Conserve forests for greening and economy

Forests are not only a decisive factor for living beings to survive but also an incredible source of income for a nation. Thriving forest plantations which were once a common sight across the nation are now becoming rare for a variety of reasons.

It has long been established that forests generate weather while scientists are of the view that deforestation often result in climate change which spurs soil degradation, flesh foods, desertification.

As the Arid Zone Greening Department set its sights on establishment of forest plantations, 13 arid districts of the country have now seen a vast stretch of forest plantations which largely constitute teak and other valuable hardwood.

It is undoubtedly necessary for the country to establish forest plantations since teak and other Myanmar hardwood are still a magnet for foreign companies.

Reforestation calls for a package of measures which could be driven by skills, knowledge and better management. But the main drawback to such measures is illegal logging that is rife in some far-flung regions which are of difficult access.

The streamlining of forest conservation must be widely introduced with the handling of deforestation high on the agenda as the country is festooned with extremely fertile soil and favourable weather patterns. However, the government alone is still not capable enough to go without help from the people.

Keeping it in mind the entire people are to do everything possible to reduce deforestation as it has proved completely embarrassing to the nation and represents a threat to environmental conservation.

Alleged Afghanistan 'shooter' arrives in US

CHICAGO, 17 March— A US soldier who allegedly shot and killed 16 civilians in Afghanistan arrived at a US military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, late Friday after a flight from Kuwait, US media reported.

The soldier, identified Friday as US Army Staff Sergeant Robert Bales, had served three combat tours in Iraq, and was on his first deployment to Afghanistan.

Bales allegedly left his base in the southern province of Kandahar before sunrise Sunday, entered an Afghan village and opened fire, killing men, women and children. The incident has plunged US-Afghan relations into the deepest crisis since the 2001 US-led invasion.

The US military has not officially released the soldier's name, nor charged him with a crime yet.

Bales is expected to be held at Fort Leavenworth as army investigators seek to learn more about the tragic events.

No early US troop exit from Kabul

ABOARD AIRFORCE ONE, 17 March—US President Barack Obama and his Afghan counterpart Hamid Karzai on Friday reaffirmed that US troops would leave Afghanistan by the end of 2014, despite calls for an earlier withdrawal.

The two leaders spoke by phone Friday and reaffirmed they were committed to the agreed timetable "in which Afghan forces would complete the process of transition and have full responsibility for security across the country by the end of 2014," the White House said in a statement. Karzai, in Thursday talks with US Defence Secretary Leon Panetta, had insisted international forces should leave Afghan villages and be "relocated in their bases" and that Afghanistan is ready to take responsibility for security.

Karzai gave no timeline other than saying NATO should hand over to Afghan forces in 2013.

In Friday's phone call, Obama agreed to resolve Karzai's concerns overnight as the two leaders said they would discuss complaints about NATO troops in villages.

White House spokesman Jay Carney said they discussed "Karzai's recent reiteration of his long standing concerns regarding night raids and house searches and recommitted to conclude ongoing negotiations on a memorandum of understanding to resolve those concerns."

"They also agreed to further discuss concerns

Bin Laden plotted to kill Obama before his death

WASHINGTON, 17 March—Terror mastermind Osama bin Laden ordered his al-Qaeda network to organize special cells in Afghanistan and Pakistan to attack the aircraft of US President Barack Obama and Gen David Petraeus, who commanded the US forces in Afghanistan at the time, US reports said Friday.

The Washington Post quoted administration officials as saying the plot was discovered in documents taken from bin Laden's compound by US forces on 2 May, the night he was killed. They also said the plot was never a serious threat.

The man bin Laden picked to carry out the attacks was Pakistani terrorist Ilyas Kashmiri. A month after bin Laden's death, Kashmiri was killed in a US drone attack.

However, the Post said the plot "was probably bluster," since al-Qaeda apparently lacked the weapons to shoot down US aircraft, and US analysts don't see evidence that these plots have materialized.

iPhone hit Instagram heads to Android smartphones

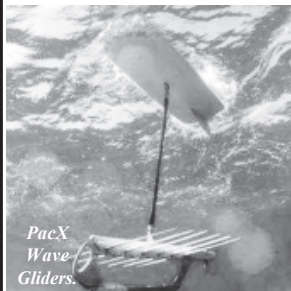

SAN FRANCISCO, 17 March—The makers of an Instagram photo-sharing application wildly popular on Apple gadgets are tailoring a version for smartphones powered by Android software.

Instagram co-founder Kevin Systrom provided a glimpse of the Android “app” to technology trend-setters at a South By Southwest Interactive conference that wraps up on Tuesday in the Texas capital of Austin.

The application tuned to Apple’s iPhones, iPads, and iPod touch devices has been downloaded more than 27 million times since the first version of Instagram was released in late 2010 by the San Francisco startup, according to Systrom.

The free mini-programme lets people give classic looks to square photos using “filters” and then share them at Twitter, Facebook or other social networks. Apple crowned Instagram its app-of-the-year for 2011. A version of Instagram for Android would bolster the positions of smartphones and tablets powered by Google-backed operating software as they compete with Apple in the hot mobile market. It would also let the Mountain View, California-based Internet titan weave Instagram photo-sharing into its Google+ social network.—Internet

Robots in record-distance ocean swim

PacX Wave Gliders.

HONOLULU, 17 March—Four wave-powered robots have set a record by swimming more than 3,200 nautical miles across the Pacific Ocean, their US-based developer said.

Built by Liquid Robotics, the PacX Wave Gliders are taking part in a project to gather data about the composition and quality of seawater.

The first leg of their transoceanic swim from San Francisco to Hawaii took four months and they are expected to cover 9,000 nautical miles by their journey’s end.

They were launched in San Francisco harbour on 17 Nov, 2011. The robots consist of a floating upper part, shaped like a surfboard, connected by a cable to a lower assemble that has fins and a keel. They have no fuel or engine, instead converting energy from the movement of ocean waves into forward motion.

Solar panels installed on the upper surface of the power sensors that take readings every 10 minutes of the surrounding seawater.

“I have no doubt new ocean discoveries, insights, and applications will emerge from the PacX data set,” Edward Lu, chief of innovative applications at Liquid Robotics, told the BBC.

After a short stopover in Hawaii, the robots will split up, with two going on to Japan and two to Australia, crossing the equator.—Internet

Egypt finds suggest ancient royal funeral

TORONTO, 17 March—A find in Egypt of a wooden statue of a king, a chapel and animal mummies suggests ritual activity associated with the great Egyptian gods, researchers say.

Archaeologists from the University of Toronto said the items and evidence of a monumental building were found in Abydos, Egypt in June and July 2011.

The wooden statue may represent the female king Hatshepsut, often portrayed as male in stone because the Egyptian pharaoh was understood to be son of the god Amon-Re, and Hatshepsut was known to dress as a man for the role, a university release said Monday.

But this statue has a smaller waist and delicate jawline, acknowledging these aspects of her feminine physique, the researchers said. It is thought to be from a ceremonial procession in which wooden statues of the royal ancestors and of gods were carried by priests from the temple of Osiris to a royal tomb.

Egyptians from all levels of society built chapels and monuments along the processional route to ensure their eternal participation in the festival and their identification with Osiris, the researchers said, but building too close to the route was prohibited by the state and infringement carried the threat of the death penalty.

The proximity of the uncovered offering chapel to the procession route suggests it was that of an elite person and has been dated 1990 to 1650 BC, they said.

“The offering chapel proves that people — probably elites — were able to build monuments right next to the processional route in the Middle Kingdom, and that at least one such chapel was allowed to stand in this increasingly densely built-up area and continued to receive offerings even 800 years after its initial construction,” Mary-Ann Pouls Wegner of Toronto’s Department of Near and Middle Eastern Civilizations said.—Internet

Oldest animal with a skeleton found

RIVERSIDE, 17 March—Paleontologists say they’ve discovered fossils of the oldest animal with a skeleton, between 560 million and 550 years old, in South Australia.

The age of Coronacollina acula places it in a time known as the Ediacaran Period, named after the Ediacara Hills of South Australia, ranging from 630-542 million years ago, before the explosion of life and diversification of organisms that took place on Earth in the following Cambrian period from 542 million to 488 million years ago, they said.

“Up until the Cambrian, it was understood that animals were soft bodied and had no hard parts,” Mary Droser, a geology professor at the University of California, Riverside, who led the team making the discovery, said.

“But we now have an organism with individual skeletal body parts that appears before the Cambrian.

It is therefore the oldest animal with hard parts, and it has a number of them — they would have been structural supports — essentially holding it up. This is a major innovation for animals.”

Apart from its hard parts, it is constructed in the same way that Cambrian sponges were constructed, she said in a university release Friday.

“It therefore provides a link between the two time intervals,” Droser said.

New study links antibiotics use to asthma in children

Shelley MaKay looks over her inhalers at her apartment on 13 March, 2006 in Toronto, Ont.—INTERNET

VANCOUVER, 17 March—A new study by researchers at the University of BC says the use of antibiotics may increase the incidence of asthma in young children.

The study found that two widely-used antibiotics alter the bacterial ecosystem in the intestines of mice, and that in turn can result not only in more cases of asthma, but more severe cases as well. The researchers say the same antibiotics—streptomycin and vancomycin—didn't lead to more asthma in adult mice, indicating that early life is a critical period for establishing a healthy immune system.

The report's author, microbiologist Brett Finlay, says the use of antibiotics and modern sanitation methods are hindering the development of intestinal bacteria that may be critical to an effective immune system. He says asthma cases have not increased significantly in developing countries where antibiotics aren't used as much, thus allowing the normal development of intestinal bacteria. Asthma cases around the world are increasing about 50 per cent every decade, mostly among children in industrialized countries, and the Asthma Society of Canada says about 12 per cent of children in Canada suffer from the condition.—Internet

Stubbed out cigarettes lay in an ashtray. An eight-year-old Indonesian boy who smokes more than a pack of cigarettes a day will undergo a month of therapy to kick his four-year habit, a child welfare official has said.

INTERNET

Indonesia's Child Protection Commission chairman Arist Merdeka Sirait said the boy, Ilham, who smokes around 25 cigarettes a day, needed "emergency help" as his addiction had reached "alert level", affecting his behaviour.

"You can see a dramatic change of behaviour when he doesn't have a cigarette for a while. He becomes emotionally aggressive and uncontrollable. He acts like he's possessed by evil spirits," Sirait told AFP.

The boy's father Agan Umar said his son would become enraged and "smash glass windows or whatever's around" if he is not constantly given cigarettes.

"I hope the therapy works so my son can go back to school and live a normal life like the other kids," Umar said.

The boy will leave his village in Sukabumi in western Java on Monday to start receiving intensive specialist care in the capital Jakarta, Sirait said.

"We'll give him a medical check-up to examine the impact his smoking has had on his health, and he'll be given psycho-social therapy to divert his attention from smoking to playing," he said. Indonesia has the world's highest percentage of young smokers, according to a World Health Organisation (WHO) report from 2006, which found more than 37 per cent of high school and university students smoked.

The report found 25 per cent of children between the age of three and 15 had tried smoking. A two-year-old boy on Sumatra island kicked the habit with a similar treatment after a video emerged in 2010 of the overweight toddler drawing heavily on a cigarette. UNICEF calls for urgent aid to children in Sahel region

GENEVA, 17 March—The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) warned Friday that there is little time left to stave off a disaster facing more than one million children aged below five in the Sahel region of Africa as the dry, "lean" season begins.

The agency is expecting more than one million children suffering from severe and acute malnutrition to enter feeding centers over the next six months at best, while more extreme conditions could see the number rise to around 1.5 million.

So far the agency has received 24 million US dollars against an emergency appeal of 119 million US dollars for 2012. The fund can only support an aid until the end of June while the "lean" season will last at least until August, according to UNICEF.

The crisis has been caused by poor rainfall and failed harvests affecting an estimated 10 million people in areas of Chad, Burkina Faso, Mauritania, Mali, Niger, northern Nigeria, northern Cameroon and parts of the north in Senegal

Meanwhile, the conflict in Mali has also increased demand for emergency assistance both inside the country and in neighboring countries that have received refugees.—Xinhua

Singapore shares close lower despite positive US data

SINGAPORE, 17 March—Singapore shares ended 0.5 percent lower on Friday as investors shrugged off positive news of better-than-expected US data that showed improving labor market conditions.

"we believe Singapore market is also a good hedge for higher oil prices as the market is scattered with Oil and Gas, Energy and commodity representatives which tend to benefit from higher oil prices," DBS Group Research said. The benchmark Straits Times Index dropped 15.16 points to close at 3,010.68. Trading volume was 1.36 billion shares worth 1.48 billion Singapore dollars (1.17 billion US dollars). Advancers outnumbered decliners 250 to 159, while 398 stocks finished unchanged.

Among the top actives, shipbuilder Yangzijiang gained 1.8 percent to close at 1.39 Singapore dollars. Bank of America Merrill Lynch raised the target price of Singapore-listed shipbuilder to 2.12 Singapore dollars from 2.08 Singapore dollars, and maintained "Buy" rating, citing a potential rise in orders for large containership orders from mid-2012. Pa-O National Organization presents its policy, stance and work programmes

NAY PYI TAW, 17 March—Pa-O National Organization CEC member U Khun Min Kyaw presented party's policy, stance and work programmes through radio and TV today. The translation of his presentation is as follows:-

Esteemed people,

I am U Khun Min Kyaw, CEC member of Pa-O National Organization (PNO). I will make my presentation about the PNO's participation in the by-election to be held on 1 April. Pa-O is one of more than 100 national races residing in the Republic of the Union of Myanmar. History says that Pa-O represents Kayin tribe of Tibet Myanmar descendants. At present, more than one million Pa-O nationals are living in Shan State, Kayah State, Mon State, Kayin State and Bago Region. Not only did Pa-O nationals take part in independence struggles but also Pa-O national leader U Phyu gave his signature in the world-famous Panglong Agreement.

In 1948 Myanmar regained her independence from the British colonialists. The independent Union of Myanmar prescribed in its constitution that it would practise parliamentary democracy. Democracy comes from an ancient Greek word. Demo means people and Kratos means power. Democracy is the most valuable political concept in the modern world. The right of a grown-up citizen to elect rulers by casting a vote is the basis of democracy. According to democratic practices, every citizen with right qualifications has the right to vote and run for election.

A free and fair election is the key to democracy. The more the taste of democracy a nation can enjoy, the more freedom the people living in that country will have. In the three parliamentary democracy elections—the first in 1952, the second in 1956 and the third in 1960 – the then Union Pa-O National Organization won seven parliamentary seats.

Our Pa-O National Organization ran for the 2010 multi-party democracy general election with the objectives of ensuring non-disintegration of the Union, non-disintegration of national solidarity and flourishing of democracy. Our party won 10 seats – one seat in Amyotha Hluttaw, three seats in Pyithu Hluttaw and six seats in the State Hluttaw. In the forthcoming by-election to be held on 1 April, our party will compete at the Pyithu Hluttaw level representing Kalaw Township of Shan State with a view to ensuring non-disintegration of the Union, non-disintegration of national solidarity, democracy cause and eternal peace.

From March 1989 to 6 April 1997 in the times of the State Law and Order Restoration Council and State Peace and Development Council (Tatmadaw) government, peace was achieved after reaching ceasefire agreement with 18 national ethnic armed groups with 67382 members and 53838 weapons. The root cause of civil wars is political instability. In order to achieve genuine internal peace, it is necessary to discuss and solve major political problems. Only when armed conflicts cease, will all the people enjoy peace. Peace can create human resources, promote education, give the people lots of rights. National development lies at the core of peace. Bamar, Shan, Danu, Pa-O, Intha, Taungyo and Palaung nationals in Kalaw Township have been living in amity and unity since ancient times with their cherished literatures, traditions and customs. With those national people working in concert for regional development, Kalaw Township is progressing. This is why I would like to urge the people to vote for Kalaw Township Pyithu Hluttaw candidate U Khun Than Maung from our party so that we can achieve democracy and genuine eternal peace.

May all the voters of Kalaw Township be healthy and happy and have their prayers answered.

Two decades of ASEAN-India cooperation

Article: ST (NLM)

Today, the entire global community sees the term 'internationalism' as an integral part of international relations. Actually, internationalism means the belief that countries should work together in a friendly way. With this end in view, regional, sub-regional and international organizations such as ASEAN, EU and African Union have emerged across the globe to work together for peace and development of global society. For expanding its international or external relations, ASEAN has been trying to develop friendly relations and mutually beneficial dialogue, cooperation and partnerships with all countries as well as sub-regional, regional and international organizations and institutions. In forging friendly relations with all countries, ASEAN has also been focusing on its relations with India, which is not only an emerging economy but also a country with advancing science and technology. Indeed, India is the immediate neighbourhood of ASEAN. Both share land and maritime borders with Myanmar, Indonesia and Thailand, all of which are ASEAN member countries. Therefore, we cannot deny the fact that ASEAN-India cooperation is vitally important. With two decades of ASEAN-India cooperation, it has covered economic, political and security and development cooperation dimensions with a number of mechanisms established to promote dialogue and cooperation in these areas. In recent years, multilateral cooperation sectors such as science and technology, transport, media, infrastructure and small and medium enterprises have gained momentum. Recently, we, a media group of the Information Ministry of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, together with journalists from ASEAN countries including a representative from ASEAN Secretariat, had the opportunity to pay a visit to India to take part in the ASEAN-India media familiarization programme, which was held in conjunction with Delhi Dialogue IV in New Delhi last month at the invitation of Indian External Affairs Ministry.

Recognizing the need for greater engagement, an annual international conference (Delhi Dialogue) has been held since 2009 with the active support of India's Ministry of External Affairs. The theme for Delhi Dialogue IV which was held on 13-14 February 2012 is 'India and ASEAN: Partners for Peace, Progress and Stability', and the event was categorized into four thematic sessions which addressed economic cooperation, regional security, non-traditional security threats and networks of knowledge and science. The inaugural session of the dialogue meeting was held at Shahjehan Hall of Hotel Taj Palace in New Delhi with an opening remark by Director General Mr Sudhir T Devare of Indian Council of World Affairs and keynote addresses by Foreign Affairs Ministers from India and ASEAN countries, including Dr Myo Myint, Deputy Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar.

The first session highlighted the discussion of issues of economic integration including mechanisms for sectoral cooperation, interlinking of the two regions in a common production and services network, and dispute settlement mechanism. The second session highlighted issues of non-traditional security (NTS) threats and challenges which from climate change, water security, food security, terrorism, piracy, pandemics, cyber security and so on. At this session, Daw Yin Yin Myint, Director of Institute of Security and International Studies in Yangon, discussed outbreaks of natural disasters in Myanmar and efforts for rescue and rehabilitation work. The third sessions examined the evolving security architecture in Asia Pacific region, and the last session explored the level of exchanges of knowledge and cooperation in scientific endeavours between India and ASEAN countries. The valedictory session was graced by the attendance of Dr APJ Abdul Kalam, Former President of India, who also delivered his valedictory address.

According to the ASEAN-India media familiarization programme, we, ASEAN journalists, paid courtesy calls on Indian External Affairs Minister and Deputy Chairman of Indian Planning Commission and visits to Taj Mahal and Delhi Dialogue IV in progress in New Delhi, India, with the participation of ASEAN Foreign Affairs Ministers.

Agra Fort in Agra, New Delhi, and Indian Institute of Science, Supercomputer Education and Research Center, Infosys, Biocon, India Space and Research Organization (ISRO) and Hindustan Aeronautics Ltd (HAL) in Bangalore, which is an industrial city of India.

Taj Mahal, one of the world's wonders, is the biggest tourist attraction in India and Agra Fort itself is historically impressive. While we were on visit to the facilities of Bangalore, most of which are restricted areas, we witnessed the rapidly advancing science and technology of India.

On arrival at the Indian Institute of Science, which is more than 100 years old, we found it with old but impressive buildings. The institute is the first example of a public private partnership in this country. In the briefing room, we learnt from a liaison officer that the institute's departments ranging from Biochemistry to Aerospace Engineering have served to nucleate research and development in both the public and private sectors. Many of India's most distinguished scientists have been associated with the institute as students or faculty. Now, it offers a variety of Master's degree programmes in Engineering, an integrated PhD (Post-BSc) programme in Sciences and PhD programmes in a wide spectrum of disciplines in science and engineering attracting local and foreign students. In addition, the library and computational facilities at the institute are amongst the best in India.

Then, we proceeded to the Supercomputer Education and Research Centre (SERC) under the institute. The centre provides the state-of-the-art computing environment, which can compare well with the top computing centres anywhere in the world. The Computer Centre, established in 1970, became SERC in 1990 engaging in research programmes (PhD and MSc) and course programme (MTech in Computational Science). It conducts three major research streams: Computer Systems, Computational Science and bioinformatics.

On 16-2-2012, we paid a study visit to Infosys, an IT company of India. Its offerings span business and technology consulting, application services, systems integration, product engineering, custom software development, maintenance, re-engineering, independent testing and validation services, IT infrastructure services and business process outsourcing. Infosys has 64 offices and 68 development centres in US, India, China, Australia, Japan, Middle East, UK, Germany, France, Switzerland, Netherlands, Poland, Canada and many other countries with 145,088 employees in total.

In the afternoon, we visited Biocon, an integrated healthcare company, delivering innovative biopharmaceutical solutions. Biocon is renowned for producing affordable therapies for insulin dependent diabetes and cancer vaccines. It is also pursuing a path of breakthrough innovation through phase III human clinical trials to develop the world's first oral insulin. According to the chairman of the company at the question & answer session, we learnt that the market of Biocon products is developing not only in Africa but also in Asia and ASEAN regions.

In the afternoon, we visited Indian Space Research Organization to study Indian space activities which started during early 1960s. India has nine communication satellites operating for television broadcast, telecommunications and meteorological applications; remote sensing satellites for management of natural resources. Besides, India has its current and future programmes to build and launch more satellites.

On 17-2-2012, we visited Hindustan Aeronautics Limited (HAL) and Airbus Assembly, Helicopter Assembly and Aeronautical Museum under it. Today, HAL has 19 Production Units and 10 Research & Design Centres in 8 locations in India. It has manufactured over 3658 aircraft/helicopters, 4178 engines, upgraded 272 aircraft and overhauled over 9643 aircraft and 29775 engines.

Our study tour of Indian facilities in Bangalore has made us witness its rapid advances in science and technology as well as developed our willingness to cooperate with India in the area.

During the tour, questions the Indian journalists raised interestingly also included Myanmar's current political situations and activities, the stances of the Myanmar people and the new government's achievements.

In my opinion, all the journalists on a study visit to India were found to have keen interest in India blessed with many interesting places and its advancing science and technology. They seem to have a desire to make a study visit not only to India but also other ASEAN's partner countries. They want ASEAN to become a strong and reliable organization standing together with powerful nations among the global community.

All the journalists are optimistic about Myanmar and they seem to have recognized Myanmar's changes and reforms. They are well-experienced in international issues and I have found that ASEAN nations are easy to deal with by just looking at their benevolent attitude towards their association. India on its side also accepts and recognizes ASEAN for its important role in multilateral cooperation with big nations, especially with China and India.

Overall, this ASEAN-India media cooperation has allowed us to facilitate the possible establishment of an enduring and understandable communication network in the ASEAN media field. We, Myanmar representatives, have had our opportunities to learn Indian's economic and technological development plus its traditional culture and regional knowledge. Moreover, through the ASEAN-India media familiarization programme, we have been able to strengthen the amity, understanding and knowledge among the ASEAN nations and between India and ASEAN.

May these 20 years of ASEAN-India cooperation continue to last forever!

Parents redecorate hospital rooms in late son's memory

TORONTO, 17 March—The parents of a Toronto-area child who died a year ago are working to ensure his memory lives on at the hospital where he spent his final days.

Three-year-old Zack Hamilton died after battling several health problems related to a congenital heart defect. His parents Heather and Peter spent a lot of time with him in a particular room at York Central Hospital, where he would often watch the TV show "Elmo's World."

"He couldn't speak, but when he wanted to watch his favourite show he would hum the Elmo song," Heather told CTV's Canada AM on Friday, adding, "York Central Hospital... took such good care of him."

While Zack was in the hospital, Heather began reaching out to a community of other mothers on Twitter.

On the day he died, many of them added Elmo to their avatars, and have continued showing support to the Hamiltons throughout their grieving process.

"We didn't realize how powerful that medium was," said Peter, wearing an Elmo T-shirt under a black blazer on Friday. "The love... that was demonstrated over Twitter is phenomenal. To this day we still get messages from strangers saying, 'We're there for you. What can we do for you?'"

Shortly after Zack's death, his parents began harnessing their existing network and newfound community to raise money for the hospital. Their goal was to turn the drab room where they spent so much time into a colourful haven fit for a young child.—Internet

Alert as Western Australia braces for cyclone

SYDNEY, 17 March—A tropical cyclone bearing down on Western Australia intensified on Saturday, placing the region on high alert as the storm threatened to bring destructive gale-force winds.

Severe tropical cyclone Lua, upgraded to a Category 4 storm—five is the highest—is moving steadily towards the coast and is expected to make landfall on Saturday afternoon.

"There is a threat to lives and homes. You are in danger and need to act immediately," Western Australian emergency officials said in a warning to residents in the sparsely populated Pilbara region.

The small communities of Pardoo and Wallal are believed to be in the line of the cyclone and residents of those areas have been warned to seek shelter immediately.

"Destructive winds to 160 kilometres (100 miles) per hour are possible between Port Hedland and Bidyadanga extending to the inland eastern Pilbara later in the day," the Bureau of Meteorology said in a warning.

"Very destructive winds up to 230 kilometres per hour are forecast near the cyclone centre."

Commercial flights into the area have been cancelled and the main highway closed, while the Port Hedland port has been shut down.

Western Australia's Pilbara region is an important resources hub, with major iron ore and gas facilities.

High numbers of Saudi women smoking

NAJRAN, 17 March—Saudi Arabia was found to have the second most female smokers in the Arab Gulf region, prompting an anti-smoking campaign at a university, officials said.

The campaign—called "lead it"—kicked off Thursday at Najran University with a speech from Abdul Rahman al-Shamrani, the chairman of the Waaie ("enlightened") society, bikyamasr.com reported.

"If there are 8 million smokers in the Kingdom, each consuming one pack at about SR5 [$1.33] a day, then the Kingdom annually spends over SR14 billion [$3.73 million] on cigarettes," al-

Shamrani said.

A number of government and private establishments are participating in the week-long campaign, including health affairs, the drug-combat police, the university hospital, the faculty of dentistry and the boy scouts, bikyamasr.com said.

Ogden police Lt Danielle Croyle said the boy and his sister climbed into the car and drove off around 2 am Thursday and a police officer noticed the car crashed into a tree a short time later, The Salt Lake Tribune reported on Thursday.

Thai taxi driver returns $410,000 in gold to owner

A Thai taxi driver Friday returned 8.2 kilograms (18 pounds) of gold ornaments worth around $410,000 to their owner who had left them in his car three days ago, police said.

Bangkok cabbie Saksri Ketsrikaew, 56, said he spent two days driving around Bangkok searching for the owner because he had no contact number.

He said he contacted community radio after he learned gold shop owner Eakerat Kanokwattana, 60, had filed a complaint with police and the story of the missing gold hit local headlines. But police were not convinced he had a heart of gold. "His excuse doesn't make sense if he intended to return the gold to its owner as he knew where they got off," case officer Lieutenant Colonel Udom Sukprasert told AFP.

Calif snake found in NY toilet

A California kingsnake was in a New York state of mind when it came out of a man's Staten Island apartment toilet, scaring him, he said, half to death.

"I turned the light on at 6:30 am and went to open the vanity when I thought I saw something move in the toilet," Allen Shepard said about his Tuesday encounter with the reptile.

"The snake was getting on the top of the rim, ready to strike." He slammed the lid down and ran to grab some spray toilet cleaner with which to do battle. No go. Time for reinforcements, Shepard called his building super, Karen Genco, WCBS-TV, New York, reported Wednesday.

"I didn't believe him at first, I thought he was joking, but it was for real," Genco said. "It was like a scene out of a cartoon, it was hysterical."

Genco then called plumber Kenneth Rosenthal, WPIX-TV, New York, reported.

"All I saw was the tail of the snake, then I kept pulling out more and more and more and before I knew it, I had 4 feet of snake," Rosenthal said.

"So I was wrestling with this thing to get him out in one piece and finally I hooked him. I got him and threw him into a thermos and that was the end of him."

Well, not the end: The non-venomous constrictor was taken to a sanctuary in Manhattan.

The speculation is the snake, probably someone's pet, escaped and entered into the plumbing.

Sharapova meets Azarenka in Indian Wells Final

INDIAN WELLS, 17 March—It would be a replay of the 2012 Aussie Open final, as former World No 1 Maria Sharapova of Russia will take on current World No 1 Victoria Azarenka of Belarus in the final of 2012 BNP Paribas Open. Sharapova was leading with a set when her opponent Ana Ivanovic retired due to a back injury in the second semi-final match on Friday evening.

What expected as a gruelling tussle, turned out as a bitter memory for the former World No 1 Ana Ivanovic, who played so well throughout the week to reach the semi-final of the 2012 BNP Paribas Open, but failed to continue in that manner—as an ill-timed injury shattered her dreams.

In the second semi-final match on Friday, Maria Sharapova of Russia was leading with a set and the score was 6-4 0-1, when her opponent Ana Ivanovic of Serbia retired due to a back injury. Ivanovic did avail the medical time-out just before the final game of the first set, but that did not work out and finally the Serbian left the court with tears. Finally, the contest ended in 1 hour and 12 minutes, as the Russian mustered 66% points on her first serve and hammered 15 winners. Ivanovic played some terrific tennis early on in the first set, but then her intensity dropped and it kept on plunging due to pain and then she decided to retire.

Earlier in the first semi-final match, World No 1 Victoria Azarenka of Belarus ended the dream-run of Angelique Kerber of Germany at Indian Wells, as she beat the German in straight sets with a 6-4 6-3 scoreline and reached the final of the 2012 BNP Paribas Open.—Internet

Azarenka earned a straight sets 6-4 6-3 victory over the German and reached the final of the 2012 BNP Paribas Open.

With this victory, the Belarusian extended her winning streak to 22 matches.

Azarenka took 1 hour and 28 minutes to beat Angelique Kerber. The top-seed earned 73% points on her first serve with the help of 25 winners and much had been contributed by Kerber's 28 unforced errors.

In the end, Azarenka converted 6 out of 9 breakpoints to surge through.

The World No 1 claimed the first set in 48 minutes. After losing a game on her serve early on, the top-seeded geared up and opted for a perfect counter-attack.

Azarenka mustered 76% points on her first serve with the help of 15 winners and converted 2 out of 4 breakpoints.

The Belarusian was duly benefited from Kerber's 11 unforced errors—in the first set.

Both contenders exchanged breaks early on in the second set, but then the World No 1 earned the decisive ones in the seventh and ninth games—to win this encounter.

Fulham 0-3 Swansea City

LONDON, 17 March—Swansea City moved up to eighth place after Gylfi Sigurdsson's double helped secure a third successive victory for the first time this season. Sigurdsson beat Mark Schwarzer with a diving header inside the six-yard box after Scott Sinclair's deft touch. The midfielder struck again after the break with a controlled finish from Wayne Routledge's cut-back. Joe Allen completed a comfortable victory with an 18-yard effort after pouncing on sloppy Fulham play. The third goal, which came towards the end of a second half of almost uncontested authority, was indicative of a strangely flat Fulham display at their customary Craven Cottage stronghold. Swansea, riding high on confidence since toppling Manchester City, became only the fourth side to win on Fulham's home pitch this season and a fourth away win can now surely end any lingering doubts that Premier League survival has been secured.—Internet
