Say no to heart attack

According to the World Health Organization, cardiovascular disease is the leading cause of death globally and is projected to remain so. It has no geographic, gender or social-economic boundaries, although genetically, men have shown a higher propensity of heart attacks than women.

Normally, your heart needs oxygen to function. Heart attacks occur when the coronary artery that supplies the muscles of the heart with oxygenated blood is suddenly blocked off by a blood clot. This blood clot can block the artery and shut off blood flow to the heart muscle. When the heart muscle is starved for oxygen and nutrients, it is called ischaemia. Within minutes of ischaemia, the muscles of the heart will die, thus resulting in a heart attack.

Heart attacks are sudden and intense. Most heart attacks involve discomfort in the centre of the chest that lasts for more than a few minutes, or pain that goes away and come back. It can feel like uncomfortable compression, heaviness of the chest, or gripping chest pain. And its symptoms include pain or discomfort in one or both arms, the back, neck, jaw, or stomach, shortness of breath with or without chest discomfort, breaking out in a cold sweat, nausea or lightheadedness.

The risk factors are smoking, high blood pressure, physical inactivity, obesity and overweight, diabetes, stress, alcohol, and diet and nutrition.

A healthy diet is one of the best weapons to fight against heart attack. The food you eat can affect other controllable risk factors like blood pressure, diabetes and overweight.

With high blood pressure exists with other factors like obesity, smoking, alcohol and diabetes, the risk of heaving a heart attack increases exponentially.

Navy jet crashes into Virginia apartments, three unaccounted for VIRGINIA BEACH, 7 April — A US Navy F/A-18D fighter crashed into an apartment complex in Virginia soon after takeoff on Friday, sending fireballs into the sky, damaging six buildings and injuring at least seven people. No deaths have been reported, but three residents of the Mayfair Mews complex for the elderly were unaccounted for, authorities said. “We have physically been in every structure, and we have 95 percent completed the search and rescue,” Virginia Beach Fire and Rescue Battalion Chief Tim Riley said.

All the injuries, including those to the F/A-18 crew, have so far been described as minor, officials said. Both crew members ejected safely from the aircraft before it crashed into the buildings in Virginia Beach, and one pilot was found still strapped into his ejection seat. Four of the injured were taken to a hospital for treatment. Authorities had said nine people were injured, but later revised the number to seven, not including the pilots. The F/A-18D “suffered a catastrophic mechanical malfunction” during a training flight, Navy Captain Mark Weisgerber said in a statement from the Pentagon. Thick black clouds of smoke billowed into the air as fire reduced the apartment buildings to a blackened shell. The Mayfair Mews complex was less than two miles from Naval Air Station Oceana, where the F-18D was based. Crews searched for any injured residents in five buildings, several of which have collapsed, Riley said. Three residents in one building were unaccounted for. Investigators will remain on the scene for three or four more days after the search is complete, Riley said. Witness Kelly McQuaid, who lives near the apartment complex, said the jet was on fire before it crashed.

All residents safe after US Navy jet levels Virginia apartments

WASHINGTON, 7 April — All residents of an apartment complex for the elderly in Virginia that was destroyed when a US Navy fighter jet crashed into it on Friday, have been accounted for, with only one resident still hospitalized with minor injuries, a rescue crew chief said on Saturday. The person not yet discharged is in good condition though believed to have broken bones, Virginia Beach Fire and Rescue Battalion Chief Tim Riley. “Everyone has been accounted for” at the Mayfair Mews complex in Virginia Beach, Riley told Reuters. “We are not actively looking for anyone.”

The US Navy F/A-18 jet fighter suffered what a Pentagon official described as “a catastrophic mechanical malfunction” during a training flight before it crashed shortly after take-off, sending fireballs into the sky, damaging six buildings and injuring seven people, including both crew members. Both crew members ejected and one was found still strapped into his ejection seat. Thick black clouds of smoke billowed into the air as fire reduced the apartment buildings to a blackened shell. The Mayfair Mews complex was less than two miles from Naval Air Station Oceana, where the F-18D was based. Crews had searched into the night for any injured residents in five of the buildings, several of which have collapsed.

Riley said officials are now attending to the needs of the up to 63 residents whose apartment units were destroyed, including finding long-term housing for them. — Reuters

Suicide bomber kills Afghanistan peace councillor

KABUL, 7 April — A suicide bomber has killed the influential head of a regional peace council in eastern Afghanistan, security officials say. Maulvi Hashem Munib was on his way home from Friday prayers in Kunar Province when he came under attack. President Hamid Karzai condemned the murder, saying enemies of Afghanistan had killed a messenger of peace.

Maulvi Munib was a former commander of a major Afghan mujahideen group, Hizb-i-Islami. The head of the government’s High Peace Council in Kunar, he is said to have persuaded insurgents to lay down their arms and join the peace process. Kunar is a stronghold of the decade-long Taliban-led insurgency against President Karzai’s government and its Western allies.

The president said: “The terrorists are trying to undermine the role of elders who are working for the good of Afghanistan, but they should realize that they can never achieve their evil goals by such heinous acts.” The national head of the High Peace Council, ex-President Burhanuddin Rabbani, was assassinated last year by a man posing as a Taliban envoy who hid a bomb in his turban.

On Thursday, Nazik

Mir, a prominent anti-Taliban commander in the province of Badakhshan, was killed in a suspected Taliban suicide attack. Late on Wednesday, gunmen in Farah Province killed eight people in an attack on a checkpoint manned by a government-sponsored militia. Avalanche buries 100 Pakistani soldiers on glacier

ISLAMABAD, 7 April — An avalanche smashed into a Pakistani army base on a Himalayan glacier along the Indian border on Saturday, burying around 100 soldiers, the military said. Helicopters, sniffer dogs and troops were deployed to the remote Siachen Glacier to rescue those trapped, according to a military statement.

The avalanche hit a battalion headquarters in the glacier’s Gayari sector at 5:45 am, according to a security official who didn’t give his name because he is not an official spokesman. Siachen is on the northern tip of the divided Kashmir region claimed by both India and Pakistan.

Both countries station hundreds of troops there, who brave viciously cold temperatures, altitude sickness and high winds for months at a time. Troops have been deployed at elevations of up to 6,700 meters (22,000 feet) and have skirmished intermittently since 1984. The glacier is known as the world’s highest battlefield. More soldiers have died from the harsh weather than combat.

Bomb found by Dublin-Belfast road

BELFAST, 7 April — Police said a “significant” bomb was found near the main Dublin-to-Belfast motorway on Friday, the anniversary of a peace deal that in 1998 largely ended three decades of sectarian violence in Northern Ireland.

The A1 between Newry and Dublin was closed briefly to allow a bomb disposal team to clear a “viable device” that had the potential to cause fatalities, a spokeswoman for the Police Service of Northern Ireland said. A police source said investigators believed the attack may have been carried out by dissident Irish nationalists opposed to the Good Friday Peace Agreement and may have been intended to hit a passing police patrol.

The agreement largely ended more than three decades of violence between mainly Catholic Irish nationalists opposed to British rule of Northern Ireland and predominantly Protestant unionists who wanted it to continue. However, dissident nationalists opposed to the deal still mount sporadic gun and bomb attacks.

Iran: Navy rescues Chinese sailors from pirates

TEHERAN, 7 April — Iran’s state TV says the country’s navy has rescued 28 crew members of a Chinese ship hijacked by pirates. The Saturday broadcast says the Iranian Navy also detained nine Somali pirates in the operation in the Arabian Sea in the north of the Indian Ocean.

The pirates attacked the ship Friday but they surrendered after Iranian Navy sent warships to rescue the crew and free the ship. The freighter was carrying iron and was heading to a port in southwestern Iran. Both the attack and the rescue operations were carried out in international waters. Iran has clashed with pirates on several occasions in the past and freed ships captured by them.

Iran lawmaker: Country can produce nuclear weapon

TEHERAN, 7 April — A prominent Iranian lawmaker says Iran has the knowledge and scientific capability to produce nuclear weapons but will never do so. Gholamreza Mesbahi Moghadam says Iran can easily produce the highly enriched uranium that is used to build atomic bombs but it is not Teheran’s policy to go that route.

Moghadam made the comment in an interview with the parliament’s news website, icanair, late Friday.

His views do not represent the Iranian government’s policy. It is the first time that a prominent Iranian politician has publicly stated that Iran has the technological capability to produce a nuclear weapon. The US and its allies accuse Iran of seeking to develop nuclear weapons, a charge Teheran denies.

Top scientist quits anti-doping body over 'muzzling'

LAUSANNE, 7 April — A leading scientist says he is resigning from an expert body on biological passports in sport because he is being "muzzled". Dr Michael Ashenden accused the anti-doping movement of fostering a culture of "omerta" — a term describing the pact of silence in the mafia. He said the imposition of a new confidentiality clause in his contract was an attempt to silence him. Since 2008 he has been an independent reviewer of blood profiles in cycling. The governing bodies of professional cycling and international athletics extensively use the passport.

The Union Cycliste International (UCI), which governs cycling, thanked Dr Ashenden for his contribution to the sport but made no direct comment on the circumstances of his resignation. The International Association of Athletics Federations (IAAF), which oversees athletics, acknowledged that Dr Ashenden had declined an offer to be part of their expert panel.

Scientists raise energy level at Big Bang machine

GENEVA, 7 April — Scientists say a Big Bang machine, where high-energy beams of protons are sent crashing into each other at incredible speeds, is now able to operate at a record new energy level, improving the prospect of scientific breakthroughs.

Researchers at the European Organization for Nuclear Research, or CERN, say the $10 billion Large Hadron Collider in a 27-kilometer (17-mile) tunnel under the Swiss-French border at Geneva has begun operating at 8 trillion electron volts, greater than any previous physics accelerator.

Steve Myers, a director of accelerators and technology at CERN, said in a statement that two proton beams were brought into collision at a new world record energy level Thursday. He says it marks a new round of data collection through the remainder of the year, and "increased discovery potential." — Internet

Two salmon-eating sea lions killed at Bonneville Dam

PORTLAND, 7 April — A Washington state wildlife spokesman says two salmon-eating California sea lions have been captured this week at Bonneville Dam and killed by lethal injection. The Oregonian reports the deaths are the first this year after a federal judge ruled last month the programme could proceed. Washington Fish and Wildlife spokesman Craig Bartlett says the sea lions were captured Tuesday.

The killings are limited to California sea lions documented as targeting spring chinook or steelhead near Bonneville, the first dam the returning fish encounter on their run up the Columbia River. The sea lions also must return to the dam despite nonlethal hazing and be spotted nearby for at least five days, though the days can accumulate over several years. The Humane Society of the United States has filed suit in an effort to permanently end the sea lion killings.

Sushi-making robots can crank out tasty fish rolls 24 hours a day

NEW YORK, 7 April — Like many traditional dishes, great sushi is as much about the skill of the chef as it is the quality of the ingredients, and we all know by now that there's no person on the planet that can match the dexterity of a robot. Japanese company Suzumo feels the same way, and while it claims to have created the very first sushi-making robot way back in 1981, its newest automaton puts all others — and almost all humans — to shame.

The new bots work as a team: One machine creates the all-important sushi rice mounds at a rate of 3,600 per hour, while the other takes the seaweed wrapping and raw fish and folds it into the perfect roll. Working at its maximum rate, the robotic roller can craft approximately 300 medium-sized rolls per hour, which averages out to 10 rolls every two minutes. The current human world record sushi roller is Joakim Lundblad, whose record stands at 12 rolls in two minutes.

Of course, while Lundblad put every ounce of energy into that two-minute world record, the Suzumo bot can work at its maximum speed 24/7. If the two were put together head-to-head in a marathon sushi-rolling showdown, the winner would likely be the one with a power plug on its backside. Check out the bots in action above, and try not to get too hungry.

Ex-Intel employee pleads guilty to theft charges

SAN FRANCISCO, 7 April — A former Intel Corp employee who allegedly stole from the chipmaker documents worth hundreds of millions of dollars pleaded guilty on Friday to five counts of wire fraud. Federal prosecutors in Boston had alleged that Biswamohan Pani, 36, downloaded some of Intel's "most valuable" design and manufacturing documents in June 2008, in his final days as an engineer in a Massachusetts facility.

Intel was not aware at the time of the alleged downloads that Pani had already sought a position and begun working at Advanced Micro Devices, Intel's largest rival in the chip industry. Pani acted alone and there was no evidence that he was instructed by AMD to carry out the theft - nor was AMD aware of his actions, prosecutors said. In court filings, Intel estimated the company secrets to be worth at least $200 million to $400 million.

AMD fired Pani in 2008. "AMD was not accused of wrongdoing, and the FBI has stated that there is no evidence that AMD had any involvement in or awareness of Mr Pani's alleged actions," said Drew Prairie, a spokesman for AMD. Draw Something is 'fastest growing' mobile game

LONDON, 7 April — Mobile game Draw Something has been downloaded 50 million times in just 50 days, the game's owner has said. Zynga, which bought the game's developer OMGPOP last month, said they believed the figures made it the "fastest growing" mobile game of all time. The simple game involves players drawing pictures in order to guess words, much like board game Pictionary. At peak times, Draw Something players create over 3,000 drawings per second.

Apple told the BBC that it did not disclose download figures for specific titles, and therefore could not verify Zynga's claim. However, Draw Something's success has seen it top the iPhone app charts, beating the highly-anticipated sequel to Angry Birds, Angry Birds Space. In a statement, Zynga said: "We believe it's not only the fastest growing original mobile game of all time — 50 days to hit 50 million downloads - but one of the fastest growing web sensations that we've seen."

The company said more than six billion drawings have been created on the app so far. In the game, players are given words to try to illustrate by drawing on a smartphone or tablet's touchscreen. If the friend guesses correctly, coins are earned to purchase additional items, such as more colours, within the game. Security experts have warned that scammers are trying to capitalise on the game's popularity by offering fake prizes via social networks like Twitter.

Last month, Zynga, which owns other popular social games like Farmville, bought small New York-based developer OMGPOP for $180m (£113m; 137m euros). After news of the buyout broke, OMGPOP chief executive Dan Porter attracted criticism after tweeting that a former employee - who did not want to work with Zynga - was "selfish" and the "weakest one on the whole team". Mr Porter later apologized.— Internet

Planning pregnancy may cut birth defects

NEW YORK, 7 April — Women who'd like to become pregnant — especially those who are taking medications for chronic conditions — may need to add something to their to-do list: Plan, plan, plan. That's because some medications are known to cause birth defects. Avoiding all medications during pregnancy is not always possible, however, and sometimes not taking a prescribed medication could be harmful, too.

"The best thing for women to do, all women, is to plan their pregnancy," said Dr Diane Ashton, deputy medical director for the March of Dimes. "Women should speak with their physician about their plans to become pregnant. If they have a condition that requires medication, that's an ideal time to switch to medications that have less risk, if necessary. And, it gives time for the condition to be stabilized." About 120,000 babies born each year in the United States — or about one of every 33 — are born with a birth defect, something abnormal that occurs in a baby's development, according to the US Centres for Disease Control and Prevention. Some are more cosmetic than dangerous, such as an extra toe, but others are serious and include heart defects and spina bifida. Birth defects are the leading cause of death in babies younger than 1 year, according to the National Birth Defects Prevention Network.

Most birth defects happen in the early stages of pregnancy, often before a woman even knows she's pregnant, according to the CDC. — Internet

Resistance spread 'compromising' fight against malaria

LONDON, 7 April — Scientists have found new evidence that resistance to the front-line treatments for malaria is increasing. They have confirmed that resistant strains of the malaria parasite on the border between Thailand and Myanmar, 500 miles (800km) away from previous sites. Researchers say that the rise of resistance means the effort to eliminate malaria is "seriously compromised". The details have been published in The Lancet medical journal.

For many years now the most effective drugs against malaria have been derived from the Chinese plant, Artemisia annua. It is also known as sweet wormwood. In 2009 researchers found that the most deadly species of malaria parasites, spread by mosquitoes, were becoming more resistant to these drugs in parts of western Cambodia. This new data confirms that these Plasmodium falciparum parasites that are infecting patients more than 500 miles away on the border between Thailand and Myanmar are growing steadily more resistant. — Internet

Green tea could cloud Olympic doping tests

LONDON, 7 April — Olympic doping officials are considering whether to tweak their tests after a recent British study showed green tea might hide testosterone from the standard test used to spot it. The study was a test in a lab dish so scientists aren't sure if the effects will be the same in people. But some experts say the results are intriguing enough that Olympic testing could be updated to include that possibility. "It's interesting that something as common as tea could have a significant influence on the steroid profile," said Olivier Rabin, scientific director of the World Anti-Doping Agency, or WADA. He said other foods and beverages, such as alcohol, are also known to muddle test results.

"We may need to adjust our steroid (test) to allow us to exclude whether a test is modified by food or training or disease, before we can say that it's doping," Rabin said. He said they might have to raise their normal threshold for what is considered a legal amount of testosterone to allow for any such interference. In the study, researchers added green and white tea extracts — or catechins — to testosterone and tested whether the enzyme that usually detects testosterone in the body could still identify it. Tea seemed to reduce the testosterone concentration by up to 30 percent and appeared to work best when testosterone was only slightly higher than normal. — Internet

Samsung estimates record first quarter profit; beats most bullish view

SEOUL, 7 April — Samsung Electronics, the world's top technology firm by revenue, estimated operating profit nearly doubled in January-March from a year ago, boosted by sales of its flagship Galaxy smartphones and its Note mini-tablet and phone.

The South Korean group, which out-sold global smartphone rivals last year, is set to consolidate its market position with new products, including a revamped Galaxy S, in the next few months. Samsung, which will release its full quarterly results on 27 April, estimated its January-March operating profit at a record 5.8 trillion won ($5.15 billion) versus a consensus forecast of 5.0 trillion won from analysts surveyed by Thomson Reuters I/B/E/S. It estimated sales at 45 trillion won.

Samsung shares have risen by a quarter so far this year, and hit a life high of 1.351 million won ($1,200) on Wednesday. Over the same period, shares in smartphone rival Apple have soared by more than half, taking the California-based firm's value to above $582 billion — more than three times that of Samsung. Tax evasion treaty signed by Switzerland and Germany

GENEVA, 7 April — Germany has signed a new tax evasion treaty with Switzerland, but opposition MPs are threatening to block it. If approved, the deal could bring Germany 10bn euros (£8.3bn, $13.1bn) next year, its finance ministry estimates.

The agreement is the latest in a long-running dispute about German nationals who hide taxable income in banks in neighbouring Switzerland. It was toughened after opposition MPs objected, but may still be voted down.

It is not clear how much money Germans have banked in Switzerland. The initial agreement was held up when the German parliament's upper house asked for stricter conditions to be imposed on tax evaders.

But although some changes have been made, the leader of the centre-left Social Democrats (SPD), Sigmar Gabriel, predicted: "It will fail a second time because the SPD-led states will not go along with it." He said it left tax evaders too much time to move their assets to another tax haven.

JJB Sports shares boosted by US investment

LONDON, 7 April — Shares in JJB Sports have risen more than 10% after the retailer announced a £30m investment package, which will see US retailer Dick's Sporting Goods take a stake in the firm. The initial £20m investment from Dick's will purchase ordinary shares and convertible loan notes. Existing shareholders will invest £10m. It came as Wigan-based JJB said pre-tax losses for the year to 29 January 2012 narrowed to £101.1m from £181.4m. JJB shares closed up 4.6% on Thursday.

The UK retailer is in the process of a restructuring programme that includes closing 43 of its stores. Revenues for the year fell 21.7% to £284.2m. JJB said the year had been "extremely challenging" and said that sales had continued to fall since the end of its financial year. Like-for-like sales for the nine weeks to 1 April 2012 were down 5.7%, while the company's net debt had risen to £20.6m from £11.3m at the end of January.

JJB said that the investment from Dick's gave it the opportunity to draw on the US firm's experience in the sports retail market. On conversion of its purchased loan notes, Dick's will become a controlling shareholder. JJB said at least one representative from Dick's was expected to join the board. The other £10m investment comes from four existing shareholders, including the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. Dick's also has the right to buy a further £20m of convertible loan notes next year.

As part of the refinancing package, JJB said that supplier Adidas would provide security for a two-stage loan of up to £15m to fund store refits and that Bank of Scotland would extend existing loan facilities until May 2015. JJB said it hopes to accelerate its store refit programme in time for this summer's European football championships and the London Olympics. — Internet

Israeli chefs target every last crumb for Passover

TEL AVIV, 7 April — The Jewish springtime holiday Passover is known as a festival of freedom, but its hallmark is a litany of dietary restrictions centered on not eating leavened bread for a week.

The rules are so elaborate that chefs who want to observe the ritual law must prepare weeks before, removing every last crumb, buying up new sets of kitchen utensils and planning menus without bread or wheat flour.

At Liliyot, one of Tel Aviv's most prestigious kosher restaurants, chef Noam Dekkers oversaw his staff on Wednesday, their last regular day in the kitchen before the annual Passover scrubdown — a process he calls "logistical mayhem." The holiday begins on Friday at sundown.

At the end of the day, Dekkers' cooks threw away leftovers like chopped vegetables and fish.

Then, they stored plastic cutting boards and boxes, locked grains away and scrubbed all steel cooking ware.

The following morning, city rabbis oversaw the final sterilization, when the restaurant staff blowtorched grease off the grills and dunked all the metal and glass cooking utensils into cauldrons of boiling water. As of Thursday night, Liliyot was kosher for Passover.

"Tel Aviv is a secular city," said Dekkers, a nonobservant Jewish Israeli. "But quite a big part of the community keeps the Jewish religious traditions, especially of the holidays."

Mazda to recall more than 62,000 vehicles in China

BEIJING, 7 April — Mazda Motor and its joint venture partners in China will recall more than 62,000 vehicles from Sunday to fix problems with anti-lock braking systems that could cause false warnings, China's quality regulator said.

The three-party joint venture with Ford Motor and Chongqing Changan Automobile will recall 58,949 Mondeo sedans and 3,496 S-Max vehicles and replace problematic parts, China's General Administration of Quality Supervision, Inspection and Quarantine said on its website.

The move comes on the heels of Mazda recalling 16,857 vehicles in September 2010 because of a similar problem. Joint venture executives could not be reached for comment on Sunday.

Texas residents sift through rubble from tornadoes

FORNEY, 7 April — As a twister bore down on her neighbourhood, Sherry Enochs grabbed the three young children in her home and hid in her bathtub. The winds swirled and snatched away two of the children. Her home collapsed around her. Miraculously, no one was seriously hurt. Enochs, 53, stood Wednesday amid the wreckage of what was once her home in the North Texas City of Forney, among the hardest hit by a series of tornadoes that barreled through one of the nation's largest metropolitan areas a day earlier. No one was reported dead, and of the more than 20 injured, only a handful were seriously hurt. "If you really think about it, the fact that everybody who woke up in Forney yesterday is alive today in Forney, that's a real blessing," Mayor Darren Rozell said. The National Weather Service is investigating the damage caused by the tornadoes, which appeared to flatten some homes and graze others next door. The twisters jumped from place to place, passing many heavily populated areas overhead and perhaps limiting what could have been a more damaging, deadly storm. Most of Dallas was spared the full wrath of the storms.

While tornadoes can strike major cities, having two major systems strike a single metropolitan area is highly unusual, meteorologist Jesse Moore said. The Texas twisters would have done more damage had they stayed on the ground for more of the storms' path.—Internet

French academic Descoings found dead in New York hotel

NEW YORK, 7 April — The head of one of France's most prestigious academic institutions has been found dead in a New York hotel room, police say. The naked body of Richard Descoings, 53, director of the Paris Institute of Political Studies, was discovered at the Michelangelo hotel in Manhattan. His laptop and mobile phone were found on a third-floor ledge. A police spokesperson has said that as yet there is no evidence a crime has been committed. Police investigators are awaiting a medical report to determine the likely cause of death.

Mr Descoings had been the director of the Sciences Po institute, one of France's elite "grandes ecoles", since 1996. Colleagues raised the alarm on Tuesday morning when he failed to appear at a UN-sponsored conference of university heads he had travelled to New York to attend. The police spokesman, Paul Browne, told the AFP news agency that there was "no sign of trauma". He said the disorderly state of Mr Descoings' room at the time of the discovery was the result of attempts by medical staff to resuscitate him.

Deputy Commissioner Browne told the Associated Press that the mobile phone and laptop probably had been thrown out of the window and had landed on the lower ledge. Richard Descoings was known for carrying out a programme of far-reaching reform at Sciences Po, which educates much of the French political, media and administrative elite.

Weather Service to test more graphic tornado warnings

WASHINGTON, 7 April — The National Weather Service on Monday plans to begin a new initiative in Kansas and Missouri designed to make people in Tornado Alley sit up and take notice when potentially devastating twisters are headed their way. Under the new system, tornado warnings will be accompanied by stark language like, "mass devastation is highly likely, making the area unrecognizable to survivors," according to the National Weather Service. Or even: "This storm is not survivable." "We call this 'impact-based warning,'" Dan Hawblitzel, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Pleasant Hill, Missouri, said on Sunday.

"The idea is to better convey the impact that a storm is likely to have on a community." Current National Weather Service tornado warnings generally cover portions of counties and urge people in the storm's path to take action. "There is quite a lot of over-warning going on; it's kind of the car-alarm syndrome," said Col Galyean, a meteorologist with

The Weather Channel. "People who live in areas where tornadoes happen frequently, like Joplin, Missouri, for example, are kind of becoming desensitized to the warnings."

A tornado slammed into Joplin last May, killing 161 people in the southwestern Missouri City and causing extensive damage. The new warnings will be tested in the two states through November 30. After that, a panel of social scientists and meteorologists will examine the responses and determine whether the system should be used nationwide, Hawblitzel said. Messages such as, "Complete destruction of entire neighborhoods is likely" may get more people posting on social networking sites and taking instant action, Hawblitzel said.

Galyean and Hawblitzel say the more detailed warnings are largely made possible because of a new type of Doppler radar called dual polarization, which can measure both the horizontal and vertical properties of a storm system and can tell forecasters whether debris is being picked up by the storm, a sure sign of a destructive system. "Right now it's tough to tell if a storm is actually causing damage," Galyean said.—Reuters

Soy may alleviate menopause hot flashes

NEWARK, 7 April — Two daily servings of soy might reduce the frequency and severity of hot flashes by up to 26 percent compared with a placebo, US researchers found. Study co-author Melissa Melby, a medical anthropology professor at the University of Delaware, reviewed 19 previous studies that examined more than 1,200 women. The effectiveness of soy in alleviating hot flashes has been inconclusive — some studies suggested soy to be beneficial and others suggested it was not — but much of the discrepancy was due to small sample sizes and inconsistent methodology, Melby said. "When you combine them all, we've found the overall effect is still positive," Melby said in a statement. The study published in Menopause: The Journal of the North American Menopause Association found ingesting at least 54 milligrams of soy isoflavones daily — about two glasses (16 ounce) of soy milk or 7 ounces of tofu — for six weeks to a year reduces menopause hot flash frequency by 20.6 percent and severity by 26 percent, compared to a placebo.

Women can't rewind 'biological clock'

NEW HAVEN, 7 April — Despite advances in reproductive techniques many women in their 40s do not know their chances of having a child is low, US fertility experts said. Dr Pasquale Patrizio, professor at Yale School of Medicine and director of the Yale Fertility Center, and colleagues said more women are coming to the fertility clinic at age 43 or older expecting pregnancy can be instantly achieved — and they're disappointed to learn that it can't be done easily.

"There is an alarming misconception about fertility among women," Patrizio said in a statement. "We are really seeing more and more patients 'upset' after failing in having their own biological child after age 43 so we had to report on this.

Their typical reaction is, 'what do you mean you cannot help me? I am healthy, I exercise, and I cannot have my own baby?'"

The growing popularity of assisted reproductive technologies has given women the impression female fertility may be manipulated at any stage in life, Patrizio said. — Internet

The Vice-President then presented Chinese agriculturalists with gifts and viewed 19-day old and 22-day old hybrid paddy plantations.

Speaking on the occasion, the Vice-President said that as an agricultural country, Myanmar is trying for successful cultivation of paddy as well as other crops. In doing so, coordinative measures are being taken with the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation to acquire necessary techniques. He next invited open questions for any requirements stressing the need for efforts of the farmers while departments are fulfilling requirements. Only then, will the agricultural sector improve as expected. Moreover, research and development are essential for every nation. It is necessary to develop the sector not only in the Nay Pyi Taw area but also in the whole nation. Success will surely be achieved if agricultural tasks meet the input requirements such as quality strains and fertilizers. Carrying out such tasks needs capital so it will be difficult for a single farmer to do that by himself, noted the Vice-President. The State on its part will be able to render all assistance only if it is economically strong and it may cause a barrier. This is why the private contribution is also necessary, said the Vice-President.

He went on to say that although there is not much difference of cultivation acreage between Myanmar and neighbours, there is difference in export volume. Therefore, the State, experts and farmers need to conduct study after considering and reviewing. The State is carrying out eight rural development tasks and paying emphasis on micro-credit services as well as the improvement of agricultural and meat and fish sectors.

The Vice-President added that looking to the developed countries, they are found to have been focusing on industrial development and engaging in agricultural tasks with the use of modern machinery. For Myanmar which relies on agriculture for fulfilling people's basic needs, it is to introduce mechanized farming in order to improve the agricultural sector. If the nation can develop the industrial sector while engaging in agricultural work, its economy will develop as well. Technology and capital are necessary to change the conventional farming into mechanized farming. Only if national economy develops, will the State be able to render assistance in such sectors as education and health for the wellbeing of the entire national people.

The Vice-President continued that farmers are to work hard accepting advice of experts to be successful in their agricultural business. Regarding the agricultural loans, farmers need to pay their debts regularly so that additional loans can be disbursed for next years. As the technique to grow Paletwe hybrid paddy strains is the best for the time being, that strain should be grown nationwide, noted the Vice-President. Later, he spoke of the need for technicians to develop methods that can benefit in the long run, for the private sector to try to acquire all necessary agricultural inputs and for all people to work together for national development.—MNA

Myanmar hockey, a sport event to bring honour to the nation

T.S. (NLM)

Nowadays, the State is undertaking a series of activities to promote sports and games so that the standard of sports in the country will gradually reach the world level in accordance with the motto "Myanmar Sports—the World to Conquer". Among the many different kinds of sports, hockey is being given a place receiving encouragement from the government, for success in sports is a source of national pride.

Now is a time when people are to take part in sports as a national concern. All sports federations and those responsible in different events of sports must make field tours right down to the grassroots levels, hunt for talented athletes and train them well so that they will become outstanding ones. In this context, the Myanmar Hockey Federation was reconstituted with the motto "To promote hockey in the entire country right down to village level".

In the past, games similar to modern field hockey were played in many parts of the world. The Arabs used curved sticks and a ball fashioned from palm fibres and esparto and the Indians of North and South America used bone stick and a deerskin ball in a team contest within a goal area.

According to an old manuscript, a crooked-stick game was played in England as early as 1175, and the 13th century stained glass windows of Canterbury and Gloucester cathedrals show figures of youths holding curved sticks or hitting a ball with them. In the 17th century, the Indians of Chile used crooked sticks to drive a ball through a goal in a game called cineca, probably an adoption of chueca, a popular game that was brought to the new world.

Modern field hockey, however, evolved in the British Isles early in the 19th century, the first organized club, Blackheath, being established in 1840. The style of play undoubtedly developed from the stick and ball games as hurley, played in Ireland; shinty, in Scotland; and bandy, in Wales. The name was derived from the French word hoquet (shepherd's crook).

In the 19th century, English schools and clubs such as Blackheath, Mosely and Wimbledon produced most of the players and competitions; and in 1875 the Men's Hockey Association of London published revised regulations, which reduced the size of the ground and goal posts and number of players in a team.

About this time the British Army was introducing the game to the Commonwealth countries, and Indian later adopted the game as its national sports.

In 1900, men's group in England, Ireland and Wales united to form the International Hockey Board. When the Scots joined in 1942, the rules become uniform throughout the British Isles. In 1948 the Federation Internationale de Hockey formed in Paris in 1924 became a constituent body of the board. All the FIH member countries recognized the authority of the board.

Until 1887, hockey was played exclusively by men and was regarded too rough and dangerous for women. But in that year English women adopted the game and organized the first women's club in East Moseley. In 1895 the English Ladies Hockey Association, subsequently called the All-England Women's Hockey Association, was founded and proceeded to popularize the game for women throughout the world. A Women's Hockey Federation established in 1927 included a membership of 35 countries by the early 1970s.

Field hockey is a major sport in the British Isles, where the modern game was developed. And it was widely played in continental Europe and in most Commonwealth countries, especially Indian, Pakistan and Australia. As hockey has been a permanent part of the Olympic Games since 1928, it spread to all parts of the world and it is now one of the events of Summer Olympics held once in every four years. It is also included in the Asian Games and SES Games.

Hockey was played in the country during the pre-war days and there were many teams in Pyin-Oo-Lwin. The game was revived in the country in 1951. It was played at the BA Grounds in Yangon. Later, it was played at the Theinbyu Grounds also known as the Theinbyu Hockey Pitch. There were men's teams as well as women's teams and the some of the tournaments were the Open Knockout Tourney, Hockey League Tourney, the Knockout Tourney, etc.

Now that the State is giving encouragements to all events of sports including hockey with a view to ensuring achievements in sports as the 27th SEA Games which is a decisive factor for Myanmar athletes is drawing near. And I am sure that more and more athletes will come to take part in hockey as it is also one of the sports events of the 27th SEA Games to be held in Myanmar in 2013.

James Murdoch quits as BSKyB chairman

LONDON, 7 April — James Murdoch resigned as chairman of BSKyB on Tuesday to prevent his links to a tabloid phone-hacking scandal from undermining the pay TV group, which has so far escaped the worst of the damage convulsing its controlling shareholder News Corp.

In a bitter blow to Murdoch, until last year seen as heir apparent to his father Rupert's media empire, James said he would step down from the British pay-TV company where he made his name as a talented executive in his own right. "I am aware that my role as Chairman could become a lightning rod for BSKyB and I believe that my resignation will help to ensure that there is no false conflation with events at a separate organization," Murdoch said.

The 39-year-old is a previous chairman of News International, News Corp's British newspaper arm that published the News of the World tabloid at the heart of the scandal. News of the World was shut down last year. "As attention continues to be paid to past events at News International, I am determined that the interests of BSKyB should not be undermined by matters outside the scope of this company," Murdoch wrote in a letter to the BSKyB board.

Fire at Penly nuclear reactor in northern France

PARIS, 7 April — Fire crews have been rushed to a nuclear reactor in northern France after an escape of smoke but the energy company EDF says the site is secure. Ten fire engines were sent to the Penly site near Dieppe, where the reactor was shut down after the alarm was raised at 12:20 (11:20 GMT). Nobody was hurt, the firm said, and the incident had "no consequences for the environment".

Two small fires had broken out but were later extinguished, the firm said. The fires were caused by hot oil leaking from a pump inside the reactor building, an EDF spokeswoman said, quoted by Reuters news agency. The Penly plant has two pressurised water reactors, cooled by water from the English Channel. With sights set on Romney, Obama says eager for campaign

WASHINGTON, 7 April— President Barack Obama on Thursday called out his likely opponent for the White House by name for the second time this week and said he "cannot wait" for the chance to pit his vision for America against the Republicans in this year's election.

In remarks that underscore the president's shift into full general election-fighting mode, Obama acknowledged Mitt Romney was the front-runner to win the Republican nomination to face him on 6 November, and said he relished the upcoming contest.

"We are going to have a big and important debate in this country, and I cannot wait," the Democrat told supporters at a fundraising event in Washington. This is going to be a big debate and it's going to be a fun debate. It's always good to have the truth on your side," he said.

The president had barely mentioned the former Massachusetts governor by name for months but has done so twice this week. Romney moved closer to clinching the Republican presidential nomination on Tuesday when he won three primary contests.

Obama fiercely attacked Republican budget plans earlier this week. On Thursday he again warned supporters the plan would gut many popular social programmes, adding that it was "a budget that Governor Romney, who is the front runner on the Republican side, has embraced....the budget was marvelous, he said.—MNA/Reuters

Treesaves woman from out-of-control truck

HOUSTON, 7 April — A truck driver was killed but a 95-year-old Houston woman was unharmed Thursday when an 18-wheeler crashed into a tree she planted in her yard 40 years ago. The driver of the truck lost control of the vehicle when he had a heart attack. Paramedics took the man, whose name was not reported, to the hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Alice Wright said she slept through the truck crashing into her yard, stopping just short of her bedroom, but credits the Live Oak tree she planted there with saving her life, KHOU-TV, Houston, reported. "My neighbour across the street called me and said, 'Are you all right,' and I said, 'What's the matter,' and she said, 'Oh, Mrs. Wright you don't know that truck is in your yard and could have come in your house?'"

"I'm just so thankful to the good Lord it was there, to stop that truck, I tell ya," Wright said. Wright told KHOU she got the tree in the early 1960s when she in Cleveland, Texas. "Me and my niece went out there and dug them — she got one and I got one — they were little bitty saplings then," she said.—Internet

Mexican gang member sentenced to life in US prison for murders

AUSTIN, 7 April — A senior member of a Mexican drug cartel was sentenced to life in prison in a US court on Thursday after authorities implicated him in more than 1,500 murders, including the 2010 execution of a US consulate employee in northern Mexico. Jose Antonio Acosta Hernandez, 34, pleaded guilty to 11 counts that included murder, conspiracy to kill people in a foreign country and various racketeering, money laundering and drug charges.

US District Judge Kathleen Cardone in El Paso, Texas, sentenced Hernandez to seven concurrent life terms and three additional consecutive life terms. "The defendant directed or participated in over 1,500 murders since 2008," according to the plea agreement with Hernandez, who was extradited from Mexico in March.

Hernandez was in charge of the armed enforcement wing of the Juarez Drug Cartel, which had formed an alliance with the Barrio Azteca drug gang that operated in Texas and Mexico to control the Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico drug trafficking, prosecutors said in the court papers.

Ciudad Juarez has served as a major route for smuggling narcotics into the United States. He ordered his men to kill members of a rival gang at a January 2010 birthday party in Ciudad Juarez that killed 16 and ordered a car bombing that killed four individuals including two Mexican police officers, the plea said.

FA Porsche, designer of iconic 911 sports car, dies

Now in its seventh version, the 911 is still recognizably FA Porsche's design.
INTERNET

STUTTGART, 7 April — The designer of the iconic Porsche 911 sports car, Ferdinand Alexander Porsche, has died at the age of 76. FA Porsche first designed the model in the early 1960s. The 911 first appeared in 1963, and the elegance and simplicity of its shape quickly made it a classic. It is now in its seventh version, and was recently voted one of the best cars of the twentieth century. His grandfather, Ferdinand Porsche, designed the Volkswagen Beetle. FA Porsche was in charge of the family firm's design department when he conceived the 911 as a replacement for its first model, the 356.

While it has undergone many technological changes since its inception, the 911 is recognizably still the same car today. FA Porsche became the chairman of Porsche AG in 1990, and served in that role until 1993, helping to secure the company's future after sales fell in the late 1980s. The company says FA Porsche died on Thursday in the Austrian city of Salzburg, but it has not revealed how he died. He will be buried in Austria, and a memorial service will be held in Stuttgart, the city of his birth, and where the company is based.— Internet

North Sea gas leak plug
'achievable'

ABERDEEN, 7 April — A plan to plug a leaking North Sea platform well is "achievable," inspectors said Friday following a visit to a well head that is spewing a cloud of potentially explosive gas. A team of experts spent four hours Thursday visiting the Elgin platform, which is operated by French energy giant Total. It was the first time the wellhead had been inspected since the platform's 238 crew were evacuated on 25 March when the leak was detected.

"We achieved our goals. Everything went as we would have hoped and the planned well intervention is achievable," Texas-based outside experts Wild Well Control said after visiting the platform alongside staff from the rig who are familiar with its construction. The firm said there were certainly no surprise obstacles to launching their operation. Specialists will revisit the platform in the coming days to develop detailed plans for pumping the problem G4 well head full of "heavy mud" at high pressure so as to seal it.

In a statement, Total said the team found no gas on the the processing platform and the 90-metre (year) bridge to the well head platform was also free of gas. The structural condition of that platform, G4 and the surrounding rig were unchanged since the evacuation, as were safety situations. "The visual inspection confirmed that the leak is coming from the G4 well head at Well Head Platform deck level. In parallel, a remote operated vehicle survey confirmed no underwater gas leak," Total said.— Internet

Which country has the most expensive postal charges?

LONDON, 7 April — The price of postage is going up sharply in the UK, but it still won't be the most expensive place in the world to post a letter, or not quite. Which countries earn that dubious honour? The price of a British first-class stamp is going up by about a third at the end of the month, from 46p to 60p, and the price of a second-class stamp will rise almost 40%, from 36p to 50p. But the Royal Mail says its "prices are amongst the best value in Europe". Is this true? It depends how you look at it. The Royal Mail points out the UK will remain the cheapest place in Europe to post a certain type of letter—a heavy letter, weighing between 50g (1.76oz) and 100g (3.53oz), if you post it second class.

And that's if you adjust the price to take into account the fact that money goes further in some countries where goods and services are generally cheap, than it does in others. Goods and services are relatively expensive in the UK, so the 50p price tag looks cheaper after the adjustment. But what if you post a standard letter—just one or two sheets of paper—first class? Then UK prices are not among the best value in Europe. In fact, the UK is among the top 10 most expensive countries, though its precise position in the top 10 depends on how you do the sums. If you convert the local price into dollars, the UK is the fifth most expensive in Europe. The 60p it will soon cost for a first class stamp is $0.96, behind Finland, Switzerland, Denmark and, in first place, Norway—where a comparable stamp costs $1.67 (9.5 Kroner).

If you adjust for the relative purchasing power of the different countries, the UK is in seventh place among European countries. Ahead of it are Denmark in sixth place, Norway in fifth, then Poland, Latvia, Slovakia and, in the top spot, Bulgaria. Posting a letter in Bulgaria only costs 0.85 Lev ($0.68) but to most Bulgarians, that's a lot. When the Royal Mail does these calculations, using slightly different purchasing power calculations, it places the UK in ninth position. That's Europe's 10 most expensive countries to post a letter. What about the world's? In the BBC's survey of 65 countries around the world, Norway's $1.67 postage still comes out on top. The post office there, Posten Norge, told the BBC its prices reflect competition from new technology, such as email, and the country's geography.

Owner gives up California marijuana school after raid

LOS ANGELES, 7 April — The founder of a US centre that offers courses on growing and dispensing marijuana says he will step aside from school days after a police raid. Richard Lee, 49, who runs Oaksterdam University, said he was concerned about facing serious federal drug charges. He has campaigned for the legalisation of marijuana, by supporting ballot measures and raising $1.5m (£945,000) to back a 2010 state legalisation plan.

Oaksterdam University has been called the "Princeton of Pot" and the "Harvard of Hemp"—INTERNET Authorities have not explained why they raided the centre. Monday's raid saw officers from federal tax and drug agencies confiscated marijuana, computers and files relating to Mr Lee's business.

Mr Lee, a paraplegic who uses a wheelchair, was not arrested. "It was something we've always feared, but we've always known it's a part of the politics of this issue," Mr Lee told the Los Angeles Times. Mr Lee has said that now he will only continue with his advocacy work and will stop running the education centre. Mr Lee told the Los Angeles Times that even though he will step aside, the centre will continue to run. "I've been doing this for a long time. Over 20 years... I kind of feel like I've done my time. It's time for others to take over." The centre has run some classes since the raid. Mr Lee said his decision to step aside was not part of a deal with the authorities.

Courses at Oaksterdam University include horticulture, business and the legal intricacies of running a marijuana dispensary. The school does not distribute the drug. The use of marijuana for some medical purposes is allowed in California.

Afghanistan after 2014

KABUL, 7 April — Afghan soil will not be used to launch attacks against any country after foreign troops withdraw, the war-torn nation's foreign minister told Al-Jazeera in an interview, excerpts of which were received by AFP on Friday. "Afghan soil will not be used against any country in the region," Zalmay Rassoul said, when asked if the United States would be allowed to continue drone attacks on Pakistan after all foreign combat troops withdraw from Afghanistan by the end of 2014.

"The presence of the remaining forces in Afghanistan is for training, equipping and securing Afghanistan's security. It has been mentioned, it is going to be mentioned, that this force is not for use against any neighbours in the region," Rassoul told the Doha-based television channel. The US drone war on Islamist militants in Pakistan is one of the major sticking points in Washington's relations with Islamabad, which reached their lowest point last year when airstrikes killed 24 Pakistani soldiers in November, six months after a covert US raid killed Osama bin Laden.

Pakistan responded by shutting its Afghan border to NATO supplies and evicting US personnel from an air base reportedly used as a hub by US drones.

Big lottery winners often prize anonymity

RED BUD, 7 April — The tiny Illinois farm town of Red Bud is the kind of place with few strangers and few secrets. Yet the community of 3,700 has a lingering mystery on its hands: Who bought the winning Mega Millions lottery ticket, and why hasn't the winner of the world record $656 million jackpot come forward? Though secrecy surrounds the ticket sold at the MotoMart convenience store, lottery officials note it's not unusual for winners to lay low — and those who advise them say it's just plain smart.

It's exactly what the Kansas winner of the March 30 Mega Millions drawing decided to do.

Kansas Lottery Director Dennis Wilson said the person came to the agency's Topeka head-quarters on Friday morning with an attorney and some financial advisers. Wilson said the person does not want to be identified, even by gender—something Kansas law allows. "They obviously don't need the publicity," Wilson said. "They're not used to the publicity of where they're from, where they live."

A third winning ticket was sold in Maryland, and questions fester about a woman claiming to have it. For all of its promise, instant riches come with a price, starting with the immediate barrage of calls from relatives and distant friends eager for a handout.

Vet removes golf ball from rat snake

A snake that swallowed a golf ball in Low Country South Carolina has a new lease on life thanks to surgery and a new career in environmental education.

A couple spotted the yellow rat snake trying to cross a road in Beaufort, The Island Packet reported. In the snake's first big break, David Gorzynski and Kim Gundler, who operate Beaufort Kayak Tours, are trained master naturalists.

Dr Mark Guilloud, a veterinarian who showed up to return a kayak, agreed to perform the surgery.

The procedure took 10 minutes once the snake was anesthetized and was followed by an anxious period when the patient stopped breathing.

Guilloud said he has removed "golf balls, hard balls, socks, blankets, Bert and Ernie — all the kids' toys" from dogs but the operation was his first on a snake.

The snake is believed to have eaten the ball, a Titleist, while foraging in a chicken coop. The balls are sometimes used to encourage hens.

The Nature Centre at the Lowcountry Institute has given the snake a home. The stitches are scheduled for removal in two weeks, and Tony Mills said the snake will then be used to help educate the public on the benefits provided by rodent-eating rat snakes.

Lost cat found after 16 years

Officials at a German animal shelter said a cat was reunited with his owner after spending 16 years living in the woods.

Bernhard Schoettel said his 19-year-old son, Kilian, found the cat while walking in the woods near Munich and brought it home, the New York Daily News reported Friday.

"My son immediately noticed that the animal was quite old," Schoettel said. "He felt sorry for it because it no longer had any front teeth. The tom was very trusting. We fed him for a few days and discovered that he was tattooed, so we took him to the animal sanctuary over the weekend."

Officials at the animal shelter said they were able to trace the cat's identification tattoo to owner Monika Moser, who said the feline went missing 16 years ago. The shelter said the cat's survival was unusual and he is now suffering from liver and thyroid problems.

Moser, who lives about 2 miles from where the cat was found, was reunited with the animal, the shelter said.

Nicole Kidman in talks on Grace Kelly role

LOS ANGELES, 7 April—Australian actress Nicole Kidman is in talks to play the late Grace Kelly, the screen legend who married the prince of Monaco, in a film by French director Olivier Dahan, Variety reported on Thursday.

At the time Kelly, an Oscar winner and mother of two, had already spent six years as a princess and was called upon to save Monaco from an escalating crisis with France over the tiny monarchy's status as a tax haven.

Kidman won an Academy Award for her portrayal of author Virginia Woolf in "The Hours" (2002).

AUGUSTA, 7 April — All signs pointed to this being a Masters for the ages. This wasn't what anyone had in mind — 52-year-old Fred Couples, silver hair and still cool as ever, drawing the loudest cheers Friday on his way to becoming the oldest player atop the leaderboard going into the weekend at Augusta National.

"Very shocking, and it was a great day," Couples said after a 5-under 67, which gave him a share of the lead with Jason Dufner.

"There was a lot going on there, and for me to be a part of it, it's really amazing." The buzz going into the Masters was built around all the best players on top of their games, and that element was very much in place. Rory McIlroy charged up the leaderboard. Lee Westwood is right there. So is Sergio Garcia and even Phil Mickelson. Missing from the mix — another surprise — was club-kicking Tiger Woods.

Just two weeks after Woods won Bay Hill by five shots and became an instant favorite for a fifth green jacket, he couldn't make a putt and then hit only two greens on the back nine. He kept dropping the club out of his hands in disgust, and it reached a boiling point on the par-3 16th when he turned and kicked his 9-iron some 15 yards. Woods didn't make a birdie after the third hole and shot 75, his highest score at Augusta since 2004.

Man City manager admits defeat at Arsenal and victory for Man United could decide title

LONDON, 7 April — Manchester City manager Roberto Mancini admits that defeat at Arsenal on Sunday could end his side's hopes of winning the Barclays Premier League title. Defeat for City at the Emirates Stadium and victory for Manchester United at home to Queens Park Rangers would leave United eight points clear at the top of the table. Asked if the title race would be over if that happened, Mancini said: "If we lose against Arsenal and if they beat QPR, yes."

Mancini, however, is still hopeful that his side can mount a fightback in the final seven matches of the season despite seeing their

"But seven games to the end, I think that everything can happen," said Mancini, whose side will host Manchester United at the Etihad Stadium on Monday 30th April. "It's important that we win our games and after we will see what happens. Also because we will play a derby, which will be three points. I think that in six games they can lose other points."

Aussie Stosur sinks Venus at WTA Charleston tennis

CHARLESTON, 7 April — Australia's Samantha Stosur booked her semi-final spot at the WTA Charleston clay court event with a pair of three-set wins, ruining the prospect of an all-Williams clash. Stosur, who turned 28 last Friday, ousted world number 87 Venus Williams with a 6-3, 4-6, 6-3 win in the quarter-finals to set up a semi-final showdown against Serena Williams.

Stosur, of the Gold Coast, was leading Galina Voskoboeva 4-2 in the first set Thursday when the match was halted because of rain. First up Friday on center court, No 2 seed Stosur finished off Voskoboeva with a 6-3, 4-6, 6-2 third-round win. She was back on court less than two hours later to face Venus.

"I don't think it was the end of the world to get out there and play this morning," Stosur said. "Today was very different than what we've been playing in, so it was good to get used to the conditions. I would have preferred not to play two three set matches, but nevertheless, I'm happy to be through."

Serena reached the semifinals on Friday when injury-cursed Sabine Lisicki quit their last-eight clash in floods of tears. The American fifth seed was 5-1 ahead in the first set when Lisicki — whose career went into a tailspin in 2010 when an injury left her barely able to walk — retired after falling and hurting her ankle. Mueller calls for calm as Bayern hunt Borussia in Bundesliga

AUGSBURG, 7 April — Having reached the Champions League semi-finals, Bayern Munich turn their attention back to the German league and resurgent Augsburg as they look to attack Borussia Dortmund's three-point lead. After beating Olympic Marseille 2-0 in Tuesday's Champions League quarter-final for a 4-0 aggregate score, Bayern are chasing a historic treble of European, German Cup and Bundesliga titles and have won all of their last eight games.

After trimming Dortmund's lead from five to three points last weekend, the German league could well be decided by next Wednesday's showdown at Borussia's Signal Iduna Park between Bayern and Dortmund. But midfielder Thomas Mueller says the focus must be on Augsburg under the old adage 'one game at a time' and the German star says only big performances will carry Munich through with Bayern second in the table.

"We have to keep our feet on the ground," warned Mueller. "We've fought our way back into the title race and we can be pleased about that. "It's good we have wins behind us, but trends don't make you champions. "It's easy to work out what we have to do in the run-in, but as we know ourselves, doing it isn't easy at all."

LONDON, 7 April — Arsenal have a reputation for their graceful and classy style of play and that apparently translates rather well to ballet. In an ad for French (and thus Arsene Wenger approved) car maker Citroen, Wojciech Szczesny, Alex Oxlade-Chamberlain, Alex Song and Bacary Sagna were paired off with ballerinas from the English National Ballet and put through their paces. Some highlights: Alex Song's "What am I doing right now?" look at 30 seconds in, Oxlade-Chamberlain taking a peek under a tutu at 41 seconds and Szczesny's jump at 1:10. It would've been so much better if it involved Andrei Arshavin, though.— Internet

Spurs held to goalless draw at Sunderland

LONDON, 7 April—Tottenham Hotspur suffered a potential blip in their pursuit of third spot in the Premier League after a dire 0-0 draw at Sunderland on Saturday. The point put Spurs into the last automatic Champions League spot but Arsenal can move back into third with a draw at home to second-placed Manchester City on Sunday.

Both sides struggled to create any clearcut opportunities but

Tottenham felt aggrieved that Phil Bardsley and Michael Turner got away with handballs in the box, the first from a goalbound Emmanuel Adebayor header. Rafael van der Vaart had two half chances for the visitors, who have lost some of their verve since manager Harry Redknapp was made the bookmakers' favourite for the vacant England job. In-form Newcastle United, who won 2-0 at Swansea City on Friday to go fifth, are three points behind Spurs while Chelsea are also pushing for third and host Wigan Athletic later. Eighth-placed Sunderland, flying since manager Martin O'Neill took over in December, had their own penalty shout when the ball clipped Scott Parker on the arm but the referee was again unmoved.—Internet

Use of common pesticide, imidacloprid, linked to bee colony collapse

WASHINGTON, 7 April—The likely culprit in sharp worldwide declines in honeybee colonies since 2006 is imidacloprid, one of the most widely used pesticides, according to a new study from Harvard School of Public Health (HSPH). The authors, led by Honeybee on knapweed. The likely culprit in sharp worldwide declines in honeybee colonies since 2006 is imidacloprid, one of the most widely used pesticides.

Alex Lu write that the new research provides "convincing evidence" of the link between imidacloprid and the phenomenon known as Colony Collapse Disorder (CCD), in which adult bees abandon their hives.

"The significance of bees to agriculture cannot be underestimated," says Lu. "And it apparently doesn't take much of the pesticide to affect the bees. Our experiment included pesticide amounts below what is normally present in the environment." Pinpointing the cause of the problem is crucial because bees—beyond producing honey—are prime pollinators of roughly one-third of the crop species in the US, including fruits, vegetables, nuts, and livestock feed such as alfalfa and clover. Massive loss of honeybees could result in billions of dollars in agricultural losses, experts estimate. Lu and his co-authors hypothesized that the uptick in CCD resulted from the presence of imidacloprid, a neonicotinoid introduced in the early 1990s. Bees can be exposed in two ways: through nectar from plants or through high-fructose corn syrup beekeepers use to feed their bees. Over a 23-week period, they monitored bees in four different bee yards; each yard had four hives treated with different levels of imidacloprid and one control hive. After 12 weeks of imidacloprid dosing, all the bees were alive. But after 23 weeks, 15 out of 16 of the imidacloprid-treated hives—94%—had died. Those exposed to the highest levels of the pesticide died first.

Dramatic late Mata winner keeps Blues in Champions League hunt after controversial Ivanovic opener

LONDON, 7 April—Juan Mata scored a stoppage-time winner to sink struggling Wigan and strengthen Chelsea's hopes of a top-four finish.

Branislav Ivanovic was in an offside position when he put Chelsea ahead in controversial circumstances after a floated pass by Raul Meireles.

Mohamed Diame appeared to have earned the visitors a priceless point when he netted from the edge of the area.

But Chelsea secured victory through Mata after fellow Spaniard Fernando Torres hit the post.

It was tough on the Latics, who remain anchored in the relegation zone, but manager Roberto Martinez will be confident his side can still escape the drop if they can produce this level of performance in their remaining six games.

While Wigan proved they were no pushovers during a battling first-half performance, Chelsea appeared to be suffering a Champions League hangover following their quarter-final victory over Benfica.

They were sluggish before Maynor Figueroa's 38th-minute clearance off the line frustrated Didier Drogba on his return, one of seven changes to the side that played in midweek.

Michael Essien was booked for a cynical foul on Victor Moses before Drogba went close with a low shot from the edge of the area which flashed narrowly wide of the Wigan post.

Then in the dying moments of the first half, Al-Habsi clawed away Drogba's goal-bound header from close range after the Ivory Coast striker had connected with Florent Malouda's teasing cross.
