but her eyesight is in good condition. It seemed to me that just as she saw our car, she guessed we might be her guests.

We three made cash donations separately to her, which filled my heart completely with pleasure.

When asked if she still remembered the names of her parents and her native town, she said, "Of course, I do. My father is U Kar and my mother is Daw Phwar Ohn. I was born in Hteingon Village. Of the four siblings, I am the youngest. The eldest is a male. Our siblings are a male and three females including me. Our parents were farmers. Our family business was agricultural farming."

I asked if she went to school in her youth, she answered with a smile, "My parents enrolled me in school. But, I always stayed hiding on the way to school because I was in no mood to get school education. So, I am illiterate." "And didn't you attend any Three "Rs" course?"

"No, I didn't, either because I was too shy to do so. But, now I am eager to be literate." "What is your name, please?" "My real name is Daw Mya Gyi. But, when I registered for my national registration card, the clerk wrote down my name as Daw Mya Kyi. So, I was also registered as Daw Mya Kyi when I applied for my Citizenship Scrutiny Card."

Daw Mya Kyi and her little home.

It is very heartening to learn that a citizen of Myanmar, Daw Mya Kyi, is 119 now. She lives in Paukchaing Village in Amarapura Township. Her home is in the easternmost part of the village, close to the village pagoda and the village monastery.

When our car stopped in front of her home, we got a welcoming smile from her. And when we paid respects to the centenarian, she said prayers for our wellbeing. To my surprise, her voice was still clear and vigorous. She said, "I saw your car from afar. So, I just laid the bamboo mat and put the green tea pot and some snacks on it. Would you have some?" She does not need to wear eyeglasses,

Promote national prestige and integrity

A ceremony to pay respects to old musicians and doyen literati will be organized soon. Paying respect to whom respect is due is a way to blessings. Paying respects to older artistes is, indeed, preserving a fine tradition of Myanmar.

The presenting of donations to organize the second ceremony to pay respects to octogenarian musicians to be held by the Myanmar Music Association (Central) took place at the Myanma Radio and Television on Pyay Road in Yangon on 19 December. On the occasion, well-wishers donated cash and kind to doyen literati and old musicians. Throughout successive periods, eminent literati and musicians threw themselves into national movements by creating literary and music works with the aim of inculcating the people with a sense of nationalistic spirit and awareness.

The government is doing everything possible for artistes held in high esteem in order that their living standard become high, and to improve the arts world. Music professionals have to improve the music world and the music community. They are under a responsibility for contributing to the music world. They have to serve not only national interests but also that of the music world and their own.

Music is delicate and its power is too great in organizing people. It is required to make harmonious cooperation among related individuals and associations for Myanmar arts including Myanmar music to become popular worldwide. Today, alien music and decadent costumes are penetrating the nation. Accordingly, it is obligatory for musicians to preserve fine traditions and national culture.

Achieving modern things is a sign of development. However, a noteworthy point in that regard is that copying alien culture, lifestyle and behaviours can have adverse effects on Myanmar culture and Myanmar music. The onus is, thus, on every music professional to preserve and promote Myanmar music, traditions and national culture.

Clash leaves dozen dead including five civilians in S Afghanistan

LASHKAR GAH, 22 Dec— A clash between Taliban and NATO-led forces left a dozen people dead including five civilians in the southern Helmand Province on Tuesday, Daud Ahmadi, the spokesman for the Helmand Provincial administration, said Wednesday.

“The clash happened in Sangin District on Tuesday when the militants opened fire and the international troops responded, leaving seven rebels dead,” Ahmadi told Xinhua.

“Unfortunately five innocent civilians including three children and two women were also killed as they were caught in the cross fire,” the official added.

Meantime, the NATO-led forces confirmed in a press release the civilian casualties, adding the troops had discovered five civilian casualties following an militants attack.

“The International Security Assistance Force is looking into civilian casualties in Sangin District, Helmand Province,” the press release said.

Afghan official rebukes NATO for civilian deaths

KABUL, 22 Dec—An Afghan Provincial governor says NATO needs to exert greater caution in its operations following the death of five civilians during a battle with militants.

The office of the governor of Helmand Province said in a statement on Wednesday that the five civilians killed during the clash a day earlier included three women and two children. NATO says it is investigating the deaths, which Afghan officials say occurred during a Taliban raid on an Afghan national police checkpoint.

Afghan officials have repeatedly spoken out about civilian deaths, arguing that the international forces are not being careful enough to avoid such casualties as the war nears its tenth year. Militants also try to use the civilian death toll as a way of rallying support for their cause.

African elephant' actually two separate species

NEW YORK, 22 Dec—Everyone is taught that there are two species of elephants - the African and the Asian - but new research is suggesting this isn't the whole truth. The "African elephant" is actually two species, as evolutionarily different as lions and tigers are from one another.

"It's really a remarkable degree of divergence between the two," said study leader Alfred Roca of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. "The forest and savanna [elephants] are as different as the Asian elephant and woolly mammoth."

Roca and his collaborators discovered the evolutionary discrepancy by analyzing DNA of the living elephant species and two of their extinct evolutionary cousins, the woolly mammoth and mastodon. The study is published in this week's issue of the journal PLoS Biology, and is the first sequence of these extinct animals' nuclear genomes, which is the DNA that resides in the nuclei of cells and gets passed down to offspring by both parents. (By contrast, mitochondrial DNA hides out in the energy-making structures of cells and is only passed down by females.)

The species, which can be divided by their habitat into the forest elephant and savanna elephant, seem to have separated several million years ago, about the same time that humans diverged from chimps.

How penguins got their cold-weather coats

NEW YORK, 22 Dec—Those tuxedo-wearing birds that inhabit Earth's coldest continent may have evolved a means of retaining heat when they were still living in warm climates, scientists now suggest.

A key adaptation that helped modern penguins to invade the cold waters of Antarctica within the last 16 million years is the so-called humeral arterial plexus, a network of blood vessels that limits heat loss through the wings.

The plexus routes blood coming into the body from the wings past the blood traveling from the body to the wings. As such, the cooler blood from the wings, which get cold in the water, is heated up by warmer blood from the body, thus conserving heat.

Global rivers release huge amounts of potent greenhouse gas

WASHINGTON, 22 Dec—Rivers may be a significant source of the greenhouse gas nitrous oxide, scientists now find.

Their calculation suggests that across the globe the waterways contribute three times the amount of nitrous oxide to the atmosphere as had been estimated by the International Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), the United Nations scientific body charged with reviewing climate change research.

They found that the amount of nitrous oxide produced in streams is related to human activities that release nitrogen into the environment, such as fertilizer use and sewage discharges.

"Human activities, including fossil fuel combustion and intensive agriculture, have increased the availability of nitrogen in the environment," said Jake Beaulieu of the University of Notre Dame and the US Environmental Protection Agency in Cincinnati, Ohio, and lead author of the paper published this week in the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

"Much of this nitrogen is transported into river and stream networks," Beaulieu said. There, in a process called denitrification, microbes convert the nitrogen into nitrous.

Synology announces new 15TB NAS device

NEW YORK, 22 Dec—Synology America Corp on Tuesday announced the release of its newest server, the Disk Station DS1511+. Synology, a manufacturer of network attached storage devices for homes and businesses, has a reputation for creating feature-rich NAS solutions for a variety of audiences, and this latest unit should satisfy small businesses, prosumers, and network administrators. Capable of storing up to 15TB of data, this expansive NAS device is for those with serious storage demands.

The $900 DS1511+ is the successor to Synology's DS1010+ server model. Alone, the new device can hold up to five 3TB SATA hard drives that can be configured in a variety of RAID arrays for maximum performance or maximum redundancy. When it is connected with two of Synology's DX510 server storage expansion units, it can manage and process the storage of a whopping 15 3TB drives. According to Synology's press materials, in a RAID 5 configuration the DS1511+ can write the drives at a rate 165.91 MB/sec, and reads them at 197.8 MB/sec. The device is also reportedly able to host up to 30 websites on its hard drives.

The new server runs Synology's Disk Station Manager (DSM) 3.0 operating system. The DSM 3.0's user interface (UI) is designed to look like a common household desktop UI, and sports features such as multi-tasking, multimedia streaming, and Time-Machine-like back-up options. According to Synology, the UI's User Home Feature makes it easy for office administrators to create secure, shared folders for a large amount of server users to access information from. The DSM 3.0 can be remotely accessed via any Windows, Mac, or Linux workstation.

New foursquare update adds support for photos, comments

NEW YORK, 22 Dec—On Monday, Foursquare, one of the more popular location-based social networks, launched an updated app for the iPhone that allows users to post photos and leave comments about their own check-ins and friends' check-ins. That opens up a new level of communication for Foursquare that may enhance the "social" experience in the eyes of some users.

Foursquare says the addition of photos will allow users to, for example, "see dishes before ordering them, figure out if a venue looks fun, or easily identify a hard-to-find spot." Foursquare has already partnered with a few companies to push photos to users' devices when they check-in to certain places.

The comment feature allows users to post thoughts about friends' check-ins to, say, share plans to meet at a particular neighbourhood bar later in the evening. With the iPhone's push notification enabled, Foursquare will update users about their friends' comments on the fly, even if the app isn't currently active.

Gene activity may affect acute myeloid leukemia outcome

NEW YORK, 22 Dec—For acute myeloid leukemia patients, overactive genes in their leukemic stem cells (LSC) can translate into a more difficult struggle to overcome their disease and achieve prolonged remission, new research reveals.

“In many cancers, specific subpopulations of cells appear to be uniquely capable of initiating and maintaining tumours,” the study authors explained in their report. The researchers identified 52 LSC genes that, when highly active, appear to prompt worse outcomes among acute myeloid leukemia (AML) patients.

The finding is reported in the 22/29 Dec issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Between 2005 and 2007, study author Andrew J Gentles, of Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif, and colleagues examined gene activity in a group of AML patients as well as healthy individuals. Separate data concerning AML tumors in four groups of patients (totaling more than 1,000) was also analyzed.

In one of the patient groups, the investigators found that higher activity levels among 52 LSC genes meant a 78 percent risk of death within a three-year period. This compared with a 57 percent risk of death in the same time frame for AML patients with lower gene activity among these specific “signature” genes.

Sudden infant deaths most common on New Year's Day

LOS ANGELES, 22 Dec—More babies die of sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS) in the United States on New Year's Day than any other day of the year, a new study finds.

Researchers at the University of California, San Diego analyzed a database of 129,090 deaths from SIDS from 1973-2006 and 295,151 other infant deaths during that time period.

They found that the highest number of deaths from SIDS occur on New Year's Day, increasing by almost a third above the number of deaths that would be expected on a winter day.

It's not clear why, but the researchers suspect it has something to do with parents who drink heavily the night before and put their children in jeopardy.

“Alcohol-influenced adults are less able to protect children in their care,” study author David Phillips, a sociologist, said in remarks published by HealthDay News on Tuesday. “We're saying the same thing is happening with SIDS: They're also less likely to protect the baby from it. It seems as if alcohol is a risk factor. We just need to find out what makes it a risk factor.”—Xinhua

Taking whole-fat dairy products may lower Type 2 diabetes risk

NEW YORK, 22 Dec—People who consumed the highest levels of whole-fat dairy a day had a 60-percent lower risk of developing Type 2 diabetes than people who ate the lowest amounts of dairy, according to the study published in the 21 Dec issue of the Annals of Internal Medicine. Whole-fat dairy products contain trans-palmitoleic acid which promotes healthy levels of blood cholesterol, normal insulin levels and increased insulin sensitivity, said study researcher Dr Dariush Mozaffarian, assistant professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School.

“These findings do suggest that we should think of dairy as more than a carrier of calcium and vitamin D,” Mozaffarian said.

The finding is based on 20 years of health data from 3,736 people who participated in the Cardiovascular Health Study, funded by the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute.—Internet

Nike future orders disappoint, shares fall

Nike shoes are displayed at a Niketown store in Beverly Hills, California, on 16 March, 2010.—INTERNET

DETROIT, 22 Dec—Nike Inc (NKE.N) posted future orders data that missed many analysts' expectations Tuesday, sending shares of the world's largest athletic shoe and clothing maker down almost 6 percent.

Nike also said it might undertake some targeted price increases to help offset rising cotton costs.

Future orders, excluding currency exchange rates—a key measure of sales growth—rose 11 percent.

“They didn't beat rising expectations for future orders and that's why the stock's down,” said Jon Fisher, portfolio manager with Fifth Third Asset Management, which owns Nike shares. Wall Street was looking for future orders growth of 12 to 13 percent, he said.

Nike executives also repeated comments made in the previous quarter that rising cotton, labor and transportation costs would hurt profit margins in the second half of the fiscal year despite rising demand. They said the cost pressures would ease over the next 12 to 18 months.”

“As supply and demand find a new normal in the recovering economy, our industry is going to experience margin pressure due to rising input costs,” Nike Chief Executive Mark Parkers said on a conference call. Executives again said the company is working to boost capacity at supplier factories and it would continue to incur higher-than-normal air freight costs at least through the first half of fiscal 2012 as it tries to meet strong demand.—Reuters

China frets about EU debt woes

BEIJING, 22 Dec—China urged European policymakers to back their tough talk with action on Tuesday by showing they can contain the euro zone's festering debt problems.

China, which has invested an undisclosed portion of its 2.65 trillion US dollars reserves in the euro, said it backed Europe's efforts so far to tackle the debt problems, but made clear it would like to see the measures having more effect. “We are very concerned about whether the European debt crisis can be controlled,” Chinese Commerce Minister Chen Deming said during a dialogue between China and the European Union (EU), its biggest trade partner.

“We want to see if the EU is able to control sovereign debt risks and whether consensus can be translated into real action to enable Europe to emerge from the financial crisis soon and in a good shape.” China's Vice Premier Wang Qishan said Beijing had played its part to ease Europe's plight and held out hope that a turning point was near. “The EU has taken active measures to deal with the debt crisis, and we hope the measures can achieve some results as soon as possible,” Wang said at the opening of the trade dialogue.—MNA/Reuters

TD Bank to buy Chrysler Financial for $6.3b

TORONTO, 22 Dec—Toronto-Dominion Bank has agreed to buy Chrysler Financial, the automaker's old lending arm, from private equity firm Cerberus Capital Management LP for $6.3 billion.

The deal announced Tuesday is the latest example of a healthy Canadian bank using their muscle to snap up US institutions battered by the financial crisis.

Toronto-Dominion CEO Ed Clark said Canada's second-largest bank is looking to accelerate growth in the US and this deal makes them a top five North American auto lender.

“We're taking advantage of a disruptive market to add on assets that in the heyday you could never buy for these kind of prices,” Clark said in an interview with The Associated Press.

New York-based Cerberus bought Chrysler Financial in 2007 as part of the $7.4 billion deal to take over Chrysler's automaking business and lending business. Oil rises above $90 amid US crude supply drop

World oil prices fell back on profit-taking a day after jumping sharply as official data showed a huge decline in US crude inventories.—INTERNET

SINGAPORE, 22 Dec—Oil prices rose above $90 a barrel Wednesday in Asia after a report showed US crude supplies dropped more than expected for a second week, which suggests demand is improving.

Benchmark oil for February delivery was up 20 cents to $90.02 a barrel at midday Singapore time in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract rose 45 cents to settle at $89.82 on Tuesday.

The American Petroleum Institute said late Tuesday that crude inventories fell 5.8 million barrels last week while analysts surveyed by Platts, the energy information arm of McGraw-Hill Cos, had forecast a drop of 2.4 million barrels. Inventories of gasoline decreased 2.9 million barrels and distillates rose slightly, the API said.

The Energy Department's Energy Information Administration reports its weekly supply data later Wednesday. The EIA said last week that supplies dropped 9.9 million barrels the previous week, the biggest drop in eight years. Oil prices, which rose to a two-year high above $90 earlier this month, have been supported by rallying stock markets. Meanwhile, a strengthening US dollar, which makes crude more expensive for investors with other currencies, has weighed on oil.

Japan's GDP growth to slow in 2011

TOKYO, 22 Dec—Japan's economic growth will slow in fiscal 2011 to a real 1.5 percent from 3.1 percent in this year on soft private consumption and the ebbing impact of stimulus measures, the government said Wednesday.

In its outlook report, the Cabinet Office also said consumer prices will remain unchanged in the year starting April.

Recent year-on-year falls in the consumer price index will halt in the middle of next year, it said, but suggested this would not represent the defeat of chronic deflation in the economy.

The growth projection for the current year was upwardly revised to 3.1 per cent from an earlier estimate 2.6 percent in real, or price-adjusted, terms.

The revision came after government stimulus measures helped boost domestic production and consumption, including subsidy programmes for purchases of environmentally friendly vehicles and appliances.

Japan's economy grew 4.5 percent in the July-September quarter, amplified by a rush by car buyers to use expiring subsidies and smokers who stocked up on cigarettes ahead of a tax hike during the period.

The hottest summer on record also drove sales of items such as air conditioners, helping spur growth in the quarter. Private consumption accounts for around 60 percent of gross domestic product.

However, analysts warn of a contraction in the fourth calendar quarter as the removal of such one-off factors highlights Japan's exposure to a weakening export picture and slow domestic demand.—Internet

Belgium to shift EU rotating presidency to Hungary

BRUSSELS, 22 Dec— Belgium is set to shift a six-month rotating presidency of the European Council to Hungary at the end of the year, with the latter vowing to promote a "strong Europe with a human touch."

"More than 50 agreements have been met over the last 6 months," Belgian Prime Minister Yves Leterme said about his country's presidency of the EU. "It is definitely a very good score." In the aftermath of the economic and financial crisis, the Belgian presidency managed to facilitate the consensus in the area of economic governance as well as the adoption of an important financial supervision package, including the establishment of a permanent crisis mechanism, he said.

The presidency succeeded in settling long-standing disputes, in particular the adoption of the 2011 budget, and the perspective of getting to a single European pattern in 2011, after a blockage of over 10 years. With external relations high on the agenda, the presidency contributed to signing a free trade agreement with South Korea, reaching an accord with Russia on the country's accession to the World Trade Organization (WTO) and launching the European External Action Service (EEAS).

Panama issues sanitary alert due to cholera

PANAMA CITY, 22 Dec—Panama's government Tuesday declared a sanitary alert to prevent the spread of cholera, which has been sweeping across Haiti since October.

"Panama is not immune from this disease since it is a transit country," Panamanian Health Minister Franklin Vergara said when announcing the measure.

Vergara said the measure includes the reinforcement of health checks at the main entry points into the country.

"We have not relaxed (our vigilance), and we maintain checkpoints in ports and airports in the entire country," Vergara said.

Vergara also urged people to maintain strict hygiene measures, especially in the zones affected by the flooding.

The alert also includes a campaign to raise awareness about the disease, reinforced by surveillance, epidemiological, laboratory, and environment sanitat-ion, as well as food safety measures.

The Health Ministry also distributed oral rehydration packs, gastric tubes, and catheters, as part of the alert.—Xinhua

Navy rescues nine people in Fiji waters

SUVA, 22 Dec—The Fiji Navy said on Wednesday that its patrol boat RFNS Kiro on Tuesday night rescued nine people who were drifting in waters between capital Suva and Kadavu, one of the islands in the Fiji Group.

The nine, including two children aged 13 and 11 and an 11 month old baby, were travelling in a fibre glass boat from Suva to Dravuni in Kadavu when they encountered engine problems resulting in them drifting for several hours, according to the navy.

The master of the fibre glass boat said they may have used wrong fuel as their outboard engine had locked. Two children traveled without their parents.

The Fiji Navy has warned people in the country to refrain from taking risks when traveling to their villagers this Christmas weekend.

It was shocking to know that parents in the island nation exposed these children to a risk by taking the trip to the islands and this is something common during the festive season, said Navy Commander Frances Kean.

Australian man jailed for lying about being a POW

BRISBANE, 22 Dec—An elderly Australian man has been sentenced to four years in jail for lying about being a prisoner of war in order to claim hundreds of thousands of dollars in pension payments.

Judge Marshall Irwin of the Brisbane District Court on Tuesday said 84-year-old Arthur Crane would be released after six months on a good behaviour bond.

Crane claimed he was captured and tortured by the Japanese during World War II. In reality, he had never served in the military.

Before his lies were uncovered in 2009, Crane claimed nearly 690,000 Australian dollars ($687,560) in war pension and disability payments. He was not entitled to A$464,409 of that amount and has been ordered to repay the money.

Crane pleaded guilty to defrauding the Commonwealth.—Internet

Panamanian vessel stranded in seas off northeast Japan, no injury reported

TOKYO, 22 Dec—A Panamanian cargo ship was left stranded in seas off Japan's Fukushima Prefecture, northeast of Tokyo, on Wednesday morning, local media reported.

The 15 crew members aboard the ship "Sea Ace," including 11 Chinese, were not injured, local authorities said.

The local coast guard officials in the prefecture said the vessel met with strong wind and was stranded about five kilometres southwest of the Onahama port. The officials added it did not leak oil but was unable to sail on its own.

The coast guard authorities were ready to rescue the crew members on board.

Snow reveals "weak link" in EU travel chain

BRUSSELS, 22 Dec—The severe travel disruption caused by heavy snow reveal a weak link in the European travel chain, European Commissioner for Transport Siim Kallas said here on Tuesday.

Heavy snowfalls and black ice have wreaked havoc upon air, rail and road links across Europe these last few days, resulting in the canceling of numerous flights and trains in major European cities and leaving thousands of passengers to their fate.

"I am extremely concerned about the level of disruption to travel across Europe caused by severe snow. It is unacceptable and should not happen again," Kallas said.

Major airports in England, France,

Belgium, and the Netherlands are still operating very limited services Tuesday due to the snow and freezing weather. Thousands of passengers were even forced to sleep in airports.

The commissioner pointed out the problems relating to airlines infrastructure during this severe snow wave as a "weak link" in the travel chain. "I intend to convene a meeting with airports representatives in the coming days to ask for further explanations and to take a hard look at what is necessary to make sure they would be able to operate more effectively in the similar situations in the future," the commissioner said.

Subways in US capital area start random bag inspections

WASHINGTON, 22 Dec—US law enforcement officers on Tuesday began conducting random inspections of carry-on items on the Metro system in the capital area. It's the first time such measures have been adopted in the region to enhance transportation security.

Random inspections were conducted early Tuesday morning in at least two Metro stations in Maryland and Virginia suburbs of Washington, DC.

Last week, the Metro Transit Police Department (MTPD) announced its decision to add this new security measure aimed to detect explosive materials and other dangers.

The inspections are expected to take only minutes and are designed to be non-intrusive, as police will randomly select bags or packages to check for hazardous materials using ionization technology as well as K-9 units trained to detect explosive materials, the MTPD said while announcing the plan.

Carry-on items will generally not be opened and physically inspected unless the equipment indicates a need for further inspection, it added.

Anyone who is randomly selected and refuses to submit their carry-on items for inspection will be prohibited from bringing those items into the station.

Eurozone consumer confidence drops in December

BRUSSELS, 22 Dec—Flash consumer confidence for the euro area dropped in December after six months of improvement, the European Commission said on Monday.

The consumer confidence indicator dropped from -9.4 in November to -11.0 in December, according to the monthly survey conducted by the European Commission.

Confidence of consumers among the 27-member European Union (EU) declined from -11.0 in November to -12.1 in December.

But the European Commission said that the Economic Sentiment Indicator (ESI), which reflects overall economic confidence of both consumers and producers, increased further in both the euro area and the EU in November.

The ESI climbed by 1.3 points to 105.2 in the EU and by 1.5 points to 105.3 in the euro area, driven by strong positive readings in Germany.

Among the seven largest member states, Germany saw the most significant increase of 2.8 points, followed by Italy, up 1.4 points.

Briton stabbed and US tourist killed in Israel knife attack

JERUSALEM, 22 Dec — An American woman was knifed to death and her British Israeli companion seriously injured when they were attacked by two assailants while walking in the wooded hills near Jerusalem over the weekend. Briton Kaye Wilson, who narrowly survived the assault, claimed that two Arab men attacked her and her friend before trussing them and stabbing them repeatedly.

Suspicion for the attack appeared to fall on Arab militants. Micky Rosenfeld, a police spokesman, said it was probably a "terrorist attack" given the way in which the two women were tied up and stabbed. "The main line that we're looking at is that it's a nationalistically-motivated attack, but we haven't ruled out possible criminal motives," Mr Rosenfeld said. Israeli soldiers raided a Palestinian hospital in nearby Bethlehem, in case the attackers were injured and sought treatment. No arrests were made.

Ms Wilson, a 46-year old Briton who emigrated to Israel in 1991, described how she and her friend, identified by police as US citizen Christine Logan, also in her 40s, were hiking near archaeological remains in the forested hills southwest of Jerusalem when two Arabic-speaking men approached and asked for water in Hebrew. — Internet

Two die in private jet crash

BEVER, 22 Dec — A private jet crashed during an aborted landing in Switzerland on Sunday, killing the two people on board, authorities said. The Swiss newspaper Neue Zuercher Zeitung reported the twin-turbo aircraft went down near a power transformer station located at the edge of Bever, a village of about 650 people in the Upper Engadine, a valley in the Swiss Alps. The crash caused a power outage in the area that lasted for several hours, the newspaper said. Police said it was snowing and visibility was poor at the time, apparently causing the pilot to approach at too high an altitude. The aircraft crashed and burst into flames, witnesses said.— Internet

Several feet of snow bury US mountains

LOS ANGELES, 22 Dec — Several feet of new snow had piled up in California's mountains by Sunday afternoon and it was still coming down, meteorologists said. Accuweather.com reported Mammoth Mountain Ski Resort said it had received 9 feet of new snow since Friday at its peak elevation of about 11,000 feet, and at the 8,000-foot level, there was 6.5 feet.

"Measuring snow in inches is so last week we busted out the yardstick," the Los Angeles Times reported @MammothMountain touted on its Twitter page. The Times said the heavy snowfall in the Mammoth and Lake Tahoe ski areas prompted forecasters to issue back country avalanche warnings.

The snowfall had reached 2-5 feet at many locations across the Sierra Nevada range with 1-3 feet more expected through on Monday night, Accuweather.com said. Even more is possible on some peaks above 6,000 feet, the weather service said.— Internet

Israeli air force sonic booms ignite crocodiles' sex drives

JERUSALEM, 22 Dec — Sonic booms created by Israeli air force planes breaking the sound barrier have stimulated the sex drive of a group of crocodiles on a local farm.

The males have already begun their mating calls, described by the newspaper as "the sound a vehicle breaking," normally reserved for the crocodiles' spring mating season, Israeli newspaper Maariv reported.

David Golan of the Hamat Gadar crocodile farm in the Golan Heights, believes the reptiles were responding to the sonic booms, wrongly believing they were the calls of rival males encroaching on their territory. The farm is home to around 100 crocodiles and stands beneath airspace used to train Israeli air force pilots.— Internet

Running red light leads to 500-pound marijuana bust

Police stopped a driver for running a red light and discovered more than 500 pounds of marijuana inside his minivan, authorities said on Monday.

Clement Hunter, 30, was awaiting arraignment on Monday following his arrest on drug charges, authorities said.

Hunter ran a red traffic light in the city's Queens borough early on Sunday morning and tried to evade police for several blocks, police said.

When he was pulled over, the 513 pounds of marijuana stuffed into large garbage bags was partly visible inside his minivan, police said.

He faces 50 counts of felony possession of marijuana as well as charges of reckless endangerment and fleeing officers.

The source of the marijuana and Hunter's destination were still under investigation, police said.

Rider pulls knife on California cabbie, leaves tip

A California taxi passenger may have an anger problem, but he's no Grinch. Police in Sacramento got a report that a man pulled a knife on a cab driver during a dispute over the weekend but still made sure to pay his fare — plus tip.

The Sacramento Bee says the rider argued with the driver about his desired destination on Saturday then pulled out a folding-blade knife, prompting the driver to run away on foot. The passenger also fled — after leaving his cab fare and a tip. Police say the passenger has not been found.

Shot-up prop car causes brief Philadelphia scare

Police officers in downtown Philadelphia who came across a shot-up car with exposed wiring inside were about to call the bomb squad when they found out it was a movie prop.

The Philadelphia Inquirer reports police stopped Friday morning in the Old City section when they saw the car riddled with bullet holes and side windows shot out. They also saw wires running from the trunk into the dashboard.

The officers were ready to close the street and call the bomb squad when a security guard told them it was for a film.

Zhao Wei announces new film

BEIJING, 22 Dec—After devoting an entire year to her family, actress Zhao Wei has announced her comeback role, actually two roles.

Zhao Wei will play two roles in "Underground Resistance", a film that involves romance and time travel, the actress said 21 December, 2010 at a Press conference held for the film in Tianjin.

"But I can't say more at the moment. The scripts are still undergoing some changes," Zhao Wei was quoted in a report on Sina.com.cn.

The film, directed by Li Xin ("Dazzling"; 2002), will also star actor Huang Xiaoming ("Sacrifice"; 2010), Zhao Wei's classmate from the Beijing Film Academy.

It will be the first collaboration between them, who are both now A-listed stars.

Shooting is scheduled to start in February, with a release date set in the second half of 2011.

important to continue to rest and recover this offseason as opposed to going on loan," Donovan said in a statement on Tuesday.

The American was loaned to English Premier League club Everton from January-March, scoring two goals in 13 matches. Gustavo not a done deal

BERLIN, 22 Dec — Bayern Munich president Karl-Heinz Rummenigge has insisted no decision has been made concerning the signing of Brazilian midfielder Luiz Gustavo from Bundesliga rivals Hoffenheim. "I can confirm that discussions have taken place but a decision has not yet been taken," Rummenigge told Wednesday's edition of the Munchner Merkur daily.

German millionaire Hopp, who bank-rolls Hoffenheim, had said he "was clear as spring water that Luiz Gustavo would rejoin Bayern during the summer".

"Mr (Dietmar) Hopp's comments surprised me,"

Rummenigge countered.

Bayern are reported to be ready to pay 15 million euros to recruit the 23-year-old. Rummenigge also cast further doubt on the future of Bayern captain Mark van Bommel. The 33-year-old Dutchman is out of contract next June and speculation is rife he is set to switch to Wolfsburg, coached by ex-England boss Steve McClaren, to bolster their midfield.

Robben to return against Wolfsburg

MUNICH, 22 Dec — Bayern Munich coach Louis van Gaal said on Tuesday he was counting on Arjen Robben returning to action for the first Bundesliga game after the winter break against Wolfsburg on 15 January.

The Dutchman has not played since returning from the World Cup in South Africa with a torn hamstring. "He's very good in training and he feels absolutely no pain," said van Gaal.

"He's very impatient to play, it's normal after six months out, but he has to wait until 15 January."

Robben will feature in a friendly against a German regional side on 12 January and if he holds up will play for up to 30 minutes against Wolfsburg. But van Gaal ruled out the 26-year-old playing during Wednesday's German Cup tie against Stuttgart. "If I do that I think that Dr Muller-Wohlfahrt would have a heart attack," joked the Dutch coach.

Rogne strikes late to snatch point for Celtic

GLASGOW, 22 Dec — Celtic blew the chance to top the Scottish Premier League as they needed a late Thomas Rogne goal to snatch a 1-1 draw with Kilmarnock at Parkhead on Tuesday.

It was the Hoops' third successive draw in the league at home and means rivals Rangers top the league at Christmas by two points despite their game against Dundee United being postponed due to the weather.

Killie hadn't won at Celtic Park in 55 years but Connor Sammon gave them hope when he fired them into a 54th minute lead completely against the run of play. The Ayrshire side desperately hung on to their lead until the 86th minute when Rogne headed Ki Sung-Yeung's free-kick home to grab a point as Celtic were left ruing a host of missed opportunities in both halves.—Internet

Benitez still Inter coach - Moratti

ROME, 22 Dec — Rafael Benitez remained coach of Inter Milan on Tuesday, insisted club president Massimo Moratti, despite renewed speculation that the Spaniard had been sacked.

After attending a meeting at the club's Milan offices Moratti declared in answer to a question whether Benitez was still Inter boss "Yes, yes. There are no other thoughts."

"I have heard of and read about contacts being made with other coaches, but the club has not made contact with any other coach and will not until the situation is clarified."

Earlier Benitez's agent also dismissed rumours suggesting the Inter Milan coach's days at the club were numbered.

"No one called me and I've had no meeting scheduled with Massimo Moratti," Manuel Garcia Quilon told the ANSA news agency.

Anelka, Henry hold out on World Cup bonuses

PARIS, 22 Dec — Nicolas Anelka and Thierry Henry are the only two members of France's disgraced World Cup team not to have forfeited their bonuses from the tournament, a French Football Federation (FFF) source told AFP on Tuesday.

India puts Mumbai, Gujarat on high alert

NEW DELHI, 22 Dec — India put Mumbai and Ahmadabad, the state capital of Gujarat, on the alert after getting specific intelligence that terror group Lashkar-e-Taiba (LeT) had sent militants to the two cities to strike at them in coming days. The Times of India reported on electronic edition on Wednesday.

“We alerted these two cities on Monday. House-to-house search is going on in both Mumbai and Ahmadabad as we have some location-specific intelligence inputs,” the report quoted a senior home ministry official as saying.

He said specific instructions had been issued for taking all possible steps to foil any attempt by LeT terrorists to unleash violence, said the report.

Additional forces have been deployed in all sensitive and crowded areas, including markets, religious places, bus and railway stations. Special precautions are also being taken in view of huge gatherings at some places in both the cities during Christmas and New Year celebrations, according to the report.
