rubber are being grown in 2007-2008.

Therefore rubber growers are urged to extend cultivation of rubber, a perennial crop, as the demand is high in local and foreign markets.

NLD ignores nation-building endeavours of government

Seven NLD members lose trust and faith in NLD and party leaders, quit party

YANGON, 29 Aug — Members Daw Tin Tin Aung, Daw San San Win, Daw Tin Tin Naing, Daw Aye Aye Lwin, Daw Kyi Kyi Mya, U Aung Paik and U Thein Soe resigned from Myaung Township National League for Democracy of Sagaing Division on 24 August of their own volition and sent letters of resignation to NLD Headquarters and local authorities.

In their letters sent to Myaung Township Multi-party Democracy General Election Subcommittee, they said that the NLD ignores nation-building endeavours of the government and it is committing confrontation acts, relying on big west countries. Hence, they lost trust and faith in the NLD and party leaders. That is why they resigned from the party of their own accord, they said. — MNA

Iran says US trying to derail atomic talks

TEHERAN, 28 Aug—Iran accused the United States on Sunday of trying to derail its talks with the UN nuclear watchdog that aim to defuse a row over Teheran's atomic plans, which Washington says are ultimately directed at making bombs.

Iran and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) held two-days of talks last week about a plan for more transparency. A senior IAEA official described their agreement as a "milestone" but Washington said the deal had "real limitations".

"There was nothing else to be expected from America other than this (response)... The trend (of talks) between Iran and the agency was successful, other countries welcomed it as well. Americans are making efforts to harm this trend," Foreign Ministry spokesman Mohammad Ali Hosseini said.

He said Washington's threat to brand Iran's Revolutionary Guards a foreign terrorist group, a move that would allow the United States to target the force's finances, was a political manoeuvre ahead of an IAEA report expected this week.

That report will give details on the plan that aims to clear up suspicions about Iran's nuclear activities, which Teheran insists have only civilian goals.

"America's policies regarding this ... are being intensified as we get closer to September and presentation of the final (IAEA) report," Hosseini told a weekly news conference.—MNA/Reuters

UN appoints first Chinese peace force commander

UNITED NATIONS, 28 Aug—The United Nations announced on Monday the appointment of its first Chinese force commander for a UN peacekeeping mission. He will serve in the disputed Western Sahara territory.

Major-General Zhao Jingmin will be force commander for what is termed the UN Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara, known by its French acronym MINURSO. He replaces Danish General Kurt Mosgaard, who ended his tour of duty on Monday.

"This will be the first time that the UN has had a Chinese force commander heading one of its missions," UN spokeswoman Michele Montas told a regular news briefing.

Western Sahara is a former Spanish colony on the northwest African coast. Morocco annexed the territory after Madrid pulled out in 1975 but clashed with Polisario Front guerillas seeking independence. A ceasefire was declared in 1991.

Since then, just over 200 UN troops and military observers have been stationed in Sahara, where a 1,500-kilometre (940-mile) wall of sand running through landmine-infested desert to the Atlantic divides Moroccan and Polisario forces.

Zhao, a career Army officer, was born in 1954 and speaks French and English after being educated in both Beijing and Dakar, Senegal. He served briefly in MINURSO after it was first set up.

He was also chief liaison officer in the UN Iraq-Kuwait Observer Mission from 1996-97, and from 1998-2001 was Chinese military attache in Tunisia. Since 2003 he has worked in the Chinese Defence Ministry's office of peace-keeping affairs.

The United Nations is currently mediating talks between Morocco, which has offered self-rule for the resource-rich Western Sahara, and Polisario, which seeks a referendum with full independence for the 260,000 inhabitants as one option.

Australia, Indonesia cooperate on combating human trafficking

CANBERRA, 28 Aug—Australia and Indonesia will cooperate on combating people trafficking in the Asia-Pacific region through a new cooperative partnership, Australian Foreign Minister Alexander Downer said on Monday.

Downer said Indonesia has agreed to join the Asia Regional Trafficking in People (ARTIP) initiative, which is administered by Australia's international development agency, AusAID. ARTIP is a 21-million-dollar (17-million-US-dollars) initiative aimed at stopping people trading in the Asia Region, and was launched last year, initially as a partnership with Thailand, Cambodia, Laos and Myanmar.

"By joining this initiative, Indonesia will receive assistance from ARTIP to target and prosecute those who support or carry out the trade in people," Downer said in a statement.

"Managed through a regional office in Bangkok, ARTIP funding will support the operations of a specialized anti-trafficking unit in Indonesia, regional workshops and a series of technical partnerships with Indonesian criminal-justice personnel," he said.—MNA/Xinhua

Attack on US troops in eastern Afghan spark concerns of new trend

WASHINGTON, 29 Aug—Three American troops serving with NATO were killed Tuesday in a suicide bombing in the eastern Afghan city of Gardez, the US military told CNN.

A Pentagon official said the attack is of some concern because it may signal a new trend in targeting US forces, who have a large presence in the eastern part of Afghanistan.

The incident occurred in Gardez, located in Paktia province.

The 25-8-2007 issue of Myanmar Alin daily carries two news stories and one was about 13 persons including Min Ko Naing and Ko Ko Gyi were called in by the authorities for questioning and action would be taken against them according to law based on the findings, and another was about the involvement in the latest incident of the so-called NLD members and expelled-NLD members, and as such, according to the report, NLD would be held responsible for this. Analysts keeping close watch on Myanmar politics have a feeling and foresee that Min Ko Naing's group would face action some time and that NLD may lose opportunities to play a positive role in the current changing political trend of Myanmar unless it amends crisis. As they applied pressure on RC peace efforts were jeopardized. When the Revolutionary Council allowed the BCP leadership abroad to return to the motherland, the latter thought that the government would comply with everything. With this attitude they tried to put pressure on the government launching a pincer movement, from the above-ground and underground.

In a similar move, the Revolutionary Council formed a 33-member advisory body and asked it to give suggestions for the future of the nation. U Nu thought that the RC was not in a position to maintain the administrative machinery. With this belief he asked the government to hand over power to him. As he was too conceited, he went into exile and put up armed relaxation of the Lanzin party.

On 1 September 1988, the then President Dr Maung Maung offered that a referendum would be held to seek the public opinion on the transformation of the multi-party democracy adding that the constitution would be amended and a multi-party election would be held if the people chose the multi-party system. However, the so-called democracy leaders including Daw Suu Kyi refused to accept the offer and insisted on the holding of elections instead. On 10 September, the then President pledged to hold elections within three months by-passing the referendum. The opposing groups had gone so far as forming an interim government and the transfer of power. Despite their demands for elections, no opposition leader was in a position to ensure stability, peace and the rule of law in the nation—the basic requirements of holding elections. What was worse was that they attempted to make use of the riotous acts to press the government. As the situation deteriorated and it was out of control, the Tatmadaw had to assume the State responsibilities. The political change of Myanmar would have been faster than the present if they accepted Dr Maung Maung's offer regarding it as a positive development and collectively strove for holding fair elections.

If we make an assessment, it is found that the acts of Min Ko Naing's group are similar to the points mentioned above. After being released from jail in 2005, he formed an '88' generation student group and started political movements. First, the group launched political movements by issuing declarations in the name of humanitarian aids. As the Tatmadaw government did not take any action against the group for its acts, it came to daringly launch more agitative campaigns like white expression campaigns and signature campaigns.

But the government gently coped with the situation and there was hardly any action taken against them in accord with law. Everyone knows what would happen if such movements were launched before 1988 or 2004. It was found that the Tatmadaw government dealt with the situation in a patient way in order to ensure national reconsolidation at a time when the seven-step Road Map is in progress. However, Min Ko Naing and group holding negative view came to see the government as a weak one. Particularly, they became lost in the flattery of foreign media and diplomats and seemed to be conceited. Eventually, they were taken into custody and interrogated by authorities for sending a letter to the UN Secretary-General in favour of CRPP which announced a self-proclaimed road map opposing the ongoing National Convention and 92 NLD Hluttaw representatives-elect, and for getting involved in issuing declarations criticizing the NC and staging protests.

A study of the anti-government groups after the regaining of independence will show there is a common and typical characteristic among them. That is—every time the ruling government made a positive gesture or sign of flexibility they regarded it to be a sign of weakness rather than a positive move. With this attitude they stepped up pressure on the government politically and militarily employing all possible ways and means.

its present strategies and behaviours.

One can understand that the Tatmadaw government has no choice but to take into custody Min Ko Naing's group if one studies the present political situation and acts of the group. Detention of the group and issuing of warnings to NLD have resulted from the acts of the group and the party.

A study of the anti-government groups after the regaining of independence will show there is a common and typical characteristic among them. That is—every time the ruling government made a positive gesture or sign of flexibility they regarded it to be a sign of weakness rather than a positive move. With this attitude they stepped up pressure on the government politically and militarily employing all possible ways and means. For instance, when U Nu government in 1948 offered the 14-point Nu Principles designed to bring the leftists together, the Burma Communist Party (BCP) and the leftists thought U Nu government was in trouble and made unacceptable demands. As a consequence the insurgency lasted long.

In like manner, when the Revolutionary Council offered internal peace, the armed insurgents concluded that the RC was in the midst of a political opposition. I would not like to elaborate that armed opposition which ended in failure because publications at that time carried details of it.

A similar incident happened during the 1988 disturbances. The idea of practising multi-party democracy in Myanmar was introduced by neither the students nor the so-called democracy leaders. During the student movement which occurred in March and June 1988, the students raised students' issue and that of currency demonetization. At the party congress held in July 1988, the Chairman of the Myanmar Socialist Programme Party offered in his speech two alternatives—the single party system or the multi-party system. Then only, did the ex-military officers who had been dismissed from the party spoke about the multi-party democracy. Even so, the so-called democracy leaders surfaced and stepped forward when U Sein Lwin resigned and Dr Maung Maung became President on 12 August 1988. The so-called student leaders Min Ko Naing, Moe Thee Zun and Ko Ko Gyi were seen on the stage when Ba Ka Tha was formed at the Convocation Hall of the Yangon University on 28 August 1988. In fact, they have been able to appear on the stage in front of the public after taking advantage of

Unlike Min Ko Naing, NLD came to operate in a different way. It operated secretly so as to avoid a situation in which the party might be dissolved by the Tatmadaw government. NLD aided and abetted Min Ko Naing and group from behind the curtain. Youth members and those expelled from the party gave a helping hand to Min Ko Naing's activities. There were pieces of news in the NLD's circle last July that NLD (Central) issued instructions on formation of more youth groups in the townships of states and divisions. Although NLD HQ said those youths and expelled NLD members were operating individually on their own and they were not related to the party, they were found to be actively participating in NLD's special occasions on significant days. Its declaration issued on 20 August says that the situation among the public is about to explode and that if there was civil commotion, the government would be held responsible for it. It is clear where the NLD is heading. Besides, NLD spokesmen in interviews with foreign media said that they had sympathy for Min Ko Naing's group, that it would spark public outcry soon and that the situation would worsen. This clearly shows how the NLD and Min Ko Naing were conspiring in collusion. Hence, it seems that a piece of news on NLD's conspiracy surfaced.

I happened to read a news article titled 'fruitful result depends on fairness on both sides' by Kyaw Min Lu (Shwe Pyi Tha) featured in State-run newspapers on 24 August. Although there might be different opinions on the article, the example of parents and children is noteworthy. The example reflects the situation between the Tatmadaw government and political parties.

Children always want something from their parents. They would like to eat nice food, visit places and have fine clothes. Their parents are usually worried about them. Naturally, the parents consider what can happen when they approve of anything their children want. In this context, the parents will fulfill the desire of their children if there is trust between each other. But if they have no trust in their children they will not approve at all or will approve only after thorough consideration.

Likewise, the Tatmadaw government will treat political parties as its children. Those parties will win the trust of the government if they act responsibly and behave well. If they continue to oppose whatever the government does and try to pressure in collusion from the above-ground and underground there would be no trust by the government. In consequence there will be control and restrictions.

Since 1988, it has been hard for even the people let alone the government to accept and trust the acts of NLD. Although the NLD is constantly using the words such as national reconciliation and building trust, its activities are contrary to those words. Even in the economic and social spheres it is difficult to trust the one who is always trying to stab one's back. So also, the Tatmadaw would find it difficult to have trust in the ones like the NLD, Min Ko Naing and his group that received foreign assistance and blatantly launched underground and above-ground attacks on the government.

The Tatmadaw government is determined to introduce democracy aspired by the people in the nation. I remembered that when discussions were held on whether to hold a referendum or not for the choice of single party system or multiparty system at a party conference held in July 1988, delegates of Tatmadaw Party Committee reported that they would try their utmost in the discharge of duties assigned regardless of single party system or multiparty system. Therefore, when the Tatmadaw assumed the State responsibilities on 18 September 1988 it made a vow to introduce the multiparty democracy system in accordance with the wishes of the people.

If we study the international events such as the assuming of power by the Tatmadaw in 1962 or the assuming of power by the Thai Army recently it can be found that the Tatmadaw (military) used to put more or less politicians into custody when they assumed the State power. When the Tatmadaw assumed the State power on 18 September 1988 it did not arrest any of the so-called democracy leaders and the so-called "88" generation persons. Instead, it promulgated the political parties registration law on 27 September and allow the formation of political parties. At that time, Aung-Suu-Tin group had become the National League for Democracy while students including Min Ko Naing and Moe Thee Zun had formed the Democratic Party for New Society. And there emerged other political parties such as Patriotic Democratic Youth Front, New Generation Force Youth Front, National Political Front (Youth) etc. It can also be found that steps were taken for students to be able to engage in politics as the age of candidates for Hluttaw representatives was set to be 21 in promulgating the Pyithu Hluttaw Election Law. This point stood witness that the Tatmadaw wished to join hands with all the old and new politicians and students in introducing democracy.

NLD and Min Ko Naing's group do not want to accept Tatmadaw as partner in building democracy and instead they regarded the Tatmadaw as the one that prevented them from getting power. Therefore, NLD and Min Ko Naing's group consider the Tatmadaw as the successor of Myanma Socialist Programme Party and they have constantly tried to topple the Tatmadaw Government as in the 1988 incident. In retrospect, the activities of Min Ko Naing and Moe Thee Zun and NLD from 1988 to 1989 showed that they had participated in above-ground movements as well as organized students' unions as underground organizations. Their actions were on a collision course with the government. At last, they contacted terrorists at border regions and designed underground and above-ground armed movements to attack the government. Due to their acts, NLD leaders and Min Ko Naing and Ko Ko Gyi were arrested and Moe Thee Zun fled to a foreign country.

Today, the group led by Min Ko Naing has its old tactics. Although the group has been named itself as the "88 generation students group", they have no intention of contributing to peace and stability, prevalence of law and order, transition to democracy and market-oriented economic system demanded by the people in 1988. The group continued to carry out above-ground and underground movements which were used to topple Myanma Socialist Programme Party in 1988. Therefore, it is not unusual for the government to take action against Min Ko Naing's group.

Unlike Min Ko Naing, NLD came to operate in a different way. It operated secretly so as to avoid a situation in which the party might be dissolved by the Tatmadaw government. NLD aided and abetted Min Ko Naing and group from behind the curtain. Youth members and those expelled from the party gave a helping hand to Min Ko Naing's activities.

If they continue to oppose whatever the government does and try to pressure in collusion from the above-ground and underground there would be no trust by the government. In consequence there will be control and restrictions.

The National Convention will conclude soon. After the convention, the steps such as writing the constitution and holding referendum will be carried out based on the fundamental principles and detailed basic principles laid down at the National Convention. If the people approve of the constitution in the referendum, democratization processes including holding elections, organizing Hluttaws and forming a government will be conducted in accordance with the constitution.

The Tatmadaw Government is committed to implementing the Seven-step Road Map. Therefore, it has declared that it does not accept the acts that could pose hindrance to the democratization process.

The Seven-Step Road Map is essential for the transition to democracy. Each individual member of NLD or the party should participate in implementing all steps of the Road Map. If the party sticks to the current act and policy, it worries me that NLD will be marginalized as an abandoned child depriving itself of the opportunity to participate in the democratization process.

YouTube criticized over Neo-Nazi clips

BEIJING, 28 Aug—Video-sharing website YouTube has met with harsh criticism in Germany for hosting clips that incite racial hatred, media reported Tuesday.

The videos hosted on YouTube include clips of a 1940 anti-Semitic propaganda film "Jud Sues" and two music videos of outlawed German far-right rock band Landser, which show footage from World War II depicting Nazi military operations.

Dieter Wiefelspuetz, Social Democrat (SPD) parliamentarian of Germany said airing the clips on YouTube in Germany was scandalous. "Publishing these films amounts to aiding and abetting incitement of the people."

Over 50 arrests on first day of Notting Hill Carnival in W London

LONDON, 28 Aug—More than 50 people were arrested on the first day of this year's Notting Hill Carnival in west London, police said on Monday.

London's Metropolitan Police said 54 people were arrested on Sunday at the annual event, Europe's largest street party and the world's second biggest after the Rio Carnival held in Brazil. This year, it takes the theme "Set All Free" and marks the 200th anniversary of the abolition of the slave trade. Two people were arrested for attempted murder, while other people were arrested for crimes including indecent assault, having an imitation firearm or offensive weapon, criminal damage, possession of drugs, being drunk and disorderly and handling stolen goods.

Three people were arrested in connection with an incident in which a man suffered stab wounds.

In total, there were allegations of 70 crimes, a 43-per-cent drop on day one of the carnival last year, when 122 alleged crimes were reported.

Before the carnival got under way, police arrested 21 people suspected of planning to cause trouble at the event.

Polluted China rivers threaten "sixth" of population

BEIJING, 28 Aug—Polluters along two of China's main rivers have defied over a decade of clean-up efforts, leaving much of the water unfit to touch, let alone drink, and a risk to a sixth of the population, state media said on Monday.

Half the check points along the Huai River and its tributaries in central and eastern China showed pollution of "Grade 5" or worse — the top of the dial in key toxins, meaning that the water was unfit for human contact and may not be fit even for irrigation, national legislators were told.

Fourteen years of measures had reined in some of the worst pollution along the Huai and Liao rivers but factory waste remained far too high, chairman of the National People's Congress Environment and Resources Protection Committee Mao Rubai said in a report delivered on Sunday.

The rivers posed a "threat to the water safety of one sixth of the country's 1.3 billion population", the China Daily said. The pollution on the Huai threatened the massive South-North Water Transfer Project to draw water from the Yangtze River through the Huai basin to the country's parched north, Mao said.

"Large volumes of untreated domestic effluent and industrial waste-water are dumped directly into the river," Mao said of one of the Huai's worst polluted tributaries, according to the NPC website (www.npc.gov.cn). — MNA/Reuters

Taleban begin release of South Korean hostages

GHAZNI (Afghanistan), 29 Aug —Taleban insurgents freed 12 South Korean hostages yesterday. Three women were the first of 19 Christian volunteers the Taliban agreed to release after South Korea said it would pull its troops out of Afghanistan. Several hours later, four more women and a male hostage were freed. Four more were released a few hours later.

International Committee of the Red Cross representative Craig Muller confirmed that the 12 had been freed. A Taleban commander, Mullah Abdullah, said his group had earlier handed over four women and a man to a tribal elder who delivered them to the Red Cross. The original three women were handed over to members of the International Committee of the Red Cross in Ghazni province. Wearing long, traditional headscarves, they wept as they sat in a Red Cross vehicle.

Taleban representative Qari Mohammad Bashir said he hoped all would be free in two or three days, he told the Pakistan-based Afghan Islamic Press news agency. The insurgents seized 23 Korean Christian volunteers on 19 July from a bus in Ghazni province. Two male hostages were killed by their captors early in the crisis. The Taleban released two women as a gesture of goodwill during the first round of talks and said on Tuesday they had reached a deal on the release of the remaining 19.
