PERSPECTIVES

Stability, Peace, Independence and Human Rights

Asian countries saw economic growth during the 1990s. In those days, Asian countries were named "Asian Tigers". In the world political sphere, a word called "Asian Values" was a popular taking one. "Asian Values" is totally different from western ideas and philosophy. Thanks to strategic managements of country and people's values, Asian Tigers could achieve the development.

Now, the countries expect that Myanmar would become a next Asian tiger. Myanmar is now practicing discipline, democratic system and there would no turning back on the way to the democracy. During the short period, Myanmar has taken concrete steps toward the future national building endeavors. We must march towards the discipline, democratic country in unison.

Discipline is only a necessity that supports the perpetuation of democracy, not a limit. "Security and stability" would be bitter word for those who suffered from the consequences of the abuse of power in the administration the past. In reality, it is essential for our society to have word called "security and stability". Liberty, Human rights, security and stability have interrelationship.

Coord meeting on production and trade development held

NAY PYI TAW, 31 Jan—A coordination meeting on production and trade development was held at the Ministry of Commerce here this afternoon with an address of Union Minister for Commerce U Win Myint.

Union Minister U Win Myint in his address said that the prices of basic commodities such as rice, edible oil, salt, chili and onion is stable in the time of the new government, adding that the majority of farmers were subject to loss due to the decline in the prices of paddy. And steps are therefore being taken for the purchase of reserve paddy at reasonable prices while striving for consumers to have access to quality commodities at fair prices, he noted.

Nowadays, imported commodities for consumer protection need to carry FDA recommendation with an expired date of one year at least. Mawtaung border trade centre will soon be opened for border trade development with plans for opening of other border trade centres to handle marine products, he said. The Union minister also urged those present to make suggestions on difficulties and proper approaches in dealing with trade development.

This was followed by a general round of discussions with the participation of deputy ministers, directors-general and managing directors, those from Yangon, Nay Pyi Taw, Mandalay City Development Committees and region and state governments and those from the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry and brother associations.

Afghan officials, Taliban may hold talks in Saudi Arabia

KABUL, 31 Jan—The Afghan government hopes to hold talks with Taliban representatives in Saudi Arabia in the coming weeks, according to a senior Afghan official, in a move that threatens to cloud already delicate and fragile steps to negotiate an end to the United States' longest war.

The senior official, speaking anonymously as he was discussing sensitive diplomatic issues, said there were plans for a meeting between militants and Afghan officials in Saudi Arabia. Yet, he added, the plans were at such an early stage that it was not clear who — including American officials — would attend or when any talks would be held.

The US has acknowledged that it has held discussions about opening a Taliban office in Doha, Qatar, as well as the possibility of transferring some Taliban prisoners held at Guantanamo Bay as part of American support for Afghan reconciliation efforts.

"The principle is that although there is now an agreement — almost — to set up an office in Doha, that doesn't necessarily mean that all conversations will take place in Doha," the official said. "We will talk to the same or different individuals (from the insurgency) in a different location. Obviously, Saudi Arabia has been supportive of the recent agenda and has hosted talks in the past. It is likely that we are heading there in the future for meetings."

He said the dates and participants were still being worked out and insisted that any Saudi discussions would feed into the Qatar process. This is "absolutely not in opposition to the Qatar process," he added, calling the talks in that Gulf state "a very substantive step forward."

Indian navy to host multi-nation exercise this week

NEW DELHI, 31 Jan—The Indian Navy will host a six-day multi-nation exercise from Wednesday off the strategic Andaman and Nicobar Islands in the Bay of Bengal, local media reported on Tuesday.

Warships and delegations from 14 countries of the Asia-Pacific region would be taking part in the "Milan" exercise which will focus on countering maritime terrorism, piracy and poaching as well as search and rescue operations and capacity building, the Times of India quoted officials as saying.

The participants include Australia, Bangladesh, Brunei, the Philippines, Myanmar, Thailand, Indonesia, Sri Lanka, Singapore, Vietnam, Malaysia, Maldives, the Seychelles and Mauritius.

"Milan basically is a biennial conglomeration of Asia-Pacific navies, hosted by the Indian Navy, to foster bonds of 'friendship across the seas', boost interoperability and share views on common maritime issues.

From four navies in 1995, it has grown to include 14 navies now," an official said.

An important priority in the Asia-Pacific region is the protection of sea lanes around Malacca Strait since around 60,000 ships sail through it every year, transporting around 30 percent of the world trade in goods.

For India, the stakes are clearly high, with the strategic Andaman and Nicobar Islands dominating the approaches to Malacca Strait, the report said.—Xinhua the kidnappers to release the couple after several hours. Both were released in their vehicle in Chapellin, a neighbourhood in eastern Caracas. According to Mexican embassy spokesman Fernando Gondini, both—the ambassador and his wife — were fine and an investigation was now underway.

British navy can now intercept supersonic missiles

LONDON, 31 Jan—Britain's Royal Navy is building a new defence system that would be able to intercept enemy missiles travelling at supersonic speeds.

The Sea Ceptor missiles fired from navy warships can reach speeds of up to 3 Mach—more than 3,200 km per hour—and can protect an area of around 1,300 square km over land or sea, Sky News reported.

The missiles will initially be used on the navy's Type 23 frigates.

"This new weapon system will equip our frigates to deal with the type of sophisticated missile threat expected in the coming decades," said navy chief Admiral Mark Stanhope.

A contract worth 483 million pounds (USD 760 million) to develop the Sea Ceptor system has been awarded to MBDA, reportedly the world's second-largest arms manufacturer after Raytheon.

The five-year project would also offer 500 new jobs across the country, the ministry of defence said.—Internet

Four militants killed in Afghanistan

KABUL, 31 Jan—Four armed militants were killed during joint Afghan and coalition operations in four provinces, the Afghan Interior Ministry said Tuesday.

"Afghan National Police (ANP), Afghan National Army and NATO-led Coalition Forces launched five joint operations in Laghman, Khost, Paktia and Wardak provinces over the past 24 hours," the ministry said in a statement issued here on Tuesday morning.

"As a result of these operations, four armed militants were killed and five others were arrested by the ANP," it said. The joint forces also discovered and confiscated three AK-47 guns with five magazines besides defusing one anti-vehicle mine. Afghan forces and NATO-led coalition troops have intensified cleanup operations throughout the post-Taliban country. Over 90 militants have been killed and 380 others detained since the beginning of this year, according to official figures released by Interior Ministry.

The Taliban militants, who launched in May 2011 an offensive against Afghan and NATO forces, have yet to make comments.

Blast kills suspected militant leader

ISLAMABAD, 31 Jan—A blast Monday in the outskirts of Peshawar, Pakistan, killed a suspected militant leader and two others, police said. Another seven people were wounded critically, police said.

The explosion took place outside the home of Haji Akhundzada, suspected leader of Ansarul-Islam, a militant group operating in northwest Pakistan, police official Tahir Ayub said.

Akhundzada was killed, Ayub said. The attack could be a result of militant infighting, and it could be the work of Lashkar e-Islam, a rival militant group, Ayub said. The explosion was caused by a suicide bomb made of five kilograms of explosives, said Hukukum Khan, leader of the bomb disposal squad.

US authorities on Monday approved a new drug to treat the most common form of skin cancer, basal cell carcinoma, which is rarely lethal but can spread if left untreated.

Erivedge (vismodegib) is made by Genentech, a US subsidiary of the Swiss drug giant Roche, and was approved by the Food and Drug Administration after an expedited review for drugs that offer the potential for major advances in treatment.

The drug is the first of its kind for patients whose basal cell carcinoma has spread either locally or to other parts of the body, or metastasized.

A trial of 96 patients showed that 30 percent of those who had metastatic disease saw a partial shrinkage of their cancerous lesions after taking the drug, which comes in the form of a once-a-day pill.

Among those whose cancer had spread locally, 43 percent saw a complete or partial shrinkage of lesions.

Tasar silk could help heal damaged hearts

LONDON, 31 Jan—Silk is set to make a leap from dressing Indian brides to potentially growing replacement tissue for damaged hearts, keeping them healthy and evergreen. Max Planck scientists in Germany have succeeded in loading cardiac muscle cells onto a 3D scaffold (framework), created using the Tasar silk produced by a tropical silkworm.

Of all the body's organs, the human heart is probably the one most primed for performance and efficiency. Damaged heart muscle cannot be regenerated. Scar tissue grows in place of the damaged muscle cells.

In their attempt to develop a treatment for the repair of cardiac tissue, scientists are pursuing the aim of growing replacement tissue in the lab, according to a Max Planck statement.

"Whether natural or artificial in origin, all of the tested fibres had serious disadvantages," says Felix Engel, who led the research at the Max Planck Institute for Heart and Lung Research, Germany. "They were either too brittle, were attacked by the immune system or did not enable the heart muscle cells to adhere correctly to the fibres."

Chinmoy Patra, who works in Engel's lab, said the fibre produced by the tasar silkworm displays several advantages over the other substances tested. "The surface (of the fibre) has protein structures that facilitate the adhesion of heart muscle cells. It's also coarser than other silk fibres." This is the reason why the muscle cells grow well on it and can form a 3D tissue structure.

"The communication between the cells was intact and they beat synchronously over a period of 20 days, just like real heart muscle," says Engel. However, clinical application of the fibre is yet far away as the findings have to be extrapolated on human cardiac cells, said Engel. —Internet

SEOUL, 31 Jan—South Korean bank executives saw their net profit for 2011 jump 29 percent from a year earlier due mainly to lowering loan-loss reserves and one-off gains from the sale of a stake in a local builder, the financial watchdog said on Tuesday.

Combined net income of 18 local banks reached 12 trillion won (10.65 billion US dollars) in 2011, up 29.2 percent from the previous year, according to the Financial Supervisory Service (FSS).

The on-year jump came as costs against bad loans sharply declined to 11.8 trillion won last year from 15 trillion won in 2010 when local lenders set aside huge loan-loss reserves amid large firms' restructuring and rising sour loans in the real estate project-financing field.

Seven banks reaped one-off gains last year, including Kookmin Bank and Citibank, which raked in a combined pre-tax profit of 3.2 trillion won after selling their stakes in the country's top builder Hyundai Engineering & Construction in the second quarter.

By income sources, interest income of domestic lenders came to 39.3 trillion won in 2011, up 3.4 percent from a year before due to a rise in lending rates and growth in assets that offer interest returns, according to the FSS. Non-interest income expanded 14 percent on-year to 8.3 trillion won last year. Meanwhile, local banks' profitability improved slightly. The average rate of return on assets (ROA) for local lenders stood at 0.68 percent in 2011, up 0.14 percentage points from the previous year, while the return on equity (ROE) reached 8.55 percent last year, up 1.33 percentage points from a year before. —Xinhua

Singapore's unemployment rate hits 14-year low in 2011

SINGAPORE, 31 Jan—Supported by strong employment creation, Singapore's unemployment rate fell to a 14-year low last year. The Manpower Ministry said the unemployment rate in December was unchanged from a quarter ago at 2 percent.

The key findings of the ministry's "Employment Situation 2011" report showed that employment growth remained strong in 2011.

Preliminary estimates show total employment growing by 36,300 in the fourth quarter of 2011.

This brings growth for the whole year to 121,300—slightly higher than the gains of 115,900 in 2010.

Associate Professor Shandre Thangavelu, labour economist from the National University of Singapore, said: "In 2010 we had a very strong growth, a double digit growth. In 2011, the flash estimate from MTI is around 4.8 percent growth for the whole year.

"So, what it shows is that we are very much input-driven in 2011 because the employment creation was very large. That's a good sign, but also a bad sign... we want a more technology-driven and more capital-driven economy rather than a labour-input driven economy." The Manpower Ministry said the median income of Singaporeans also increased, amid the tight labour market.

Even for low-income Singaporeans at the 20th percentile, real income has grown over the last five years.

Scientists shift on brain speech centre

WASHINGTON, 31 Jan—The part of the brain used for speech processing is in a different location than originally believed, according to a US study Monday that researchers said will require a rewrite of medical texts.

Wernicke's area, named after the German neurologist who proposed it in the late 1800s, was long believed to be at the back of the brain's cerebral cortex, behind the auditory cortex which receives sounds. But a review by scientists at Georgetown University Medical Centre of more than 100 imaging studies has shown it is actually three centimetres closer to the front of the brain, and is in front of the auditory cortex, not behind.

"Textbooks will now have to be rewritten," said neuroscience professor Josef Rauschecker, lead author of the study which appears in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences. "We gave old theories that have long hung a knockout punch."

Rauschecker and colleagues based their research on 115 previous peer-reviewed studies that investigated speech perception and used brain imaging scans—either MRI (functional magnetic resonance imaging) or PET (positron emission tomography).—Internet

Researchers find cancer in ancient Egyptian mummy

CAIRO, 31 Jan—A professor from American University in Cairo says discovery of prostate cancer in a 2,200-year-old mummy indicates the disease was caused by genetics, not environment.

The genetics-environment question is key to understanding cancer.

AUC professor Salima Ikram, a member of the team that studied the mummy in Portugal for two years, said Sunday the mummy was of a man who died in his forties.

She said this was the second oldest known case of prostate cancer.

"Living conditions in ancient times were very different; there were no pollutants or modified foods, which leads us to believe that the disease is not necessarily only linked to industrial factors," she said. A statement from AUC says the oldest known case came from a 2,700-year-old skeleton of a king in Russia.

Britain to be scoured for black squirrels

CAMBRIDGE, 31 Jan—British researchers are asking the public for help in determining the extent of invasive black squirrels in the country, first seen 100 years ago.

Black and the more common gray squirrels are the same species, and scientists from Anglia Ruskin University say they want to find if the darker, less common squirrels carry the

"gray squirrel pox" disease that can infect Britain's native red squirrels. About 100 gray squirrels were introduced to more than 30 sites across England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, and there are currently more than 2 million of them in Britain, the BBC reported. A mutation in the gene that governs coat pigmentation is responsible for the black coloring of some of the squirrels. The first "official UK sighting" of a black squirrel was in 1912, lead researcher Helen McRobie said, and they have only been spotted in Bedfordshire, Hertfordshire and Cambridgeshire.—Internet

Pythons apparently wiping out Everglades mammals

WEST PALM BEACH, 31 Jan—A burgeoning population of huge pythons—many of them pets that were turned loose by their owners when they got too big—appears to be wiping out large numbers of raccoons, opossums, bobcats and other mammals in the Everglades, a study says.

The study, published Monday in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, found that sightings of medium-size mammals are down dramatically—as much as 99 percent, in some cases—in areas where pythons and other large, non-native constrictor snakes are known to be lurking.

Scientists fear the pythons could disrupt the food chain and upset the Everglades' environmental balance in ways difficult to predict.

Twitter faces censorship charges, blackout call

WASHINGTON, 31 Jan—Twitter, championed as a tool of free expression during the Arab Spring, was facing censorship charges on Friday after announcing it can now block tweets on a country-by-country basis if legally required to do so.

San Francisco-based Twitter stressed the move in no way compromised its commitment to free speech, but the backlash was immediate with critics taking to the service by the thousands to tweet disappointment and outrage.

"This is very bad news," said Mahmoud Salem, the Egyptian pro-democracy activist and blogger who tweets using the handle @sandmonkey. "Is it safe to say that #Twitter is selling us out?" "Yet another low for free speech," said Jannis Leidel, or @jezdez. Some Twitter users called for a boycott of the service on Saturday, punctuating their tweets with the hashtag #TwitterBlackout. Others questioned whether Twitter's move was related to a $300 million investment in December by billionaire Prince Alwaleed bin Talal of Saudi Arabia, a country with strong Internet censorship.

Olivier Basille, director of Paris-based Reporters Without Borders (RSF), expressed "deep concern" in a letter to Jack Dorsey, executive chairman and co-founder of Twitter, which has over 100 million active users.

"By finally choosing to align itself with the censors, Twitter is depriving cyber-dissidents in repressive countries of a crucial tool for information and organization," Basille said. "Are you going to block the accounts of Syrian cyber-dissidents if the Syrian authorities tell you to do so?" he asked.

Basille questioned whether Twitter's move was motivated by a desire to enter China, where the service is currently blocked. "Is it possible that one day there will be a sanitized Chinese version of Twitter that has been rid of any reference to the Chinese Nobel peace laureate Liu Xiaobo?" he asked.

In its blog post, Twitter said the ability to block tweets by specific country would allow the rest of the world to continue to see them.

Plastic from synthetic clothes threaten food chain

LONDON, 31 Jan—Microscopic plastic debris that are released from washing synthetic clothes are accumulating in the marine environment and could be entering the food chain, a study has warned. Researchers traced the microplastic to synthetic clothes, which released up to 1,900 tiny fibres per garment every time they were washed, BBC reported citing the US-based research network National Centre for Ecological Analysis and Synthesis.

An earlier research showed plastic smaller than one mm were being eaten by animals and getting into the food chain.

The findings appeared in the journal Environmental Science and Technology. "Research we had done before showed that when we looked at all the bits of plastic in the environment, about 80 percent was made up from smaller bits of plastic," said co-author Mark Browne, an ecologist now based at the University of California.

Browne, a member of the National Centre for Ecological Analysis and Synthesis, said the tiny plastics were a concern because evidence showed they were making their way into the food chain. "Once the plastics had been eaten, it transferred from the animals' stomachs to their circulation system and actually accumulated in their cells," he told BBC.—Internet

Chemistry research may help free environment of toxins

WASHINGTON, 31 Jan—A researcher is studying materials that use light or darkness to purify air filled with toxins that are harmful to human health and the environment.

The research, conducted by Manindu Weerasinghe from Kansas State University, Sri Lanka, could one day lead to filters, humidifiers and other devices that can detoxify air in windowless rooms, manufacturing facilities and other indoor areas.

"Indoor pollutants can come from things like asbestos, markers and new carpet, and are very harmful in just small amounts," Newswise quoted Weerasinghe as saying.

"A room like an office or a laboratory that may have few or no windows will have higher levels of indoor air pollutants than a room that has lots of windows. Also, if the room does not have good ventilation those levels would increase," she said. For her research, Weerasinghe is testing and analysing photocatalysts and dark catalysts, materials made by chemically bonding a metal to oxygen. HAVANA, 31 Jan—President Raul Castro delivered a full-throated defence of Cuba's one-party political system on Sunday, and a sharp warning to Communist Party delegates to fight corruption he said was a greater threat to the revolution than anything the United States could dream up.

In a stern closing speech to the party's national conference, Castro reiterated a pledge to institute term-limits for Cuban officials, saying a constitutional amendment would be required but that leaders should begin to adopt the practice even before it is formalized. Castro has spoken previously about limiting high-ranking officials including himself to two, 5-year terms.

The US threat to Cuba and the limits it placed on reform was a continuing theme of the speech. Cuba's President upbraided those who were hoping to see more fundamental changes come out of the two-day meetings —or any new faces amid the aged upper ranks of the party and government hierarchy.

"There has been no shortage of criticism and exhortations by those who have confused their intimate desires with reality, deluding themselves that this conference would consecrate the beginning of the dismantling of the political and social system the revolution has fought for for more than half a century," he said.

India not to cut oil imports from Iran

NEW DELHI, 31 Jan—India has said it won't cut down its oil imports from Iran, apparently making it clear that it would not buckle to any pressure from the United States or western countries which have imposed sanctions on Teheran, local media reported Monday.

"It is not possible for India to take any decision to reduce the imports from Iran drastically, because among the countries which can provide the requirement of the emerging economies, Iran is an important country amongst them," Indian Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee was quoted as saying during a visit to the United States on Sunday.

"We (India) imports 110 million tons of crude per year. We will not decrease imports from Iran. Iran is an important country for India despite US and European sanctions on Iran," said Mukherjee.

Four shot dead by troops in Thai south

BANGKOK, 31 Jan—Thai paramilitaries shot dead four people including an elderly man and a teenager in the kingdom's violence-torn far south because they feared they were under attack, police said on Monday.

The victims were male relatives returning from a funeral in a truck, the driver of the vehicle told police in Pattani, one of three southernmost provinces plagued by a long-running militancy.

"Army rangers saw a pick-up truck and asked it to stop. They heard a gunshot and assumed they were being fired on, so they pounded the truck with gunfire, killing four men and injuring five others," said a police report on the incident on Sunday evening.

A 70-year-old and an 18-year-old man were among the dead, while five men and boys were also hurt including three teenagers, aged 14, 15 and 19, and a 76-year-old.

Two guns were found in the truck, although the report did not reveal whether either had been fired. Police said the driver told officers that the weapons did not belong to anyone on the truck.

"We will have to investigate this incident carefully and I will interview both the rangers and survivors to ensure justice to both sides," said Police Colonel Chonnawee Chamareuk, Nongkik District police chief.

Thailand's three southernmost provinces of Pattani, Yala and Narathiwat, near the border with Malaysia, have been riven by a complex militancy, waged without clear aims. There is a heavy presence of government troops, supported by armed paramilitaries.—Internet

Search goes on for thousands of Japan's tsunami missing

ISHINOMAKI, 31 Jan—Leaden winter skies lour on a coastguard boat as it cuts its way through the seas off Japan's tsunami-wrecked shores.

Somewhere under these unforgiving grey waters lie hundreds, perhaps thousands of bodies; the unfound, unclaimed dead of one of the country's worst ever disasters.

Even though the hunt on these sullen seas goes on every day, Yoshifumi Suzuki says none of his coastguard colleagues has seen a single corpse since the partial remains of a man were untangled from a fishing net in November.

But they are not prepared to give up. "If we don't do this, nobody will," Suzuki said. "We want to continue the search until we find the very last one. I want to return people to their families not because it is my official duty, but because it is my duty as a human being."

"The (missing) person is in the mind of his or her family but they still want proof that the person lived in this world. I think it's hard for them to accept the reality" without a body, he said. The massive tsunami that pummelled Japan in March last year claimed more than 19,000 lives. One-in-six of the

Gunmen attack police station in northern Nigeria

KANO, 31 Jan—Gunmen attacked a police station in Nigeria's flashpoint City of Kano at dawn on Monday, setting off a gun battle with police, residents said.

It is the second time in three days that the Mandawari police station has come under attack in Kano, the country's second biggest city and the scene of one of the deadliest attacks blamed on the Islamist sect Boko Haram.

"It was crazy. These guys came on motorcycles and opened fire on the police station but they met tough resistance from the police, and it lasted around 20 minutes," Jamilu Muham-mad, who lives across the police station, told AFP. Witnesses said it was not yet clear if there were any casualties, and police were not immediately available for comment.

"From my house I heard gunshots at exactly 5:50 am (0450 GMT) coming from around the police station," said a local journalist who lives in the neighbourhood.

He said motorcycles were racing up and down his street as the sound of gunfire rang around the police station.

The attack took place in the Mandawari neighbourhood, not far from the palace of the emir of Kano, the most important traditional leader in the city. Boko Haram was blamed for a series of bombings and shootings in Kano on January 20 that mainly targeted police stations and killed at least 185 people.—Internet

PUB to spend S$750m to improve drainage capacity

SINGAPORE, 31 Jan—Over the next five years, water agency PUB will be spending S$750 million to improve the capacity of Singapore's drains by 30 to 40 percent.

More resources will be put into retaining rainfall upstream to reduce the speed at which water flows into the drains. Earlier this month, a panel of experts had recommended better ways to deal with increasingly intense rainfall.

On Monday, PUB said it has accepted these recommendations and laid out a comprehensive plan to tackle the problem.

This includes setting aside S$750 million to increase drainage capacity particularly at six major canals such as Geylang River and Rochor Canal. More importantly, there will be measures such as water retention ponds and rooftop tanks to contain water in localised areas. PUB will also come up with new flood protection guidelines for buildings within a year.

It said this approach is in recognition that Singapore has to move beyond widening drains and building flood barriers to resolve its flood problem. One reason is that with land being a premium, there is a limit as to how much can be set aside for drains. The panel also recommended better data. The PUB said it will be piloting a system over the next two years to better forecast where and when floods will occur.

They will be getting information on rainfall from the Meteorological Service and data from their own canal sensors. PUB is not, at this point, able to say how much advance warning it can give but it said that even a few minutes will be helpful to the public.

As for Stamford Canal, in the immediate term, PUB will be coating its walls with a polymer lining to reduce friction and increase water speed. It will also remove the sewer and Newater pipes that are placed inside the canal to allow the canal to hold more water.—Internet

Sudan frees ships held in S Sudan oil row

KHARTOUM, 31 Jan—Sudan on Sunday released three oil tankers held in a dispute with breakaway South Sudan, which has accused Khartoum of theft, the foreign ministry said. "Today the three ships left. The last one departed at three o'clock (1200 GMT)," foreign ministry spokesman Al-Obeid Meruh told AFP.

He added that President Omar al-Bashir had ordered the tankers' release even though they had not paid fees for using the Red Sea port. The vessels contained 2.2 million barrels of South Sudanese oil. A Sudanese official announced on Saturday in Addis Ababa, where the two sides failed to resolve a dispute over oil fees, that the ships were free to go as a goodwill gesture.

Sudan had hoped the South would reverse a protest shutdown of its oil facilities as a result, but Juba's petroleum and mining minister, Stephen Dhieu Dau, said freeing the ships would not be enough.

"The stolen crude must be paid back to South Sudan," Dau said. South Sudanese President Salva Kiir last week accused Khartoum of stealing $815 million worth of crude oil since December, largely by blocking four ships in Port Sudan and preventing four others from collecting their purchases.

In November, Sudanese

officials announced the country would take 23 percent of the south's vital oil exports as payment in kind during the fee dispute.

Landlocked South Sudan split from Sudan in July after decades of war. It took with it three quarters of the country's oil, but all pipeline and export facilities are controlled by Sudan.

The two countries disagree over how much Juba should pay for using the north's pipeline, port and other infrastructure.

With talks stalled, the South said on Sunday it had nearly completed a shutdown of its oil production — the fledgling nation's top revenue source.—Internet

Officers checking robbery find five dead in Ala home

BIRMINGHAM, 31 Jan—Police investigating a possible robbery at a Birmingham home early Sunday instead found five people dead inside, authorities said.

Birmingham Police Sgt Johnny Williams said officers arrived at the house around 3:30 am Sunday after getting a call that a robbery was in progress and soon discovered the five victims. He told reporters that investigators are interviewing potential witnesses but so far have made no arrests. "Someone out there knows more information," said Williams. "We know someone is going to do the right thing."

The victims' identities and the causes of death were not immediately released. Birmingham authorities launched a homicide investigation and police believe more than one person was involved.

"It obviously appears to us this horrific crime was not a random act of violence," said Birmingham Police Chief AC Roper. The two-bedroom house, which is made partly of cinderblocks, was built along a busy street in west Birmingham. Vacant homes sit beside houses where some residents have lived for years. One is Beatrice Houston, who lives across the street from the home where the bodies were found.

Houston, who is 64, said she believes a woman, her son and her brother had lived in the house for the last year or so. She said she didn't know the neighbours' names, but started worrying when she saw groups of young men hanging around the house at odd hours. Still, she said, her neighbours

Australia's NSW floods force road closures, isolate residents

SYDNEY, 31 Jan—Heavy rain and localized flooding have forced the closure of the Pacific Highway at the town of Grafton in northern New South Wales (NSW) of Australia, authorities said on Monday.

The NSW Department of Transport said they were unsure when the road would reopen but that diversions were in place. More heavy rain is expected on Monday, increasing the likelihood of minor flooding in Nambucca and Murrumbidgee valleys, according to the Bureau of Meteorology.

About 2000 residents in Macleay, Bellinger, Brunswick, Tweed and areas along the Clarence River on the north coast of NSW are already isolated by floodwaters, the NSW State Emergency Service (SES) said. Residents in some northern communities have been told to prepare for further flooding, as water rushes downstream from Queensland over the next two weeks.

A major flood warning has been issued for residents around the Paroo River, in northwest NSW, after heavy rain fell in the Upper Paroo River valley.—MNA/Xinhua

Philippines arrests foreign trio in big drugs bust

MANILA, 31 Jan—Philippine police arrested three men on Sunday in a sting operation that netted illegal drugs worth over two million dollars, officials said.

The three were caught selling more than two kilos (4.4 pounds) of the banned stimulant crystal methamphetamine hydrochloride, more commonly known as "ice" or "shabu", to an undercover agent, police said. Agents also found drugs in the suspects' vehicle.

"We believe they are selling two kinds of 'shabu', one priced lower and one with a higher price imported from another country," task force head Superintendent Ismael Fajardo said on national radio.

He said the bogus transaction took place at a car park of a hospital in Manila and agents pounced on the trio after marked money changed hands.

The Philippines has been stepping up its fight against drug traffickers after concerns the archipelago country's vast shoreline made it a favourite shipment point for illegal drugs.

India, China rise makes Asia important: US

WASHINGTON, 31 Jan—With the rise of China and India as world powers, Asia is becoming more important to America as Asian markets and suppliers drive the US economy, according to a senior US official.

“With the end of the war in Iraq, we have more ‘bandwidth’ to focus on the future,” said Michele Flournoy, the undersecretary of defence for policy, who is leaving at the end of this week, according to the defence department website.

“Obviously we will do what we need to prevail in Afghanistan, but as we think more and more about the future we see both the challenges and opportunities arising out of Asia,” she said.

The rise of China and India as world powers reinforces the trend, but the US must cultivate other nations in Southeast Asia, Flournoy said. Also important, she noted, is the continued and deep alliances with Japan and South Korea.

“The United States is a Pacific power and has always played a unique role in underwriting the security under which all that dynamism and economic growth has been based,” Flournoy said.

But could Asia remain stable without the US? “It’s hard to imagine that with so much competition and periods of great tension and even conflict,” she said.

“It is something that even countries that are not our allies - like China and other countries in the region - all tend to acknowledge that the United States plays a stabilising influence and they don’t want us to leave.”

The Middle East and Central Asia remain areas of turmoil, but Flournoy felt good about the responsible conclusion in Iraq. “And I think we’ve turned around the strategy in Afghanistan,” she said.

Three Canadians jailed for life for “honor killings”

KINGSTON, 31 Jan—Three members of an Afghan Canadian family were found guilty of the “honor killing” of three siblings and a fourth relative on Sunday after a high-profile trial that has fascinated Canadians.

A jury in Kingston, Ontario, found the three — husband and wife Mohammad Shafia and Tooba Mohammad Yahya, and their eldest son Hamed Mohammad Shafia — guilty of four counts of first-degree murder.

Their victims were three of Hamed’s sisters and the woman introduced to outsiders as a cousin, who turned out to be Mohammad Shafia’s first wife in a polygamous marriage.

“It is difficult to conceive of a more despicable, more heinous crime,” Canadian media quoted Judge Robert Maranger as saying after the verdict.

“The apparent reason behind these cold-blooded, shameful murders was that the four completely innocent victims offended our completely twisted concept of honour.”

Over a three-month trial, the court heard repeated evidence that the three teenaged sisters had clashed with their conservative father on many issues.

One had a boyfriend, and had briefly sought shelter in a woman’s refuge, while another was sent home from school for wearing clothes that were too revealing.

Africa’s economy remains robust in 2011 despite difficult situation

ADDIS ABABA, 31 Jan—In spite of the difficult international situation, Africa’s economic growth remained robust in 2011, reaching an average of five to six per cent, said Jean Ping, Chairperson of the African Union Commission (AUC).

Speaking at the opening ceremony of the 18th Summit of AU head of states and governments at the new AU Conference Centre in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, Ping said several countries have registered average economic growth exceeding five and six percents even reaching double figure growth. The chairperson, who assumed the position four year ago, said Africa has made progress in reduction of deficits and inflation, increasing productivity, and increasing productive investment, a requirement for job and wealth creation. “We owe this change of fortune to the export of our raw materials. We also, and more importantly, own it to the initiatives that we have taken to promote political and economic, good governance, the reduction in number of conflicts, the increase in domestic demands and improvements in business climate,” said Ping.

Ping also said Africa should invest in infrastructure and the 18th AU Assembly is expected to adopt the Programme for Infrastructure Development in Africa (PIDA) which was launched in Kampala, Uganda. The Chairperson also emphasized on the need to speed up the economic integration of the continent.—Xinhua

100 firefighters battle bushfire in Western Australia’s south west

SYDNEY, 31 Jan—About 100 firefighters are battling a bushfire near Wannamal, north of Perth, in Western Australia’s south west, authorities said on Monday.

Thailand’s major dam discharges more water ahead of rainy season

BANGKOK, 31 Jan—Sirikit Dam, one of the biggest dams in the country, in northern Uttaradit Province released more water with the main purpose to cut retention capacity to less than 50 percent in preparation for the next rainy season, state-run MCOT reported Sunday.

The Royal Irrigation Department’s water management committee has earlier directed the Sirikit Dam’s director to increase water discharge from the dam, conforming to the government’s policy to raise daily discharge volume between 27 Jan and April.

The targeted retention capacity was less than 50 percent as an increase in rainfall during the upcoming rainy season was expected. The dam on Sunday released 46 million cubic metres of water and will raise the volume of discharged water to 50 million cubic metres per day on 31 Jan.

The plan of discharging water retention in major dams at the earliest stage came after the country faced the most severe flood crisis last year.—Xinhua

Obama's old car listed on eBay for HOW much?!

NEW YORK, 31 Jan—A 2005 Chrysler sedan purported to once belong to President Obama is up for auction on eBay for ... wait for it... $1 million. The vehicle is for sale in Illinois, Obama's home before he won the White House. The seller, cubfanatic23, says on the site that the car — bought from a dealership — has 20,800 miles on it: "I'm sure many of them were highway miles back & forth from Chicago to Springfield since Barack was an Illinois State Senator during 2004."

According to a Q & A in the listing, the owner is a Republican. "But I'm not out and out mean or stupid to Democrats ... sure I don't agree with 99% of what Obama does, but as a Capitalist, if I can make money off Obama then I'll be happy."

According to CNNMoney, the woman selling the vehicle is Lisa Czibor, a self-described "life-long Ronald Reagan old-school conservative." She said that while she's received some flak about the hefty price tag, she's determined to sell it.

The bluebook value is $16,500. Of course, that's not counting the regal elegance of it having once been driven by the leader of the free world. "It's all about the money for me," Czibor told CNNMoney.

There were no bids as of around noon on Monday.—Internet

Delta flight slides off runway in Detroit

WASHINGTON, 31 Jan—Passengers on a Delta Air Lines flight experienced an unexpected bump on Sunday when the plane rolled off the runway after landing in Detroit.

Flight 753 from Las Vegas was trying to turn onto a taxiway when it slipped off the pavement, according to the Wayne County Airport Authority. It's not clear yet what caused the plane to slide off course, spokesman Scott Wintner said.

"It was like a toboggan ride down the runway, and we just couldn't make the turn at the end, and we slid off the runway into the grass," passenger Steve Maranowski told CNN affiliate WDIV.

The aircraft, carrying 153 passengers and six crew members, was pulled back onto the taxiway and towed to the gate, according to Delta spokesman Anthony Black. The plane was not damaged, and no one was injured, Black said.

Passengers spent about two and a half hours on the taxiway, Maranowski told WDIV.

"The problem was they had to wait for the salt trucks, wait for the towing company, and wait for the operations to get it out," he said. Black said Delta and the airport will investigate to determine operating conditions at the time of the incident.—Internet

More than 100 injured after earthquake hits coastal Peru

LIMA, 31 Jan—More than 100 people were injured when a strong earthquake shook coastal Peru on early Monday, civil defence officials said.

The magnitude 6.3 quake hit about 15 kilometres (9 miles) southeast of Ica, at a depth of 39.2 kilometres (24.4 miles), according to the US Geological Survey. State-run TV Peru reported that police were patrolling the area while officials assessed damages.

A 6.9-magnitude earthquake struck the same region in October, leveling dozens of buildings and leaving some homeless. In 2007, an 8.0-magnitude quake struck southwestern Peru, killing more than 500 people and injuring more than 1,000. The most serious damage from that quake occurred in towns and cities along the country's Pacific coast south of Lima, including Chincha, Canete, Pisco and Ica.

Man orders chicken, eats wire

BROOKLYN, 31 Jan—A New York bus driver says he is suing a fast food chicken outlet, claiming he nearly choked on a two-inch coil of wire that was cooked into his food. Lajzer Grynztajn, 50, has filed suit seeking unspecified damages against JFK Fried Chicken in the Sunset Park area of Brooklyn claiming he needed emergency surgery to remove the wire that had lodged in his throat.

"The more I think about it, I get angry," he told the New York Daily News. "I almost died for something stupid like that?"

The 11-year Metropolitan Transportation Authority veteran said he stopped by the chicken place on 9 Jan, sat down and ate a meal of two chicken breasts and fries, the New York Daily News reported on Monday. "I felt a sharp pain, like I was choking," Grynztajn said. "I thought I was choking on a bone."

He left the restaurant, started coughing up blood and wound up at Lutheran Medical Centre where a doctor discovered a wire so deeply down his throat, he had to be anesthetized before the doctor could take the wire out, court documents say.

The newspaper said a man who answered the phone at JFK Fried Chicken denied the bus driver's charges saying, "I think this guy is (expletive) us," before hanging up.

Grynztajn says he has given up on takeout food. "I don't eat out anymore," he said.—Internet

Russian company sues US firm over Lady Gaga concert

MOSCOW, 31 Jan—Russian media holding company UTV, which owns Muz-TV channel, has filed a USD 1.8 million lawsuit with a Miami court, claiming losses from US-based New Wave Entertainment over a cancelled Moscow concert by popular singer Lady Gaga.

UTV claims it attempted to book the popular American singer through Miami-based New Wave Entertainment to perform at the Muz-TV awards ceremony in June 2011.

"The Russian side paid the necessary reservation deposit but the Americans could not guarantee the concert on the date for the channel," Muz-TV said in a statement. New Wave Entertainment claimed it had connections to Lada Gaga to organize the tour but failed to secure the singer's performance in Moscow, despite receiving a USD 1.5 million advance and USD 300,000 in agency fees.

"As a result, ZAO TV Service has applied to a court in Florida, USA, with a lawsuit against the agent company to return the insurance deposit and compensate for losses suffered by the TV channel," Muz-TV said.

New Wave Entertainment has so far refused to return the funds.—Internet

A fake ancient jade collateral found in Chinese auction market

BEIJING, 31 Jan—Recent years have seen a real boom in business for auction houses in China. But even as prices climb, so too is the number of fakes.
 In one recent case, a businessman was found to have defrauded banks out of millions of yuan by using a fake ancient jade burial suit as collateral.
 But the suit, appraised by five antiquities experts at 2.4 billion yuan, or about 380 million US dollars, was later discovered to be a modern fake. With a slew of fraud allegations about Chinese buyers, sellers, auction houses, and experts, many are now arguing for auction law reform in China. —Xinhua

India, Japan conclude Coast Guard Meeting and Combined Exercises

NEW DELHI, 31 Jan—The XI High Level Meeting and Combined Exercises between Coast Guards of India and Japan concluded today with Japan Coast Guard (JCG) Commandant Admiral Hisayasu Suzuki leading the Japanese delegation during the five-day parlance.
 Both sides discussed maritime issues of mutual concern while formulating a cooperative approach to address matters between the Japan Coast Guard (JCG) and the Indian Coast Guard (ICG), according to official sources.
 During the discussions, it was mutually agreed to strengthen cooperation on evolving collaborative approach, in addressing a spectrum of maritime issues concerning safety and security, said the Defence Ministry here.
 The visit also provided renewed impetus to strong ties that exist between the two Coast Guards as the Japan Coast Guard Ship has visited India, after a gap of six years, for the combined exercises with the ICG off Chennai.

 The visit was in pursuance of the Memorandum of Cooperation (MoC), signed between the two Coast Guards in November 2006, which stipulates that heads of the two organizations meet alternately in India and Japan, to discuss maritime issues of mutual concerns and formulate a cooperative approach to address them.
 The MoC encompasses issues of maritime search and rescue, combating marine pollution, technical assistance for responding to natural disasters and exchange of information regarding crime at sea, including smuggling and illicit trafficking.
 The first ICG-JCG combined exercises were carried out in November 2000 off Chennai in which one JCG ship had participated and led to close interaction between the two organizations that included regular visits and exercises, sharing of information and expertise and training visits, the ministry added.—Internet

Loose cat in cockpit grounds flight

An Air Canada flight's takeoff was delayed by 4 hours Wednesday when a cat escaped from its carrier and hid in the cockpit wiring, airline officials said.

The plane was about to taxi for takeoff at 5:30 am from Halifax, Nova Scotia, bound for Toronto when a cat named Ripples escaped his carrier under its unidentified female owner's seat, the Canadian Broadcasting Corp reported.

Passenger Kyle Warkentin told the broadcaster flight attendants announced a brief delay because of a missing cat.

"Then the engine turned off and the whole power on the plane turned off, and they said they were doing this to calm the cat," Warkentin said. Airport spokesman Peter Spurway said the cat was spotted in the cockpit, cowering in a dense bundle of wires.

"The way the Air Canada folks described it to me is they had to disassemble part of the cockpit to get to the poor little cat, which was terrified, as you can imagine," he said.

The airline re-booked

some passengers, while others waited and sympathized with the cat's owner, whom Warkentin said appeared as traumatized as the cat. "She was shaking, the poor thing," he said.

The St Lucie County Sheriff's Office said Jayme Beall, 30, told them she stuffed her sons' backpacks full of clothes and sent them outside around 7 pm Monday at the Pineview Mobile Home Park in Fort Pierce because she was angry at the 9-year-old for swearing, TCPalm.com reported Thursday.

Beall, who called 911 when she was unable to locate the boys about 20 minutes later, told deputies the 13-year-old has run away before and has a history of violence toward her.

Deputies said the boys were eventually found at their great-grandmother's house in Boynton Beach, more than 70 miles away. Investigators did not say how the boys made the trip to Boynton Beach. Beall was arrested on a felony child abuse charge and taken to the St Lucie County Jail.

TURIN, 31 Jan—Juventus have been fined once again for racist chanting by their fans during Saturday's 2-1 victory against Udinese in Serie A. Colombian wing-back Pablo Armero and Cape Verde-born Switzerland midfielder Gelson Fernandes were the victims of racist chanting during both the first and second half. Juve have been hit with a 10,000-euro fine, the same amount they were docked in October after racist chanting during their win at Inter Milan.

The Old Lady of Turin's fans have a sorry record when it comes to racist chants as they regularly abused Manchester City striker Mario Balotelli — an Italian of Ghanaian origin — during his Inter days.

In 2008/09 Juve had to play a match behind closed doors after their fans racially abused Balotelli following a controversial incident during the team's clash with Inter.

That seemed to anger and galvanise certain sections of the Juve support who proceeded to regularly target Balotelli, even when not playing against his team.

The next season the club was punished four times, including a partial stand closure once, for fans anti-Balotelli chants.—INTERNET

"If I stay on (as coach), we'll make it to the World Cup, we've got the quality to do that," he said. The game was played out in a near-funereal atmosphere, with almost more players than fans at Bata's stadium, an embarrassment for organisers CAF and co-hosts Equatorial Guinea. ## Tunisia marching to the tune of the revolution

LIBREVILLE, 31 Jan—Tunisia have an additional and emotional spur driving them onwards and upwards at the Africa Cup of Nations as they seek to provide the people back home with some relief after last year's revolution. "Last year we had all our problems in Tunisia with the revolution, so everyone is waiting for us to produce results at this Nations Cup," said midfielder Hocine Ragued.

The Arab Spring uprising movement, which led to the toppling of regimes in Tunisia, Libya and Egypt, began in Tunisia in December 2010 when Mohamed Bouazizi set fire to himself in protest at police corruption and ill treatment.

His self-immolation sparked the Jasmine revolution and the downfall of Tunisia President Zine El Abidine Ben Ali, who went into exile in Saudi Arabia in January last year after. Ragued, who plays for Turkish side Karabukspor, was speaking just before he and his teammates boarded a flight for Franceville where the 2004 titleholders take on co-hosts Gabon in Tuesday's closing Group C game.

Lucho on verge of Porto return

PARIS, 31 Jan—Marseille midfielder Lucho Gonzalez is on the brink of a return to former club Porto after the two clubs reached agreement on principle for the sale of the unsettled Argentine to the defending Portuguese champions, the French club announced on Monday.

A statement published Monday afternoon on Marseille's club website indicated that the transfer "will be made official in the coming hours."

Lucho joined OM from Porto in 2009 for a club-record

18 million euros and was an instrumental figure in Didier Deschamps' side as they won the league in his first season at the Stade Velodrome.

However, the Argentine failed to replicate that form last season and made his desire to leave Marseille known after he was the victim of an armed robbery in March.

Capped 51 times by Argentina, the 31-year-old started his career at Huracan in his native country and moved to River Plate before leaving for Porto in 2005.

NZ teen eyes US major debut after record golf win

New Zealand teenager Lydia Ko, who at the weekend became the youngest player to win a pro golf tournament, hopes to compete at a US major this year, her coach said on Tuesday.

INTERNET

WELLINGTON, 31 Jan—New Zealand teenager Lydia Ko, who at the weekend became the youngest player to win a pro golf tournament, hopes to compete at a US major this year, her coach said on Tuesday.

The South Korean-born amateur created history when she won the New South Wales Open in Australia on Sunday at the age of 14 years and nine months, eclipsing Ryo Ishikawa of Japan's mark of 15 years, 8 months set in 2007.

Ko's coach Guy Wilson said the prodigy, already ranked the world's top female amateur, planned to wait "three or four" years before turning professional. But he said the Auckland-based golfer, who moved to New Zealand with her family when she was five, hoped to experience playing in the United States this year if she was granted an age exemption and finances permitted. Wilson said he had approached organizers of the Kraft-Nabisco tournament at Palm Springs in April, the first major on the women's pro circuit, about waiving the rule prohibiting players aged under 18.—INTERNET

Motta secures move to PSG

PARIS—Brazilian-born Italy midfielder Thiago Motta on Tuesday joined Paris St Germain from Inter Milan for a fee believed to be in the region of 10 million euros, Italian media reported.

The 29-year-old has signed a three-and-a-half year deal worth around two million euros a season. PSG officials had travelled to Milan late on Monday to try to tie up the deal for a player who won the treble of league, cup and Champions League with the nerazzurri only 18 months ago. Motta began his professional career with Barcelona, having moved to Spain while still a 17-year-old. He went on to play for Atletico Madrid and Genoa before joining Inter in 2009.

Motta qualified to play for Italy through Italian grandparents and made his Italy debut in February 2011, despite having already represented Brazil at the 2003 CONCACAF Gold Cup competition.—Internet

The 28-year-old arrived at Auxerre last summer, having scored 20 goals in 116 matches for Lens, but has made just four league starts for Laurent Fournier's relegation-threatened side this season.

Brest, who had a void to fill up front following the departure of Nolan Roux to Lille, had already signed Alexandre Alphonse from Zurich during the January transfer window to bolster their attacking options.—Internet

Bogomolov set to make his Russia Davis Cup debut

Moscow, 31 Jan—World number 35 Alex Bogomolov is set to make his Davis Cup debut for Russia after being named in the squad for next week's World Group first-round tie against Austria. Moscow-born Bogomolov, who had represented the United States in the past after moving there as a child with his parents, has been eligible to compete for Russia after getting a clearance from the International Tennis Federation last month.

The 28-year-old decided to switch nationalities last year, saying he wanted to represent his native country in Davis Cup and the Olympics. Bogomolov told Russian media this month that he had to pay the U.S. tennis federation (USTA) $50,000 out of his own pocket to get the Americans' approval to switch nationalities.

Russia captain Shamil Tarpishev also included 39th-ranked Mikhail Youzhny, Nikolay Davydenko (52) and Igor Kunitsyn (80) for February 10-12 tie in the Austrian town of Wiener Neustadt.—Reuters

Harvard study warns of injury through tablet use

HARVARD, 31 Jan—Of course, tablet computers can cause injuries in a variety of ways. Dropped from a great height onto someone's head will likely have the same damaging effect as being on the receiving end of one hurled Frisbee-like across a room.

Thankfully, there are up to now no recorded cases of such incidents, though researchers at the Harvard School of Public Health (HSPH) are warning of other injury risks associated with tablets. While many of us will have experienced a degree of wrist, back or neck pain at some time or other from our interaction with desktop computers, researchers are now turning their attention to ergonomic issues related to tablets such as Apple's iPad.

In an interview with Amy Roeder on the HSPH website, the director of the school's Occupational Biomechanics and Ergonomics Laboratory, Jack Dennerlein, said: "The beauty of tablets and other mobile devices is their flexibility. You can use them almost anywhere and in different ways. You can hold them in your lap; you can hold them in your hand. The problem is that some of the postures people are in when using a tablet can be awkward and lead to discomfort with prolonged use."

In the study, Dennerlein and his team gave 15 people already familiar with tablets an iPad 2 and a Motorola Xoom, together with a case. The subjects, all aged under 40, were then asked to carry out a set of simulated tasks. Their various postures were analyzed using an infrared three-dimensional motion analysis system.

The researchers found that when using tablets, participants' necks were bent more compared to when using a desktop or laptop computer, especially when the tablet was placed on the user's lap.

Understandably, such a position is going to cause extra strain on neck and shoulder muscles, which could cause short-term as well as long-term problems for the user.

Dennerlein suggests a number of things to reduce neck and shoulder strain, including changing position every 15 minutes, or at least moving your neck around to give it a break from its previously fixed position. Using a case can also help, as it enables the device to be propped up at what he describes as an ideal angle of 30 degrees.

With Apple reporting sales of more than 15 million iPads in its latest quarter—bringing total sales of the device to over 50 million—there may well be a fair few necks out there already feeling the strain. How's yours doing?—Internet
