The right job at the right moment

Nowadays, the scope of reforms taking place in Myanmar is growing under the leadership of the government committed itself to building a true democratic state where freedom, justice and liberty flourish.

Basically, reforms are carried out to make amendments or improvements through changes of a system and structures. By introducing reforms the government is finding out faults or abuses and getting rid of them in addition to repairing, restoring or correcting necessary sectors for a better tomorrow.

Here the government staff at all levels are the persons responsible for the task of maintaining, accelerating and safeguarding the reform process of the country at different stages on behalf of the Union. In consequence, the first thing they need is to adapt themselves well to the changes taking place in their own institutions. And in the second step, they must have an overall view of the democratic transition.

As the reform process is gaining more ground and running at higher pace the government staff at all levels need more efficiency to do their job smoothly. However, in one way or another, majority of government employees do not have the required competence yet for certain reasons. Besides, they do not have much experience in democracy.

Accordingly, the government and the private organizations are turning to domestic capacity-building programs conducting more and more courses, in-house trainings, seminars, workshops and conferences by their own or in cooperation with regional or international institutions or global countries. They are also sending a larger number of staff abroad for study tours, scholarship programs, short-term and long-term courses, group discussions, roundtables and seminars.

Additionally, the President himself and Union level officials are receiving guests from abroad seeking common ground and greater international cooperation for our capacity-building programs.

And through capacity-building programs, all government and private staff will have a clear picture of the democratic reforms, having efficiency to do the right job at the right moment.

Southeast Asian leaders ask Western countries to lift Myanmar sanctions after successful polls

PHNOM PENH, 4 April— Southeast Asian leaders have called on Western countries, including the European Union, to lift punitive sanctions imposed on Myanmar.

The leaders of the 10-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations made the call Wednesday at the end of a two-day summit in the Cambodian Capital. The summit was attended by Myanmar President U Thein Sein, who received a flurry of praise for recent democratic reforms in his country that have surprised even its harshest critics.

Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen said the leaders' appeal for the lifting of sanctions would first be relayed to the EU, which punished formerly military-ruled Myanmar for massive human rights violations.— Internet

Iraq says Iran proposes Baghdad as nuclear talks venue

BAGHDAD, 4 April— Iran has proposed holding the next round of talks with six world powers over its disputed nuclear programme next week in Iraq instead of Turkey, Iraq's foreign minister said on Wednesday. US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said on Saturday the 13 to 14 April negotiations with Iran would be held in Istanbul, the first such meeting since January 2011 when the two sides failed even to agree on an agenda.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Hoshiyar Zebari told Reuters the proposal for talks in Baghdad came from an Iranian delegation visiting on Tuesday and he would meet with ambassadors from the five Western powers plus Germany on Teheran's plan. "The proposal came from them. We received a delegation from Iran... Today we are inviting G5 plus one ambassador to hand over a letter about the proposal," Zebari said.

Armed Somali pirates carrying out preparations to a skiff in Hoby, northeastern Somalia, in 2010. A Bolivian-flagged vessel seized by Somali pirates since last week has been freed, and is continuing on to Iran with its sugar shipment, the Bolivian government announced on Tuesday.— INTERNET

Iraq's Shi'ite-led government is closely aligned with Iran in a region where Sunni Arab Gulf powers are jockeying for influence with Shi'ite power Teheran. A senior Iranian figure recently spoke out against Turkey hosting the talks as once warm Iranian-Turkish relations have cooled in the past year over the Turkish position against Syrian President Bashar al-Assad, Iran's close Arab ally.

Bolivian-flagged ship held by Somali pirates is freed

LA PAZ, 4 April — A Bolivian-flagged vessel seized by Somali pirates since last week has been freed, and is continuing on to Iran with its sugar shipment, the Bolivian government announced on Tuesday. The MY Eglantine was seized by Somali pirates last week off Hoarafushi island in the Maldives, the first hijacking in the waters of the archipelago. The Bolivian-flagged and Iranian-owned vessel had a total of 23 crew, but their nationalities were not immediately known.

The ship "no longer is in their (the pirates') control as of Monday. Now it is sailing securely to port to deliver its cargo" of Brazilian sugar, said the Bolivian International Ship Registry office, which reports to the defense ministry. A 1982 UN treaty allows land-locked countries like Bolivia to use sea routes including providing paid services such as ship registry. Maldivian and Indian forces earlier were shadowing the vessel but did not board it, a defence spokesman in Male said.

The Maldivian authorities said they were alerted to the hijacking by the Global Maritime Distress and Safety System, the emergency communications system for global shipping, which maintains an operation in the Maldives. In November, the Maldives announced it was working with Sri Lanka and India on a strategy to deal with Somali pirates. The Maldives had arrested 37 Somali pirates who were drifting near the archipelago.

Sri Lanka has also arrested an unspecified number of Somali pirates. Two decades of lawlessness have carved up Somalia into mini-fiefdoms ruled by gunmen and militia, encouraging rampant piracy. At least 40 vessels and more than 400 hostages were still being held in or just off Somalia at the end of last year, according to the Ecomera International group which monitors piracy in the region.— Internet

HMS Dauntless sails to Falklands

The UK says HMS Dauntless is being sent to the South Atlantic as part of routine operations.— INTERNET

LONDON, 4 April— HMS Dauntless, one of the UK's largest and most powerful air defence destroyers, is due to set sail for the Falkland Islands. The Ministry of Defence says it is a "pre-planned and routine" six-month deployment in the South Atlantic. However, it comes days after the 30th anniversary of the start of the war. The move had earlier prompted an official complaint by Argentina to the United Nations about the UK's "militarisation" in the South Atlantic.

HMS Dauntless, a Type 45 Destroyer, will sail from Portsmouth to relieve HMS Montrose. It will carry out operations off West Africa and the wider South Atlantic, with planned port visits in both West and South Africa. BBC defence correspondent Jonathan Beale said it was unlikely that there would be any visits to Argentina's ports. The Royal Navy said it was the first operational deployment for HMS Dauntless since it was commissioned in 2010.

Commanding Officer Captain Will Warrender said: "HMS Dauntless' ship's company has been working extremely hard over the last year or so to prepare for our first operational deployment. "We are now ready to provide a reassuring presence in the region and protect British interests." A total of 255 British servicemen and about 650 Argentines died after the UK sent a task force following the Argentine invasion on 2 April 1982. Britain has controlled the Falklands since 1833 but Argentina claims the territory — which it calls the Malvinas — saying it inherited rights to them from Spain.

Bomb kills TV presenter in central Iraq

BAGHDAD, 4 April — A "sticky bomb" killed a television presenter working for a local station in Salaheddin Province of central Iraq, a provincial spokesman said on Tuesday. Kamiran Salaheddin, a presenter for Salaheddin Channel, was killed in central Tikrit by a magnetic bomb attached to his car as he drove home from work late on Monday, Salaheddin provincial council spokesman Jamal al-Dulaimi told AFP.

Salaheddin, a 34-year-old father-of-two, was the second journalist killed in Iraq this year, according to the Journalistic Freedoms Observatory, an Iraq-based media rights group. Salaheddin Channel was established by American forces in 2004 and is funded by Salaheddin provincial council.

"The Iraqi authorities must do everything possible to ensure that those responsible for his death are brought to justice," Paris-based watchdog Reporters Without Borders (RSF) said in a statement condemning the attack. "His murder must not go unpunished."

Iraq ranked 152nd out of 179 countries in RSF's 2011-2012 World Press Freedom Index, down 22 from the year before. The report said there was "an increase in murders of journalists" in Iraq, and "journalists are very often the target of violence by the security forces, whether at demonstrations in Tahrir Square in Baghdad, or in Iraqi Kurdistan, a region that had for many years offered a refuge for journalists."

Pakistan van bomb kills six passengers

PESHAWAR, 4 April — A bomb ripped through a passenger van in Pakistan's restive tribal belt on Wednesday, killing at least six people and wounding nine others, officials said. The van was carrying 15 men from Khurraiki village to Jamrud, the main town in Khyber district when it was hit while passing through a ravine. "The passengers were going to town for shopping. So far we can confirm the death of six people while nine others are injured," Shakeel Khan Umarzai, a senior administration official, told AFP.

"Three people are seriously injured. It is unclear that the blast was caused by an IED or a planted bomb in the van but explosives were used," he said. A doctor at the local government hospital where the dead and the injured were taken also confirmed the casualties. "We are treating six other passengers who were wounded while three seriously injured have been shifted to Peshawar," Mohammed Anas told AFP.

Khyber is one of seven districts in Pakistan's semi-autonomous tribal belt, where Taliban and Al-Qaeda-linked militants have carved out strongholds used to plot attacks on Pakistani, Afghan and Western targets. Pakistani government troops are currently operating against militants loyal to local warlord Mangal Bagh. The UN refugee agency announced last week that more than 100,000 people, mostly women and children, have fled the fighting in Khyber since 20 January.

KABUL, 4 April — Three international troops were killed in separate insurgency incidents in one day, the NATO-led coalition force said.

The International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) said one service member was killed by an improvised explosive device in the south of the country, one by a similar blast in the east and one by an insurgent attack in the east.

All three incidents happened on Tuesday, with the last statement released on Wednesday. They did not give further details. "It is ISAF policy to defer casualty identification procedures to the relevant national authorities," each statement said. ISAF has around 130,000

Space tourist is just one way to describe Simonyi

SEATTLE, 4 April — Charles Simonyi may still be described as a space tourist even though the Microsoft billionaire has no plans to take a third vacation on the International Space Station and hasn't hung out in outer space for a few years. He's still obsessed with space and is heavily involved in the Seattle Museum of Flight's new space gallery, which is named in the philanthropist's honour. Since 2002, Simonyi has been running his own company called Intentional Software that specializes in creating industry-specific computer software, and he recently he took on a new title: book publisher.

The son of a Hungarian physicist, the 63-year-old just made one of his dad's dreams come true by helping translate the senior Simonyi's epic about physics into English. "A Cultural History of Physics" by Karoly Simonyi, who died in 2001, is a heavy tome with an intimidating name but inside the non-scientist will find lots of pictures and stories that offer a whimsical side of physics. Flip through the book, which has had five editions in Hungarian and three in German, and you'll find a full-page diagram showing how the scientists of the 17th century enjoyed dismissing each other's theories. A diagram and an explanation by Sir Isaac Newton of how rainbows are formed are on another page.

An illustration of a cat with its hair standing on end may catch your attention toward the end of the book. If you stop to find out why the cat is on the page, you'll find an explanation of quantum mechanics and radioactive decay — Internet

March weather third warmest on record, says Met Office

LONDON, 4 April — Last month was the third warmest March on record — outshone only by 1938 and 1957 — the Met Office has said. It had an average temperature of 7.7C, compared with March 1938, which had an average of 8C. It was also the fifth driest and third sunniest March. March saw a total precipitation of 36.4mm of rain and 156.5 hours of sunshine across the month. Records for temperature and rainfall began in 1910, while the measurements for sunshine began in 1929.

The driest and the sunniest March both occurred in 1929, with just 17mm of rainfall and 169.5 hours of sunshine recorded. England saw an average temperature throughout the month of 8.1C. Wales recorded 7.9C, Scotland 7C and Northern Ireland's was 8.1C. The average temperatures are measured across every hour of the day and night. And during the month there were 175.4 hours of sunshine in England, 158.8 in Wales, 129.7 in Scotland and 127.5 in Northern Ireland. Rainfall in England was 26.5mm with 31.4mm in Wales, 56.8mm in Scotland and 21.4mm in Northern Ireland. The good weather saw Scotland set a new record for its highest March temperature three days in a row. Aboyne in Aberdeenshire recorded 23.6C on Tuesday 27 March, beating the record of 23.2C set at Cromdale, near Grantown on Spey, the previous afternoon. And the day before that, Fyvie Castle in Aberdeenshire recorded 22.8C, beating a March temperature record which had stood for 55 years.

with an air of detached disinterest; so, though most of us fall asleep every night, we can't say exactly how we do it. Even neuroscientists are still struggling to understand the mechanisms the brain uses to switch from a state of wakefulness to unconscious sleep, but research reveals that the transition is a lot more gradual and tumultuous than the flip of a light switch.

According to recent work by neuroscientists at Washington University in St Louis, during the pre-sleep stage of the process — the period when you're in bed with the lights off and your eyes closed, slowly "letting go" of the trials of the tribulations of the day — your brain waves exhibit what's known as alpha activity, typically associated with quiet wakefulness. "It is in this period that the brain progressively disengages from the external world," Linda Larson-Prior and her colleagues wrote in a 2011 paper. "Subjects slowly oscillate between attending to external and internal thoughts, with the majority of internal thoughts being autobiographical or self-referential in nature."

Self-sculpting sand robots are under development at MIT

NEW YORK, 4 April — Tiny robots that can join together to form functional tools and then split apart again after use might be ready for market in little more than a decade, according to researchers. A team at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology says it has developed about 30 prototype "smart pebbles" and the software to run them. The sides of each cube are 1cm (0.4 inches) in length. Efforts are now focused on creating smaller models.

The researchers from the university's Distributed Robotics Laboratory liken the ultimate product they are trying to develop to "self-sculpting sand". "We want to have a bag of this material that can form any shape you demand," PhD student Kyle Gilpin told the BBC. "So if you are in an isolated situation and you need a certain tool, you can tell that to the bag by making a miniaturised model of the tool, drop it into the bag, shake it around - and what you would end up with inside would be a magnified copy of the tool which is usable."

magnetic effect can be switched on and off and does not require an electric current to remain active. The cubes also contain a microprocessor to work out which of the magnets should be activated and when. Each processor can currently store 32 kilobytes of code and has only two kilobytes of working memory — so the algorithm powering the process had to be kept simple. The solution was to use a "subtractive" method - removing modules rather than adding them.

Canon releases new camera that can capture the beauty of space

NEW YORK, 4 April — Many expensive DSLR cameras aren't optimized to shoot great photos of the heavens, especially of the night sky, right out of the box. Astrophotographers, photographers who mainly take pictures of astronomical objects, usually have to learn how to tweak their camera settings to best capture the wonders of space. Now, Canon has released a new product that makes astrophotography easy even for beginners.

The new Canon EOS 60Da Digital SLR Camera is three times more sensitive to hydrogen-alpha energy — the reddish light given off by hydrogen found in nebulae, galaxies, and star clusters among other objects in space — than other DSLRs.

Thus, you can use the camera to capture vivid out of this world photos that show a lot more detail than what images taken by ordinary DSLRs would show. The trade-off for this feature is, of course, the price: the new Canon 60Da will retail for $1,499 when it comes out later this month, a few hundred dollars more than the normal 60D's price tag.

Women's height linked to ovarian cancer

Obesity has been linked to several cancers.—INTERNET

LONDON, 4 April—Taller women have a slightly higher risk of ovarian cancer, according to a review of studies. Obesity is also a risk factor among women who have never taken HRT, say international researchers. Previous studies have suggested a link, but there has been conflicting evidence. The latest research, published in the journal PLoS Medicine, analysed all worldwide data on the topic. It looked at 47 epidemiological studies in 14 countries, including about 25,000 women with ovarian cancer and more than 80,000 women without ovarian cancer. Lead researcher Prof Valerie Beral of the Oxford University Epidemiology Unit told the BBC: "By bringing together the worldwide evidence, it became clear that height is a risk factor."

She said there was also a clear relationship between obesity and ovarian cancer in women who had never taken HRT "Ovarian cancer can clearly be added to the list [of cancers linked to obesity]," she added. Sarah Williams, health information officer at Cancer Research UK, said the study produced a clearer picture of the factors that could affect a woman's risk of developing ovarian cancer, and found that body size was important. "Women can reduce their risk of this and many other diseases by keeping to a healthy weight," she said. "For women trying to lose weight, the best method is to eat healthily, eat smaller amounts and be more physically active."

Commenting on the study, Dr Paul Pharoah, reader in cancer epidemiology at the University of Cambridge, said the increase in risk was small. "If we compare a woman who is 5ft tall with a woman who is 5ft 6in tall, there is a relative difference in ovarian cancer risk of 23%. "But the absolute risk difference is small. The shorter woman will have a lifetime risk of about 16-in-a-1000 which increases to 20-in-a-1000 for the taller woman. "A similar difference in absolute risk would be seen when comparing a slim woman with a body mass index of 20 to a slightly overweight woman with a body mass index of 30."

US warns of cancer-agent in Japan weight loss pills

WASHINGTON, 4 April — The US Food and Drug Administration on Tuesday warned consumers not to take a product called "Japan Rapid Weight Loss Diet Pills" because they contain a suspected cancer-causing agent. The pills, advertised as promoting weight loss, are distributed by a company called Xiushentang and sold on popular web sites including Amazon.com, said the FDA. Consumers are advised to stop using the pills — which are packaged in three colors: green, yellow and blue — and discard them. They should also see a doctor if they have experienced any side effects, the agency said. An FDA lab analysis has confirmed that the pills, "Japan Rapid Weight Loss Diet Pills Green" contain "undeclared phenolphthalein," the agency said in a statement.

"Phenolphthalein is a solution used in chemical experiments and a suspected cancer-causing agent that is not approved for marketing in the United States." The FDA has classified the agent as "not generally recognized as safe and effective," and it has been found to potentially damage or even cause mutations in a person's DNA, the warning said. A similar notice was issued for "Japan Rapid Weight Loss Diet Pills Yellow" because they contain both phenolphthalein and sibutramine, a weight loss agent found in the drug Meridia that was removed from the market in 2010 because it boosted the risk of heart attack and stroke.

"The product poses a threat to consumers because sibutramine is known to substantially increase blood pressure and/or pulse rate in some patients and may present a significant risk for patients with a history of coronary artery disease, congestive heart failure, arrhythmias or stroke," the FDA said.

Asia stocks slump on US job growth worries

BANGKOK, 4 April — Asian stock markets on Wednesday followed Wall Street into negative territory after the Federal Reserve voiced concern about US job growth but appeared to refrain from taking steps to prop up the economy. Japan's Nikkei 225 index fell 1.4 percent to 9,910.84 after briefly slipping to 9,886.34, its lowest level in a month. South Korea's Kospi dropped 0.9 percent to 2,030.90 and Australia's S&P/ASX 200 lost 0.3 percent to 4,324.60. Markets in mainland China, Hong Kong and Taipei were closed for public holidays.

On Tuesday, the US Federal Reserve released minutes of the March meeting of its Open Market Committee, which sets interest rates and monetary policy. The Fed minutes showed that policymakers fear hiring could slow if economic growth doesn't improve. That caused Wall Street stocks to slump. The minutes also did not address the logistics of more bond-buying — troubling traders who have been hoping for more action from the Fed. The Fed has embarked on two previous rounds of bond-buying, most recently in August 2010, to drive down long-term interest rates. Low bond yields generally encourage profit-hungry investors to buy stocks.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 0.5 percent at 13,199.55. The Standard & Poor's 500 index finished down 0.4 percent at 1,413.38. The Nasdaq composite index lost 0.2 percent to 3,113.57. Benchmark oil for May delivery was down 37 cents to $103.64 a barrel in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract fell $1.22 to settle at $104.01 per barrel in New York on Tuesday. In currencies, the euro fell to $1.3199 from $1.3217 late Tuesday in New York. The dollar fell to 82.63 yen from 82.86 yen.

China surpasses US as world's biggest grocery market

LONDON, 4 April — China has become the world's largest market for food and grocery retail, surpassing the US, a study showed. The grocery sector in China was worth £607b ($972b) by the end of the 2011, showed research published by IGD.

The US market was valued at £527 for the same period, which means it ranks second. By 2015, the research forecasts that the Brics countries (Brazil, Russia, China and India) will be the top grocery markets.

"China's grocery growth story is phenomenal. Between 2006 and 2015, the Chinese grocery market is forecast to triple in value and to be worth nearly a trillion pounds," said Joanne Denney-Finch, chief executive of IGD. IGD forecasts that by 2015, the Chinese market will be worth £918bn compared to a US value of £675b. "This rapid expansion has been fuelled by three main factors: rapid economic growth, population and rising food inflation," Ms Denney-Finch added.

The company said that many of the world's largest grocery retailers would be looking to China, and not just at the major cities but also at second and third tier cities. IGD said companies will also be looking to the Brics nations as the size of their markets grows. "Many UK food and grocery companies are already pursuing this opportunity," Ms Denney-Finch said.

Moody's downgrades GE, citing risks from financial unit

NEW YORK, 4 April — Moody's on Tuesday said it had downgraded the ratings of conglomerate General Electric Co by one notch to Aa2 and the ratings of its finance unit General Electric Capital Corporation (GECC) by a notch to A1. Moody's affirmed the Prime-1 ratings of both companies and said the rating outlook for both was now stable. The move concludes a review begun on 19 March.

"The downgrades result from the implementation of Moody's revised global rating methodology for finance companies, and reflect in particular the impact of GECC's higher risk profile on GE," the agency said in a statement. Moody's added that, while GECC had improved its liquidity and capital levels since the credit crisis, there remained material risks associated with the firm's funding model.

Memorial held for seven killed in Oakland shooting

OAKLAND, 4 April — Civic and religious leaders in Oakland are mourning the deaths of seven people who were gunned down in one the nation’s deadliest campus shootings in years. Several hundred people gathered on Tuesday night for a prayer vigil for the victims of Monday’s shooting at Oikos University, a small Christian school in Oakland.

Mayor Jean Quan joined pastors from the Bay Area’s Korean Christian community in calling for unity and an end to violence at the service at the Allen Temple Baptist Church.

The service was attended by friends, family and colleagues of the victims whose identities were officially released Tuesday. Not long after the mass shooting, police arrested 43-year-old One Goh at a supermarket several miles away in Alameda.

Goh is being held without bail on suspicion of seven counts of murder, three counts of attempted murder and other charges.— Internet

NYC officials: one dead, four hurt in crane accident

NEW YORK, 4 April —The boom of a crane set up at a subway construction site came perilously off its base and crashed to the ground, killing a construction worker and injuring four other people Tuesday night, city officials said. The worker was pronounced dead after the accident at the Manhattan construction site of the No 7 subway line extension, officials said.

One other person was hospitalized in serious condition and three people were treated for minor injuries, according to a Fire Department spokesman. Jack Sullivan, deputy chief for the FDNY EMS, said it was possible one of the workers had been struck by the crane’s boom. The crane operator and someone who worked with him were among those who were injured. He described the removal of the workers from the construction site, about 60 feet below street level, as “extremely dangerous.”

Alternate ASEAN Chairman issues statement at 20th ASEAN Summit

NAY PYI TAW, 4 April—The 20th ASEAN Summit was successfully held from 3 to 4 April. Alternate ASEAN Chairman issued statement dated today.

That statement includes the facts that ASEAN welcomes Myanmar's current progress and also describes the following factors under the heading of regional and international issues—

“We welcomed the significant positive developments in Myanmar throughout 2011 and underscored the importance of maintaining a strong momentum in this regard, particularly on the bold steps undertaken by the Government of Myanmar to enhance socio-economic development, improve the livelihoods of the people, promote good governance and democratic practices, strengthen promotion and protection of human rights, and achieve peace, and national reconsolidation and reconciliation.

We welcomed the successful holding of the by-elections in Myanmar on 1st April 2012, which was conducted in a free and fair manner.

We expressed appreciation to the Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar for inviting a large number of election observers from ASEAN and its Dialogue Partners as well as from regional and international organizations.

We recognized that the holding of the by-elections was a significant step towards further democratization in Myanmar. We reaffirmed our full support for the Myanmar Government's on-going efforts in democratization, national reconsolidation and reconciliation and reiterated our call for the international community to support and encourage the democratic developments in Myanmar.

We welcomed the invitation extended by the Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar to host a Special Meeting of ASEAN Foreign Ministers in Nay Pyi Taw at a date convenient to all ASEAN Member States.

We called for the lifting of all sanctions on Myanmar immediately in order to contribute positively to the democratic process and economic development in that country.

We also reaffirmed our commitment to expand necessary assistance and cooperation in view of Myanmar's ASEAN Chairmanship in 2014.”—MNA

Snow and ice return to parts of Scotland

LONDON, 4 April — Wintry weather has returned to northern parts of Scotland — with reports of 25cm (10in) of snow in Aberdeenshire. Grampian Police said Moray had taken the brunt of the poor conditions but so far there have been no reports of major disruption. In the Highlands, the A939 Grantown-on-Spey to Dava and the B9007 Carrbridge to Ferness have been closed due to heavy snowfall.

And the snowgates have been closed on the A93 at Spittle of Glenshee. The return of wintry weather follows the mildest March ever recorded in Scotland. A week ago the temperature in the Aberdeenshire town of Aboyne reached 23.6C — the warmest March day on record. The high in Aboyne on Tuesday is not expected to rise above 2C — and it will feel much colder in the biting wind and snow.

The Met Office issued amber warnings for much of Scotland and said drifting was likely over the Grampians. Across lower parts of the central belt it was estimated about 1cm (0.4in) to 4cm (1.6in) would fall in places. The warning is in place until 12:00 on Tuesday.

A spokesman for the Met Office said, with widespread ice developing on untreated surfaces in northern Scotland, the public should be prepared for disruption to transport.

Several inches of snow has fallen in Aboyne overnight.

Violent storm leaves four dead in Japan

TOKYO, 4 April — A huge storm killed at least four people in Japan, police said on Wednesday, as violent wind and rain battered the nation and disrupted transport for a second day. The storm has moved east and is now covering all of the north of Japan's main island of Honshu and much of the northernmost island of Hokkaido, buffeting the region with strong winds caused by what meteorologists say is a severe low-pressure system. On Sado island, on Honshu's northwest, gusts of up to 156 kilometres (97 miles) per hour were recorded.

The dead included a 96-year-old man who fell from the roof of a three-storey house during high winds and a 28-year-old woman who was hit by a falling tree while walking a dog. The storm temporarily reduced electricity supplies to the Onagawa nuclear power plant, in Miyagi prefecture, halting the cooling system for a fuel pool, operator Tohoku-Electric Power Co said. Plant workers manually restarted the cooling system after about 20 minutes, it said. "There was no problem in the operation," a company spokesman added. All reactors at the plant are currently idle.—INTERNET

Texas tornadoes wreck homes and ground flights

DALLAS, 4 April — Several powerful tornadoes have touched down near Dallas, in the US state of Texas, flipping trucks, wrecking homes, uprooting trees and grounding planes. Dallas-Fort Worth Airport cancelled flights and moved passengers away from glass windows for their safety.

Meteorologists estimated that six to 12 tornadoes had touched down in North Texas. Police reported several injuries but no fatalities so far. US TV footage showed images of houses with roofs and second storeys missing. Some of the properties were almost completely blown away. "Obviously we're going to have a lot of assessments to make when this is done," Dallas County spokeswoman Maria Arita told the Associated Press.

The National Weather Service (NWS) at first reported at least two "large and extremely dangerous" tornadoes. Its warning said that the area would remain on tornado watch until 20:00 local time (01:00 GMT) on Tuesday. Later, senior NWS meteorologist Eric Martello said an estimated six to 12 twisters had touched down, although survey teams had yet to confirm the numbers.

One of the tornadoes touched down in a parking lot full of articulated lorries, and a local television station captured the vehicles flying through the air.

Some of the cargo containers attached to the lorries were flattened. Witnesses said the twisters formed quickly. "All of a sudden, the rain and hail ceased," Jonathan Cook, a resident of a nearby town, told CNN. "That's when we saw the tornadoes touch down." Damage was reported in nearby Kennedale, Arlington and Lancaster. Lancaster police said 10 people had been injured, two seriously. In Arlington another three people were injured including two residents of a nursing home, fire crews said.—INTERNET

Vietnam craves rhino horn; costs more than cocaine

HANOI, 4 April — Nguyen Huong Giang loves to party but loathes hangovers, so she ends her whiskey benders by tossing back shots of rhino horn ground with water on a special ceramic plate. Her father gave her the 4-inch (10-centimetre) brown horn as a gift, claiming it cures everything from headaches to cancer. Vietnam has become so obsessed with the fingernail-like substance it now sells for more than cocaine.

"I don't know how much it costs," said Giang, 24, after showing off the horn in her high-rise apartment overlooking the capital, Hanoi. "I only know it's expensive." Experts say Vietnam's surging demand is threatening to wipe out the world's remaining rhinoceros populations, which recovered from the brink of extinction after the 1970s thanks to conservation campaigns. Illegal killings in Africa hit the highest recorded level in 2011 and are expected to worsen this year. This week South Africa called for renewed cooperation with Vietnam after a "shocking number" of rhinos have already been reported dead this year. China has long valued rhino horn for its purported — though unproven — medicinal properties, but US officials and international wildlife experts now say Vietnam's recent intense craving, blamed partly on a widespread rumor that rhino horn cures cancer, is putting unprecedented pressure on the world's estimated 28,000 remaining animals, mainly in South Africa.—INTERNET

Coast Guard monitors ghost ship drifting northwest

ANCHORAGE, 4 April — A derelict Japanese ship dislodged by last year's massive tsunami was drifting toward Alaska on Monday, the US Coast Guard said.

The strapping vessel was floating slowly northwest in the Gulf of Alaska about 125 miles west of the nearest point of land — Forrester Island outside the Dixon Entrance, a maritime transportation corridor separating US and Canada jurisdictions. The ship is heading in the direction of the southeast Alaska town of Sitka 170 miles to the north, traveling at about one mile per hour, Coast Guard spokesman David Mosley said.

There are no immediate concerns regarding the community of about 9,000, however. Mosley said the town is just a reference point at this time and that currents could always change. "Our main concern is maritime traffic," he said. "We're trying to minimize any safety concerns, alerting vessels. We don't want any vessels to run into it."

A Coast Guard C-130 was heading to the ship on Monday to pinpoint the exact location and check if a data buoy was successfully dropped on it Saturday. The vessel has been adrift since it was launched by the tsunami caused by the magnitude-9.0 earthquake that struck Japan last year. About 5 million tons of debris were swept into the ocean by the tsunami.

The ship has been identified as coming from Hokkaido, Japan. Beside boat traffic, another concern is the ship's impact on the maritime environment after floating at sea more than a year. What's on board is unknown. Also unknown is whether the ship is carrying fuel. The vessel, named Ryuo-Un Maru, is believed to be 150 to 200 feet long, according to Mosley. Officials are studying various options on how to deal with the ship, including scuttling it at sea or towing it to land.—INTERNET

Imperial Chinese bowl fetches $27 million

HONG KONG, 4 April — An extremely rare Chinese porcelain bowl fetched nearly $27 million — smashing pre-sale estimates by about three times — at a hotly anticipated Sotheby's auction in Hong Kong on Wednesday. The modest-looking imperial ceramic bowl that was made around 900 years ago had been expected to fetch up to HK$80 million, but it was snapped up by an unidentified telephone bidder for HK$208 million ($26.7 million).

The price sets a new world record for a piece of ceramic from the Northern Song Dynasty (960-1127), according to Sotheby's, beating a 2008 record when a "Guan" Mallet Vase went for HK$67.52 million. "The Ruyao Washer is among the most sophisticated achievements in Chinese ceramics. Its appearance on the market has created enormous excitement," Sotheby's Asia deputy chairman Nicolas Chow said.

Eight hopefuls competed for over 15 minutes during intense bidding for the extraordinarily rare flower-shaped bowl. The interest and price is testament to the vitality of Asia's art market, which has witnessed explosive growth over the past decade, experts say.

Australian yacht reaches California after "monster wave"

SAN FRANCISCO, 4 April — An Australian racing yacht stricken by a 100-foot (30-metre) wave plodded into San Francisco Bay for repairs on Tuesday, two days after the US Coast Guard rescued two injured crew members. The 11 remaining crew members of the Geraldton Western Australia arrived in the port of Oakland, the mid-point of a round-the-globe sailing contest, after 30 days in the North Pacific, much of it in harsh weather.

Some gave vivid accounts of their brush with maritime catastrophe. "I was down below, when the last monster wave hit us," crew member Ian Geraghty recalled. "Water was just pouring down and everyone was in a complete state of shock." The Geraldton is one of 10 clipper-style vessels that set sail on 31 July, 2011, from Southampton, England, on a 40,000-mile voyage due to conclude back in Britain in July.

The race already has taken the competing boats to ports in Brazil, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Singapore and China. Nearly a month after leaving Qingdao, China, the Geraldton ran into trouble about 400 miles off California on Saturday, when the impact of a monster wave severed the yacht's primary steering control and destroyed communications equipment. Four crew members were hurt and the US Coast Guard battled seas of 20 to 30 feet feet to get the two more seriously injured mariners to a hospital ashore.

Despite all those decades of driving, Rachel Veitch is nowhere near to holding the Guinness World Record for highest mileage.— INTERNET

For sale: 1964 Mercury, one lady owner, 576,000 miles

NEW YORK, 4 April—A 93-year-old Florida grandmother has parked her car for good after driving 576,000 miles (927,000 km) over 48 years at the wheel of one trusty vehicle. Rachel Veitch bought her Mercury Comet Caliente for $3,289 in February 1964. It has outlasted three marriages and 18 battery changes, she says. On 9 March she had to give up driving as she has become legally blind. Mrs Veitch plans to sell the car instead of giving it to her family amid concerns they might not look after it.

"They're not going to get it. They couldn't take care of it like I did," Mrs Veitch told Fox News. She has four children, nine grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren. Mrs Veitch said the care and attention she paid to her car was one of the main reasons it had lasted so long. In 2009 she told Fox News: "When I buy gas, I write down the mileage, the date and how many miles per gallon I got. I've never been a destructive person and I've just taken care of everything, except my husbands."

The car is said to be worth about $12,000 (£7,500) today and has been through three sets of shock absorbers and eight exhaust mufflers as well as surviving a rear-end collision in 1980. It is due to appear in an antique car show in the state of Wisconsin in July, though Mrs Veitch says she is not sure what will happen to it after that. Mrs Veitch has said she would consider selling the car to Jay Leno, a classic car enthusiast and host of the US late night chat show The Tonight Show.

Israel Museum showcased in Google Art Project

JERUSALEM, 4 April — Until Tuesday, if history buffs wanted a glimpse of the Israel Museum's vast collection — including a 9,000-year-old carved human face found in the Judean Desert — they would have to travel to Jerusalem to see it. Now, through a joint venture with Google Inc, people from around the world can examine the ancient Neolithic artifact, which the museum says is the oldest in the world, in greater detail than ever before with a simple click of a mouse from the comfort of their own home. The mask is just one of 520 objects made available as part of the museum's partnership with the Google Art Project, an online compilation of high-resolution images of artwork from galleries worldwide, as well as a virtual tour of the museums using the high-tech giant's Google Street technology.—Internet

GPS leads Customs to stolen luxury cars

Agents who opened a container labeled as "used fitness equipment" in Los Angeles found a $280,000 Ferrari, US Customs and Border Protection said on Tuesday.

Fifteen other stolen luxury cars were found in nearby containers, all marked as fitness equipment, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The investigation began when a car rental agency reported strange readings from the Ferrari's Global Positioning System equipment. Investigators said the agency told Customs the vehicle appeared to be on a ship at the Port of Los Angeles.

The cars were being shipped to Hong Kong and Vietnam. The same group of thieves appears to have sent at least four vehicles to Vietnam, and US officials are trying to get the cars returned to California.

The group apparently operated by renting or buying luxury cars under false identities, defrauding rental agencies, banks and insurance companies. Investigators said the recovered cars, worth about $1.5 million in the United States, could be sold for twice that in Asia. No arrests had been made Tuesday, the newspaper said.

Man allegedly urinated on women's chairs

Police in Iowa said a man accused of urinating on the office chairs of female coworkers turned himself in to authorities.

The West Des Moines Police Department said Raymond Charles Foley, 59, who was caught on camera urinating on office chairs belonging to four female coworkers at the Farm Bureau, surrendered Saturday and was charged with second-degree criminal mischief, The Des Moines (Iowa) Register reported.

Farm Bureau officials, who fired Foley when police were informed 26 March, said they installed cameras in February after workers started complaining about stains on their chairs in October of last year.

The officials said the security camera video caught Foley going to the desks of female coworkers during off-hours and urinating on their chairs.

Police said the estimated value of the damaged chairs at $4,500.

Japanese man, 97, charged in sword attack

A 97-year-old Japanese man was arrested on Tuesday after allegedly using his walker to get to a relative's nearby home to attack her with a sword, police said.

Police in Kanazawa allege Koshio Kawamura made his way about 100 yards to the 84-year-old woman's home and used a sword with a 20-inch blade to slash her left hand, The Yomiuri Shimbun reported.

Police said Kawamura vowed to the relative, "I'll kill you."

There was no word on how Kawamura was related to his alleged victim.

been pulled. But the fast-food chain is blaming music licensing issues for the decision — not criticism of the ad.

The spot debuted this week. In it, Blige sings soulfully about chicken snack wraps.

But as the video went viral, some in the black community criticized the ad as stereotypical. The black women-oriented website Madame Noire likened it to "buffoonery."

Burger King said on Tuesday the commercial was pulled because of a licensing concern. The company said it hopes to have the Blige "ads back on the air soon," though a spokeswoman would not comment on whether they ads would be the same.

The spokeswoman also noted that other celebrities, including Salma Hayek and Jay Leno, also are advertising the snack wraps. A rep for Blige did not immediately respond to a request for comment.—Internet

Amy Adams to join free summer Central Park plays

NEW YORK, 4 April—Amy Adams, who played a princess in the film "Enchanted," will be returning to fairy tales this summer, starring opposite Cinderella and a witch. The Public Theater said on Tuesday that the three-time Academy Award-nominated actress will play The Baker's Wife in its production of Stephen Sondheim's and James Lapine's "Into the Woods."

The musical is one of two shows the Public will present in Central Park's Delacorte Theatre to help celebrate the 50th anniversary of its free Shakespeare in the Park series.

"Into the Woods," directed by Timothy Sheader and Liam Steel, will begin previews on 23 July and continue for five weeks through 25 Aug. Adams, whose films include "The Fighter," "Doubt" and "Junebug," will star opposite Jack Broderick, Gideon Glick and Cooper Grodin.

Alec Baldwin goes Twitter-ballistic for fiancée

NEW YORK, 4 April—When it comes to his 28-year-old fiancée, Alec Baldwin is very protective.

He used Twitter to blast a New York newspaper for "crashing" yoga instructor Hilaria Thomas' class.

He tweeted Monday: "Shame on the no-talent trash from the Daily News for invading the privacy of 75 people in a yoga class to take a picture of someone."

Baldwin also posted the names of reporters at the class. He included a picture of one, and called her "nutty," followed by a mild curse word.

The actor celebrated his 54th birthday on Tuesday. He popped the question last weekend.

Gunners' runners raise thousands for charity

LONDON, 4 April — Charity runners were out in their hundreds on Saturday to help Arsenal raise £40,000 for its charity partner Save the Children. The annual 'Be a Gunner. Be a Runner.' event took place on Saturday 31st March and saw Arsenal fans, staff and keen runners from more than 20 countries around the world coming together to take part. Approximately 750 runners braved the chill at the Emirates Stadium - with 400 adults taking on the 10-lap, 6.4km route around the Gunners' home and more than 300 youngsters completing a shorter race.

There were also overseas-based individuals and groups taking part from more than 20 countries including Australia, India, Poland and Nigeria, to help spread the word about the club's global charity partnership. To date the event has raised £40,000, with the figure expected to rise further over the coming weeks. ## McLeish: Petrov in fantastic spirits

LONDON, 4 April — Aston Villa manager Alex McLeish says club captain Stiliyan Petrov is in "amazing spirits" and in determined mood as he begins treatment for acute leukaemia. The Bulgarian international was diagnosed with the illness last week after developing a fever following the Barclays Premier League match against Arsenal. The 32-year-old began his treatment in London on Monday with McLeish among those visiting the midfielder.

"The chairman Randy Lerner, the chief executive Paul Faulkner and myself went to see Stiliyan today with support from his wife, who was there also, on the very first day of his road to recovery," McLeish told the club's official website. "He is determined to meet it head on, as we expect from Stan, and he was talking really positively and couldn't wait to get started to try and clear up this illness he has. ## De Jong tells Balotelli to stop acting the fool

MANCHESTER, 4 April — Manchester City midfielder Nigel de Jong has warned controversial team-mate Mario Balotelli to stop acting like a "fool".

Balotelli has repeatedly earned headlines for his bizarre antics on and off the pitch since moving to Eastlands from Inter Milan and the City striker was at it again over the last week.

First the Italian irked City boss Roberto Mancini by using his time off to make an unscheduled appearance at the press conference to unveil new Inter boss Andrea Stramaccioni.

Then Balotelli, who also have come at a bad time as City have surrendered top spot in the Premier League to Manchester United and are now five points behind their arch rivals.

With the title slipping away, Dutch star De Jong has urged Balotelli to stop courting controversy and concentrate on helping the team get back on track.

"Sometimes Mario is a fool and at other times he is a genius - there are two sides to him," he told The Sun.

"Lots of people expect him to pull off crazy stunts and as a result he feels he must do something. People like that need to have upheaval

Vonn will not need surgery on sore knees

Lindsey Vonn of the US Celebrates with her trophy after winning the Alpine skiing women's overall World Cup at the Alpine Skiing World Cup finals in Schladming on 18 March, 2012. — INTERNET

TORONTO, 4 April — Lindsey Vonn, winner of the women's alpine skiing

overall World Cup title, will not require surgery on her sore knees, the United States Ski and Snowboard Association said on Tuesday.

After another long, grueling campaign that ended in March with Vonn claiming a fourth overall crown, the American all-rounder had doctors examine her tender knees. Tests revealed some wear on the meniscus of Vonn's left joint but nothing that would require surgery, US ski team spokesman Doug Haney said.

Vonn will now rest her knees after a productive but draining season that saw her add the super-G, downhill and super-combined crystal globes that go to discipline champions to her haul. The 27-year-old started the season announcing her divorce from husband and coach Thomas Vonn and ended it with a women's record point total of 1,980, just 20 points shy of Austrian great Hermann Maier's mark of 2,000 points. ## Venus Williams advances at Family Circle Cup

CHARLESTON, 4 April — Venus Williams is hoping for even more success in her second tournament after a long layoff. Williams beat qualifier Iveta Benesova of the Czech Republic 6-4, 6-3 on Tuesday in the Family Circle Cup, bouncing back from her quarterfinal loss at Key Biscayne. "This is great for me to be in another match and to be in the second round," she said. "It was a good start."

The Family Circle Cup is Williams' first clay-court tournament in months. She withdrew from last year's US Open after being diagnosed with a fatigue-causing autoimmune disease, then returned last week and won four matches in the Sony Ericsson Open before losing to eventual champion Agnieszka Radwanska in straight sets.

Her sister Serena is seeded fifth this week and beat Elena Vesnina of Russia 6-3, 6-4, in her first match in Charleston since winning the Family Circle title in 2008. The Williams sisters could meet in Saturday's semifinals. Venus Williams, who has 43 career titles, said she takes a lot of ice baths and had three days off just to rest following Thursday's loss. "For me it's just about having energy at this point. I try not to worry about tomorrow," she said. — Internet

Olic brace fires Bayern into semi-finals

MUNICH, 4 April — Bayern Munich reached the Champions League semi-finals after Croatia striker Ivica Olic netted both goals in a 2-0 win over Marseille in Tuesday's quarter-final second leg. With the Bavarians having won 4-0 on aggregate, Bayern will host the first leg of their semi-final on 17 April, most likely against Real Madrid, who host APOEL with a 3-0 lead in the second leg of their last-eight match on Wednesday. Olic was back in the hero role, two years after his hat-trick in Lyon put Bayern through to the 2010 final, where they lost 2-0 to Jose Mourinho-inspired Inter Milan in Madrid.

Bayern are now within touching distance of the final that Munich's Allianz Arena will host on 19 May as they look to win the Champions League trophy for the second time and claim their fifth European Cup title overall. "We were very concentrated, despite the amount of games we are playing at the moment," said Bayern coach Jupp Heynckes, whose side are in contention for a Champions League, Bundesliga and German Cup treble.

"In the first half, (goalkeeper) Manuel Neuer rescued us a few times. After that we came back stronger and deserved the win. "Marseille weren't in the quarter-finals for nothing and they tried everything." Having lost the first leg 2-0 in Marseille last Wednesday, the visitors were always facing an uphill task to win in Munich. "At half-time, I didn't ask my players to score four goals," said Marseille coach Didier Deschamps. INTERNET

Suicide bomber kills 12 in Afghan north

Afghan policemen inspect the site of a suicide attack in Maymana, the capital of Faryab province, on Wednesday.—INTERNET

KABUL, 4 April—A suicide bomber attacked foreign military forces in northern Afghanistan on Wednesday, killing 12 people, officials said, as NATO's fatalities for the year passed the 100 mark.

"A suicide bomber targeted a group of foreign friends" near a park in Maymana, the capital of Faryab province, provincial governor Abdul Haq Shafaq told AFP. "They were military. There are casualties, dead and wounded."

Faryab, which borders Turkmenistan, is far from centres of the Taliban-led insurgency in Afghanistan's south and east, although the militia are present in some areas of the province and it suffers sporadic attacks. NATO's US-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) said two service members died after an explosion in northern Afghanistan, but refused to confirm whether it was the same incident.

There were conflicting reports about the exact death toll and the identity of the victims after the suicide bomber blew himself up on a motorcycle.

Lal Mohammad Ahmadzai, police spokesman for northern Afghanistan, described the blast as "powerful" and said six civilians and four policemen were killed, with 20 people wounded including four police.—Internet

MELBOURNE, 4 April—Germany's Miriam Welte and Kristina Vogel upset Australia on the opening day of the track world championships Wednesday by winning the hosts' coveted women's team sprint crown in a new record time.

Anna Meares and Kaarle McCulloch had won the last three world titles in the new Olympic event but were given warning after Welte and Vogel set a new world mark of 32.630 in qualifying fastest for the two-lap power event.

The Australians looked on for a fourth world crown until late into the final lap when the Germans pushed on to set a new world record of 32.549. It meant Germany took gold, Australia silver and China the bronze. The record previous to the start of the world championships, 32.754, was set by Britain's Victoria Pendleton and Jessica Varnish at the London leg of the track World Cup in February. The British duo had clocked only the fourth fastest time in qualifying (32.941) but left empty-handed from their bronze medal match-up after defeat to China's Jinjie Gong and Shuang Guo.—Internet

Whitney Houston items fetch 82,000 at auction

LOS ANGELES, 4 April—Whitney Houston may be gone, but her presence is still being felt — particularly on the auction block. A number of items once belonging to the deceased singer, who died in February at age 48, commanded slightly more than $82,000 at an auction this past weekend, with most items drawing much higher bids than they were originally estimated to bring in. The highest-selling Houston item, a beaded bustier that had been sold during a 2007 court-ordered debt auction, drew $18,750. In the catalog for the auction, the estimated value is listed as $4,000 to $6,000.

Also commanding a handsome price: a grey velvet gown that Houston wore to her mentor Clive Davis' pre-Grammys party in 1996.

The gown, which was also sold during Houston's 2007 debt auction, pulled in $11,520, and had been listed in the catalog in the $1,000-$2,000 range.

The items were sold off as part of the Hollywood Legends auction held in Beverly Hills by Julien's Auctions.

Other items up for bid included a bowler hat, cane and suit worn by film icon Charlie Chaplin and a Christian Dior gown worn by Grace Kelly.

A vest and two pairs of earrings worn by Houston in her breakthrough film "The Bodyguard" were also auctioned off, raking in a combined $8,700.—Internet

President U Thein Sein attends 20th ASEAN Summit Plenary Session

NAY PYI TAW, 4 April—President U Thein Sein attended 20th ASEAN Summit Plenary Session at Champa Room on third floor of Peace Palace in Phnom Penh of Cambodia at 10.45 am yesterday.

The session was also attended by Brunei King Sultan Haji Hassanal Bolkiah Muizzaddin Waddaulah, Cambodian Prime Minister Samdech Hun Sen, Indonesian Vice-President Dr Boediono, Laotian Prime Minister Mr Thongsing Thammavong, Malaysian Prime Minister Dato' Sri Mohd Najib bin Tun Haji Abdul Razak, Filipino President Mr Benigno Aquino, Singaporean Prime Minister Mr Lee Hsien Loong, Thai Prime Minister Ms Yingluck Shinawatra, Vietnamese Prime Minister Mr Nguyen Tan Dung, ASEAN Secretary-General Dr Surin Pitsuwan, ASEAN ministers and high-level officials.

Alternative Chairman Cambodian Prime Minister Samdech Hun Sen extended greetings at the session.

President U Thein Sein, Heads of State and Government from ASEAN member countries and the ASEAN Secretary-General frankly discussed matters related to ASEAN community.

President U Thein Sein said that he was heartened by Cambodia's active leadership in the bid for "ASEAN: One Community—One Destiny". He expressed pride in reaching agreement on Phnom Penh Declaration and Phnom Penh Agenda which include priorities to be implemented in accord with the motto. The President believed the declaration and the agenda will formulate guidelines for priorities during the time from 2012 to 2015 in which ASEAN community will be established.

He called for speeding up integration attempt as the establishment of ASEAN Community in 2015 is nearing.

He underscored the need to narrow rich-poor gap among ASEAN countries and in a particular ASEAN country.

Narrowing the Development Gap should be one of the main tasks to be implemented by ASEAN.

Equitable Development goal adopted by ASEAN and UN Millennium Development Goals will be achieved as it focuses more on economic integration in ASEAN region for balancing regional economic development. Myanmar is adopting eight poverty alleviation and rural development tasks.

Energy and food sufficiency will have to be ensured with added momentum in ASEAN region. The world is worrying to feed growing population and all the countries including Myanmar are striving for food sufficiency.

As Myanmar has a great advantage in agriculture sector investment in farming and livestock sectors by ASEAN countries is invited.

Service industry usually grows in parallel with economic development. Creating more job opportunities and nurturing more qualified service providers are needed.

ASEAN Connectivity plays the most important role in development and integration among the regional countries.

Myanmar's strategic position could contribute to ASEAN's access to countries outside the region. Kyaukpyu Special Economic Zone in the western part of Myanmar, Thilawa Special Economic Zone near Yangon in the southern part and Dawei Special Economic Zone in Taninthayi Region are being implemented. These economic zones will contribute to ASEAN Connectivity and ASEAN's communication with the outside countries.

Myanmar All-round Development Goal adopted with the help of Economic Research Institute for ASEAN and East Asia was approved. The realization of the ambition will contribute to Mekong-India Economic Corridor Programme. Now is time to start communication works for ASEAN integration. ASEAN links South Asia and North-East Asia region in terms of trade and tourism. It is a must to communicate with the prospective economies around ASEAN.

Myanmar supported the declaration of Drug-Free ASEAN in 2015. Myanmar is adopting effective plans for combating illegal drug cultivation, abuse and trafficking. Myanmar has targeted to be drug-free by 2014. It will contribute much to ASEAN's ambition of being drug-free in 2015.
