Pyithu Hluttaw session continues for 19th day Affirmation of office taken, three questions answered, one new proposal submitted and informed to Hluttaw

NAY PYI TAW, 23 April—The 19th day Pyithu Hluttaw session was held at Pyithu Hluttaw Hall of Hluttaw Building here at 1 pm today, attended by Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker Thura U Shwe Mann and 377 MPs.

At the session, affirmation of office was taken, three questions answered and one new proposal submitted and informed to the Hluttaw.

First, under Article 8(b) of Pyithu Hluttaw Law, 40 defence services personnel Pyithu Hluttaw representatives who had not taken affirmation took the affirmation of office in the presence of the Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker.

In response to the question of U Sai Bo Aung of Muse Constituency about how related departments and organizations can handle minor and major car accidents in accord with the law, Deputy Minister for Home Affairs Brig-Gen Kyaw Zan Myint clarified that if car accidents happen, they are handled in accord with the 1964 Vehicle Law and 1989 Vehicle Rule. There is no law prescribed separately to take action against minor or major accidents. If an accident happens, action is only taken against those who break the law. So to ensure that car accidents are handled in accord with the law, action has to be taken against those drivers who breach the law in line with the correct procedures and laws if accidents happen no matter how accidents involve big or small cars.

U Tin Maung of Chanmyathazi Constituency asked whether there is any law banning land and house brokers who are in disguise of buying and selling houses. He then requested that prompt action should be taken if there is such law and asked about the issue of rejecting second-degree civil appeal cases at the Supreme Court of the Union in Nay Pyi Taw in September 2011. Union Supreme Court Judge U Soe Nyunt replied that as they give loans in advance with interest, they can be indicted with the 1945 Money Lenders Act for their illegal lending. In addition, anyone who persuades another in an insincere way, they can be prosecuted in accord with the law.

Regarding the second question, he went on to say that 64 second-degree civil appeal cases were heard at the Union Supreme Court in September 2011 and 27 cases were rejected through question of U Thein Tun of Kyaunggon Constituency about whether there is a a brief. The court has to hear appeal cases in accord with the civil law section 109. The appeal cases in which action is unnecessarily to be taken are not accepted and the court usually orders to reject them through a brief. The rejected appeal cases cause no legal problems.

With regard to the plan to allocate money for schools that are allowed to be built with cash contributions of the public like schools whose construction is taken charge by companies, Deputy Minister for Education U Aye Kyu replied that in building new school buildings, the State only allocates actual amount of money. If an old school building is demolished and new one is to be built with public contributions, money will be only allocated if the useable property is to be used. But the allocation will be granted by subtracting cost of the property. If not, there will be misappropriation. If there is no public contribution and useable property, the same rate of allocation as companies will be granted.

Then, Thura U Aung Ko of Kanpetlet Constituency submitted a proposal on assisting in (See page 8)

Myanmar foreseeing tourism explosion

It is undeniable that Myanmar's tourism is developing year by year. According to data, the number of tourists coming to Myanmar has increased from 791,505 in 2010 to 816,365 in 2011, accounting for 3.14 percent increase.

Blessed with snow-capped mountains, long and wide river courses, unspoilt lakes and beaches, spectacular landscapes and vast tracts of forests, Myanmar is attracting more and more tourists to come and visit. Moreover, the open-heartedness and hospitality of Myanmar people make tourists willing to visit Myanmar again and again.

Since taking office in the 2010 post-election period, the new government has been trying not only to promote friendly ties with neighbouring countries but also to be able to stand tall in the ASEAN economic community. The government therefore is conducting a series of reforms in various sectors such as agriculture, production and services, transportation, communication, education, technology and human resources.

Recently, Myanmar hosted a responsible tourism conference under cooperation between Myanmar Tourism Board and Hanns Seidel Foundation. Today, more travels & tours companies are emerging in the country, and they are doing their best to provide good and reliable services under the directive of the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism.

With Myanmar having lots of tourist attractions plus more than 100 hospitable national ethnic groups, it will surely see tourism explosion in coming years.

Divided into four groups, the participants of the symposium discussed the report of the previous academic year and future tasks.

During the seminar, four resource persons read out papers on the long term plan. The seminar will be held till 25 April.—MNA

Iraqi premier starts talks in Iran

TEHERAN, 23 April— Iraq's prime minister traveled to Teheran Sunday for top level talks, underlining the close ties between governments of the two countries. Nouri al-Maliki met Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad at the beginning of his two-day official visit. Ahmadinejad praised al-Maliki, saying the Iraqi prime minister is working for reconstruction and progress in his war-battered country.

"If Teheran and Baghdad are powerful, then there will be no place for the presence of enemies of nations in this region, including the US and the Zionist regime," the official Iranian news agency IRNA quoted Ahmadinejad as telling al-Maliki.

Al-Maliki's Shiite-dominated government has received support from Iran, a regional Shiite powerhouse. A news website, tabnak.ir, said al-Maliki's visit to Teheran is an attempt by the Iraqi prime minister to show that Iraq has strong regional allies. Al-Maliki is also expected to meet Iran's Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei during his visit. Among topics for discussion is Iran's nuclear programme. Iraq will host the next round of nuclear talks between Iran and the six world powers in Baghdad on 23 May. The US and its allies suspect that Iran intends to produce nuclear weapons. Iran denies that, insisting that its nuclear programme is for peaceful purposes. Al-Maliki was given a red carpet welcome by First Vice President Mohammad Reza Rahimi at Saadabad Palace in north Teheran, state TV reported.

Bomb kills two NATO service members in Afghanistan

KABUL, 23 April — NATO forces say two international service members have been killed in a bomb attack in eastern Afghanistan. The military coalition says in a statement issued Monday that the deaths happened on Sunday. The statement does not provide nationalities or other details.

NATO typically waits for member nations to announce casualties before providing more information. Most of the international troops in the east are American but their are forces from other NATO nations as well. The deaths make at least 25 international service members killed so far this month.

US, Afghanistan reach deal on strategic pact

KABUL, 23 April — The US and Afghanistan reached a deal Sunday on a long-delayed strategic partnership agreement that ensures Americans will provide military and financial support to the Afghan people for at least a decade beyond 2014, the deadline for most foreign forces to withdraw. The pact is key to the US exit strategy in Afghanistan because it establishes guidelines for any American forces who remain after the withdrawal deadline and for financial help to the impoverished country and its security forces. For the Afghan government, it is also a way to show its people that their US allies are not just walking away.

"Our goal is an enduring partnership with Afghanistan that strengthens Afghan sovereignty, stability and prosperity and that contributes to our shared goal of defeating al-Qaeda and its extremist affiliates," said US Embassy spokesman Gavin Sundwall. "We believe this agreement supports that goal." After 10 years of US-led war, militants linked to the Taleban and al-Qaeda remain a threat and as recently as a week ago launched a large-scale attack on the Capital Kabul and three other cities.

The draft agreement was worked out and initiated by Afghan National Security Adviser Ranganath Spanta and US Ambassador Ryan Crocker. It must still be reviewed in both countries and signed afterward by the Afghan and American presidents.—Internet

Seven injured in Tyre restaurant blast

TYRE, 23 April — Seven people were injured when an explosion apparently caused by a bomb shook a restaurant in the south Lebanese coastal town of Tyre, according to a Lebanese security source. The blast occurred at midnight Sunday in the elevator of the Nocean restaurant, injuring seven people who were hospitalized, the source said. A policeman said a bomb had apparently been placed in the lift. It exploded on the fourth floor of the building where the restaurant is situated. The Nocean is known for its dance parties in this Shiite-majority region. A security perimeter was set up around the scene of the blast. Chunks of stone and shards of glass were strewn around up to 1,000 metres (yards) from the blast. Several restaurants in the region have been damaged by bombs in recent months, the last in December. Two explosions have also targeted shops selling alcohol. Tyre is one of the few towns in south Lebanon where alcohol is served in restaurants, which brings in tourists including members of the UN force in Lebanon (UNIFIL), but the recent blasts have caused several restaurants to ban alcohol.—Internet

Australian police appeal for calm after teen shootings

SYDNEY, 23 April — Australian police Monday renewed calls for calm after two Aboriginal teenagers were shot in Sydney's red-light district, saying footage of the incident was shocking but had to be judged in context. Graphic mobile phone footage appears to show a police officer viciously punching one of the teenagers after he had been shot. The youth, heavily bleeding, is then pinned face down on the ground.

"It's important to keep calm about this—what we've seen in the media over the weekend hasn't done anyone any favours, I don't think," New South Wales Assistant Police Commissioner Mark Murdoch told ABC radio. "We need to judge this matter very much in context." The video was taken as the suspects were arrested after the stolen car they were in mounted the pavement in Kings Cross early Saturday, hitting one woman and dragging her beneath the vehicle, prompting the police to fire. Of the six indigenous youths in the car, two were hit by bullets—the 14-year-old driver in the chest and arm and his 18-year-old passenger in the neck.

The footage shows at least one of those taken from the car and rushed away on a stretcher but it also shows another being dragged along the ground, repeatedly punched and handcuffed as he bleeds.—Internet

Iran says it recovered data from captured US drone

TEHERAN, 23 April — Iran claimed on Sunday that it had recovered data from an American spy drone that went down in Iran last year, including information that the aircraft was used to spy on Osama bin Laden weeks before he was killed. Iran also said it was building a copy of the drone. Similar unmanned surveillance planes have been used in Afghanistan for years and kept watch on bin Laden's compound in Pakistan. But US officials have said little about the history of the particular aircraft now in Iran's possession.

Teheran, which has also been known to exaggerate its military and technological prowess, says it brought down the RQ-170 Sentinel, a top-secret drone equipped with stealth technology, and has flaunted the capture as a victory for Iran and a defeat for the United States. The US says the drone malfunctioned and downplayed any suggestion that Iran could mine the aircraft for sensitive information because of measures taken to limit the intelligence value of drones operating over hostile territory.

The drone went down in December in eastern Iran and was recovered by Iran almost completely intact. After initially saying only that a drone had been lost near the Afghan-Iran border, American officials eventually confirmed the plane was monitoring Iran's military and nuclear facilities. Washington has asked for it back, a request Iran rejected.

Depiction of Egyptian Pharaoh found

CAIRO, 23 April—A stone slab depicting Ramses III, who ruled Egypt's 20th Dynasty from 1186-1155 BC, has been found at the Karnak Temple, researchers say.

The rare archeological piece depicts the Pharaoh Ramses III providing sacrifices and offerings to the god Amon Ra, the Egypt State Information Service reported Friday. Also depicted on the slab is Amon Ra's goddess wife Amont wearing a crown.

The Temple of Karnak, considered the largest ancient Egyptian temple in the world, is a large complex containing a group of temples such as the Great Temple of Amon Ra, The Temple of Khonso, The Ipt Temple, The Temple of Ptah, the Temple of Montho and the Temple of the God Osiris.—Internet

Car made in Missouri gets 358 miles per gallon

NEW YORK, 23 April—KYTV in Springfield, Mo, reports a car designed by students at Aurora Junior High School gets 358 miles per gallon. The red roadster seats one, has three small bicycle wheels and starts with a pull cord. The steering column is similar to a bicycle's to turn the two front wheels. The car was designed as part of the Missouri SuperMileage Challenge.

- * The car was not allowed to go over 30 mph per contest rules. The vehicle must also be able to make a turn within 35 feet of turning radius.
- * The engine must be a 4-cycle engine made from the factory of a brand name such as Honda or Briggs & Stratton. Basically, the engines are from lawnmowers or even gas-powered trimmers.
- * Unleaded fuel must power the lightweight vehicles. The engine can max out at six horsepower.
- * For the 2012 contest, there were two divisions. The first was the stock division with unaltered factory engines. The second was the experimental division in which engines burn ethanol or blended fuels.
- * The Aurora Junior High School team achieved the 358 miles per gallon rating over a 10-lap run. One run was calculated to have 437 miles per gallon.
- * The Aurora team took first place. The junior high team's accomplishment was set apart due to the fact the annual contest is for high school teams.

- * The entry fee for the Missouri SuperMileage Challenge was $5 to cover the costs of trophies and fuel. This year was the seventh annual contest to demonstrate how cars can get extreme gas mileage.
- * This was the fourth year in a row a team from Aurora won the event. In 2011, the Aurora Advertiser reported the SuperMileage students from Aurora High School won the experimental division using B20 biodiesel to get 275 miles per gallon. The junior high team placed second out of 14 cars in 2011 in the stock division with 158 miles per gallon.
- * The Missouri SuperMileage Challenge is held every spring in Warrensburg. The event is sponsored and sanctioned by the International Technology Education Association. There are similar competitions held in Minnesota, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan.
- * SAE International sponsors a college-level event for nearly two dozen teams from the US and Canada. The contest is similar in scope to the high school level. Teams must design a vehicle that gets the best gas mileage from factory engines donated by Briggs & Stratton. — Internet

Russia's Progress space freighter docks with ISS

Moscow, 23 April—Russia's cargo spacecraft Progress M-15M docked with the International Space Station (ISS) successfully on Sunday, the Mission Control Centre (MCC) said.

"The Progress M-15M docked with the Pirs unit at 18:39 pm Moscow time (14:39 GMT), and the docking went on smoothly," according to the MCC.

Some local media reported that the ISS crew would open the hatch of the Progress space freighter at around 21:25 pm Moscow time (17:25 GMT) and unload urgent cargo.

The Progress M-15M delivered about 2.4 tons of fuel and scientific equipment to the ISS as well as oxygen, food and clothes for the crew.

Among them, there is a special present for Russian cosmonaut Gennady Padalka, who is expected to fly to the ISS on 15 May and celebrate his 54th birthday in orbit on 21 June.

A Russian Soyuz-U rocket carrying a Progress M-15M cargo ship blasted off from the Baikonur space center in Kazakhstan at 16:50 pm Moscow time (12:50 GMT) on Friday to the ISS, according to Russia's Federal Space Agency, Roscosmos. This is the second of the five launches of Progress cargo ships to the ISS in 2012, Roscosmos said.

Progress freighters have been the backbone of the Russian space cargo fleet for decades. Russia lost a Progress cargo ship in 2011 for the first time in 30 years.—Xinhua

Apple's new iPad goes on sale in South Korea

SEOUL, 23 April—Hundreds of customers lined up on Friday at Apple stores as the new iPad went on sale in tech-savvy South Korea, about one month after it made its international debut.

Four of Apple's stores in Seoul opened early to sell the tablet computer, and there were also queues outside branches in the city of network providers KT and SK Telecom, the two distributors of iPhones and iPads.

First in line at KT was university student Lim Jun-

Hong, 21, who slept overnight on the pavement to be the first to get his hands on the tablet.

"Got my new iPad! Hooray!" wrote one Twitter user.

Apple is selling the gadget with WiFi at 620,000 won ($545) to 860,000 won ($755), depending on memory size. The cost is slightly higher for models with both WiFi and 4G.

South Korean users, at least for now, will use 3G instead of 4G. The faster connection speed is currently unavailable locally due to differences in frequencies.

Satellite tracked as it remains silent

PARIS, 23 April—Optical, radar and laser observations of a European satellite that inexplicably went silent 8 April show it is still in a stable orbit, space officials say.

All efforts to restore contact with the Envisat environmental monitoring satellite have so far failed, the European Space Agency reported from its Paris headquarters Friday.

With help from European and international partners, ground controllers are attempting to determine if Envisat has entered its "safe mode," which could offer a starting point for its revival, officials said.

On 15 April the French space agency CNES turned its Pleiades satellite, which normally provides high-resolution images of Earth, around to capture images of Envisat passing above it at about 54 miles.

Flight specialists and engineers are studying the images to determine if Envisat's solar panel — the satellite's power source — is in a position for sufficient exposure to the sun to generate enough power to put Envisat into safe mode.

"These unique images will enable us to analyze Envisat's orientation, which will indicate whether we are able to regain contact with the satellite," Manfred Warhaut, head of ESA's Mission Operations Department, said.

Adobe to launch new software suite for designers

NEW YORK, 23 April — Adobe is launching the latest version of its software package for designers and Web developers. Adobe Systems Inc is set to announce CS6 on Monday at an event in San Francisco. Creative Suite 6 includes Photoshop, Illustrator and other programs aimed at designers.

Unlike previous versions, which came shrink-wrapped in a box, Creative Suite 6 will be available on a monthly subscription basis as part of Adobe's Creative Cloud offering. Subscriptions will start at $50 a month for those who sign up for a year. Subscribers will be able to download programs such as Photoshop, InDesign or Illustrator, store their work online and share files with others.

This will likely make the pricey software package more desirable to new customers who may not want to shell out thousands of dollars upfront. Scott Morris, a senior marketing director at Adobe, compared the new pricing policy to the company's decision nearly a decade ago to start selling its design-software products in one package. The result then was higher sales, and Adobe hopes to replicate that success with its new revenue model.

Customers will still be able to buy CS6 as a packaged software suite, just as they can still buy the programmes separately.—Internet

Vitamin C may lower high blood pressure

Researchers at Johns Hopkins have found that large doses of vitamin C may help reduce hypertension in adults. The study, which was published in the current issue of the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, found that the nutrient can cause a moderate decrease a person's blood pressure.

What are the details of the study?

The study was what is referred to as a "review" study, which means that it looked at and analyzed previous research for patterns and observations. In this case, scientists looked at the data from 29 previous clinical trials involving more than 1,400 people in order to reach their conclusions, according to the Baltimore Sun.

What did the study find?

Preliminary conclusions would suggest that consuming large amounts of vitamin C, in this case, at least 500 milligrams per day for an average of eight weeks, can have a positive, though moderate, effect on someone suffering from hypertension. This amount is the equivalent of roughly five times the current daily recommendations.

How is vitamin C believed to work?

According to Prevention, vitamin C may be able to maintain or protect the body's levels of nitric oxide. Nitric oxide's function is specifically to help maintain healthy blood pressure. Past research revolving around the health benefits of vitamin C have focused on the nutrient's possible role as a diuretic. As such, it may help the kidneys to more efficiently rid the body of excess sodium and water, which has the effect of lowering blood pressure by relaxing blood vessels.

What are the Johns Hopkins researchers recommending as a result of their findings?

Nothing yet. Dr Edgar R Miller III, one of the lead researchers in the study, said in the team's official press release that it was too soon to recommend a specific course of action. Further study is required to determine the exact effects of vitamin C on blood pressure.

What has been the critical response to the study's findings?

According to WebMD, the researchers involved in the study have themselves pointed out that the studies that they analyzed were usually small. They also pointed out that some of the patients in question were being prescribed blood pressure medication, which could have skewed the results.

Additionally, this initial study was not designed to prove whether there were any long-term benefits of taking higher doses of vitamin C. In particular, there was no evidence to suggest that taking large amounts of vitamin C would lower a person's risk of developing cardiovascular issues or having a stroke. —Internet

Birth defects more common in IVF babies

WARSAW, 23 April—Babies conceived through certain fertility treatment techniques are about one-third more likely to have a birth defect than babies conceived without any extra help from technology, according to a review of several dozen studies.

However, the researchers, whose findings were published in the journal Fertility and Sterility, did not determine why fertility treatments are tied to a higher risk of birth defects or whether the technology is even responsible.

In vitro fertilization (IVF), in which the mother's egg is fertilized outside of her body and then transferred to her womb, has been available to would-be mothers for more than three decades, and numerous studies have looked at the potential hazards of these techniques.

Zhibin Hu at Nanjing Medical University and colleagues collected the results of 46 studies that compared the number of birth defects among children conceived using an IVF technique to children conceived normally.

For more than 124,000 children born through IVF or using ICSI, in which a single sperm is injected directly into the egg, the risk of having a birth defect was 37 percent higher than that of the other children, they found.

"Children conceived by IVF and/or ICSI are at significantly increased risk for birth defects, and there is no risk difference between children conceived by IVF and/or ICSI," the team wrote.

According to the US Centres for Disease Control and Prevention, major birth defects, such as malformation of a limb or organ, occur in about three out of every 100 babies born in the United States. A 37 percent increase would bump that rate to four out of every 100 babies.

Hospitals see decline in care-related infections

A patient waits in the hallway for a room to open up in the emergency room at Ben Taub General Hospital in Houston, Texas.—REUTERS

ATLANTA, 23 April—The United States is making progress in reducing the spread of infections to patients while they are in the hospital, the Centres for Disease Control and Prevention said on Thursday.

Twenty-one states reported reductions in so-called "central line" bloodstream infections from 2009-2010, according to the federal health agency, which used data from a state-by-state tracking system.

A central line is a tube inserted into a large vein of a patient's neck or chest for treatment, often while the patient is in intensive care. When not put in correctly or kept clean, the lines can become "a freeway for germs to enter the body and cause serious bloodstream infections," the CDC said.

Nationwide, there was a 32 percent decline in central line bloodstream infections from 2009-2010, said Dr Scott Fridkin, deputy chief of the surveillance branch in the CDC's division of health care quality promotion. The decline was even greater at 35 percent among intensive care patients, he said.

Fridkin attributed the reduced number of health care-related infections to national and state prevention efforts.

There were smaller reductions in infections caused by other surgical procedures, Fridkin said. "There's a lot of room for progress with surgical site infection prevention," he said.

With a state-by-state reporting system called the National Health Care Safety Network, launched in 2006, hospitals can compare their own infection rates with similar facilities. More than 5,000 acute-care hospitals now report data to the network.

Bank of Canada head urges caution on housing market

TORONTO, 23 April—Parts of the Canadian housing market, especially condominiums in some major cities, have seen prices jump to levels that warrant caution, the head of the country's central bank said in an interview broadcast on Saturday. "There are issues, particularly in some parts of the country in the condo market, without question, where activity has been particularly strong, has reached back to levels of the late 1980s," Bank of Canada Governor Mark Carney said when asked if Canada was experiencing a housing bubble. "And in some of our major cities, without question, valuations are extremely firm, to put it one way. And so some caution is warranted in that environment." Carney did not mention specific regions or cities.

He noted that regulators had toughened underwriting standards for home equity loans and the federal government had tightened mortgage rules three times to cool the housing market. The central bank has previously suggested hiking interest rates to cool housing would be a last line of defence.

March from year-ago levels, but that prices in Toronto, which has seen a condominium construction boom, jumped 10.5 percent. Some analysts also are concerned about Vancouver's housing market and condo sector. While overall prices there have cooled from a year ago, it remains Canada's most expensive property market. Unlike the United States, Canada has experienced a post-financial crisis housing market rally triggered by record low borrowing costs. Carney spoke after the Bank of Canada surprised markets last week by explicitly warning it may need to start raising interest rates given reduced slack in the economy.

The central bank chief reiterated in the interview that the economy was almost back to full capacity. "It's in that environment that given the fact that rates are exceptionally low, there's considerable monetary policy stimulus, that we have signaled that if this continues, in light of this situation, some modest withdrawal of that considerable monetary stimulus may become appropriate," he said.—Reuters

Argentina's YPF cuts computer links with Repsol

LONDON, 23 April—Argentine oil group YPF has cut computer links with parent Repsol, two sources familiar with the matter said on Sunday, following Buenos Aires' plans unveiled last week to seize control of the leading energy company.

The move is the latest in a string of actions that have shut Spain's Repsol out of YPF, even before Argentina has implemented laws to provide the basis for the nationalization.

Last Monday, President Cristina Fernandez announced plans to expropriate a controlling 51 percent stake in YPF by seizing most of Repsol's shares, saying a failure of Repsol to invest sufficiently in YPF was contributing to an energy crunch in the country.

Repsol, which holds about 57 percent of YPF, said it had consistently raised investment at YPF and analysts said Argentina's price controls on oil and gas were the reason companies had not invested more in production.

Local media said that even before Fernandez finished her speech, the government's representative on YPF's board of directors, Roberto Baratta, had entered YPF's offices and read out the names of executives who would have to leave the premises immediately.

Hours after the expropriation was announced live on national television, the state-appointed interim administrator, Planning Minister Julio De Vido, occupied the company's offices in the upscale neighborhood of Puerto Madero.

The two sources said that days later, YPF shut down electronic communications with Repsol, preventing Repsol from accessing information about YPF's operations.

Wen, Merkel jointly open Hannover trade fair

HANNOVER, 22 April — Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao and German Chancellor Angela Merkel jointly opened the Hannover trade fair here on Sunday. In a speech delivered at the opening ceremony, Wen said China and Germany, two of the most important manufacturing countries in the world, are working closely to promote dialogue and cooperation of the global industries, and this will surely play a more important role in advancing global industrial innovation and development. China is the official partner country of this year's Hannover trade fair, the largest industrial expo in the world. Over 500 Chinese companies attended the fair, showing their innovative products or technologies in new energy, electric vehicles and intelligent manufacturing. Wen said in his speech that the People's Republic of China has achieved tremendous progress in industrialization since its founding, especially after the introduction of the reform and opening-up policy in the late 1970s. China would continue its market-oriented reforms, remain open to the outside world, promote scientific and technological innovation, and promote industrialization, urbanization and agricultural modernization in a coordinated way, he said. Products made in China are generally still at the mid-low end of the global industrial chain, and have a long way to go to catch up with the advanced levels, said the Chinese leader. China will continue to build an innovation-driven economy, accelerate the shift of growth model and economic restructuring, and endeavor to achieve a transition from "made in China" to "created by China." China will embark on a new path of industrialization, which features high technology, good economic returns, low consumption of resources, low pollution and full exploitation of human resources, Wen said. The international financial crisis has brought huge impacts as well as new opportunities for global industrial development, he said, adding that it is an important mission for the world to overcome the global financial crisis. Wen put forward a three-point proposal in this regard. First, he asked to put more resources to spur the development of the real economy, and create an environment conducive to job creation and the development of the real economy. Second, he urged efforts to vigorously push for innovation-based growth of the global economy.

Third, he asked for openness and cooperation. Wen said the world's economies should reject all forms of protectionism, move faster to improve global economic governance and make it fairer and more equitable. "We should work together to meet global challenges and make the world a better place for us all," he told the audience.

China's industrialization will continue to advance rapidly for a long time to come, creating huge development potentials and business opportunities for both Chinese and foreign companies, the Chinese premier said.—Xinhua

Qantas chief calls for second Sydney airport

SYDNEY, 23 April — Qantas chief Alan Joyce Monday said bottlenecks at Sydney airport were unsustainable and called for a second hub in the city before its global reputation was damaged. Sydney's Kingsford Smith Airport is the main gateway into Australia and Joyce said its capacity limits needed to be fixed. "We cannot afford to wait much longer to make a decision about a second airport for Sydney," he said in an opinion piece for the Sydney Daily Telegraph.

"Aviation is too important, not just to Sydney and New South Wales, but to Australia. This is a national issue that will not go away. It needs to be fixed." Sydney is Qantas's headquarters and Joyce said it was already facing serious problems, with a Boeing 747 often taking up to two hours to be towed from one end of the airport to the other.

He said planes were routinely stuck for 30 minutes circling Sydney due to congestion, while others were unable to take off on time. "With a quarter of Qantas's departures leaving from Sydney, there is no escaping the consequences of bottlenecks at our main airport hub," he said.

The federal government is in favour of a second airport in the city with Infrastructure Minister Anthony Albanese recently saying limitations were already hurting the economy. He said that by 2035 the cost to national GDP of turning away flights would be Aus$6 billion (US$6.2 billion), and nearly six times more by 2060. But New South Wales state Premier Barry O'Farrell is against the idea, insisting Sydney is too urbanised for another hub. He prefers expanding the airport at national capital Canberra and introducing high-speed trains linking it with Sydney, some 280 kilometres (173 miles) away.

Pollution a source of nuisance to Afghans

KABUL, 23 April—"If not exaggerated, I eat about 1 kg dust from dawn to dusk every day and then shut down my shop and go home," a vegetable seller Mohammad Karim said. During his work in a makeshift vegetable market in Afghan capital Kabul, Karim, 28, complains of the polluted environment, saying that he has already got coughing and his throat has got irritation. Like other post war nations, the war-ravaged Afghanistan has been facing numerous challenges including pollution.

Kabul, the capital of the war-torn but under-construction Middle Asian nation, has not been spared, as poor civic amenities, battered streets and pitiable sewerage system have hugely contributed to the pollution there. The volume of pollution in Kabul City where all political, military and diplomatic missions are located and where some 4 million people are said to be living, can be gauged from the fact that a thick ply of cloud-like dust covers the city space almost every day.

"The environment and the air of our cities including Kabul are hugely polluted which is extremely hazardous to our health and even causes ailment and mortality," Ghulam Mohammad Malikyar, the Deputy to Environment Directorate, told Xinhua. He also said that the rate of pollution in the capital City Kabul has reached the alarming level and warned "living in Kabul would be unsafe after five years if the status quo continues." Contrary to developed and developing nations, Afghanistan faces no problem of greenhouse gases, rather the lack of drainage system and the surge of second-hand vehicles that have caused the air pollution.

There is no chemical factory or plant in Afghan cities to produce carbon dioxide or other gases. Moreover, burning tires in public baths, battered roads, congested streets, smoke emitting from vehicles and poor forestation campaign have been contributing to the polluting environment. "Building unplanned houses, dense population and the lack of sewage system would gradually contaminate underground water in Kabul and eventually cause a variety of diseases," Malikyar warned. More than 50 percent of Afghans are said to have no access to potable water. In addition to the government's support for greenery, a Kabul-based non-governmental organization — Green Club, celebrated the International Earth Day (22 April) by holding a number of programmes, calling on Afghans to make effort to keep the environment clean. Like security problems in the militancy-plagued Afghanistan, the high rate of pollution would also hurt people, Abdullah Fahim, advisor to the Afghan Public Health Ministry said.

Workshop on Broadcast Media Regulation held

NAY PYI TAW, 23 April—Jointly conducted by the Ministry of Information and International Media Support (IMS), Workshop on Broadcast Media Regulation was held at Fantastic Hall of Hotel Amara in Nay Pyi Taw Hotel Zone here today.

In his opening address, Deputy Minister for Information U Soe Win stressed the importance of the workshop saying that it was the vital importance for media reforms in Myanmar and was the latest development of the fast advancing TV and radio industry of the country.

According to the deputy minister, Myanmar started radio broadcasting in 1936 and TV broadcasting in 1980. 2004 to date, the State paved the way for private sector participation in the broadcasting industry development drive.

In consequence, the Myanma Radio and TV and Forever Group Co, Ltd jointly launched the MRTV-4 channel in 2004 and in 2010 MRTV in cooperation with Shwe Thanlwin started to air Myanmar International-MI channel. Moreover, 52 pay-TV channels covering international news, sports and movie programs under DVB-T system and 46 DTH system channels have appeared. The Yangon City Development Committee launched its FM radio program in 1997. In 2008 six government-private joint-venture FMs began operations in 14 Regions and States.

TV and radio of Myanmar saw progress in the recent years, and it would gain rapid progress in the coming years, the deputy minister said.

He continued to say that Myanmar promulgated TV and Video Law in 1996 and the country need a law that would go well with the changing situation. The Ministry of Information had studied international and ASEAN laws and had made preparations to draft a Broadcasting Laws and it started to draft the law in 2008, he said. The aim of the workshop was to get suggestions and advice from international experts and domestic private media in addition to knowledge on foreign laws, he said.

He continued to say that the first was the provisions of the law must be as per the provisions of the Constitution, the second was to take into consideration future broadcasting models such as IPTV, Public Service Broadcasting Community Radio apart from existing models in Myanmar, the third was to keep in mind the appropriate percentage of health and education programs, ratio of commercials, the percentage of station-created programs in overcoming the challenges of the country would face in liberalizing the TV and radio media.

Workshop on Broadcast Media Regulation in progress at Fantastic Hall of Hotel Amara in Nay Pyi Taw Hotel Zone.—MNA

The fourth point was to consider whether Myanmar needed to include the Internet which was the new media apart from radio and TV in drafting the law, he said. The final point was to consider whether the country needed an organization for development of TV and radio media that would emerge according to the law, observance of the media ethics and facilitation of technical and technical development, he said.

He quoted the speech of President U Thein Sein in his address to the Union Government on 31 March 2011, saying that the president made it clear that new laws and rules should not be an obstacle to the fundamental rights of citizens; instead, they should serve as a check and balance for correctly exercising the fundamental rights of citizens without harming the interest of the Union and human society. Accordingly, he suggested not to draft the new broadcasting law with the intention of banning or hampering the press freedom and the new law should be to facilitate the correct use of press freedom for long-term progress of Myanmar media world without damaging the interest of human society.

Afterwards, Mr Ranga Kalansooriya of International Media Support (IMS) extended greetings and Mr Toby Mendel and Deputy Director-General of Myanmar Radio and Television U Tin Wan discussed the subject entitled "International Standards and Main Issue for Myanmar."

Summer break

Than Daing Kaung (Meiktila)

"There is a real disadvantage in not being a teenager during Thingyan. If you don't happen to be preoccupied with hair-dyeing or biking with deafening noise the town doesn't want to know you. As far as it's concerned, you cease to exist a few years after you hit sixty". There are the first words I hear as I drop into a downtown teashop. It is a place of money-fevered traders where the rhythm of life even just after Thingyan doesn't seem slow. I amble over there with the intention to relax in a friendly camaraderie. Sitting at a corner table are my two garrulous friends chattering about time which appears as transient as Padauk (Pterocarpus macrocarpus) blossoms.

In ancient times people gave names to the group of stars which were in a belt in the sky called the Zodiacs. 'Tagu' the first month in Myanmar calendar coincides with 'meitha'—Aries: the first sign of the Zodiac. Padauk blossoms symbolize both 'Tagu' and Thingyan when Myanmar New Year is ushered in leaving behind the old year.

As for me each year, new or old, brings with it a lasting gift to the fullness of experience to be treasured up, savored and remembered. They need not be startling, these gifts of years, they may be things that may be within everyone's reach.

Last year I worked as a teacher at a village school ten miles to the east of Meiktila. And every chance I got I joined a family working their land near the school. As we went home from a day's hard work in their vineyards, the old farmer whose name is U Thein Tun used to say to me, "We can't buy time, we have to make the best use we can of each moment." His working philosophy did amount to something. He could buy a house in the town.

On the last day of Thingyan down in town so many of out-of-control breakers were pouring in that the policemen had to come up with a regulation of law. However, the blowout at the central Pandol from around the country turned into a street party and revelled until a bus carrying 'Group of Mothers' arrived.

This year Meiktila Thingyan's most touching moment was when the efforts of 'Group of Mothers' have taken to our town to entertain at the Central Pandol. The full force of cheering applause erupted into the 4th Thingyan night sky as soon as Daw Nwe Nwe San and her eight colleagues hit the stage and took full fifteen minutes giving the audience a very rare chance to watch their suave dance. If you want to find deep meanings under their surfaces, feel free. After sitting through their performance, most anything will look profound this experience will remain cherished through my lifetime.

When I got up from my seat to go home, a strong arm gripped my hand and took me to a teashop on the other side of the street.

"I'm so glad to see you U Thein Tun, when did you come from the vineyard!"

"From the first day of Thingyan I like and value the Water Festival very much. It has been a source of enrichment for the respect of traditional culture," he said.

Then some revellers came to our table and danced around us.

"This merry-making, my son a policeman says, is just summer break." U Thein Tun said "It'll go away." Until next year.

Amyotha Hluttaw session continues ...

Regarding the question of Dr Tin Shwe from Yangon Region Constituency No (6) about whether the factories under the Industry Ministry would manufacture such consumer goods which were previously sold by former Ministry of Industry (1) and sold at Win Thuzar shops, and the current condition of domestic automobile production following old cars swap scheme and issuance of permits to purchase automobiles for abroad while industrial zones were manufacturing automobiles for Myanmar industrial development, the deputy minister replied that there were a total of 78 Win Thuzar shops in Yangon and other towns. In the time of the incumbent government, the number was decreased to 62, of which 13 were rented to the private businessmen on a yearly basis.

Measures would be taken to let them sell only necessities based on market demand and consumer products like toothpaste and foodstuffs would be sold by the private businessmen. Especially, pharmaceuticals called for systematic storage to ensure consumer safety so that pharmaceutical products would be sold systematically in only some Win Thuzar shops.

In the market economy, the market sets the price and thus there was no plan to sell such consumer products at a loss. The remaining Win Thuzar shops would be kept on opening so as to make sure people have easy access to essential consumer products.

Regarding the second question, Automobile, Motorcycle manufacturing Development Subcommittee under the Industrial Development Committee allowed manufacturing of light trucks, buses, 20-ton trucks and dumper trucks.

It was allowed for manufacturing of multi-purpose vehicles in the past, however, industrial zones could not actually manufacture and pretended to be locally manufacturing importing illegally from abroad. So, it was no longer allowed to produce such vehicles. Now, the domestic automobile makers could manufacture 1-ton and 2-ton light trucks well and those home-made light trucks were found to be contributing much to domestic passenger and commodity transportation.

After issuance of permits to purchase vehicles from abroad, automobiles most imported from abroad were found to be passenger cars. Domestic automobile makers were not allowed to manufacture such cars. The swap scheme had decreased the prices of all kinds of vehicles in local automobile market, but the decline was reasonable one decreasing from rocket high prices.

Even under the current market price of automobiles, domestic automobile makers were still seeking permits to manufacture already-permitted vehicles, so there were still no desired results. So, it could be concluded that the swap scheme had produced less impacts on domestic automobile market.

Next, Deputy Minister for Communications, Posts and Telegraphs U Tint Lwin replied to questions of two MPs.

Regarding the question of Dr Myat Nyanna Soe from Yangon Region Constituency (4) about the government's possible assistance for K 5000-SIM card programme presented by a businessman, whether the government could bring down the high-priced internet charges and plans for speedy internet connection, the deputy minister replied that the Ministry of Communications, Posts and Telegraphs, had been bringing down initial installation charges to ensure the public had access to telecommunication services of international class step by step. In addition, it would extend its mobile phone services to rural regions meeting international norms and the installation charges would be reduced step by step to be level with those of neighbouring countries.

Telecommunications infrastructure for the first year of the mobile phone project took time costing huge amount of cash for initial installation. But in the coming years of the project, the cash capital would be decreased as it only needed to extend the infrastructure on a regular basis. So, phone charges could be reduced to be level with international countries.

The Ministry would work in partnership with communication services companies with experience in international communication sector, strong investment power and advanced technology. There is a lot of local and foreign companies wishing to invest in communication sector. The ministry was holding discussions with some international companies. They said that they can acquire capital, technology and equipment in short period but the classy infrastructural construction would take over one year. Thus, the ministry was committed to seek ways and means to level down the phone charges.

Regarding the second question, the high cost of initial installation, in comparison with neighbours, resulted from costly internet infrastructure. The monthly internet service charge was lesser or level to some countries. Initial installation charges were brought down to half and an increase in number of internet users would lead to decline in initial installation charges, covering the network construction costs. Regarding the slow internet connection, experts from National Computer System (NCS) Co Ltd and Loxley Co Ltd for Thailand were invited to Myanmar for two times in November, and December, 2011 to search out the defects from core network of the two ISP in commission to end users, in the ministry's efforts to upgrade the internet network.

According to the suggestion of those experts, the minister was coordinating with foreign companies concerned to extend such connection links as SEA-ME-WE-4 and SEA-ME-WE-5 in addition to old SEAN-ME-WE-3 link, inland fiber links, further installation of ISP Oversea POP each in data centres in Singapore and Hong Kong. In addition, the volume of internet bandwidth would be extended to 14Gb. In near future, pay-as-you-download system would be introduced in WiMax system, which was hoped to bring down the net surfing charges.

Furthermore, according to the discussions at the 11th ASEAN Telecommunication Information and Information Technology Ministers Meeting hosted by Myanmar in December, 2011, the ministry was preparing to hold National ICT Forum in June 2011 to discuss how to increase ICT application inviting local and foreign experts as part of implementing 2nd ICT Master Plan (2010-2015). The suggestions and discussions of the forum would hopefully bring down the charges, making the connection speedier.

Regarding the question of U Than Myint from Taninthayi Region Constituency (11) about when approximately the reinstallation of collapsed CDMA phone tower in Taninthayi Township would complete, the deputy minister replied that 32-meter-long tower at 1987 microwave station was damaged due to strong wind and reconstruction of tower foundation was started in January completed in the second week of February. Transmission equipment was then installed and finished on 25 March and now the communication was better, said the deputy minister.

Next, Secretary of Bill Committee U San Tun submitted the import, export bill amended by Pyithu Hluttaw, along with the report of the committee to Amyotha Hluttaw for its consideration. Next, the Amyotha Hluttaw Speaker informed the bill amending the 1955 Government House (Expelling) Act, foreign investment bill and social security bill amended and sent back by the Pyithu Hluttaw to the MPs and announced that any MPs wishing to discuss the amendments may register.

U Maung Aye Tun of Rakhine State Constituency (9) proposed that the government should amend the punishments of criminal law articles 417, 426 and 427, which was approved by the Hluttaw for discussion.

U Myo Myint of Mandalay region Constituency (6) urged the government to hire local and international experts and high-level work supervision committee so as to compile reports on economic and engineering development of Myanmar, which was approved by the Hluttaw for discussion. It then announced that MPs wishing to discuss the proposals were to register.

The meeting was adjourned at 12.5 pm and the 20th day third regular session of First Amyotha Hluttaw would be held at 1 pm tomorrow and the 17th day third regular session of the First Pyidaungsu Hluttaw would be held at 10 am tomorrow.

Over 1000 feet deep tube-well successfully sunk in Taungdwingyi

NAY PYI TAW, 23 April—Taungdwingyi Township of Magway District is shortage of water as it is a hot and dry area of central Myanmar. In the region, it is not easy to sink tubewell in under 1000 feet deep to take water and difficulty to sink the well into above 1000 feet deep.

To be able to solve the problem, over 1000 feet deep tube-well has been sunk with the use of pebble in ancient Beikthano region of Taungdwingyi Township and it supplies potable water to the local people.

Underground water branch of Water Resources Utilization Department sank one four-inch diameter tube-well in the precinct of Dhamma Meikhsat Monastery in Beikthano ancient cultural region of the township in May 2011. The tube-well pumps out 2500 gallons of water per hour and stores 35 feet deep of water. The tubewell is 1180 feet deep. According to the chemical test, the quality of water can be used as drinking water.

With the assistance of the Water Resources Utilization Department, two more tube-wells have been

Fifteen killed in northern Mexican bar shootout

CIUDAD JUAREZ, 23 April — Fifteen people were killed and at least one seriously wounded in a suspected drug-related shootout on Friday in a bar in northern Mexico, a region that has been brutalized by fighting between criminal gangs. On Friday night, armed men entered the bar in Chihuahua, capital of Chihuahua state, and opened fire on various people inside suspected of involvement in drug dealing, the local attorney general's office said in a statement on Saturday.

A local press association said two men killed in the attack were journalists, adding to the tally of media casualties from Mexico's rampant gang violence. The attorney general's office also said two other people were shot dead in a separate bar attack in the city, bringing Friday's death toll to 17. Since 2008, Chihuahua, and in particular the city of Ciudad Juarez on the border with Texas, has been the area worst hit by bloody turf wars between drug cartels during the crackdown on gangs launched by President Felipe Calderon.

The gang violence and clashes with security forces have killed more than 50,000 people in Mexico in the past five years. However, the number of murders had eased somewhat in Chihuahua over the past year, with some counts suggesting the more easterly border state of Nuevo Leon had suffered more violence in the first months of 2012.—MNA/Reuters

Abducted Spanish doctor freed in Nigeria

ABUJA, 23 April — A Spanish doctor kidnapped in Nigeria's southeastern city of Enugu on 4 April has been freed and is in good health, his country's foreign ministry and Nigerian police said on Saturday. Jose Manuel Machimbarrena Corcuera "was freed on Friday," a ministry spokesman told AFP, adding: "He is tired but in good health." The spokesman said he did not have any details of the circumstances in which the hostage was freed. "We do not know if he is going to stay in Nigeria or return to Spain," he added.

He said the man had been seized for ransom, citing Spanish Foreign Minister Jose Manuel Garcia-Margallo, who had said the "organisation that he belongs to wants the utmost discretion." Spanish media reports said the 58-year-old doctor works for a clinic belonging to a foundation financially supported by Catholic institution Opus Dei in Nigeria. Nigerian police said the hostage was released Friday in Enugu.

"Since his abduction, there has been a serious manhunt by police in collaboration with other sister security agencies which kept the entire atmosphere uncomfortable and consequently he was let go by his captors," Enugu police spokesman Ebere Amaraizu told AFP. He did not say if a ransom was paid. Scores of kidnappings for ransom have occurred in southern Nigeria, particularly in the oil-producing Niger Delta region, by armed gangs seeking cash. Most victims have been released unharmed following ransom payments.

An insurgency by Islamist group Boko Haram, which is concentrated mainly in northern Nigeria, has left more than 1,000 people dead since mid-2009. Authorities blamed the recent deaths of a British and an Italian hostage in Nigeria's north on a faction of Boko Haram. A German engineer was also kidnapped on the outskirts of the northern city of Kano in January. The group has not been known to operate in the south of Nigeria, Africa's most populous nation and largest oil producer.

Russian eats pound of caviar in 90 seconds

MOSCOW, 23 April — A 49-year old Russian with a big spoon in hand swallowed a pound (500 grams) of caviar in about 90 seconds to win what was billed as the world's first eating contest featuring the pricey fish roe. "In Texas, people organise hot dog and hamburger eating championships and contests," the swanky Apartment restaurant said in a press release for the event.

"In Moscow, people eat black caviar instead," it said. The contestants were drawn from 12 winners of a lottery who were each handed a bowl of caviar lined up on a lacquered table while a man in black tie played lounge music on a white grand piano.

Muscovite Alexander Lavrov did not disclose his profession after swallowing about $5,000 worth of the stuff in a minute and 26 seconds and then raising his arms up to applause. The Moscow River embankment house said it spent around two million rubles ($70,000) on the promotional event.— Internet

UK firm's 1,300 staff accidentally given marching orders

LONDON, 23 April — Workers at investment firm Aviva Investors got a shock on Friday when the company accidentally sent an email with leaving instructions intended for one departing employee to the entire worldwide staff of 1,300 people. The firm's human resources department realized its mistake and recalled the offending message 25 minutes later and soon afterwards sent out another email apologizing to staff for the error, company spokesman Paul Lockstone said.

"An email which was intended for a member of staff who was leaving today was accidentally sent to all Aviva Investors staff worldwide," Lockstone said. "People were pretty quickly aware of the fact that this was a mistake ... I don't believe any of our staff would have seen it really as anything other than the mistake that it was."

The email was a standard message sent to people leaving the company, covering things such as handing back company equipment and confidentiality rules, and did not tell recipients they were fired, Lockstone said. Aviva Investors is the fund management arm of UK-based Aviva plc, the world's sixth-largest insurance group, and manages assets of more than 262 billion pounds ($420 billion). It said in January it would shed around 160 jobs, about 12 percent of its global workforce. Lockstone said he did not know why the intended recipient of the email was leaving the company.— Reuters

Financier German Gorbuntsov, 45, was shot five times as he entered a block of flats where he lives near the River Thames in the east of the capital on 20 March. He survived the attack, but was critically injured and is recovering in hospital where his condition was described as stable.

Germany sends grenades in potato shipment

Two World War II-era hand grenades were discovered in a shipment of potatoes from Germany being unloaded at a Greek processing plant, police said. Greek police say they've launched a preliminary investigation into Thursday's incident at the Atalanti factory where the first rusty grenade, minus its detonator, was found by workers who heard a unique sound during the potatoes' pre-wash stage, the Athens-Macedonian News Agency reported.

After workers on the night shift discovered a second grenade in the same shipment the plant was shut down and police were called. Bomb-disposal experts arrived Friday to neutralize the weapons, the news agency said.

Every bride's dream, a toilet paper gown

The call is out in the United States and Canada for anyone who can create a wedding gown from toilet paper, and contest organizers say first prize is $2,012.

The eighth annual "Toilet Paper Wedding Gown Contest," sponsored by Charmin, Procter & Gamble's toilet tissue division, and a Florida-based Web site devoted to "cheap chic" weddings, was announced Thursday.

Contestants, who must be 18 or older, are to make a wedding dress of Charmin toilet paper and then submit photographs of the creation. The only other materials allowed are tape, glue and thread. The organizers pointed out, in a statement, that the competition is directed to those for whom "saving money on weddings is more than a hobby and a little less than an obsession."

Hen has chick without laying egg

A hen in Sri Lanka gave birth to a chick without an egg, veterinary officials said. Instead of being laid by the hen and incubated in the nest, the egg was incubated inside the hen for 21 days and then the chick hatched inside the mother. The chick is normally formed and healthy, veterinarians say, although the mother hen died.

The government veterinary officer in the area, PR Yapa, said he had never seen anything like it before, the BBC reported. An examination of the hen's carcass showed the fertilized egg had developed within the hen's reproductive system but stayed inside the hen's body until it hatched, Yapa said.

The examination showed the hen died of internal wounds. The story has made headlines in Sri Lanka, the BBC said, with one Sri Lankan newspaper carrying the headline: "The chicken came first; not the egg."

Quick close for 'King's Speech' play

Although Seidler wrote the play before the movie, it was not staged until more than two years after the film was released in theaters.

Azarenka, Sharapova lead charge in Stuttgart

World number one Victoria Azarenka

STUTTGART, 23 April — World number one Victoria Azarenka, second-ranked Maria Sharapova and number three Petra Kvitova begin their French Open build-up on Monday at the star-studded $740,000 Stuttgart tournament. Belarusian Azarenka, the Australian Open champion, returns to action for the first time since losing her 26-match winning streak to Marion Bartoli in the quarter-finals of the Miami hardcourt event. That loss came after a breathtaking start to 2012 in which the 22-year-old had captured four titles, including her first Grand Slam crown.

Sharapova, who turned 25 on Thursday, was beaten by Azarenka in the Melbourne final and in the Indian Wells title match before losing in the Miami final. The Russian star, who has yet to make the final of the French Open, falling in the semi-finals twice, believes she has developed a better understanding of claycourt tennis as her career has progressed. "I feel like I've improved with every year that I have been playing on it and I enjoy it," she said. "I feel like you learn so much about the construction of the points and the games — such a cat-and-mouse game. I didn't necessarily like that many years back, but I feel like I'm much better at it and I have improved physically as well."

After local favourite Julia Goerges won the 2011 Stuttgart title, world number 11 Andrea Petkovic is the top-ranked German for this week's tournament. China's Li Na, eighth in the world, Australia's Samantha Stosur, fifth, and former world number one Caroline Wozniacki of Denmark are all part of the powerful line-up. With Germany desperate for new star since Steffi Graf dominated women's tennis in the 1990s, Petkovic is leading Germany's tennis revolution. She reached the last eight at the Australian Open in 2011, the first German to reach a Grand Slam quarter-final since 2006.

The 24-year-old followed that up by reaching the quarters of the French and US Opens, the only player all year to make the final eight at three of the four Slams. Having started 2011 ranked 32nd in the world, she reached a high of ninth in December and is back playing after a back injury robbed her of three months of tennis since injury struck in January. Goerges followed Petkovic in the German revival by overpowering Wozniacki in the final here last year with huge serves and groundstrokes on her way to collecting her first Premier title. "I had goosebumps at match point," Goerges said of the Stuttgart final. "It was an unbelievable feeling playing the final with so many people watching." — Internet with a flourish for a level-par 72 and nine-under 279 total at TPC San Antonio.

"I don't know how I did it," Curtis said in a greenside TV interview, choking back tears. "Somehow these last couple of years, just fighting through it, and stay positive. That's all you can do." His fellow-Americans Matt Every (71) and 21-year-old John Huh (69) tied for second at 281 though the outcome was in doubt to the end as they trailed by one stroke heading to the 18th. For the 34-year-old Curtis, who entered the tournament ranked 285th in the world after struggling the last couple of seasons, it was his fourth PGA victory but first since the 2006 Booz Allen Classic. Curtis failed to register a single top-10 finish last year and was playing in just his fourth tournament of the year due to a limited status on the tour. "The last couple of years I felt like I was so close to playing so many good tournaments and just ended up missing the cut by one or having a bad round here or there, and just haven't putted well," Curtis told reporters. "Finally this week, every part of the game together."

Juve take control as Milan slip up again

victory over Roma on Sunday as AC Milan slipped up again in a 1-1 draw at home to Bologna. It was Juve's sixth win in a row and opened up a three-point lead at the top with five games left.

They also have a better head-to-head record than the rossoneri meaning Milan need to make up four points to hold onto their scudetto crown. Juve coach Antonio Conte said he doesn't even want to think about what Milan are doing. "We have to look after our own affairs, we're ahead now and we're masters of our own destiny," he said.

"It's useless looking at the others and we'll keep going this way to the end."

Milan coach says nothing is decided yet

ROME, 23 April — AC Milan head coach Massimiliano Allegri refused to shelve his side's Serie A title dreams after they were held to a 1-1 draw by Bologna at home on Sunday. The Rossoneri were a point behind Serie A leaders Juventus going into the weekend and are now on level terms after scraping a stoppage-time 1-1 draw with Bologna.

"We had to get the points this afternoon," admitted Allegri. "In the second half the team believed and created many chances. Unfortunately we were unable to win." "If Juventus win tonight against Roma, then they have a great chance of winning the Scudetto. If they do not, then it's all the same as it was before. "Do Milan deserve the title? If we finish above Juve, then yes. If Juventus finish the season in front then they'll deserve it, but nothing is decided yet."

"Don't forget not even second place is mathematically secure either. Now we have to win the next game," he added. Juventus took control of the Serie A title race with a 4-0 victory over Roma. It was Juve's sixth win in a row and opened up a three-point lead at the top with five games left.

PSG run riot as Lyon keep top-three dream alive

PARIS, 23 April — Paris Saint-Germain closed to within two points of Ligue 1 leaders Montpellier by overwhelming second-bottom Sochaux 6-1 at a sun-splashed Parc des Princes on Sunday. Goals from Thiago Motta and Jeremy Menez put PSG 3-1 up at half-time, after Modibo Maiga had cancelled out Javier Pastore's opener for the hosts.

Nene claimed a second-half brace before substitute Sylvain Armand got on the score-sheet in injury time as Paris recorded their most emphatic win of the season. "We completely changed our attitude, and this was the right one," said PSG coach Carlo

Anelotti, who had criticised his players after their 1-1 draw at Auxerre. "We looked after the ball very well and we created lots of chances."

Lyon sustained their faint hopes of playing in next season's Champions League by fighting back from two goals down to beat Lorient 3-2 at Stade Gerland, allowing them to return to within six points of third-placed Lille. "I was worried at 2-0, but I told the players at half-time that there was a chance to come back," said Lyon coach Remi Garde, whose side meet third-tier Quevilly in the French Cup final next Saturday.

Valencia, Atletico, Bilbao win before Europa semis

VALENCIA, 23 April — Atletico Madrid and Athletic Bilbao all collected wins in La Liga on Sunday, providing crucial boosts ahead of their Europa League semi-finals involvement on Thursday. Third-placed Valencia beat nine-man Real Betis 4-0 at home with goals from Jonas Gonzalves, Sofiane Feghouli, Roberto Soldado and Pablo Piatti to stay on track for a Champions League place next season. Valencia are now six points ahead of city rivals Levante in fifth place and with only four games left are close to assuring Champions League qualification for next season. The result also means Valencia will go into the second-leg of their Europa League semi-final at home to Atletico in good spirits as they look to turn around a 4-2 deficit.

The win puts Atletico into seventh position, three points behind Malaga, who currently hold a Champions League place, and level on points with Athletic Bilbao in sixth who beat Racing Santander 1-0. Gaizka Toquero got the first-half goal for Bilbao that almost certainly condemns Racing Santander to relegation. Athletic, who trail Sporting Lisbon 2-1 ahead of their Europa League semi-final second leg in Spain on Thursday, are currently in a position that qualifies them for that competition again next season.

Racing are rock-bottom of La Liga, and with only four games left they are 11 points from safety and very close to losing their place in Spain's top flight that they have held since the 2000-01 season. Real Sociedad and Villarreal shared the points in a 1-1 draw that almost guarantees safety for both clubs. On Saturday a Cristiano Ronaldo winner gave Real Madrid a 2-1 victory in Barcelona that gives 'los blancos' a seven-point advantage over Barca at the top of La Liga and edges them closer to their first title triumph in four seasons. — Internet

Van Persie named PFA player of year

LONDON, 23 April—Arsenal striker Robin van Persie was named the English Professional Footballers' Association (PFA) player of the year on Sunday after scoring 27 league goals to revive his club's season.

The Dutch international, 28, tops the Premier League scoring charts and Arsenal's third spot with three matches to go after a poor start to the campaign is in large part down to his stunning contribution.

"If other people are saying it, it is special, but it is even more special if your opponents are saying it," the skilful Van Persie told a gala in London.

"If they make up their minds that I'm the best player it is a big honour."

Without their captain, Arsenal could be languishing in mid-table and fans will shudder at the thought of who would score their goals if injury struck or he was tempted away in the search of trophies. The London side have won just the 2005 FA Cup since he joined from Feyenoord in 2004.

Van Persie is the third Dutchman to win the award after Dennis Bergkamp (1997-98) and Ruud van Nistelrooy (2001-02). He was the first Arsenal player to claim it since Thierry Henry in 2004.

The PFA's Premier League team of the year was as follows:

- Joe Hart (Manchester City);
- Kyle Walker (Tottenham Hotspur),
- Vincent Kompany (City),
- Fabrizio Colocini (Newcastle United),
- Leighton Baines (Everton);
- David Silva (City),
- Yaya Toure (City),
- Scott Parker (Tottenham),
- Gareth Bale (Tottenham);
- Robin van Persie (Arsenal),
- Wayne Rooney (Manchester United).—Reuters

"I did a lot of research and not just with cars, old and new, but boats, planes, movie stars, different locations," she said.

"It would be hard to pinpoint exactly where the inspiration came from. It's just what I like, that's the bottom line. I don't try to be too technical about it ... It's what feels real to me."

The special edition "Evoque" features exclusive, hand-finished matt paint, the first for a Land Rover-type vehicle.

The vehicle also has rose gold accents on the grille and gloss black forged alloy wheels. Inside, the four-seat coupe includes vintage-inspired leather seats, rose gold-plated accents and features trimmings of black lacquer, textured aluminum and mohair.

In addition, the vehicle has bespoke luxury accessories, such as a four-piece leather luggage set and a hand-sewn leather wallet for the owner's manual signed by (Victoria) Beckham.

The special edition "Evoque" costs 80,000 pounds ($129,000), twice the cost of a regular model. Only 200 will be made, the first of which will be rolled out in China as early as October.

Beckham has begun to make a name for herself as a designer, and in 2011 picked up a British Fashion Award.

Victoria Beckham turns designer hand to cars

BEIJING, 23 April—British fashion designer Victoria Beckham had her soccer-superstar husband "David in mind" when helping create a new special edition of Range Rover's off-road vehicle, the "Evoque".

"I've stayed very true to myself. I've designed a car that I want to drive, a car that I think David wants to drive," the former Spice Girl told Reuters in an interview in Beijing, where she was promoting the vehicle, late on Sunday.

"I think that though women will drive this car, it has a masculine edge. I think it's very cool," she added.

Beckham, who admitted she had never done a project like this before, said she had learned "an enormous amount."

"And the bottom line is, would I drive this car, like when I'm designing a dress, would I wear this dress? I love what I do. I consider myself so blessed to do a job that I love and this has been a great experience for me," said Beckham, wearing a sleeveless striped dress from her own collection.

She said she searched for inspiration in many places.

Chelsea's Ivorian forward Didier Drogba

Drogba no cheat, says Pique

BARCELONA, 23 April—Barcelona defender Gerard Pique leapt to the defence of Chelsea striker Didier Drogba here Monday, denying the Ivorian had "cheated" during last week's Champions League semi-final clash.

Drogba's conduct during Chelsea's 1-0 win at Stamford Bridge has attracted a storm of criticism in England, with the 34-year-old accused of repeatedly feigning injury to disrupt Barcelona's rhythm.

However the two-time former African Footballer of the Year received staunch support from centre-half Pique here Monday, who said he had no doubts about the Ivorian's integrity. "Every time a player goes down and complains I believe he has been hurt," Pique said. "I trust the player every time he goes down. I don't think he's been criticised. I believe in Drogba, I believe in his honesty."

"I think every time he goes down it's because he's in pain or he felt a kick. I don't think that Drogba is trying to act or dive. I don't think so. Because he's not like that."

Pique, who did not play in the first leg and also missed Barcelona's 'Clasico' defeat to Real Madrid on Saturday, meanwhile said he was confident the Spaniards could overturn their first leg deficit. "We have to play our game and play 90 minutes with the ball. We will have our chances. I don't know if we will score or not but we will have to work hard to find the chances," he said.

"If we have 70 per cent possession like we've had in the last few days and years I think we will have opportunities to get to the final. It's hard to play against Chelsea because they are strong, really competitive, they know how to play these games because they have a lot of experience."—Internet
