Challenges of the nearest future

On the wall of the global house, 2012 calendar has taken the place of 2011.

The global panorama seems to be less tensions, conflicts and revolutions for the moment. The nations big or small across the world are playing different roles on global political stage, whose background has undergone a change.

The drive for global development has shifted from the West to Asia and South America. East-looking policy has become hot among the global powers. However, dialogues, debates, demands, alliance and grouping of nations strong or weak go to the one ultimate objective — own national interests.

Rejoining the global family, Myanmar has to seek opportunities for her national interests taking advantages of interests shift of superpowers and fostering relations with neighbours and from regional organizations.

Urgent challenges are awaiting Myanmar on its road to democracy. Making eternal peace with national armed groups, optimistic participation of all in nation-building endeavours, continued implementation of modernization plans, creditability of clean government and good governance are urgent needs for Myanmar whose democracy is its infancy.

No doubt, Myanmar currently is not on par with governments, peoples and practices of old democracies, but the democracy sapling grown on its land is showing encouraging signs. And all we need to do is to give a loving and caring hand in nurturing the sapling to become a deeply-rooted big tree.

We have eaten and are eating the fruits grown by our forefathers. Trees grown by our predecessors have given and are giving shelters to us. Whenever we enjoy this kind of benefits, we bow to our older generation with much appreciation. You are holding the present and what would you leave for your younger generation?

Thai elephant killed, mutilated 'for restaurants'

BANGKOK, 6 Jan—Thai wildlife officials on Thursday said body parts from a dead wild elephant found without its tusks, tail and penis were likely destined for restaurants in tourist areas.

The creature, which was discovered in Kaeng Krachan National Park in central Thailand on Monday, is believed to have died at the hands of a local gang of poachers. "They cut its tusks, trunk, sexual organ and tail. Those parts must be sold to the middleman and will be sent to restaurants in the main tourist spots like Phuket, Surat Thani and Hua Hin," park head Chaiwat Limlikhitakorn told AFP.

The wildlife department has found four elephant carcasses killed by poachers in the past three years.

Chaiwat blamed ineffective laws for the increase in the crime and putting more than 250 wild elephants and the officers in danger. Thailand is known as a global hub for the illegal ivory trade, with a dramatic rise in seizures of tusks in recent years as the decimation of the kingdom's elephants has seen poachers turn to Africa for their plunder.

Chile wildfires kill six firefighters, one missing

SANTIAGO, 6 Jan—Shifting winds caused flames to sweep over a group of firefighters battling wildfires in Chile on Thursday, killing six of them, badly burning two and leaving another missing.

A 10th firefighter listed as missing after his brigade was trapped in the flames was later found unhurt, said Gov Miguel Mellado of Cautin, a state about 450 miles (730 kilometres) south of the capital, Santiago.

Nearly 50 wildfires have sprung up in southern Chile, destroying hundreds of houses, forcing the evacuations of thousands of people and causing millions of dollars in damage to the forestry and tourism industries that fuel the economy in the country's Patagonia region. The wildfires alongside the Cordillera de la Costa are being fueled by strong winds, unusually high temperatures and dangerously dry conditions.

A sudden shift in the high winds left the group of firefighters overwhelmed by flames.

"The wind trapped them and the flames passed over" the firefighters, Mellado said.

Mellado originally said five firefighters were killed, but President Sebastian Pinera raised the toll to six. Fires have blackened much of the Torres del Paine park, which attracts 150,000 tourists annually, most during the brief southern summer, and destroyed at least part of a mill run by Chile's leading timber company.—Internet

Crews gaining ground on northwestern Montana fires

BROWNING, 6 Jan—A pair of rare winter wildfires fueled by 60 mph gusts burned buildings and forced hundreds from their homes overnight on Montana's Blackfoot Indian Reservation, but better weather conditions on Thursday helped firefighters get a handle on the blazes.

The grass fires started around sundown Wednesday and together grew to 16,000 acres by early Thursday, said tribal spokesman Wayne Smith. At least 300 people were evacuated from homes and a boarding school, though no injuries had been reported.

"It's probably the biggest grass fire in reservation history," Smith said. "It was just a wall of fire heading east." Smith estimated between 10 and 15 buildings were damaged or destroyed on the northwestern Montana reservation east of Glacier National Park. Fire incident commander Robert LaPlant confirmed Thursday evening that one home had been destroyed but did not yet know the total number of structures damaged.

JR Clark, a rancher who lives off Boarding School Road north of Browning, the site of the larger fire, said he and a hired hand ignored the mandatory evacuation order and stayed to fight the blaze.

"I said, 'You're going to have to throw me in jail because I'm not leaving,'" Clark said. "I had to save my ranch."

The two of them used a tractor with an attached plow to attack the fire as it approached the main house. After working from 6 pm until

One NATO service member killed in Afghanistan

KABUL, 6 Jan—A soldier with the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) was killed in the Taliban-linked attack in Afghanistan on Friday, bringing the number of casualties to four since Thursday, a statement of the alliance said. "An International Security Assistance Force service member died following an militant attack in southern Afghanistan today," the statement said.

However, it did not identify the nationality of the victim, saying it is ISAF policy to defer causality identification procedures to the relevant national authorities. Three more service members of the NATO-led forces were killed by a roadside bomb in southern Afghanistan on Thursday.

The southern Afghan Provinces of Kandahar, Helmand, Zabul and Uruzgan have been regarded as the hotbed of Taliban militants.

Since the beginning of 2012, six foreign soldiers have been killed in Afghanistan.

British ICRC worker kidnapped in Pakistan

QUETTA, 6 Jan—Unidentified gunmen on Thursday kidnapped a British employee of the International Committee of the Red Cross in Pakistan's militancy-hit southwestern Province of Baluchistan. The ICRC said its health programme manager Khalil Rasjed Dale was seized around lunchtime in Quetta, the main town of the province, which borders both Iran and Afghanistan.

Violence in Baluchistan has surged in recent years, and it has seen a number of abductions of Westerners, including the local head of the UN refugee agency in 2009 and two Swiss tourists last year.

The ICRC said Dale was taken as he returned home from work but police, quoting witnesses, said he was abducted in front of his office by eight masked gunmen who were lying in wait for him.

One opened the door of Dale's Land Cruiser and kidnapped him at gunpoint, police said. "The moment Dale reached in front of his office, unknown gunmen riding a Land Cruiser picked him and took him away," Nazir Kurd, a senior police official in Quetta told AFP.

Kurd said Dale — initially named by police as Khalil Ahmad Dale — is a British Muslim and has been working in Quetta for a year.

The ICRC office is in a high security neighbourhood along with offices of other international organizations.

A statement from the humanitarian organisation called for Dale's "swift and unconditional release" and said it had no information about the identities or motives of his captors.

S'pore scientists identify gene responsible for lung cancer

Singapore scientists have, for the first time, identified a gene responsible for lung cancer. The Agency for Science, Technology and Research (A*STAR) said the finding, reported in the advanced online issue of Cell on 5 Jan, is a huge step towards finding a cure for the disease.—INTERNET

SINGAPORE, 6 Jan—Singapore scientists have, for the first time, identified a gene responsible for lung cancer.

The Agency for Science, Technology and Research (A*STAR) said the finding, reported in the advanced online issue of Cell on 5 January, is a huge step towards finding a cure for the disease. The team is headed by Dr Bing Lim, associate director of Cancer Stem Cell Biology at the Genome Institute of Singapore (GIS), a research institute under the umbrella of A*STAR, and Dr Elaine Lim, medical oncologist affiliated with Tan Tock Seng Hospital (TTSH) and National Cancer Centre Singapore (NCCS).

A*STAR said a small number of cells, known as cancer stem cells or tumour-initiating cells (TIC), are responsible for the promotion of tumour growth. And the team was successful in finding a marker, known as CD166, to identify these cells.

With the finding of this marker, the team then made more inroads into the genomic study of the TICs, and discovered several genes that were important for the growth of cancer cells.

The metabolic enzyme known as glycine decarboxylase (GLDC) is a normal occurring enzyme in cells, present in small quantities.

The scientists discovered that in abnormal instances when the level of GLDC rises significantly, it causes changes in the behaviour of the cell, making it cancerous.

Researchers create healthier cigarette

ITHACA, NY, 6 Jan—US researchers found lycopene and grape seed extract drastically reduced the amount of cancer-causing free radicals produced in cigarettes.

Dr Boris Dzilkovski at Cornell University in Ithaca, NY, said from a healthcare perspective, the best cigarette is no cigarette, but a less toxic cigarette may be helpful for the millions of people a year who try to quit smoking.

"The implications of this technique can help reduce the hazardous effects of tobacco smoke because free radicals are a major group of carcinogens," said Dzilkovski, a co-author of the study.

Using the natural antioxidant extracts — lycopene, the bright red pigment and phytochemical found in tomatoes and other red fruits and vegetable and grape seed extract — in cigarette filters, drastically reduced the amount of cancer-causing free radicals passing through the filter, the researchers said.

Health Tip: When aggressive behavior signals a problem

Children may act out in an aggressive way because they're frustrated or just don't know how to express their emotions. But there are times when it's wise for a parent to call the pediatrician during an aggressive outburst.

The American Academy of Pediatrics says you should call the child's doctor if:

- * Aggression causes physical injury to other people or himself/herself.
- * Aggression lasts longer than a few weeks, and you are unable to manage your child's behavior.
- * Your child attacks you or someone else.
- * Your child is sent home from school or is barred from playtime as a result of aggression.
- * You feel afraid for your safety.

German fossil find changes timeline

BRAUNSCHWEIG, 6 Jan—German paleontologists say they identified a species of prehistoric marine giant from a time when that family of reptiles was thought mostly to have died out.

Researchers from the State Natural History Museum in Braunschweig said the rare fossil ichthyosaur find from northern Germany is 130 million years old, dating from the Lower Cretaceous era. Most ichthyosaur fossils previously found date from the Jurassic era, millions of years earlier.

The newly discovered ichthyosaur species, unearthed during road work in 2005, has been called Acamptonectes densus, “Stiff Swimmer.”

The neck vertebrae were so tightly arranged the species “couldn’t move its neck, so it must have shot through the water like a dart,” museum paleontologist Ulrich Joger told the BBC.

“It’s a spectacular find,” he said. “It raises new questions about the [Jurassic] extinction theory.”

The marine predator fed on fish and would have looked something like a dolphin, experts said, though the species are not related.—Internet

Fish mimics octopus that mimics fish

SAN FRANCISCO, 6 Jan—A researcher has captured video in Indonesia of a fish mimicking an octopus known for mimicking other fish, in a circular case of copycat.

The mimic octopus, Thaumoctopus mimicus, can change its shape and modify its movements and color to impersonate toxic lionfish, flatfish and even sea snakes, allowing it to swim in the open with relatively little fear of predators. The other actor in the researcher’s video, known as a jawfish, is a small timid fish that almost never ventures out of a burrow it digs in the sand. During a diving trip in Indonesia in July, researcher Godehard Kopp of the University of Gottingen in Germany filmed an unexpected partnership between the pair of animals, the Christian Science Monitor reported Thursday. A black-marble jawfish closely tagged behind the octopus as it moved across the sandy seafloor, its brown-and-white markings similar to marking on the octopus, making it difficult to spot among the octopus’ arms.

“It’s a pretty unique observation of mimicry — most of the time, a mimicking animal doesn’t actually follow the model it is mimicking,” researcher Luiz Rocha, an ichthyologist at the California Academy of Sciences in San Francisco, said. “But the mimicry wouldn’t work otherwise for this jawfish.” The jawfish found a way to get around in the open and not get eaten by anything else,” Rocha said. “It’s not a good swimmer, so any grouper or snapper or predatory fish would easily grab it otherwise.”—Internet

Apple planning ‘important’ event in Jan-end

NEW YORK, 6 Jan—Technology giant Apple is expected to make an “important” announcement at an event the company is planning here later this month, according to a report.

A report in “All Things D” said the Apple event in the city will not be about a new version of the iPad tablet or its TV venture, though the event is sure to set the rumour mill spinning that the company will introduce another blockbuster product.

“Apple is planning an important — but not large-scale — event to be held in New York at the end of this month that will focus on a media-related announcement,” the report said. Sources in the report said the event is not related to an upcoming version of the iPad 3 or the rollout of Apple’s interactive TV initiative, with such events traditionally held in Silicon Valley.

The New York event could be about “some kind of advertising or even publishing announcement”, the sources said.

Apple Senior Vice-President of Internet Software and Services Eddy Cue is reportedly involved in the event. Cue is in charge of Apple’s media units, including the iTunes Store, App Store, iBookstore, as well as iAd and its iCloud services.

Samsung to build 10-nano NAND flash plant in China

SEOUL, 6 Jan — Samsung Electronics, the world’s largest maker of memory chips, planned to build a semiconductor plant in China to produce NAND flash memory chips based on 10-nanometre class technology, the economy ministry said Wednesday.

According to the Ministry of Knowledge Economy, Samsung submitted an application for the factory construction to the ministry on 6 Dec, before getting approval Wednesday. The ministry made the decision after holding two meetings of the industrial technology security committee in a bid to assess the potential technology leaks and the need for the firm to expand to China.

Samsung planned to start building the plant within the first half of this year after being approved by the Chinese government, according to the ministry. The company aimed to begin the factory’s operation in the second half of next year.

The Chinese plant, where 10-nano class NAND flash memory chips were planned to be manufactured, would be able to produce 100,000 wafers of 12-inch size per month after being built. Samsung began operating its latest factory in South Korea from September last year to mass produce 20-nano NAND flash memory chips.

NAND flash memory refers to chips that store information in mobile devices such as table computers and smartphones. Demand for the chips has been fast growing in line with brisk sales of smartphones and tablet PCs.

Samsung planned to build the factory in China as the world’s No 2 economy is emerging as a major chip market. According to Gartner, global demand for NAND flash memory chips was expected to surge to 35.4 billion US dollars in 2015 from 20.6 billion dollars in 2010, with China’s portion of the global demand set to grow from 43 percent in 2010 to 55 percent in 2015.—Xinhua

Android Market achieves new milestone with 400,000 active apps

LOS ANGELES, 6 Jan—Google’s Android Market now has over 400,000 apps available, thanks in large part to its status as the largest provider of free apps for mobile tech consumers.

The report on Google’s app milestone was released this week by app analytical firm Distimo, and though it took the company longer to hit the 400,000 mark than Apple’s App Store — it took Google 31 months to reach the mark, and Apple only 22 months — Google’s growth from 300,000 to 400,000 apps (and from 200,000 to 300,000 apps) occurred in less time than it did for Apple.

In contrast, Apple’s App Store now features over 500,000 active apps, though the two stores differ greatly in terms of revenue.

the bulk of its revenue from the “freemium” model — in which users pay for additional content beyond what’s provided in the basic, free app. Less than half of Apple’s revenue comes from free apps, and the store relies more on paid apps for revenue.

Overall, Apple collects almost four times as much revenue from its App Store as Google receives from the Android Market.—Internet

High water in north sparks Dutch evacuations

THE HAGUE, (Netherlands), 6 Jan— Dozens of farmers were warned to evacuate land north of the Dutch Capital on Thursday as a dike protecting the area threatened to collapse.

Local Mayor Ben Broadsoen told national broadcaster NOS that a polder — reclaimed land that is drained by pumps and mills — would likely be submerged under some 40 centimetres (16 inches) of water if the dike protecting it breaks.

“You just don’t know how the dike will hold up,” he said. “It is saturated, so you don’t know how much pressure it can take.”

Late Thursday the dike was holding, but in the far north of the country authorities were still battling rising water levels by strengthening dikes with sandbags.

Staff at the Groninger Museum in the city of Groningen also began moving exhibits, including a recently opened show of clothes by Tunisian designer Azzedine Alaïa, from its ground floor halls because of the rising level of a moat that surrounds the building.

The museum said it would be closed Friday.

Elsewhere, riverside residents were offered sandbags, as the low-lying Netherlands appeared to be largely winning the latest

Antarctica not free of earthquakes

BEIJING, 6 Jan— Surveillance data on the size and frequency of earthquakes in Antarctica collected by China’s Great Wall Station show that the continent is not earthquake-free, a Chinese seismic expert said Thursday. “China’s newly-built seismic observatory in Great Wall Station has documented a hundred-odd earthquakes occurring in the region over the past year,” said Chang Lijun, a member of China’s 28th Antarctic expedition team. The discovery challenges the prevailing notion that the Antarctic has no earthquakes, as many earthquakes have gone undetected due to lack of seismological observation in the region.

However, thanks to technological advances, scientists have discovered that the continent is still subject to some minor tremors.

New Pentagon strategy stresses Asia, cyber, drones

WASHINGTON, 6 Jan— President Barack Obama unveiled a defence strategy on Thursday that would expand the US military presence in Asia but shrink the overall size of the force as the Pentagon seeks to slash spending by nearly half a trillion dollars after a decade of war.

The strategy, if carried out, would significantly reshape the world’s most powerful military following the buildup that was a key part of President George W Bush’s “war on terrorism” in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Cyberwarfare and unmanned drones would continue to grow in priority, as would countering attempts by China and Iran to block US power projection capabilities in areas like the South China Sea and the Strait of Hormuz.

But the size of the US Army and Marines Corps would shrink. So too might the US nuclear arsenal and the US military footprint in Europe.

Troop- and time-intensive counter-insurgency operations, a staple of US military strategy since the 2007 “surge” of extra troops to Iraq, would be far more limited.

Police detain 20 in deadly Mexico prison riot

MEXICO CITY, 6 Jan— Mexican authorities have detained 20 inmates for alleged involvement in a prison riot that killed 31 in a state bordering Texas and are investigating whether prison staff were also responsible.

No prison officials had been dismissed so far over the fight in which one cell block invaded another Wednesday afternoon, causing a brawl among prisoners armed with makeshift knives, clubs and stones, said Morelos Canseco, interior secretary of Tamaulipas State.

The fight at a penitentiary in the Gulf coast city of Altamira also injured 13 people.

Canseco told reporters Thursday the bloodshed had nothing to do with prison overcrowding. He said the facility, with a capacity of 1,626 prisoners, housed 1,058 inmates at the time of the brawl.

He said state police moved in to control the riot.

The area near the border with the state of Veracruz has seen a spike in drug violence in the last two months from warring cartels.

In late December, five gunmen attacked three buses in Veracruz, killing seven passengers, including three US citizens, and four others in separate attacks. Twenty-three bodies were found along the border between the two states in the following days.—Internet

Storms destroy dam in Brazil’s Rio de Janeiro state

RIO DE JANEIRO, 6 Jan— The storms in the mountain region in Brazil’s Rio de Janeiro state in recent days have caused the burst of a dam and 4,000 people to flee their homes.

The destruction of the dam, located in the town of Campos, in the northern part of the state, caused the Muriae River to flood and destroy a highway, making a 20 metre wide hole in the road and isolating some areas. The residents of a nearby neighbourhood were told to leave their homes, as the region was about to be flooded. The Army was called to help, and five trucks were sent to collect the residents. According to Campos’ Civil Defence Secretary Henrique Oliveira, the water level in the area may rise 3.5 to four metres. “Only the (house’s) roofs will be left,” he said. Other municipalities were damaged by the flood in the Muriae River. Six towns have already declared state of emergency in Rio state. Two people died and some 20,000 were forced to leave their homes due to the danger of floods and mudslides.

In the neighbouring states of Minas Gerais and Espirito Santo, the storms caused deaths and damages as well. In Minas Gerais, the death toll rose to eight, 71 municipalities declared the state of emergency and 9,000 people left their homes. In Espirito Santo, 21 municipalities declared the state of emergency and over 1,000 people have been evacuated.

African Union asks UN to raise Somalia force to 17,700

MOGADISHU, 6 Jan— The African Union on Thursday asked the United Nations to authorise an increase of its peacekeeping force in war-torn Somalia by 5,700 to 17,700 amid mounting attacks by Islamist rebels.

Monica Juma, Kenya’s ambassador to the UN, made the announcement. The African force, called AMISOM, has been functioning under UN mandate since 2007 in the lawless Horn of Africa nation.

“The highlights were: the need to increase the AMISOM troops from 12,000 to 17,700, the need to fast track the creation of an administrative unit in the liberated areas,” Juma said, after presiding over a meeting of the AU’s Peace and Security Council in the Ethiopian capital.

She also highlighted the need for “logistical support in order to optimise the capability of the AMISOM troops”, and to beef up the “capability of the TFG (transitional government forces) and allied forces in order... to begin to create a Somali security force.” Regional states strive to battle the extremist Shebab insurgents who control much of southern Somalia.

The AMISOM currently comprises Djiboutian, Ugandan and Burundian soldiers, who have been deployed since 2007 to protect the Western-backed government from the Shebab in the war-shattered capital.

The hardline militants control large parts of southern Somalia but are facing increasing pressure from regional armies and government forces, with the rebels leaving fixed positions in Mogadishu in favour of guerrilla tactics.

The AU Commissioner for Peace and Security Ramtane Lamamra said the African forces were now in a position to quell both the Shebab and the pirates.

“Whatever investment the international community is ready to make for Somalia, it would be really serving both causes. And in the same time assist nation building and a post-conflict peace consolidation,” he said.—Internet

Israel and US to stage major defence drill

In this 29 July, 2004 file photo an anti-ballistic missile, under development by the United States and Israel, lifts off from Point Mugu Sea Range, off the California coast, as a test of an improved version of the Arrow missile. The Israeli military says it will soon hold a major missile defence exercise with US forces.—INTERNET

JERUSALEM, 6 Jan—The Israeli military is gearing up together with US forces for a major missile defence exercise, the Israeli military announced Thursday, as tension between Iran and the international community escalates.

The drill is called "Austere Challenge 12" and is designed to improve defence systems and cooperation between the US and Israeli forces. It follows a 10-day Iranian naval exercise near the strategic Strait of Hormuz.

Israel's military said the drill with the US was planned long ago and is not tied to recent events.

Both Israeli and US officials said the exercise would be the largest-ever joint drill by the two countries.

The Iranian war games came as the West was adopting new sanctions against Teheran over its nuclear programme, charging it is making weapons. Iran insists its programme is peaceful.

Israel considers Iran a strategic threat because of its nuclear and missile programmes and support of violent groups in Lebanon and Gaza, as well as frequent references by Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad to Israel's destruction.

The Israeli military spokesman did not give a date for the drill Thursday, but a senior military official said it would be in the next few weeks. He said it would be the biggest missile defence drill ever held. He was speaking on condition of anonymity due to the sensitivity of the issue. The Israeli official said thousands of American and Israeli soldiers from different units would take part. He said the drill would test multiple Israeli and US air defence systems against incoming missiles and rockets. Israel has deployed the "Arrow" system, jointly developed and funded with the US, designed to intercept Iranian missiles in the stratosphere, far from Israel.

"The US European Command and the Israel Defence Forces periodically conduct routine exercises in Israel," the Israeli military said in a statement. "US European Command routinely works with partner nations to ensure their capacity to provide for their own security and, in the case of Israel, their qualitative military edge," it said. Thousands of US and Israeli troops held a similar exercise in 2009, code-named Juniper Cobra 10, designed to test missile defence technology.

Martin Van Creveld, a military historian at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, said Thursday that the drill was intended not only to practice military maneuvers but also to pressure Iran.—Internet

Turkey to buy F-35 fighter jets from US

ISTANBUL, 6 Jan—Turkey will purchase two F-35 fighter jets and 15 helicopters from the United States, Defence Industry Implementation Committee (SSIK) said Thursday.

The committee said that it authorized the Defence Ministry Undersecretariat to order the purchase of two F-35 fighter jets for the Turkish Armed Forces. The fighter jets will be delivered to Turkey in 2015, the committee added.

The committee said it would also start contract talks with Bell Helicopter Textron for the purchase of 15 helicopters for the country's police force.

The purchase comes as part of the F-35 Joint Strike Fighter Programme, an internationally oriented programme consisting of partnerships with a number of countries.

Turkey signed a memorandum of understanding on Turkey's involvement in the production process of new generation F-35 warplanes in 2007. The decision to buy the new generation fighter planes came at a time when numerous other countries, including Denmark, Holland and Canada, have suspended their orders.

Rescue work resumes in Philippine landslide

MANILA, 6 Jan—Philippine officials say they have resumed the search for victims of a landslide that killed more than 20 people at a remote gold mining area, but that they are uncertain how many more remained buried in the rubble.

The landslide took place early Thursday in Pantukan township of Compostela Valley Province. Civil Defence chief Benito Ramos says early reports of about 100 people still buried were inaccurate.

Ramos says those estimates were far too high, but that the exact number is uncertain. He says local authorities do not record the number of mostly migrant miners who work there.

Dog found alive four days after Montana avalanche

BILLINGS, 6 Jan—A dog that was feared dead after he was swept away in a weekend avalanche that killed his owner showed up four days later at the Montana motel where his owners had stayed the night before going backcountry skiing. Search and rescue team member Bill Whittle said he was "positive" that the Welsh corgi — named Ole — had been buried in Saturday's avalanche.

"The avalanche guys were up there on Monday investigating and they were looking for the dog too and never seen any signs," he said. But on Wednesday, Ole showed up exhausted and hungry back at the motel, four miles from where the slide occurred, the Billings Gazette reported. At least five killed as ferry capsizes in SE Bangladesh

DHAKA, 6 Jan—An overcrowded ferry carrying over 50 passengers in a canal flowing beside Bangladesh's southeastern Chittagong City capsized on Thursday afternoon, with dozens of people missing, local police said. "Rescuers have so far retrieved 5 bodies from the sunken ferry that capsized on Thursday," said Zohirul Haque Sobuj, officer-in-charge of Boalkhali Police Station in Chittagong, some 242 km southeast of Capital Dhaka. He said fire brigade personnel and locals including fishermen were still searching for those missing people.

He said many passengers were able to swim ashore after the accident at about 1:15 pm local time on Thursday but could not tell immediately about the exact number of ill-fated missing passengers. He said a rescue vessel has been called in to boost local efforts to salvage the ferry. Ferry and boat disasters are common in Bangladesh, which is crisscrossed by about 250 rivers. Ferry is still a key means of transport in the South Asian country. Most of them are often overcrowded.—Xinhua

Marketable brinjal fruits of Nweyit Village gaining high demand

Vast brinjal plantation with seedless strain in Nweyit Village of Tatkon Township.

Nweyit Village in Tatkon Township of Nay Pyi Taw Council Area is an agro-based village engaging in cultivation of large acres of cold season crops.

The fertile farmlands around the village are suitable for cultivation of cold season crops. These farmlands are put under chilli, onion, potato, tomato, cauliflower, cabbage and so on. Due to thriving plantations, the local people always grow cold season vegetables every year.

We, the news crew of Myanma Alin, had the opportunity to visit Nweyit Village. We saw brinjal plantations on the vast farmland. Some of them were green and some were dark purple.

Long brinjal fruits without seeds seen at plantation of farmer U Win Hlaing.

In an interview, farmer U Win Hlaing explained, "In the past, our village grew least sown acre for brinjal plants. This year, larger acre of farmlands were put under brinjal plantations as a test for work. I also cultivated brinjal plants on test this year and these plantations are thriving now on about three acres of land. I have spent about K 50,000 on agricultural cost plus value of seeds. I pluck brinjal fruits once a week and sell them worth about K 250,000 to K 300,000."

We saw thriving brinjal plantations with fruits. The fruits were long. Significantly, the fruits were very delicious with lack of seeds.

We also visited the thriving brinjal plantation of farmer U Soe Lwin. His plantations were seen with plenty of fruits. The dark purple colour fruits were round.

"I took the seeds for this brinjal strain from Nyaungnapin of Yangon Region. The fruits of the plants can be picked out after two and a half months of cultivation. The fruits are sold at K 150 to K 200 in the market. The roasted brinjal fruits are delicious. One roasted brinjal is enough for one family. The plant prefers silted soil. I have thought I will regrow brinjal plants next season with the use of present seeds," said U Soe Lwin.

Brinjal fruits produced from Nweyit Village were delicious and marketable. Better quality of goods can attract consumers. Best quality of agricultural products will be higher in demand. Thus, all producers and customers must understand the significant point of market-oriented economic system.

Book-lovers' refuge closes its doors in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, 6 Jan—South Africa may have produced two Nobel laureates in literature but a famous bookshop in Johannesburg is nevertheless about to close, a victim of the country's poor reading culture. The Boekehuis, whose Afrikaans name means "book house", is in an old four-bedroom house a stone's throw from the city's two main universities.

Its waxed parquet floors, moulded ceilings, garden and coffee shop became the book-lovers' refuge. The shop's literary events where readers could interact with writers were especially popular.

"This is like a house, not only a bookshop. People come here to buy books, but not only. They come for the ambiance, to have a nice time. And especially for the talks," says shop manager Corina van der Spoel.

Boekehuis which opened in 2000 has been widely portrayed as independent, but it is in fact owned by Media24, the country's largest media company.

Brazilians optimistic about country's economic situation

RIO DE JANEIRO, 6 Jan—Brazilians are now more optimistic than ever about the country's economic situation, a survey released Thursday by the Institute of Applied Economic Research (IPEA) said. The index measuring Brazilians' optimism about the country's current economic situation rose to a record-high 67.2 points in December from 63.7 points in November, the survey said, whereas it stood at 64.6 points in the same period in 2010.

According to IPEA's Families' Expectation Index (IEF), 78.2 percent of Brazilian families were better off financially in December than a year before. In total, 86.6 percent of Brazilian families were confident about their economic situation in 2012. The majority, 64.4 percent, also believed Brazil's economy will improve in the near future.

IPEA President Marcio Pochmann attributed this optimism to the country's continuing growth, improving job market and rising income. He also noted there was a seasonal effect, as people received their Christmas bonuses in December.

The share of Brazilians who said they were now out of debt rose to 56.1 percent in December from 55.6 percent in November.—Xinhua

Beijing backtracks on pollution data after outcry

BEIJING, 6 Jan—Authorities in Beijing said Friday they will start publicising data on the tiny particles that make up much of the city's pollution, after a public outcry over air quality measurements.

The Chinese capital currently bases its air quality information on particles of 10 micrometers or larger, known as PM10, and does not take into account the smaller particulates that experts say are most harmful to human health. But authorities have come under pressure from the public to change the way they rank air quality after thick smog blanketed Beijing late last year, forcing the cancellation of hundreds of flights and triggering a surge in face mask sales. Official data showed the air was only slightly polluted, while figures published by the US embassy in Beijing, which measures the smaller particles, ranked it as "very unhealthy".

On Friday the Beijing Environmental Bureau said it would start publicising measures based on the smaller particles—known as PM2.5—ahead of the Lunar New Year, or Spring Festival, which starts on 23 January.

"The authorities plan to release air-quality monitoring data using PM2.5 before Spring Festival," a

Titanic items to be sold 100 years after sinking

RICHMOND, 6 Jan—Items as small as a hairpin and as big as a chunk of the Titanic's hull are among 5,000 artifacts from the world's most famous shipwreck that are to be auctioned in April, close to the 100th anniversary of the disaster.

Nearly a century after the 15 April, 1912, sinking of the ocean liner that hit an iceberg in the North Atlantic, a New York City auction is being readied by Guernsey's Auctioneers & Brokers. That auction house has garnered headlines in the past by selling off such historical curiosities as prized Beatles photos, famous jewels of the late Princess Diana, beloved Jerry Garcia guitars and a police motorcycle used in the Texas motorcade when John F Kennedy was slain. But nothing as Titanic as the so-called Titanic collection.

On 11 April, all of the salvaged items are to be sold as one lot in what Guernsey's President Arlan Ettinger describes as the most significant auction ever handled by that house.

"Who on this planet doesn't know the story of the Titanic and isn't fascinated by it?" he asked. "Could Hollywood have scripted a more tragic or goose-bump-raising story than what actually happened on that ship?"

"It is as poignant to my 12-year-old son as it is to me and generations before me. There's no end to the fascination about it." The auction will be conducted 100 years plus a day after the Titanic set sail from Southampton, England, embarking on the ill-fated maiden voyage that had New York as its destination.

The collection was appraised in 2007 at $189 million, including some intellectual property alongside the myriad items plucked by remote controlled probes from the pitch-black depths, some 2 and ½ miles below the ocean's surface.

Those artifacts include the massive hull section called "The Big Piece" as well as personal belongings of passengers and crew, such as a mesh purse and eyeglasses.

NH dealer selling 1878 Bell note with phone sketch

This image released on 5 Jan, 2012, shows a page of an 1878 letter sent to his parents by Alexander Graham Bell. The drawing and accompanying discussion instructs how to ground the telephone Bell had invented. The letter is being auctioned by Amherst, NH, dealer RRAuction. INTERNET

CONCORD, (NH), 6 Jan—A New Hampshire dealer is auctioning an 1878 letter from Alexander Graham Bell to his parents instructing them to ground the telephone he invented by running a copper wire from their house to the duck pond.

The seven-page letter contains two drawings by Graham of the phone and how to run its elaborate wiring system to avoid harm from lightning strikes.

Bell was responding to a letter from his parents telling him about how a lightning strike had damaged their wiring between several poles. Bell writes that he was "quite troubled" by the news and proceeds to instruct them how to avoid such an incident in the future.

"If you have good connection with a permanently moist stratum of earth, you need never fear lightning and your posts will be safe," Bell writes. His drawing shows a long strand of wire running to a rectangular box, above which is written, "Bury in duck pond."

The letter is more than a tutorial on how to ground his new invention.

He opens with "My dear Papa and Mama" and tells them their new granddaughter is developing into "a healthy-fat-nice-looking baby with tremendous eyes." He describes family friends they visited. He signs the letter, "Your loving son, Alec"—a nickname used only by the family.

Singapore supermarket to stop selling shark's fin

SINGAPORE, 6 Jan—Singapore's largest supermarket chain FairPrice will stop selling shark's fin products from April this year, local media reported on Friday. The announcement on Thursday followed an outcry over a post on the Facebook page of one of its suppliers.

The supplier, Them Da Seafood, used the words "screw the divers" in an apparent reference to diving enthusiasts who had been campaigning against the shark's fin trade, the Straits Times said. The post drew much criticism and went viral on the social networking site.

Many who commented called for a boycott of both the supplier and FairPrice. Comments also made their way onto FairPrice's Facebook page. Among them were calls for FairPrice to look again at its corporate social responsibility policy and to stop selling shark's fin.

FairPrice chief executive Seah Kian Peng said the supermarket chain would stop selling shark's fin products by the end of the first quarter of this year across its more than 230 outlets.

Seah said FairPrice had been looking into the sale of shark's fin products in the past few months as part of its commitment to being a socially responsible retailer. He also said it would be withdrawing all products from Them Da Seafood.—Xinhua

5-Magnitude tremor shakes in Christchurch, risks continue

WELLINGTON, 6 Jan—New Zealand's quake-battered second city of Christchurch was shaken by a 5-magnitude tremor Friday as scientists were telling a special hearing that earthquakes and aftershocks could continue for decades. The quake struck at 2:20 pm and was centered 5 kilometres below ground and 10 km northeast of Christchurch, according to the government-run GNS Science GeoNet monitoring service. It came just one minute after a 3.5-magnitude tremor, at a depth of 10 km, centered 20 km east of the city, according to the GeoNet. The quakes occurred the day GNS scientists were briefing Christchurch City councilors and Members of Parliament on the possibility of more strong aftershocks after those that struck on 23 Dec.

Kelvin Berryman, of GNS Science, told the hearing that the sequence of quakes in Christchurch and the surrounding Canterbury region would diminish over decades rather than years, Fairfax NZ News reported. "Christchurch City has had a lot of quake activity. A lot of the stress must have been released in the city area, but around Canterbury there may well be an ongoing sequence over a period of a few decades," Berryman was quoted as saying.

Five bodies found inside van in SW Mexico

MEXICO CITY, 6 Jan—At least five charred bodies were found on Thursday in a van on a rural road of Tiquicheo, a town in the southwestern Mexican State of Michoacan, local police said.

According to earlier reports, the finding was reported at about 07:00 am local time (1300 GMT) near the rural community of San Miguel Canario.

Unofficial accounts indicated that the murderers had left a message inside the vehicle, but its content was not disclosed. Michoacan is a state with vast mountainous areas favorable for drug production and trafficking, and is part of the route between South America and the United States. It has often been claimed by various drug cartels.

In recent months, organized criminal groups had made the state one of the major areas where they fought against federal police and armed forces.—Xinhua

Doctors to remove Vietnamese man's 90kg tumour

HO CHI MINH CITY, 6 Jan—A man left unable to walk by a tumour on his right leg that weighs more than the rest of his body went under the knife in Vietnam on Thursday to have the growth removed, hospital officials said. Nguyen Duy Hai's massive 90 kilogramme (198 pounds) tumour is to be cut away by a team of doctors in a risky 10 hour procedure that has only a 50 percent chance of success, the France-Vietnam (FV) hospital in Ho Chi Minh City said.

Hai, 31, who suffers from a rare genetic disorder, has been living with the tumour since he was four years old, FV hospital's statement read. He had part of his leg amputated when he was 17, but the tumour, which is not cancerous, continued to expand, making it difficult for Hai to walk and sleep.

The growth is thought to be the largest ever recorded in Vietnam, according to state media, who have followed Hai's condition for years. "This is a huge procedure with many

Wave of shootings baffle Swedish police

STOCKHOLM, 6 Jan—A new wave of execution-style shootings in Sweden's third largest city has left police puzzled, raising concerns that Malmo has become a magnet for gang-related killings.

On Thursday dozens of police took to the streets in the southern Swedish city of 250,000 to try calm the public and to collect tips about the attacks, which come only a year after a suspected serial shooter was arrested there.

"We've never experienced anything like this before. It's exceptional that there have been so many murders in such a short period of time," police spokesman Lars-Hakan Lindholm said. "People are worried of course and want to talk about it."

In less than six weeks, five people have been shot dead in execution-style killings, prompting local police to ask for back-up from national investigators and for Malmo Mayor Ilmar Reepalu to call on the country's justice minister to implement tougher gun laws.

Sweden's gun control laws are fairly strict. Penalties for possessing illegal arms typically involve fines or up to one year in prison, but serious breaches of the law can result in a four-year sentence.

Lindholm said that due to the fast escalating death-toll police presence has now been bumped up by about 30 extra officers in the city on weekdays and by around 40 on the weekends. Malmo is an eclectic city, where about 40 percent of its residents are first- or second-generation immigrants.—Internet

Global IT spending not to grow as expected in 2012

SAN FRANCISCO, 6 Jan—Research firm Gartner on Thursday revised downward its outlook for global information technology (IT) spending in 2012, citing eurozone crisis and hard-disk drive shortage. Gartner said all four major technology sectors including computing hardware, enterprise software, IT services as well as telecommunication equipment and services are expected to experience slower spending growth in 2012 than previously forecast. Its latest forecast revised the annual worldwide IT spending growth in 2012 to 3.7 percent from the previous 4.6 percent, projecting the spending in 2012 to total 3.8 trillion US dollars. "Faltering global economic growth, the eurozone crisis and the impact of Thailand's floods on hard-disk drive production have all taken their toll on the outlook for IT spending," Richard Gordon, research vice president at Gartner, said in a statement.

The company said that the Thailand floods are having serious implications for businesses worldwide, particularly with computer and storage purchases, noting that no company will be wholly immune to the effects on the hard-drive disc supply chain.

Mother of three girls killed in Conn fire speaks

NEW YORK, 6 Jan—The mother of the three young girls who died during a Christmas morning fire delivered a heartbreaking eulogy to her "girl tribe" at their somber funeral in New York City on Thursday. "My girls are in my heart," Madonna Badger told more than 500 mourners at St Thomas Church in Manhattan. "They're right here. And that's where they live now."

Badger broke down several times as she described each girl in turn — Lily, 9, and 7-year-old twins Sarah and Grace — then wailed as she followed their coffins out of the cavernous Gothic church. She was accompanied by her estranged husband, Matthew Badger, and a friend, Michael Borcina.

Borcina was with Madonna Badger and her family when the lethal fire tore through her Connecticut home. He walked behind the grieving parents as the coffins were brought out of the church.

Badger's parents, Lomer and Pauline Johnson, also died in the fire. Badger told mourners, "In all the incomprehensible loss and chaos, all I can hang onto is that love is

Like magic, Harry Potter's owl spotted across US

LAKE ANDES, 6 Jan—Famous for its role as Harry Potter's companion in the books and movies, a species of majestic, mostly white owls is being sighted in abundant numbers this winter far from both Hogwarts and its native Arctic habitat.

It's typical for snowy owls to arrive in the US every three or four winters, but this year's irruption is widespread, with birders from the Pacific Northwest to New England reporting frequent sightings of the yellow-eyed birds. As many as 30 were spotted in December around South Dakota's Lake Andes. "Thirty in one area, that's mind numbing," said Mark Robbins, an ornithologist with the University of Kansas Biodiversity Institute.

The arrival of the birds, which can top 2 feet in height with a wingspan of nearly 5 feet, is the result of a plentiful population of Arctic lemmings this summer, which led to a strong breeding season, said Denver Holt, director of the Owl Research Institute in Charlo, Mont.

Lemmings are snowy owls' main food source, and the baby boom is sending many of the youngsters across the border to scrounge for voles, field mice, rats, rabbits and shore birds. "It's very unusual, because it's coast to coast," said Holt, who has been researching the owls' Arctic habitat for 25 years.—Internet

Google search home page revamp promotes other services

NEW YORK, 6 Jan—Google is rolling out one of its biggest home page changes to date. The revamp strips its front page of the black bar that currently runs horizontally along its top, and replaces it with a grey logo. When clicked or highlighted, it reveals seven alternative services to the site's search page with an option to reveal a further eight. Analysts said the move was designed to promote more of the firm's businesses without cluttering its webpage.

The new look, which was first announced last year, is only being offered to a limited number of users at the moment. A spokesman for Google said that the roll-out is designed to improve the user experience. "Constant revision and improvement is part of our overarching philosophy," he said. "If you compare the original Google home page to today's version, you will see that a makeover every so often can certainly be refreshing."

Chris Green, principal technology analyst at Davies Murphy Group, said the move allowed the site to use icons without resembling Yahoo's busier design. "They are trying to deal with how to service all the different Google properties without making the page cluttered, because Google is always very keen to hang onto the plain minimalist front page that they have always had," he said. "The other thing that they are doing with those menus is making the page look like their Chrome netbook operating system. "So whether you are using a Chromebook or the Google website the interface is the same." Internet

Gold settles higher for fourth day

cantile Exchange further hiked on Thursday, extending the metal's rally into the fourth trading day, as a weaker euro spurred buying of gold. The most active gold contract for February delivery climbed 7.4 US dollars, or 0.5 percent, to 1,620.1 dollars per ounce, the highest settlement since 13 Dec.

Market analysts said that the biggest influence was the weakening euro, which prompted investors to flee the euro and bought gold. The euro fell under 1.28 against dollar on Thursday as investors focused on concerns about euro zone banks and a French bond sale that was met by cold reception. Moreover, gold gained strength from safe-haven demands after British Defence Secretary said the country may take military action if Iran carries out its threat to block the Strait of Hormuz. A trader noted that Iran is gradually becoming a big source of concern and people are worried what could happen next. The four-day advance, which marks the longest rally in 10 weeks, has added 5.2 percent to gold prices.

Silver for March delivery rose 19.9 US cents, or 0.68 percent, to 29.296 dollars per ounce. Platinum for April delivery dropped 8.3 dollars, or 0.58 percent, to 1,418 dollars per ounce.

Death toll from deadly rat fever reaches 15 in S Philippines

COTABATO, 6 Jan—The death toll from the deadly rat fever outbreak that struck flood-hit areas in southern Philippines reached 15 while hundreds were infected, local health officials said Thursday.

Five people have already died while as many as 200 were confined in hospitals in the city of Cagayan de Oro. While in the nearby city of Iligan, a hard-hit area by floods, three died and less than 100 people have been infected with the deadly disease, said regional health minister Jaime Bernadas.

Health authorities on Monday declared an outbreak of the deadly rat fever leptospirosis, a fatal animal-borne disease that can result in high fever, internal bleeding and organ failure.

The death toll from tropical storm Washi currently stands at 1,257 with many still believed missing.

Antiestrogen therapy may decrease risk for melanoma

WASHINGTON, 6 Jan—Women with breast cancer who take antiestrogen supplements may be decreasing their risk for melanoma, according to a study published Wednesday in Cancer Prevention Research, a journal of the American Association for Cancer Research.

Christine Bouchardy, professor at the University of Geneva and head of the Geneva Cancer Registry, and colleagues analyzed data from 7,360 women who had breast cancer between 1980 and 2005. About half (54 percent) of these women received antiestrogen therapy. The researchers followed the patients until 2008 and recorded 34 melanoma cases during the follow-up period. Risk for melanoma was 60 percent higher among patients who did not receive antiestrogen therapy compared with patients who received antiestrogen therapy.

According to Bouchardy, the increased focus on estrogen's role in breast cancer has led scientists to start questioning what role estrogen is playing in other cancers. "These data reinforce the hypothesis that estrogens play a role in melanoma occurrence," she said in a press release.

Bouchardy said this may be due to the fact that estrogens are associated with increased levels of melanocytes and melanin production in human skin, which have been linked to early-stage melanoma. However, she cautioned against widespread antiestrogen supplementation to prevent melanoma in the general population.

"These results need to be replicated in other studies, particularly given the numerous side effects linked to this kind of drug," said Bouchardy.—Internet

Battle of the brushes in Japan

From small children to octogenarians, thousands came together in Tokyo on Thursday for a new year's battle of the brushes in an annual national calligraphy contest.

In what has long been a ritual for the start of the year, people all across Japan write down their resolutions and hopes, or good luck characters, using a traditional horse-hair brush and ink made of charcoal. This year's contestants brushing their welcome to the Year of the Dragon included children from Fukushima prefecture, which is still struggling with the world's worst nuclear crisis in 25 years, set off by last year's massive earthquake and tsunami.

"I wasn't sure if I would be able to write well, but I did better than I thought so I think it's good," said Natsumi Yazawa, a 14-year-old from Fukushima who travelled hundreds of kilometres to take part.

Contestants, who ranged from those aged four all the way up to 85, were assigned Chinese characters such as "Spring Wing" and "Year of the Dragon" and given 24 minutes to complete their masterpieces.

One of the older participants was Etsuko Saotome, who said she had looked forward to taking part as it gave her energy. "I'll be 74, and while that's embarrassing, this gives me a chance to feel youthful again, writing with all of these children," she said.

The pieces were collected to be reviewed by judges according to rules such as their flow, line strength and angles. The winners will be announced on 22 Jan.

Participants display their works during a calligraphy contest to celebrate the new year in Tokyo on 5 January, 2012.

Closed store destroys unsold bridal gowns

Neighbours of a closed Minnesota bridal shop said they were shocked to find the store had destroyed its leftover inventory with spray paint.

Bessie Giannakakis, owner of Bessie's Boutique, located near Pricilla of Boston in Edina, said the closed shop spray-painted "thousands of dollars of gowns" and threw them in a dumpster. KARE-TV, Minneapolis/St Paul, reported Wednesday.

Judy Mjones, who works at a nearby salon, said the gowns should have been donated to "needy people." "Priscilla of Boston has always donated quality bridal gowns to a variety of charitable causes. We do not, however, donate unsaleable dresses that are damaged, soiled or in otherwise poor condition," company President Patrick Walsh said. The women who witnessed the gowns being disposed of said they appeared to be in good condition before they were spray-painted by workers.

Teen sleeps through plane stop

A 15-year-old boy who slept through his airline destination in Oklahoma said he had difficulty finding help when he exited the airplane in Missouri. Erik McBee and his mother, Keena, said he boarded a Southwest Airlines flight from Phoenix to Tulsa at 10:15 am 28 Dec to attend a boarding school, but he had headphones on and slept through the Tulsa stop and found himself in St Louis, the St Louis Post-Dispatch reported Thursday.

McBee said he approached a man in a yellow uniform outside of the terminal at Lambert-St Louis International Airport but the man did not offer him any assistance. McBee said he had no luck with other airport employees.

The teenager said a helpful stranger gave him a ride to a police station and officers later took him back to the airport. Southwest, which said it is investigating how the count ended up incorrect when departing Tulsa, flew the teen back to Phoenix free of charge.

Keena McBee said she will be driving the Eric to school in Oklahoma in the future.

However, TMZ reported last month Shriver was having second thoughts due to her strong connection to the Catholic church, which forbids divorce. Schwarzenegger also has been pulling out all the stops in trying to win her back, the celebrity news Web site said.

"Bridesmaids" in, "War Horse" out of writers awards

LOS ANGELES, 6 Jan—"Bridesmaids," "The Girl With the Dragon Tattoo" and "The Help" were among the film nominees chosen on Thursday for annual Writers Guild Awards, but the screenwriters behind "War Horse" failed to make the cut in Hollywood's race toward Oscars.

In a list of surprises, "The Descendants" and Woody Allen's "Midnight in Paris" also earned screenplay nominations from the Writers Guild of America (WGA), which represents film and television writers.

But likely Oscar contender "The Artist"—a French-made silent movie in black and white—was ineligible under WGA rules, as were other high-profile films including "My Week with Marilyn" and the Margaret Thatcher movie "The Iron Lady."

Writers Guild nominations are restricted those movies made under the trade association's rules on pay and working conditions, or pacts struck with affiliated foreign groups.

Ferguson retains faith in title hopes

MANCHESTER, 6 Jan—Manchester United manager Sir Alex Ferguson insists his team can cope with the challenge of winning the Barclays Premier League despite defeat at Newcastle on Wednesday.

The champions were well below their best as they slipped to a 3-0 loss at the Sports Direct Arena, with Demba Ba and Yohan Cabaye scoring for the Magpies before a Phil Jones own goal wrapped it up.

Ferguson's side have now lost their last two matches in the League after a shock 3-2 reverse against bottom club Blackburn at Old Trafford in their previous fixture.

And with Manchester City beating Liverpool 3-0 on Tuesday, that leaves United three points adrift of their neighbours going into the FA Cup third round tie between the two teams at the Etihad Stadium on Sunday.

"It's advantage to them, of course," said Ferguson. "They won, we lost. But it's not a time to panic, we've got the experience and the patience to cope.

"Losing a match at this time of year can sometimes happen. We need to get the show on the road for the run-in, particularly for March and April, because they are key months."

The Red Devils have been plagued by injury problems all season, but Ferguson is hopeful that the return of some of their senior players will enable United to get stronger as the season progresses.—Internet

Coyle pays tribute to match-winner Cahill

LONDON, 6 Jan—Bolton manager Owen Coyle reserved special praise for defender Gary Cahill after his late winner in the 2-1 victory over Everton at Goodison Park.

Cahill's 78th-minute strike was enough to earn three points for the Trotters and move them off the bottom of the Barclays Premier League to within a point of QPR in 17th place.

The England centre-back has been in talks with Chelsea over a potential move to Stamford Bridge since the transfer window re-opened, and Coyle believes it reflects well on Cahill that he has still been able to produce such good performances in a Bolton shirt.

"It can't have been easy for Gary when it is a club of Chelsea's stature and a fee has been agreed," said Coyle. "I can't say whether this will be Gary's last game for Bolton. "To be fair to Chelsea, I think they've respected the fact that we had a huge game and have not had further dialogue, but we expect that they will possibly in the next few days. But while that continues, Gary has shown tremendous mental character and desire for Bolton Wanderers."

The Trotters went 1-0 down at Everton thanks to a freak goal from Toffees keeper Tim Howard, who saw his second-half clearance get caught in the wind, bounce once and loop over Bolton stopper Adam Bogdan.

Coyle, who then watched David Ngog level before Cahill's late winner, says he has never seen anything like it in all the time he has been in football.

Inter's Marco Branca: No Wesley Sneijder talks with Manchester City

MILAN, 6 Jan—Inter sporting director Marco Branca has rejected suggestions that his side is locked in talks with Manchester City over the transfer of Wesley Sneijder to England.

British sources had claimed that Inter was willing to use the Dutchman as makeweight in a deal for Carlos Tevez, who is desperate to find a new club before the end of the month.

"There were no discussions whatsoever regarding Wesley Sneijder today during our meeting in London with representatives of Manchester City," Branca told Inter's website.

AC Milan seem to be

frontrunners in the race to sign Tevez, but Italian sources have claimed in the last days that Inter is also vying for the Argentine's services.

However, with City refusing to accept loan offers for the striker, Inter is reportedly pessimistic about its chances to land the 27-year-old.—Internet

FIFA targets informers to help fight match-fixing

ZURICH, 6 Jan—FIFA is working with informers inside organized crime syndicates to help protect the World Cup from match-fixing and betting plots.

FIFA's security director Chris Eaton outlined a strategy on Thursday for soccer's world governing body to attempt to stop the fixing of international matches that results in millions of dollars in profit.

"What we're doing now is developing sources both in criminal organizations and football that will advise us," Eaton said in an interview published by FIFA's website.

"We are creating a hostile environment for match-fixers to make them realize we will expose them, name them, and make them subject to investigation somewhere in the world."

FIFA's pro-active plan to get information from inside crime syndicates is a direct response to its 208 national member bodies being targeted to help fixing plots.

"The infiltration of serious criminals into our associations and football generally is the most pressing issue," Eaton said.

FIFA believes crime gangs have received inside help from soccer officials to organize international matches and select corrupt referees.

week in dispatching of Mikhail Youzhny 6-4, 6-4. He will face Gael Monfils, who won the last four games in each set to beat Viktor Troicki of Serbia 6-2, 6-3 and ensure that the top four seeds reached the semifinals for the second year in a row.

January transfer window

We, the NLM-ner profiles the most likely transfer targets during the January window - at home and abroad.

Last January, the headlines were made on deadline day when Chelsea spent £50m on Fernando Torres and Liverpool replaced the Spaniard with £35m striker Andy Carroll.

Here are our top 50 suggestions for high-profile moves this time.

Potential South American Movers . . .

NEYMAR (19, forward) Santos: Outrageously talented wonderkid whose desire for a move may have been boosted by the mauling his Brazilian club suffered against Barcelona in the World Club Cup.

DEDE (23, centre-back) Vasco da Gama: Tall, strong and very quick. A giant in defence who also likes to make an attacking contribution. Linked with Real Madrid.

LEANDRO DAMIAO (22, forward) Internacional: Tall target man who enjoyed a wonderful 2011. Has been attracting interest from Tottenham, Arsenal and Juventus.

CARLOS LUQUE (18, winger) Colon: Displays pace and tricky dribbling skills. A hit in the World Youth Cup, which Brazil won, the Argentine has been doing well at senior level.

LUCAS OCAMPO (17, midfielder/forward) River Plate: Tall, dynamic and skilful and can play up front or in midfield, but may not be sold until his club have been promoted back to the First Division.

ANDY POLO (17, forward) Universitario: Strong and stocky bullet-fast support striker who made a huge impression in 2011. The appalling financial position of his Peruvian club could force a sale.

Potential European Movers . . .

WESLEY SNEIJDER (27, midfielder) Inter Milan: Inter may decide to cash-in on their Dutch star but a destination isn't clear. His sky-high wages and a hefty transfer fee could put clubs off.

MARIO GOTZE (19, midfielder/forward) Borussia Dortmund: 'The German Messi' as described by Franz Beckenbauer. Extremely skilful and attracting plenty of interest from Arsenal and Manchester United.

CHRISTIAN ERIKSEN (19, midfielder/forward) Ajax: Starred for Denmark against England in February. Manchester United are among a host of major clubs who have been tracking him.

RASMUS ELM (23, midfielder) AZ Alkmaar: The talented Swede has attracted plenty of interest from Premier League and Serie A clubs, including Arsenal, Manchester United and Spurs.

MARCO REUS (22, midfielder/forward) Borussia Monchengladbach: Has made a tremendous start to the season and scored 10 goals in the Bundesliga so far. May favour a move to German giants Bayern Munich.

XHERDAN SHAQIRI (20, midfielder) FC Basel: The talented Swiss impressed against Manchester United in the Champions League and both United and Liverpool may target the £10m-rated player.

One afternoon, a man was riding in the back of his limousine when he saw two men eating grass by the road side. He ordered his driver to stop and he got out to investigate. "Why are you eating grass?", he asked one man.

"We don't have any money for food.", The poor man replied.

"Oh, come along with me then."

"But sir, I have a wife with two children!"

"Bring them along! And you, come with me too!", he said to the other man.

"But sir, I have a wife with six children!" The second man answered.

"Bring them as well!"

They all climbed into the car, which was no easy task, even for a car as large as the limo. Once underway, one of the poor fellows says "sir, you are too kind. Thank you for taking all of us with you."

The rich man replied "No, you don't understand, the grass at my home is about three feet tall!"

Fergie rejects Lampard rumours United boss would not expect Chelsea to sell England midfielder CHELSEA, 6 Jan—Sir Alex Ferguson says there is 'no foundation' to reports linking Manchester United with a move for Frank Lampard and would not expect Chelsea to sell the midfielder.

Speculation in Friday's tabloids had idea of a move to Old Trafford.

Lampard has been in and out of the Chelsea side this season and there have been rumours of a strained relationship with manager Andre Villas-Boas.

The England international, who has 18 months left on his contract at Stamford Bridge, has recently stressed his commitment to the Blues amid reports of a possible exit.

However, Ferguson has ruled out a move to bring in the 33-year-old to boost a United midfield which has been depleted by injuries this season.

"Do you really think Chelsea would sell to United in January?" said Ferguson.

"There's no foundation in that.

"Chelsea want to do something in the second half of the season so they want to keep their best players."

Ferguson also reiterated that he is not currently planning to add to his squad in January as he does not believe he will be able to land the players he wants.

He added: "What can you get in January? I've said this many times now. The players we'd like we can't get.

"If the alternative is to sign a second-rate player, we don't want to do that.

"Our injuries have led to fans wanting us to sign someone, but I don't want to sign a player who won't get a game when everyone's fit because he's not good enough."
