PERSPECTIVES

Strengthen democracy foundation by voting

Multiparty democracy general elections will be held soon. Election commissions at all levels are making arrangements in line with the law for ensuring free and fair elections. Talks on electoral process and election demonstrations are being conducted throughout the nation.

Political parties, candidates to hluttaws, and independent candidates are canvassing for votes, and legally presenting their party policies and distributing their newsletters and pamphlets. So, party politics and election process have taken their shape.

The people are now found taking interest in the forthcoming elections, thinking which candidates they should vote for. They are visualizing free and fair elections.

To cast a vote in an election is the right as well as the duty of every citizen. And to elect a party and candidate a voter favours is part of democracy system. Democratization calls for participation of the entire people. So, each and every citizen is responsible for casting a vote.

Participation of millions of eligible voters in the nation's elections indicates high political awareness and outlook of the people. If a citizen casts a vote to favour a candidate in the interest of the people, he can be deemed to have a sense of responsibility. Voting in elections is participation in the drive for strengthening the democracy foundation.

Now, the goal of democracy is within the touching distance. So, the people have to prove that they deserve democracy. They have to do their bit in building a democratic nation by voting the political parties and candidates that are capable of fulfilling the wishes of the people.

Commander, Minister supervise rehabilitation works in Myebon

NAY PYI TAW, 27 Oct—Chairman of Rakhine State Peace and Development Council Commander of Western Command Brig-Gen Soe Thein, Minister for Transport U Thein Swe, Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement U Maung Maung Swe and Deputy Minister for Home Affairs U Phone Swe inspected clearing debris by Tatmadawmen, members of Fire Brigade, townselders and social organizations collectively in wards in Myebon yesterday morning.

The commander, the ministers and the deputy minister comforted storm victims. They met personnel, senior citizens, chairmen and members of Peace and Development Councils of Myebon Township and nearby villages on the watercraft and gave instructions on rescue work, reconstruction and rehabilitation tasks.

People's Desire

- * Oppose those relying on external elements, acting as stooges, holding negative views
- * Oppose those trying to jeopardize stability of the State and progress of the nation
- * Oppose foreign nations interfering in internal affairs of the State
- * Crush all internal and external destructive elements as the common enemy

Neyinzaya Bridge in Kalay Tsp inaugurated

Ten killed in robbery attempt in N Iraq

BAGHDAD, 27 Oct—Iraqi officials say 10 people have been killed when gunmen stormed a jewelry shop in the northern city of Kirkuk.

Police and hospital officials say attackers lobbed hand grenades inside the store, prompting a gunfight with police.

Brig Gen Sarhat Qadir, a police spokesman, says the attackers fled before they could rob the store.

The officials say those killed include the store's three owners and four customers, including a woman and a child. Qadir says three officers also were killed in Tuesday's attack.

A spate of attacks against jewelry stores and banks has raised fears that street crime is soaring as sectarian fighting wanes in Iraq.—Internet

Urban terror threats prompt new UK police training

LONDON, 27 Oct— The British bobby is about to go ballistic.

Faced with growing terror threats involving urban areas, British police are receiving new weapons and specialized training from the SAS, Britain's elite military unit. The hope is that the training and equipment will help if Britain ever faces an attack similar to the 2008 Mumbai shooting spree that killed 166 people and paralyzed India's business capital for days.

Tuesday's announcement comes amid an active European terror threat being tracked by US and European officials. The UK's terror threat rating remains at "severe" — the second highest tier — which means an attack is likely.

News of a possible Mumbai-styled small arms attack emerged last month after the CIA increased strikes in Pakistan to flush out al-Qaeda operatives suspected in the plot. Some of the plot's details came from a terror suspect arrested in Afghanistan, intelligence officials have said.—Internet

Roadside bomb kills four police in west Afghanistan

HERAT, 27 Oct— A roadside bomb killed four Afghan police, including a district police chief, in western Afghanistan on Tuesday, the second serious attack this week in what was once a relatively secure area. The top police officer in the Obe District of western Herat Province and three of his colleagues were killed on a road near the border with Iran and Turkmenistan, said Naqibullah Arveen, a spokesman for Herat's governor.

Violence has risen across Afghanistan, with civilian and military casualties reaching record levels this year as the Taliban-led militancy spreads out of traditional strongholds in the south and east into the once stable north and west.

Arveen blamed the Taliban for the latest attack in Herat, but the militants did not immediately make any claim of responsibility. Herat has been seen by NATO-led forces and Western officials as one area where the process of gradually transferring security responsibility from foreign troops to Afghan forces could commence soon.

UN calls for US, Iraqi probe of Wikileaks reports

GENEVA, 27 Oct—The United Nations' top human rights official called on Tuesday for the US and Iraq to investigate allegations of detainee abuse contained in Wikileaks' release of American military documents.

The online whistleblower put out nearly 400,000 field reports by American soldiers on Friday. Many of them contained reports of severe abuse by Iraqi forces, and showed that US troops did not intervene to halt the violence in many cases.

UN High Commissioner for Human Rights Navi Pillay said the information adds to "concerns that serious breaches of international human rights law have occurred in Iraq." Pillay said that the US and Iraq should prosecute anyone believed responsible for torture, unlawful killings and other abuses. The documents show that US forces turned detainees over to Iraqi forces even after signs of abuse.

They also show that US interrogators continued to question Iraqi detainees, some of whom were still recovering from injuries or whose wounds were still visible after being held by Iraqi security forces.—Internet

Home prices fell in August, near lows

NEW YORK, 27 Oct—Prices of single-family homes fell for a second straight month in August, hovering around recent lows after the expiration of popular homebuyer tax credits, according to a Standard & Poor's/Case-Shiller home price report on Tuesday.

The S&P/Case Shiller composite index of 20 metropolitan areas declined 0.3 percent in August from July on a seasonally adjusted basis where a Reuters poll of economists forecast a drop of 0.2 percent. The dip followed a seasonally adjusted decline of 0.2 percent in July.

S&P, which publishes the indexes, also said home prices in the 20 cities index rose 1.7 percent from August 2009, a slower annual pace than the 3.2 percent increase in July.

Unadjusted for seasonal impact, the 20-city index fell 0.2 percent after a 0.6 percent July gain. A 0.2

percent rise was expected.

"A disappointing report. Home prices broadly declined in August. Seventeen of the 20 cities and both composites saw a weakening in year-over-year figures, as compared to July, indicating that the housing market continues to bounce along the recent lows," David M Blitzer, chairman of the index committee at Standard & Poor's, said in a statement.

Kimberly-Clark 3Q net falls 19 pct; cuts guidance

NEW YORK, 27 Oct—Consumer products maker Kimberly-Clark Corp's third-quarter net income fell 19 percent on higher costs to make its tissues and diapers, prompting the company to cut its guidance for the year.

Shares of the maker of Huggies diapers and Kleenex tissues fell 5 percent in trading Tuesday.

The company said its unit that serves businesses in North America continued to hurt because of high unemployment, which leads to emptier offices and less demand for tissue.

The company said it earned $469 million, or $1.14 per share in the three months ending 30 Sept. That's down from $582 million, or $1.40 per share, last year.

Revenue rose 1 percent to $5 billion.

Results missed expectations. Analysts predicted the company to earn $1.28 per share on revenue of $5 billion, according to Thomson Reuters.

CFTC unveils new tools to stop market manipulation

WASHINGTON, 27 Oct—

The US futures regulator laid out plans on Tuesday for how it could use new and beefed-up legal tools to foil traders who seek to manipulate prices or defraud investors.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission said it also wants to ask for comments on whether to crack down on certain practices used by high-frequency traders — such as "quote-stuffing" — but it stopped short of immediately proposing new rules specifically aimed at algorithmic trading. In its latest set of proposed regulations following a sprawling Wall Street reform law, the CFTC sought to clear up some confusion about its traditional test for price manipulation, an effort to improve on its dismal record of having won only one such case in its 36-year history.

The rule, which will apply to all markets overseen by the CFTC, including swaps, also creates a "broad, catch-all anti-fraud provision" that does not require the CFTC to prove a trader fully intended to cause fraud, CFTC officials said.

Indonesian volcano kills at least 25

Indonesia has warned residents living in the shadow of the nation's most active volcano, Merapi.—INTERNET

SLEMAN, 27 Oct — One of Indonesia's most active volcanoes spewed out clouds of ash and jets of searing gas on Wednesday in an eruption that has killed at least 25 people and injured 14. Mount Merapi, on the outskirts of the city of Yogyakarta on Java island, first erupted on Tuesday, a day after a tsunami pounded remote islands in western Indonesia, killing at least 113 people.

Authorities have been trying to evacuate more than 11,000 villagers living on the slopes of the volcano, where many houses have been destroyed, the ruins lying covered in white ash. Endita Sri Andrianti, a spokeswoman for Yogyakarta's Sardjito hospital, said 25 people had been killed by deadly bursts of hot air released by the volcano late on Tuesday.

"We are still collecting details to identify them. Most of them were burned to death," she told Reuters by phone, adding that 14 villagers had suffered burn injuries. She was unable to confirm local media reports that among the dead was the elderly spiritual guardian of the mountain, Mbah Maridjan, believed by many Javanese to possess magic powers.

China's Three Gorges Dam is full up for first time

BEIJING, 27 Oct—The water level in China's Three Gorges Dam reached full capacity Tuesday for the first time since the world's biggest hydroelectric project began generating power in 2008, state media said.

The amount of water in the dam's reservoir along the Yangtze river, China's longest, reached its design capacity of 175 metres (577 feet) early Tuesday morning, Cao Guangjing, project head told Xinhua news agency. Cao called the high water mark "a milestone in the construction of the gigantic reservoir," which will allow the dam to fulfill its flood control, power generation and navigational functions. Construction of the controversial 22.5 billion dollar dam began in 1993, but water storage in the 600-kilometre-long (372 mile) reservoir only started in 2003, the report said. In 2008 when the dam began to generate power, the water level in the reservoir had reached 172.8 metres. About 1.4 million people were displaced to make way for the dam project, the construction of which put several heritage sites deep underwater.

NAGOYA, 27 Oct—Spectacular species previously unknown to the outside world are being discovered in the Amazon rainforest at a rate of one every three days, environment group WWF said in a report published Tuesday.

An anaconda as long as a limousine, a giant catfish that eats monkeys, a blue fanged spider and poisoned dart frogs are among the 1,220 animals and plants to have been found from 1999 to 2009, according to the study.

The report was released on the sidelines of a United Nations summit in Japan that is being held to try to stem the mass extinction of species around the world, and the WWF said it highlighted why protecting the Amazon was so vital.

"This report clearly shows the incredible, amazing diversity of life in the Amazon," Francisco Ruiz, head of WWF's Living Amazon Initiative, told reporters at the launch.

ROME, 27 Oct— The genetic diversity of the plants that we grow and eat could be lost forever due to climate change, threatening future food security, the UN's Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO) said on Tuesday. Experts from the Rome-based organization warned that the loss of biodiversity will have a major impact on humankind's ability to feed itself in the future as the global population rises to nine billion by 2050.

"There are thousands of wild crop relatives that... hold genetic secrets that enable them to resist heat, droughts, salinity, floods and pests," FAO director general Jacques Diouf was quoted in the report as saying. "Increasing the sustainable use of plant diversity could be the main key for addressing risks to genetic resources for agriculture," he said.

The report estimated that 75 percent of crop diversity was lost between 1900 and 2000 and called for "special efforts to conserve and use" both cultivated plants and their "wild" relatives, especially in developing countries.

Brazil says UN biodiversity summit needs biopiracy deal

NAGOYA, 27 Oct—Brazil's environment minister warned Tuesday that UN talks on biodiversity hinged on a deal being reached to stop genetic resources and knowledge being plundered in developing countries.

Izabella Teixeira said securing a binding pact on ending "biopiracy" was imperative if there was to be a broader treaty at the talks, which are being held in Japan this week, to slow the mass extinction of species.

"We need an agreement for an ABS protocol," Teixeira said, referring to the Access and Benefits Sharing agreement that Brazil and other developing countries are insisting on.

"It is really important we achieve that this year. For us it is unacceptable that we still don't have a formal legal framework (for the ABS)."

When Kyangin-Pakokku Railroad Project...

The Senior General inspected Kyangin Cement Plant, where Managing Director of the Myanmar Ceramics Industries U Soe Yee reported on historical background and productivity of the plant, quality of the goods, production rates from 2004 to October 2010, distribution of goods, ratio between the plant's expenses and income, demand and supply of raw materials, local cement demand, productivities of the 14 cement plants, and construction of 20 more cement plants to meet the demand.

After asking some questions for what he wanted to know, the Head of State gave guidance, calling for full operation of the plant and cooperation of related departments to achieve the target.

The Senior General and entourage inspected Kyangin Railway Station. Minister for Rail Transport-tation U Aung Min gave an account of construction of new railroads and train schedules in Ayeyawady Region. In his guidance, the Head of State said that to complete the 320 miles long Kyangin-Pakokku Railroad Project, Minbu-Pwintbyu section (20 miles), Pwintbyu-Hsinbyukyun section (20 miles) and Kyunchaung-Yawchaung section (20 miles) are left to be built; that the remaining railroads are to be completed as soon as possible; and that when the project is completed, local products such rice, meat and fish can be transported to arid regions at low transport charges, and so it will contribute to the public interest.

The Senior General and entourage inspected urbanization of Myanaung and Kyangin by car.

Next, they left Kyangin by helicopter and arrived in Hinthada at 1 pm. They inspected progress in implementing the project for establishing Hinthada highway bus terminal and wholesales centre, and development of Hinthada by car.

On arrival at the briefing hall at the embankment on the bank of Ayeyawady River near U Pa Ye Pagoda in Hinthada, the Head of State heard a report by Minister for Agriculture and Irrigation U Htay Oo on installation of geo tubes and rebuilding of dykes for prevention of bank erosion, plans to build a detour around Hinthada, and maintenance of internal roads and embankments.

Managing Director U Zaw Win Shein of Ayeya

Hintha Construction Co reported on progress in constructing the highway bus terminal.

The Senior General put some questions about regional development, and gave guidance saying that the government has constructed enough roads, railroads, hospitals, schools and universities in Hinthada region; that Hinthada used to be a landlocked region, but it has become a region that is easily accessible from any other region across the nation; that the government has fulfilled requirements for education, health and social affairs of local people; local people are to continue to work hard for achieving better progress with the use of good foundations.

At Hinthada Railway Station, the Senior General heard reports on alignments for Hinthada-Zalun-Danubyu-Nyaungdon railroad and Pathein (Belgarat)-Einme-Nyaungdon-Yangon railroad presented by Minister for Rail Transportation U Aung Min and gave guidance.

The Senior General cordially greeted townselders and departmental officials and put some questions on education, health, social and economic sectors of the region for his knowledge.

At Ayeyawady Bridge (Nyaungdon) construction project, Minister for Construction U Khin Maung Myint reported to the Senior General on construction of the rail-cum-road bridge being built between mile posts Nos 40 and 44 on Yangon-Pathein road in Nyaungdon Township of Maubin District in Ayeyawady Region, 8000 feet upstream from Bo Myat Tun Bridge.

The Head of State chose the project site on his inspection tour on 5 November, 2009, and the construction works started on 1 January, 2010. Next he reported on work progress and facts about the project.

When Kyangin-Pakokku Railroad Project...

Next, Minister U Aung Min reported that the Ministry of Rail Transportation is implementing new railroad construction projects for emergence of National Railway Network that can contribute towards smooth and secure rail transport and swift flow of commodity in accord with the guidance of the Head of State.

There are 13 railroad construction projects with the total length of 2265 miles. A total of 377-mile railroad including 23.08-mile Seikpyu-Hsinbyukyun railroad section which was inaugurated recently have been put into service. Works are being carried out for the soonest completion of the construction of the remaining 1888-mile railroad.

Two railroad construction projects—89-mile Pathein (Belgarat)-Einme-Nyaungdon-Yangon and 48-mile Hinthada-Danubyu-Sekkawt (Nyaungdon) railroads—are under construction in Ayeyawady Region. Hinthada-Sekkawt (Nyaungdon) railroad was built in the first phase in building the approach railroad of Ayeyawady Bridge (Nyaungdon) as Hinthada-Danubyu-Sekkawt (Nyaungdon) railroad will link Kalay via Kyangin-Pakokku railroad.

Next, the Senior General put some questions for his knowledge and fulfilled the requirements.

Then the Senior General and party viewed construction of Ayeyawady Bridge (Nyaungdon) from the view deck of the briefing hall. They arrived back in Yangon in the evening.

Ayeyawady Bridge (Nyaungdon) being built by Public Works of the Ministry of Construction will be a rail-cum-road bridge. It will be about 7402 feet with 262 feet wide and 57 feet high water clearance. So far, the whole construction works have been completed by 47 per cent.

On completion, people will have road and railroad access to towns on the western bank of the Ayeyawady River including Yangon and Pathein within the short period of time.

Upon completion of Pathein-Yangon railroad, that will pass Pathein, Einme, Pantanaw, Nyaungdon and Hlinethaya, being built by Myanma Railways of the Ministry of Rail Transportation, it will make greater contribution to regional development of the western bank of Ayeyawady river as it will link to Pathein-Hinthada-Kyangin-Pakokku railroad.

Both approach railroads of Nyaungdon Railroad Bridge will be 13172 feet long and its approach structure will be 30 feet high. —MNA

For them, the most important thing is...

Dagonthar

Since Tatmadaw took the State's responsibilities after the four "8s", a new social class emerged in Myanmar politics. They are called expatriates by the government and the groups formed with those they named themselves Myanmar democracy activists.

In reality, there were expatriates before them. The Parliamentary Democracy Party led by U Nu was original expatriate. The period U Nu and accomplices absconded from the country was from 1970 to 1980. It was the Cold War period when the US and the Soviet Union were vying each other for super power. So the US supported U Nu and accomplices. On the other hand, they supported the Revolutionary Council Government of Myanmar, a neutral state, in order not to be on the side of Soviet Union and the Burmese Socialist Programme Party later. So U Nu and accomplices were supported through CIA secretly. Thus, they did not attain good social standing.

The "88" expatriates were not treated like this. They met the time at which a wave of democracy became stronger. In the 1990s, democratization, human rights and INGO Civil Society became popular. It was not the time to coax and flatter the Third World countries with the fear of communism. The West in the past implemented its foreign policy under the flag of anti-communism. In the 1990s, it tried to influence the Third World countries under the flag of democracy and human rights. But there are organizations that help address poverty and health problems of the Third World countries. Today is the age of rendering assistance for development, humanitarian and flourishing of human rights.

After the Tatmadaw saved the nation from the situation in which the Union was in danger of collapsing as unrest and violence occurred nationwide in September, 1988, students fled to the insurgents on the border. Next, they staged an armed revolution for the downfall of the military government like the insurgents did. They dreamt of entering the country like BIA in the past by forming a student army. In their dream, the people were presenting bunches of flowers to the student army while they were marching into the town holding the flag of the fighting peacock. Before long, the BCP that students thought highly of collapsed. The KNU outposts on the borders fell one after another. The idea, like a castle built in the air, of occupying Myanmar with the help of the insurgents fell down. They happened to beg for food at the refugee camp, let alone enter the country as heroes.

But, saviours appeared for absconders in the border area. They are INGOs who arrived in the refugee camps in the border area in massive numbers. Among them, some are ones to provide only humanitarian aid but some are to help topple the military government in Myanmar and to democratize the nation. Nonetheless, they brought money and technology along with them. Especially, seeing the fall of communist governments in eastern European countries, there was an influx of huge sums of money from governments and INGOs who want to flourish liberal democracy across the world.

They are excited about the configurations—Myanmar under military regime, the party that won the elections and could not form a government, Daw Suu Kyi, daughter of the father of independence, who was educated in Britain and is under house arrest, refugees in the border area, national races armed groups, educated youths absconded from democracy movement. They were filled with excitement at the thought of democratizing this country with such configurations.

To put it in a nutshell, students in border areas and NLD representatives-elect have forgotten the idea of staging an armed revolution. It is impossible not to forget it because most of donors prefer the democratization through East European-style mass movement to the armed struggle. In other words, their wishes of becoming heroes disappeared into the battles of Methawaw, Mawpoekay, Mela and Marnepalaw where they were defeated by sophisticated military capability of the Tatmadaw. Then, worthless persons are left in the so called "student army" and so called "student leaders" were in third country via Bangkok. According to the words they said, they left for those countries to campaign for Myanmar democratization process in the world.

But there was no united effort among those leaders. In accord with the procedure of organizations that will donate cash to Myanmar affairs activities, a letter of proposal has to be submitted, describing what they will do. The name of organization that will carry out Myanmar affairs activities will have to be stated in the letter. Everyone wants to take hold of cash and to be a leader. So hundreds of Myanmar affairs activist groups formed with a handful of people, coalitions and fronts emerged outside the country. They earned income by staging happily demonstrations in front of the embassy, issuing declarations and holding meetings. They seldom visited Thai border, gave helping hands and took photographs. There was an organization that photographed wallpapers on the wall in a compound in Maesok and sent them to the donor as photos taken in the movement held in Yangon. There are many persons who are staging "revolution" at massage parlours. Htay Aung of AAPP and Naing Aung of FDB are staging "revolution" by going to massage parlours. Moe Thee Zun and Expatriate Sein Win are not interested in revolution in border areas. Their revolution is not in Thai border area. It is international revolution. They travel around the world with the use of cash donations and spend these cash donations for education.

They honeymoon with their wives. They appoint themselves as high-level personnel and are enjoying a life of fat cat. They have long been doing so but nobody dare to criticize them for these cases as no one wish to have supply of donors cut off as a result of pointing the finger at each other. Some exiles even send money back to their relatives in Myanmar and asked them to run restaurants and mobile phone shops.

Now, some sources said that Denmark has decided to stop providing US$ 1 million for Ayeyawady Magazine annually. It seems that Denmark has got fed up with the magazine. The unit cost of a 200-page quality magazine is approximately K 4,000 in Myanmar. Ayeyawady has a monthly circulation of 200, so the printing cost is K 0.8 million or US$ 800 per month and US$ 9,600 per year, more or less US$ 10,000. The production cost inclusive of domain and server is US$ 15,000 per year at most. Where does the rest US$ 985,000 go? Well, it becomes the emoluments and miscellaneous expenses of boss U Aung Zaw and other 62 staff of the magazine. What a pity that Myanmar publishers are running a magazine just with around 10 staff.

It is just a case between Denmark and Ayeyawady Magazine. There would be millions of dollars flowing from many other organizations and countries into so-called democratic organizations. As an organization like NED alone spent up to over 2 million US$ dollars a year, one can imagine the amount of cash exile anti-government organizations put into their own pockets. What did they do with the money? What did they do to contribute to democracy transformation in Myanmar? They have always said that they want to help the people improve their standard of living. If then, how much benefit did the people get from them? Let alone the national people, has the status of people in border refugee camps improved? If one answers above-mentioned questions, he will find that their actions did not yield any tangible results.

The expatriates have always asked the international community not to provide humanitarian aid to Myanmar and not to assist Myanmar in her efforts to promote the health and education sectors. They said that any financial assistance to Myanmar would not reach the people, but would be embezzled by the Government. In fact, humanitarian aid can be provided to the people through UN agencies, and resident NGOs in place of the Government. Some NGOs are already doing so. Unlike the inoperative organizations formed by the expatriates with their relatives, these NGOs have transparency and assume overall responsibility. They have to undergo annual audit. Nevertheless, the expatriates never let international community provide assistance to such local NGOs. They use every trick in the book to prevent international aid agencies from providing assistance to them. At length, most of donors provide assistance through exile organizations, being afraid that others will misunderstand them helping the military government. But, it is crystal clear that a significant portion of the financial assistance from foreign countries and NGOs became emoluments, transportation charges and campaign expenses of the expatriates and so was wasted.

It is a bitter disappointment for the people that exile organizations are taking democracy movement as a business. Even democracy activists at home follow their example and make money through such services as recommending those wishing to go to western countries as party members so as to apply visa and arranging for those wishing to send their children and relatives abroad for education. Another business of the expatriates is refugee agency—they arrange for those who have reached abroad for various reasons, to be able to take refuge and receive refugee allowance, taking service charges. Now, the business has become a really thriving one.

In fact, the expatriates prefer to the rule of military government so that they can tell hard-luck stories about Myanmar people and deceive money from the donors. No wonder they refuse to accept the concept that democracy transformation should go step by step through the upcoming election and are resolutely opposing the election and the change.

For them, the most important thing is not the success of democracy revolution, but prolonging democracy revolution. Only then, can they keep on leading a life of luxury. We would not see any progress if we follow their advices. If we cannot transform the nation into democratic one, our lives would end up in misery. On the other hand, the anti-government organizations wish the democratization process took longer time so that they can get more money. Change is a threat to their livelihood, and their project politics in other words beggar politics mechanism. If we understand all this, then can we decide what we should do in the upcoming general elections. All we need to do is to use our voting right with realization and vote for the future democratic nation.

informed about development of my home town, where almost every house has access to electric power now.

Regarding Myanmar's hydropower generation, in 1988, there were only two hydropower plants: Balu Creek No. 2 Hydropower Plant (168 megawatts) and Kindah Hydropower Plant (56 megawatts).

From 1988 onwards, the nation has seen 15 hydropower plants, a coal-fired power plant, 15 gas-fired power plants, totaling 15 power plants. So, the electric power generation capacity has surged from 529.5 megawatts in 1988 to 2484 megawatts.

Since 1988, Myanmar has witnessed hydropower and coal-fired power plants one after another, such as Hsedawgyi (25 megawatts), Paunglaung (280 megawatts) and Yeywa (790 megawatts) in Mandalay Region; Baluchaung No. 1 (280 megawatts) in Kayah State; Zawgyi No. 1 (18 megawatts), Zawgyi No. 2 (12 megawatts) and Shweli No. 1 (600 megawatts) in Shan State (North); Kengtawng (54 megawatts) and Tikyit coal-fired power plant (120 megawatts) in Shan State (South); Zaungtu (20 megawatts), Thaphanseik (30 megawatts), Yenwe (25 megawatts) and Khabaung (30 megawatts) in Bago Region; and Mone (75 megawatts) in Magway Region.

On 16 October this year, No. 3 generation of Yeywa Hydropower Plant was put into service, which was considerable success in distributing hydropower. Yeywa Hydropower Project is near Yaman Village, 31 miles southeast of Mandalay, in PyinOoLwin Township, Mandalay Region. It is the first-ever concrete type dam in Myanmar.

Yeywa Hydropower Project was launched in 2001-2002. It started to run with No. 1 generator on 24 February 2010, and with No. 2 generator on 8 July 2010. Its No. 3 generator was launched on 16 October 2010. Each generation can generate 197.5 megawatts. It has four generators, so, on completion, Yeywa Hydropower Plant will be able to generate 3550 million kilowatt hours.

Hydropower plants under construction around the nation are Paunglaung (Upper) (140 megawatts), Nanchu (40 megawatts), Yeywa (790 megawatts) and Hsedawgyi (Upper) (64 megawatts) in Mandalay Region; Bu (Upper) (150 megawatts) in Magway Region; Yeywa (Upper) (280 megawatts), Tarsan (7110 megawatts); Shweli-3 (1050 megawatts), Baluchaung (Upper) (29 megawatts), Thanlwin (Upper) (Kunlong) (1400 megawatts), Naukpha (1000 megawatts), Mantaung (200 megawatts) and Shweli-2 (520 megawatts) in Shan State (North); six Namlwe hydropower projects Kengtung (96 megawatts), Wantapin (25 megawatts), Solu (165 megawatts), Mongpa (50 megawatts), Kengyan (28 megawatts), Hiku (88 megawatts) and Namkha (200 megawatts) in Shan State (East); Kun Creek (60 megawatts), Pyu Creek (40 megawatts), Thaukyaykhat-2 (120 megawatts), Shwegyin

Balu Creek-3 (52 megawatts), Ywathit (600 megawatts), Nampun (130 megawatts) and Namtabet (110 megawatts) in Kayah State and Thakyet (20 megawatts), Kawthoung coal-fired power plant (6 megawatts), Anyaphya (9 megawatts) and Taninthayi (600 megawatts) in Taninthayi Region.

In order to distribute the electric power from those plants, national grids and power houses are being built now.

So far, Panlon-Namsan (66 KV) grid (18 miles) Project and Namsang (66/11 KV) 5 MVA Power House Project have been completed.

On going national grid projects are the three-mile grid for Nabar Power House which is part of Kyaukpahto-Shwegu-Bhamo (66 KV); Kyunchaung Pakokku (66 KV) grid (9.5 miles) project, Nabar (66/33/11 KV) (10 MVA) power house project and Kammatat (66/11 KV) (5 MVA) power house project.

There are 11 more projects to help complete network of national grids covering the whole nation. They are: six national grid projects — Hlinethaya-Ahlon (230 KV) grid (15 miles); Hline River spanning (Ahlon) (230 KV) grid (0.9 mile), Thaton-Mawlamyine grid (60 miles), Nabar-Mohnyin (66 KV) grid (55 miles), and six power house projects — Substation Bay Extension in Hlinethaya power house, Ahlon (230/33 KV) (2x100 MVA) powerhouse, 230 KV Switch Bay in Thaton power plant, and (230, 66, 11 KV) (5 MVA) power house in Mawlamyine.

Today, the nation has seen a growing number of industrial zones and housing estates, and there is an increasing demand of electricity. So, all possible sources are being sought to generate hydropower. Recently, a 24-inch diameter offshore pipeline (179.64 miles) was laid from Mottama Offshore Oilfield to Yadana-Yangon, spending 270 million US dollars. The piped gas is distributed from Insein (Ywama) station, thus contributing towards the electric power demand of Yangon residents.

Up to 1988, the nation's electric power generation capacity stood at only 529.5 megawatts. Now, the nation has seen 15 hydropower plants, one coal-fired power station and 15 gas-fired power plants, and can produce 2848.4 megawatts in total. The plants are designed to serve the public interest and boost national development.

The government has built and is building and will build many hydropower plants with the aim of improving the socio-economic status of the people. It is therefore fair to say that the power projects are prudent ones to create the better future of the nation.

Regarding the transport sector, from 1988 to date, the state has seen 315 miles of railroads, 753 miles of roads and 16 above 180 feet long bridges. So, the commodity flow is getting swift and the socio-economic status of local people is getting high. In addition, the government managed to build Thanlwin Bridge (Mawlamyine) in Mon State that was only in the wildest dream of local people. As a result, the transport of Mon State has been on a par with that in other regions, which is undeniable.

'Hiccup girl' may use Tourette's defence

ST PETERSBURG, 27 Oct — The lawyer for a young Florida woman who was known for unstoppable hiccups and is now accused of murder said on Tuesday he may present an unusual defense in her case: His client has Tourette's Syndrome.

Jennifer Mee, 19, was charged on Sunday with first-degree murder after police said she lured a 22-year-old man to a meeting where he was robbed and shot a day earlier. St. Petersburg Maj. Mike Kovacsev said police do not believe she fired the gun.

Mee was briefly famous in 2007 because she couldn't stop hiccuping. Her attorney, John Trevena, said she was diagnosed with Tourette's Syndrome, a neurological disorder that can cause involuntary movements and speech problems.

"Hiccups are a symptom of Tourette's," Trevena said, declining to be more specific about how the condition might have affected his client's behaviour.

Trevena said Mee, who has never been arrested before, is distraught and is being held without bond in a protective confinement wing at the Pinellas County Jail because she is a high-profile inmate.

NH jurors hear graphic details in murder trial

NASHUA, 27 Oct — Prosecutors in a New Hampshire home invasion murder case said on Tuesday that a woman who was hacked to death used her own body to shield her 11-year-old daughter and died not knowing if her only child was alive or dead.

Defendant Steven Spader, 18, stared passively as a prosecutor stood before him and called him a ruthless killer during opening statements in his murder trial. Spader is charged with killing Kimberly Cates and attempting to kill her daughter, Jaimie Cates, in their Mont Vernon home a year ago.

Assistant Attorney General Peter Hinckley held up a long machete as he described the attacks he said were committed by Spader and co-defendant Christopher Gribble.

"They hacked them, they stabbed them, they cut them apart, and this what this defendant used to hack that mother and daughter in their bed," Hinckley said. —Internet

NY-born man arrested in Hawaii in terror case

NEW YORK, 27 Oct — A New York City-born man was ordered to return from Hawaii where he was arrested on charges he tried to join the US military at a Times Square recruiting station so he could be deployed to Iraq, desert and fight with anti-American insurgency forces.

Abdel Hameed Shehadeh, 21, was charged with making false statements in the midst of a New York-based terrorism investigation, authorities said on Monday. A US Department of Justice news release said Shehadeh was arrested on Friday in Honolulu. A judge there ordered him on Monday to return to Brooklyn to face charges. It was unclear when he would appear in a New York court.—Internet

Soldier charged in Afghan killing kept in solitary

SEATTLE, 27 Oct — The soldier who tried to blow the whistle on an alleged plot to kill Afghan civilians for sport has been put in solitary confinement in a windowless cell for 23 hours a day, his family said.

The father of Spc. Adam Winfield is objecting to the conditions at Joint Base Lewis-McChord south of Seattle, and wants the soldier moved to a different facility.

Christopher Winfield said his son was separated from other defendants in the case about a month ago after he reported being threatened by one of them. He's been in protective solitary custody since then, but conditions grew markedly worse last week when he was moved from a cell with access to a common area and television to one he's locked in nearly all the time, his father said.

Phantom of the Fox' fights to stay in apartment

ATLANTA, 27 Oct — Behind the faux Moorish splendor of Atlanta's historic Fox Theatre lives the "Phantom of the Fox" — a beloved local figure who twice helped save the landmark from destruction and now is battling to stay in the place where he has lived for more than 30 years.

Joe Patten, 83, occupies a spacious dwelling nestled beneath the theater's onion-shaped dome. His original lease, drawn up in the 1970s after he helped save the Fox from the wrecking ball, said he could live there for life.

Earlier this month his lawyer sued the nonprofit organization that runs the Fox, saying the trustees of Atlanta Landmarks are trying to unfairly evict Patten. The conflict has struck a nerve in Atlanta, where Patten has long been treasured by supporters of the Fox.—Internet

UN votes against US embargo on Cuba for 19th year

UNITED NATIONS, 27 Oct — The UN General Assembly voted overwhelmingly on Tuesday to urge the United States to lift a 48-year-old economic embargo against Cuba, making a now ritual call despite some US easing toward the communist-run island. The assembly passed a nonbinding resolution — with 187 votes in favour, two against and three abstentions for the 19th consecutive year, reflecting the world's disapproval of Washington's long-standing effort to isolate Havana. President Barack Obama's Administration has taken some steps to lessen hostility with Cuba, but has not come close to lifting the trade embargo part of US policy to promote human rights in Cuba because it is seen as too risky in domestic politics. The latest assembly resolution came just a week before US congressional elections, in which Obama's Democrats are forecast to lose ground.

Introducing the measure, Cuban Foreign Minister Bruno Rodriguez dismissed Washington's moves. "Two years after President Obama pledged to seek 'a new beginning with Cuba', facts confirm that nothing has changed," he said. "It is obvious that the United States has no intention whatsoever to lift the blockade." Rodriguez charged that over the past half-century the embargo had caused Cuba economic damage of more than 751 billion US dollars according to the dollar's current value.

"The White House continues to pay more attention to the well-funded 'special interests' of an exiguous minority that has turned the policy against Cuba into a very profitable business," he said.
