NAY PYI TAW, 27 May—Shwesangyoung Bridge lies on Milepost No. 344/1 of Pathein-Monywa road section in Seikpyu Township, Pakokku District, Magway Region. It is of bole pier foundation with RC lower frame and steel beam on upper structure. The 900 feet long bridge is facilitated with 24 feet wide motorway flanked by 3 feet and 6 inches wide pedestrian lanes on either side. It can withstand 60 tons of loads.

Shwesangyoung Bridge was built with the aim of overcoming transport difficulties in monsoon in the region since vehicles to cross Shwesangyoung Creek had to wait two or three days near the creek when it was raining incessantly.

PERSPECTIVES

Be happy and satisfied with what you have

Positive thoughts attract good luck and positive feeling function the same. This rule is widely acknowledged in the teachings of nearly all philosophies and religions. It is one of the most important rules of how to be lucky, meaning that ignoring it leads to despair or failure, and even committing suicide.

Be happy and satisfied with what you have in life, no matter what it is worth compared to other people. The more you appreciate what you already have, the more will come to you. This rule is virtually important, but at the same time also one of the least understood and most ignored rules of luck and success. Even the least lucky person can promptly achieve success if only they acknowledge this rule and always implement it.

You can be the luckiest man in the world now if only you are happy and satisfied with what you have and enjoy every moment. Be grateful for what you have now and you will be luckier than most of people worldwide. Happiness in leading one's life might not depend on your ability to create the desired result or outcome. Failure teaches human beings many things while success is also coveted.

There will always be some people who are richer, more successful, better looking, have a bigger house or a nicer car. But that doesn't matter. Be grateful for every tiny thing you have. When you think about it, what criteria do you use to judge how one person is luckier than another?

The answer is not what you can see, hear or feel. It is all about the individual mindset of each person. How thankful are they for their every moment in life?

If only you appreciate your life now, you are the luckiest person in the world.

Shock over arrest in NYC boy's '79 disappearance

NEW YORK, 27 May — When police dug up a Manhattan basement last month in a fruitless search for the remains of Etan Patz, a 6-year-old boy who disappeared in 1979, Lucy Suarez saw the news on TV and wished that the family of the missing child would finally get some peace. "My sister and I prayed about it. We prayed and we said, 'Let justice be done,'" Suarez said. "Never did we think it was going to be done with our family." On Friday, her older brother was charged with Etan's murder.

Police said Pedro Hernandez, a 51-year-old, churchgoing father described by some friends as quiet and timid, had given an emotional confession earlier in the week to luring the little boy away from his school bus stop with a promise of a soft drink, and then strangling him in the basement of a convenience store where he had been working as a stock clerk. The admission surprised investigators, who had been confounded by the disappearance for three decades and never considered Hernandez a suspect until this month. Just weeks ago, they had focused their attention on another man, and even ripped up a basement he had once used as a workshop in the hope of finding clues. Suarez said her family is reeling, too, despite having had concerns for years that her brother had once done something bad to a child. Hernandez, now living in Maple Shade, NJ, was 18 when Etan vanished. When he moved to New Jersey not long after the disappearance, he said something to relatives about having hurt a child back in New York. Suarez said her brother never spoke to her directly about what had happened, and the family's knowledge of the incident was vague.— Internet

India testfires Akash missile

NEW DELHI, 27 May—India Saturday successfully testfired its home-made surface-to-air missile Akash from Chandipur in the eastern state of Odisha, sources said. This comes two days after the country successfully testfired a similar Akash missile from the same place.

“The latest testfiring took place at 11:15 am from the integrated firing range at Chandipur. The testfiring has been successful and the missile intercepted an unmanned aircraft over the Bay of Bengal,” the sources said. UNHCR says over 9,000 Somalis displaced near Mogadishu

NAIROBI, 27 May—The UN refugee agency said at least 9,200 Somalis have been displaced in the past three days by the ongoing military activity between insurgents and allied forces in Afgooye, about 30 kilometres northwest of Mogadishu. Afgooye has for a long time been a stronghold of Al-Shabaab insurgents and is a strategic junction for routes to the north, west and south of Somalia.

“Since 22 May to date the UNHCR Somalia Population Movement Tracking (PMT) system has recorded 9,200 displacements from Afgooye due to military activity in the area,” the UN agency said in its update released in Nairobi on Saturday. UNHCR said the majority of these people have fled to Mogadishu with some to Lower Shabelle and Lower Juba regions, adding that there is no indication of any people arriving in Bay region.

In the so-called Operation Free Shabelle, Africa Union peacekeeping mission in Somalia (AMISOM) said that its forces, and those of the Somali National Army, crossed the Shabelle River on Friday and secured all the major roads leading into and out of Afgooye town. Leaders of the al-Qaeda-affiliated terror group are believed to have fled the town, which was their main base in the region and where they were known to have been extorting revenues from farmers, traders and pastoralists.

Iranian envoy criticizes Western media for politicizing technical issue in IAEA report

TEHERAN, 27 May—Iran’s Ambassador to the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) Ali-Asghar Soltanieh criticized Western media “attempts to politicize a normal technical issue” in the latest IAEA report on Teheran’s “nuclear energy programme,” Iran’s Press TV reported on Saturday. According to a report obtained by media on Friday, the IAEA said in its latest report on Iranian nuclear issue that its inspectors have detected traces of up to 27-percent-purity enriched uranium in the country’s Fordow nuclear fuel enrichment plant. According to the report, Iran indicated that the production of such particles “above the target value” may happen for technical reasons beyond the operator’s control.

“The results of analysis of environmental samples taken at FFEP (the Fordow site) on 15 Feb showed the presence of particles with enrichment levels of up to 27 percent U-235,” IAEA Director General Yukiya Amano said on Friday in the quarterly restricted report prepared for the agency’s boarding meeting scheduled for early next month. The report said the Vienna-based UN nuclear watchdog is assessing Iran’s explanation and has requested further details. The agency has also taken further environmental samples from the same location where the particles in question have been found and is analyzing the samples.

The Fordow nuclear plant has been built for producing up to 20 percent enriched uranium. The start of the nuclear work at the site has increased international concerns as the West suspects that Iran’s uranium enrichment might be aimed at moving closer to the ability to make nuclear weapons.—Xinhua

Expert says Iran has enough uranium for five bombs

VIENNA, 27 May—Iran has significantly stepped up its output of low-enriched uranium and total production in the last five years would be enough for at least five nuclear weapons if refined much further, a US security institute said. The Institute for Science and International Security (ISIS), a think-tank which tracks Iran’s nuclear programme closely, based the analysis on data in the latest report by the UN International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) which was issued on Friday.

Progress in Iran’s nuclear activities is closely watched by the West and Israel as it could determine how long it could take Teheran to build atomic bombs, if it decided to do so. Iran denies any plan to and says its aims are entirely peaceful. During talks in Baghdad this week, six world powers failed to convince Iran to scale back its uranium enrichment programme. They will meet again in Moscow next month to try to defuse a decade-old standoff that has raised fears of a new war in the Middle East that could disrupt oil supplies.

Friday’s report by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), a Vienna-based UN body, showed Iran was pressing ahead with its uranium enrichment work in defiance of UN resolutions calling on it to suspend the activity. It said Iran had produced almost 6.2 tons of uranium enriched to a level of 3.5 percent since it began the work in 2007 — some of which has subsequently been further processed into higher-grade material.—Reuters

Medvedev succeeds Putin as leader of Russia’s ruling party

MOSCOW, 27 May—Russian Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev on Saturday succeeded President Vladimir Putin as leader of the ruling United Russia party. Medvedev’s appointment was overwhelmingly approved at the party’s congress here by a show of hands. Accepting the post, Medvedev vowed to improve the United Russia and lead the party to more victories. On the next parliamentary elections due in 2016, Medvedev stressed that the United Russia “must be at the top again and win a parliamentary majority.” If the party wins the parliamentary elections, State Duma speaker candidates could be selected on a competitive basis, Medvedev said.

“In the future parliamentary election, the United Russia will again try to win the support of the majority of citizens. And if we fulfill this task, and I don’t doubt we will, it would be right to consider the issue of our candidates to the leadership in the State Duma, in particular the post of Duma chairman, in a democratic, open way, and on an alternative basis,” the new party leader said. Besides, Medvedev said that it is necessary to reform the ways of electing party leaders at all levels, set a single five-year term of office for party leaders at all levels, and introduce the principles of annual performance reporting and annual rotation.

World War Two battleship USS Iowa sets off on final voyage

RICHMOND, 27 May—The battleship USS Iowa, which served the United States through victory and tragedy during six decades at sea, set off on its final voyage on Saturday, a trip to Los Angeles to become a museum. With a cheer, volunteers in hard hats cast off the last of a dozen thick lines that had moored the 175-foot-tall gray dreadnought in the Port of Richmond. Then it slipped slowly into the San Francisco Bay, towering over the three tugboats that pulled it.

Throngs of onlookers gathered as the ship sailed under the Golden Gate Bridge. It was a sentimental send-off for the Iowa, which saw service in the US Navy conflicts around the world before being decommissioned in 1990 and sold to the nonprofit Pacific Battleship Centre in May 2010. The Los Angeles Harbour Commission voted unanimously on 17 May to create a permanent home for the ship at the city’s port, where it will drop its gangplank to the public on 7 July.

As the Iowa headed into San Francisco Bay, spectators swapped tales of the Iowa’s storied past. It carried the late President Franklin Roosevelt across the Atlantic to his historic meeting with Winston Churchill and Josef Stalin in World War Two. X-ray spacecraft to search for black holes

PASADENA, 27 May—NASA says final preparations are under way for the launch of a space telescope that will use X-ray vision to search for hidden black holes in the universe.

The Nuclear Spectroscopic Telescope Array, or NuSTAR, will launch from Kwajalein Atoll in the Marshall Islands, NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif, reported on Tuesday.

The observatory will air launch from the belly of Orbital Sciences Corp's L-1011 "Stargazer" aircraft aboard the company's Pegasus XL rocket, JPL said.

A successful launch simulation of the Pegasus rocket was conducted last week, officials said.

Cellphones battle malaria in Africa

GABORONE, 27 May—Mobile phones have cut the time needed to report malaria outbreaks in Africa from weeks to minutes, allowing more timely government responses, researchers say.

The results of the first year of a mobile disease response pilot programme were reported last week by Hewlett-Packard, along with partners Positive Innovation for the Next Generation, the Clinton Health Access Initiative and mobile network provider MASCOM, Mashable reported.

"We see technology having a profound impact on disease surveillance, which has a highly antiquated process," Paul Ellingstad, HP's director of global health, said.

While it can take three to four weeks to get a report of cases of malaria to a district health clinic, and then to the Ministry of Health of a respective country, cellphone reports can speed up the process to a matter of minutes, he said — meaning the respective government can immediately send bed nets and alert citizens to take precautions.

Since the pilot programme began in June 2011 in Botswana's Chobe region, 1,068 notifications were reported to Ministry of Health officials by healthcare workers trained to use mobile devices to collect malaria data and report outbreaks to authorities.

"This is an example of the role technology can play in fundamentally transforming and improving existing programmes within the public health sector," Ellingstad said. "What's critical in doing so is partnering with governments and other leading NGOs to appropriately implement technology, rather than providing technology and letting the process sort itself out."

The discovery was made at Pachacamac, one of the largest Prehispanic sites in South America, located on the Pacific Coast about 18 miles from Lima, Belgium's Universite libre de Bruxelles reported on Tuesday.

In front of the Temple of Pachacamac, a scattering of later period burials was found to conceal an enormous burial chamber 65-feet long, dated to 1,000 years ago, that had survived the pillaging of the colonial period — particularly intensive on the site — and was intact, researchers said.

The oval tomb was covered with a roof of reeds supported by carved and shaped tree trunks.

A dozen newborns and infants were distributed around the perimeter, while the main chamber was separated into two sections separated by a wall of mud bricks that served as a base for yet more burials, archaeologists said.

Seventy skeletons and mummies were found inside those sections, representing both sexes and often

Seven-inch Google tablet said imminent

NEW YORK, 27 May—A 7-inch tablet computer is coming from Google and could hit the market in July, DigiTimes, a tech Web site based in Taipei reports. An initial shipment of about 600,000 units, manufactured by Google by Asus, based in Taipei, is set to begin in June, the site said.

Details of the tablet's specifications are not known yet but there has been speculation about a quad-core processor running version 4.0 of Android, CNET.com reported on Wednesday.

If the tablet does appear, and a rumoured 7-inch "iPad Mini" from Apple also surfaces, competition in the 7-inch tablet arena will increase, as Amazon is already a major force in the 7-inch market segment and Samsung has recently begun selling its 7-inch Galaxy Tab 2, CNET.com said.

DigiTimes said plans call for production of 2 million units of the Google tablet for 2012.

Trucks travel along a test track in Germany, where Siemens is working on its eHighway concept. This system has been proposed to cut pollution on Interstate 710 in LA.—INTERNET

LA could adopt electric freight vehicles

LOS ANGELES, 26 May—Los Angeles may be one of the first cities to adopt a new electric freight trucking system dubbed eHighway, its German developer says.

Engineering giant Siemens Corp recently unveiled the system that uses overhead electrical wires to transmit energy to freight trucks in select vehicle lanes, similar to modern-day streetcars.

"Most people think about cars when they think of vehicle emissions, but the reality is it's freight trucks," Daryl Dulaney, chief executive of North American infrastructure and cities sector for Siemens, told the Los Angeles Times.

Siemens is working on a pilot project along Interstate 710, in which electric trucks would move freight from the ports of Long Beach and Los Angeles to inland destinations.

More than 40 percent of freight that arrives in the United States in shipping containers comes through the two ports and then has to be trucked to rail stations and other points of distribution, officials said.

"The ports have made tremendous improvements, but goods-movement-related air pollution remains our largest source of air pollution in Southern California," Barry Wallerstein of the South Coast Air Quality Management District said.

"We're hopeful that we will get [the eHighway] off the ground in the next 12 months," said Wallerstein, who hopes to secure grants from the US Department of Energy to build it.

Study: Seagrass can combat climate change

WASHINGTON, 27 May—Beds of ocean seagrasses can store twice as much carbon as the world's forests and are a vital part of the solution to climate change, US scientists say.

An article in the journal Nature Geoscience has reported the first global analysis of carbon stored in seagrasses that determined coastal seagrass beds store up to 225,000 tons of carbon per square miles, mostly in the soils beneath them.

In comparison, a typical terrestrial forest stores about 82,000 tons of carbon persquare mile, most of which is in the form of wood.

Although seagrass meadows make up less than 0.2 percent of the world's oceans, they are responsible for more than 10 percent of all carbon buried annually in the sea, researchers said.

"Seagrasses only take up a small percentage of global coastal area, but this assessment shows that they're a dynamic ecosystem for carbon transformation," lead study author James Fourqurean of Florida International University said.

"Seagrasses have the unique ability to continue to store carbon in their roots and soil in coastal seas," he said in a release from the National Science Foundation. "We found places where seagrass beds have been storing carbon for thousands of years."

Seagrass meadows store 90 percent of their carbon in the soil and continue to build on it for centuries, the researchers found.

Conserving and restoring seagrass meadows may reduce greenhouse gas emissions and increase carbon stores while delivering important "ecosystem services" to coastal communities, they said.

Long-term contraception more effective for women

WASHINGTON, 27 May—Women who choose birth control pills, the patch or vaginal ring are 20 times more likely to have an unplanned pregnancy than those using long-term methods such as IUDs and implants, a study released Wednesday found.

Among young women under 21 who chose the pill, the patch or vaginal ring, the risk of unintended pregnancy is almost twice as high as that for older women, according to researchers at the Washington University School of Medicine in St Louis.

The study, carried out on 7,500 participants between the ages of 14 and 45, appears in the May 24 New England Journal of Medicine.

“This study is the best evidence we have that long-acting reversible methods are far superior to the birth control pill, patch and ring,” says senior author and OBGYN Jeffrey Peipert. Intrauterine devices “and implants are more effective because women can forget about them after clinicians put the devices in place.” Unplanned pregnancies remain a major health problem in the United States. About three million pregnancies per year — half of all pregnancies — are unplanned, very high for a developed nation. “We know that IUDs and implants have very low failure rates of less than one per cent,” said lead author Brooke Winner. “But although IUDs are very effective and have been proven safe in women and adolescents, they only are chosen by 5.5 per cent of women in the United States who use contraception.”

IUDs are inserted by a nurse or doctor, but few women can easily afford them as the cost can reach around US$500.

However “when IUDs and implants are provided at no cost, about 75 per cent of women chose these methods for birth control,” Winner added.

That means that greater use of longer acting contraceptive methods by teens and young women could prevent substantially more unplanned pregnancies.

One-in-12 UK babies hospital-infected

LONDON, 27 May—One-in-12 babies and toddlers in British hospitals contract a potentially life threatening infection, government officials found. Researchers at the Health Protection Agency surveyed 52,443 hospital patients at 103 hospitals and found 1-in-16 had an infection associated with their healthcare, 1-in-20 age 15 and younger got an infection, and 1-in-5 very sick children got an infection in the hospital, the Daily Telegraph reported.

Most of the hospital-acquired infections were pneumonia, urinary tract infections and surgical site infections, the report said. Government officials said although the number of infections has been dropping — due to campaigns to encourage staff and visitors to wash their hands — many infections are becoming resistant to antibiotics.

The study made a series of recommendations to reduce hospital-acquired infections, including that hospitals ensure all staff who insert catheters and tubes into patients are properly trained, and that guidelines should be developed for the use of common antibiotics.

Lead author Dr Susan Hopkins, an epidemiologist at the Health Protection Agency, said there needed to be a shift in the attitude of healthcare staff to prevent infections.

“It is about performing the procedure right every time, no matter how many patients you are looking after,” Hopkins told the Telegraph. “We need to make sure people are competent and trained in inserting devices and we need to look at our surveillance of infections.”—Internet

The company said it had received 237 reports of problems linked to the defects, but no accidents, the filing said.

Health Tip: Get the most from your nap

As more people join the ranks of the sleep-deprived, experts say a daily nap may do a world of good. Then again, poor napping habits can leave you groggy than before.

The National Sleep Foundation offers this advice about feeling refreshed after a nap:

- * Keep your nap to no more than 30 minutes. Sleeping longer can make you feel groggy, and cause you to have trouble sleeping at night.
- * Nap in a comfortable environment that’s cool, dark and quiet.
- * Don’t nap too late in the day, to avoid interfering with bedtime.
- * Don’t nap too early in the day either, as your body may not be ready for sleep again.—Internet

US banks in quarter earned $35.3 billion

WASHINGTON, 27 May—US banks earned $35.3 billion in profits in the first three months of the year, a federal regulator said.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp, said profits rose by $6.6 billion from the first quarter of 2011, a 22.9 percent rise.

Average return on assets rose above 1 percent for only the second time out of the past 19 quarters.

Income for banks, however, has improved compared to the same quarter of the previous year for 11 consecutive quarters, the FDIC said.

In the first quarter, 67.5 percent of the country’s banks and savings institutions reported year-over-year gains in earnings with only 10.3 percent of banks losing money in January through March, the lowest level since the second quarter of 2007.

In a sharp turnaround, only 16 banks out of 7,307 failed in the first quarter, the smallest number of failures since the fourth quarter of 2008, when 12 banks failed.

The agency’s ominous “Problem list,” which keeps track of banks in trouble, dropped from 813 banks to 772 in the quarter. Total assets among “problem” banks dropped from $319 billion to $292 billion in the quarter.—Internet

We all have responsibility to join hands Chan Mya Aye

The journey of democracy is a grueling reform process. It may sometimes be comfortable and sometimes hard with twists and turns. It may sometimes continue with pace and sometimes test our patience with delays. I am pretty sure that we could sometimes rise above some situations and we must sometimes move towards smooth, incremental and systematic transition. Thus, we should never forget maturity, compassion, determination and farsightedness of all stakeholders in democratic reform is a must.

People are at the heart of democracy. It is the practice that recognizes the desire of the majority (the people) and sticks to the decision of the majority (the people). The people are decisive factor in democratic reform. Holding this pivotal role made complete with maturity, compassion, determination and farsightedness, the people are to realize future success through cooperation.

The first phase of reform strategy for development of Myanmar has somewhat been completed. Now is time to step up the second phase. It is no doubt that the government has committed to adopting far-reaching reforms, putting the desire of the people who are demanding change in the fore.

The government will speed up plans for improvements of living standards, transportation, job opportunities each citizen has to deal with on day-to-day basis or socio-economic status of each individual. It will otherwise help each individual tackle everyday issues and redefine their socio-economic life. Such People-Centered Development objective requires the cooperation of civil societies.

It is reality that Myanmar is on speedy path towards reform under this new administration. The cabinet led by the President does not hesitate to bring about required reforms overnight. Claiming "The Voice of the People is the Voice of the Hluttaw", the parliament is shaping reforms. Similarly, the judiciary is making reforms to ensure justice to the people to be commensurate with the new mechanism. With media relaxations by the government, the Fourth Estate will soon become the one that exercises freedom and responsibility, and freedom and rationality in parallel.

Thanks to genuine goodwill and commitment, Myanmar is developing at a speed that anyone including ones from international community did not expect. From international community to Myanmar citizens, the expectation on such sweeping reforms was low. Nonetheless, we all witnessed that the government in its own initiative implemented such reforms with all heart. Everyone was surprised and awestruck. Positive responses were made in recognition. This is the reality.

It is the public knowledge. The situations in the past and in the present are different. Freedom and transparency are on the increase. Each citizen has enjoyed much more rights, positions and dignity. Prospects, expectations or hopes for socio-economic development are high. The role of the people has been enhanced. To be frank, things that were denied in the past are now accessible. Things that could not be undertaken or spoken out can now be done. We now receive deserved recognition we were denied in the past. Though it could not be expressed by calculation, all the people could feel developments.

There may be some people who complained that we are granted less in comparison with other countries. I would like to propose cooperation for the future to make the half-filled glass a full one. Comparison depends on the things we compare. The situations of the present, surely not the things of the past, are the unprecedented progress.

In these days, I have noticed candle campaigns for electricity and water supply here and there in some cities. A series of strikes in some factories in Hlaingthaya, North Okkalapa, Mingaladon and Dagon Townships are reported as well. There are also movements demanding compensations for lands confiscated for various projects by successive governments. Activities for forming a variety of organizations, associations and unions are seen. It is also reported that some political parties and politicians are behind the curtains of the said protests, strikes and activities.

We should handle these situations, keeping the future of the country and the people in our mind. As I said before, we should consider these situations as the half-filled glass in comparison between the past and the present. It is the public knowledge why the electricity outage happens. The State-owned media is informing the public about who causes which damages and which remedy measures are being taken for public awareness. And labour disputes are the cases that could be settled under already-enacted Labour Organizations Law and Labour Dispute Settlement Law.

What I have said above does not mean expression of wishes and demands are supposed to be prohibited. I am, as one of Myanmar citizens, proud of Myanmar people becoming able to air their wishes freely and make demands like this. I also support it as it is the deserved right of a citizen of democratic nation. But, on the other hand, I really do not want them to become spoiled children who are intentionally going against their parents despite their thorough understanding of the objective condition and difficulties of the parents. As the parents are doing their best step by step depending on their wealth and current conditions, it would be beneficial to both sides should the offspring choose to lend a helping hand whatever to their parents and strive in unison with them to achieve a desired stage in the shortest time.

All is well understood to what extent the present authorities are devoting themselves to hard work of reforms to recover from all the backwardness of the country. So, just and fair view rather than one-sided one would be closer to the right answer. For the future of the nation and its people, we should act like a good citizen worthy of democracy and cooperate with the government with maturity, genuine goodwill, eagerness and farsightedness.

Expression of wishes and demands today, whether done with whatever intention, more or less threatens the community peace and tranquility. If it would continue disrupting the peace and tranquility of a large number of regions and villages, no doubt the stability and community of the entire nation would be under the threat. At the same time, there would no progress which is the aspiration of the entire nation. If so, the acts designing to invoke disorder would be absolutely going against the aspiration of the entire national people. So, political parties and politicians should participate and cooperate making rational choices.

Frankly speaking, the government is not saying no to current demands of the people. It is common knowledge that it is doing its best within its affordability and it would not change in the future too. Do not forget that Rome was not built in a day. We should not anticipate that democratic nation could be built overnight. More haste would often lead to less speed. It needs to learn to out our coat according to our cloth. If we know that the government has to chew more than it can bite, and then we should share its burden and cooperate it with a sympathetic heart.

As far as I am concerned, reform is not a completely smooth route, but changing from one situation to another, one system to another and one ideological belief to another and thus compromise, sacrifices, devotion, hard work, losses and others are unavoidable corners on the path towards the goal, success of the reform or transition. It is a business of denying penny in pursuance of pound and thus small sacrifices had to be made before the big benefits come. It is not a short trip but a long journey and thus we should control our hurried actions with wisdom and awareness. We should not forget such lessons of Arab Spring including Egypt and Libya which had to sacrifice big for not taking time to take democracy reforms step by step systematically.

Each and every individual has equal democratic rights. No one has more or no one has less. However, if the hasty actions of a group would harm the thirst for stability and development of the vast majority, then.....

The ongoing reforms of the incumbent government are transparent and very far-reaching ones. The president himself has instructed to exercise bottom-up initiative rather than top-down approach. In addition, objectives to be realized in detail in drawing and implementing projects have been articulated. All must be aware that "to enable each individual and household have access to adequate water and electricity" is one of the objectives to be accomplished. Talking of the incumbent government, it respects the people and their wishes as well. So, it has been working hard to fulfill the requirements of the people. No doubt, what are dreams today would become reality tomorrow or the day after tomorrow.

"Every citizen is responsible for development of the nation. If there is only will and no hard work, discipline and unity, we would still be behind the other countries. Whatever natural resources we have, if we do not work hard, we would still be in poverty. One and the only way to walk out of LDC list is to work, to work under laws."

The above is the excerpt from the concluding remark of the instruction of the President at the coordination meeting on more effectively implementing national and regional development undertakings on 11 May. What he said is right. Despite of our country possessing natural resources superior than other countries, we are on the LDC list. It is of no use pointing the finger to someone now. Each and every citizen is responsible for development of the country. And all of us is longing for development. Of only we work cooperatively with might and main in unity with discipline under the laws, can we turn our dreams into reality.

In the near future, the wishes, hopes and anticipations of the entire national people would be fulfilled for sure. We all are obliged to participate in today's reform.

Mexican drama wins new talent prize in Cannes

CANNES, 27 May — The Mexican drama "Después de Lucia" has won the top prize of the 65th Cannes film festival's new talent section, or the "Un Certain Regard", as the world's top movie showcase is set to close on Sunday. The jury of the new talent section, chaired by British actor and director Tim Roth, made the choice out of 20 films and revealed it at a ceremony on Saturday night. "This was an extraordinarily strong group of films and our deliberations were passionate. The film makers never once failed us! Incredible!" said Roth. Directed by Michel Franco, the film features a young woman and her father who move to a new town and leave their old lives far behind. Suzanne Clement and Emile Dequenne were both awarded as the section's best actress, for their roles respectively in "Laurence Always" and "A Perdre La Raison". The special jury prize went to Le Grand Soir directed by Benoit Delepine and Gustave Kervern, while Aida Begic's Djeca was named as the special distinction to the jury. Other members in the jury include Leila Bekhti, Sylvie Pras, Tonic Marshall and Luciano Monteagudo.

The new talent section was launched in 1978 by Gilles Jacob at the festival, aimed at encouraging young and inexperienced directors. The coveted top prize Palme d'Or is to be announced on Sunday at the end of the festival, for which 22 selected films are competing.

Everest season ends with 150 reaching summit

KATHMANDU, 27 May — A near-record number of climbers reached the summit of Everest as the season ended on Saturday without a repeat of last week's deadly accidents, which had raised fears of overcrowding on the world's highest peak.

Around 150 people reached the top of the 8,848-metre (29,029-foot) mountain at the end of the spring weather window — a week after four deaths led to calls for better safety measures to end "traffic jams" near the summit.

"A handful of climbers returned from camp four after being unable to move up. But the weather was good over the past two days and many took advantage.

About 150 made it to the top today," said tourism ministry official Tilak Pandey.

"There are still a few Sherpas and other climbers who will try to reach the top for a couple of days. But the official season has ended and the climbers are now returning to the base camp."

A 48-hour stretch of good weather saw more than 250 climbers reach the top of the world, despite warnings of potentially deadly bottlenecks in the "death zone" above 8,000 metres.

Among those who achieved the feat was Wasfia Nazreen, 29, who is climbing the highest peak on each of the continents to celebrate 40 years of Bangladeshi independence.

"We got our independence but we women are still fighting for freedom," she was quoted as saying from the summit on the expedition's Facebook page.

"This is to the women of Bangladesh, who (risk) their lives every day for freedom, peace and equality."

Another who reached the summit was Prakash Dahal, whose father Puspka Kamal Dahal led the bloody 10-year Maoist insurgency in Nepal and is now a key player in mainstream politics.

Woman shot by Colorado homeowner to face trespass charges

BOULDER, 27 May — A 21-year-old woman who was shot after she wandered drunk into a Colorado couple's home in the middle of the night will face charges of felony trespassing, her lawyer said on Saturday.

Zoey Ripple walked through an unlocked screen door leading into the bedroom of the couple, who said they shouted for her to leave before the husband fired a single gunshot in the dark when she kept coming into the room.

Ripple, who was unarmed, was shot in the hip during the incident on Wednesday in Boulder, Colorado.

In a 911 call, the couple said she appeared to be "kind of stoned or something." Police said Ripple's blood alcohol level was three times the legal limit.

She is recovering in a hospital, her lawyer, Colette Cribari, said.

An arrest warrant for Ripple is expected to be issued in the coming days and she plans to turn herself in, Cribari said, citing conversations with prosecutors.

The couple is not expected to face any charges because of Colorado's "Make My Day" law, which allows people to use deadly force against home intruders, Boulder County District Attorney Stan Garnett has said. Cribari called the felony charge too severe for Ripple, who is a recent graduate of the University of Colorado in Boulder.

"She wasn't trying to commit a crime. She was just in the wrong place at the wrong time," Cribari said. "You would hope getting shot would be enough punishment."

Wildfires hit six US states, small towns evacuated

SANTA FE, 27 May — A wildfire burned out of control for a fourth day in the steep mountains of southwestern New Mexico on Saturday, one of several blazes that have consumed more than 200 square miles (520 square km) of rugged land in six US states. Efforts to contain the blazes spreading in sparsely populated areas of Arizona, Colorado, Michigan, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah have been hurt by gusting winds and tinder-dry late-spring conditions.

Several small towns, including the historic Wild West mining town of Mogollon — now nearly a ghost town — were ordered to evacuate, as the spreading fire torched miles forest, brush and grass. New Mexico's Whitewater-Baldy Complex fire, which was started by lightning 10 days ago, had raged across 82,252 acres as of Friday and officials said the area could now be much larger than that. "We know that there was significant growth yesterday, but we don't have a hard and fast number," said Fire Information Officer Dan Ware.

More than 580 firefighters and support crew have been fighting the blaze.

"This is the biggest show in the country right now in terms of fire size. So a lot of resources are available to us. We're just not sure we'll be able to do a lot of flying," Ware said.

Gunman in Indiana standoff had three bullet wounds

CHICAGO, 27 May — A Texas gunman who held hostages in an eight-hour standoff with police in an Indiana real estate office suffered three gunshot wounds, including two to the head, a coroner said on Saturday. Police have said he shot himself twice in the head after the standoff on Friday in Valparaiso, about 40 miles southeast of Chicago. Porter County Coroner Chuck Harris said Roy Ferguson, 48, sustained gunshot wounds below his chin and to his right temple and a third wound to the right upper part of his torso.

Harris said the wounds were established in a preliminary examination of Ferguson. A full autopsy likely would not be completed until after the Memorial Day weekend. "We are pretty sure we know what happened, but I am not going to make any determination until after the autopsy," Harris said.

The standoff between Ferguson and the police ended at about 4:30 pm on Friday. He was pronounced dead at a hospital two hours later. Police said the gunman went to the office in a dispute over money with someone who turned out not to be there. He had been to the office previously.

The first officers at the scene exchanged fire with the gunman around the entrance of the building. Dozens of officers then surrounded the building while the FBI negotiated with him, police said. A woman initially left the building with a head injury caused by Ferguson.

But it was unclear whether she was a hostage or someone fleeing the building. The wound was not caused by a gunshot, and she was treated and released from a hospital, police said. — Reuters

Eight killed in Indonesia landslide

JAKARTA, 27 May — A landslide in Indonesia killed eight people, according to an official, after days of heavy rain hit a mountainous part of the country's main island. "The landslide occurred on Thursday night and killed eight people. We were able to retrieve all eight bodies by late Friday night," Bogor Disaster Mitigation Agency official Makmur Rozak said.

He said 16 people were illegally mining for gold in western Java in the mountains of Bogor district, south of the capital Jakarta, when the landslide struck "after days of heavy rain". "We rescued the other eight, so everyone is accounted for," Rozak said. Landslides are common in Indonesia, particularly in heavily deforested mountainous areas. — Internet

Miami officer shoots, kills naked attacker

MIAMI, 27 May — A Miami police officer on Saturday fatally shot a naked man who was chewing on the face of another man on a downtown causeway off-ramp, police and witnesses said. The Miami Herald reports that gunshots were heard at about 2 pm on the MacArthur Causeway off-ramp, which is near the newspaper's offices. Witnesses said that a woman saw two men fighting and flagged down a police officer, who came upon a naked man mauling the other man. The newspaper quoted witnesses as saying that the officer ordered the naked man to back away, and when he ignored the demand, the officer shot him. Witnesses said that the naked man continued his attack after being shot once, and the officer shot him several more times.

Police said the other man was transported to Jackson Memorial Hospital Ryder Trauma Centre. The newspaper said he had suffered critical injuries.

The police department confirmed in a news release that there was an officer-related shooting, but did not include many details provided by witnesses to the newspaper. A police spokesman couldn't be reached for comment by The Associated Press on Saturday evening. The police news release said the identities of the two men were not known.

A photograph posted on The Herald's website shows an officer standing watch on the ramp next to two police cruisers, with a body lying on a pedestrian walkway.

Police requested the newspaper's video surveillance tapes. The shooting and investigation tied up causeway traffic as crowds were arriving at South Beach for an annual hip-hop festival. — Internet

Tropical storm warnings for Southeast coast

MIAMI, 27 May — Tropical storm warnings have been issued for the Southeast coast from north Florida to South Carolina as a cluster of thunderstorms was gathering strength on Friday night and expected to become Tropical Storm Beryl over the Memorial Day weekend. The National Weather Service said that the storm's maximum sustained winds were at 45 mph. But they are expected to increase as the storm moves over the waters of the Atlantic.

The system was about 305 miles (490 kilometers) from Charleston, SC, at 11 pm and swirling toward the Southeast coast. Tropical storm warnings were issued for the Volusia/Brevard County line in Florida to Edisto Beach, SC, and watches from Edisto Beach to the Santee River. The storm is expected to eventually move southwest and the Georgia coast and northern Florida could see heavy rains starting on Sunday and into next week. Higher than normal tides will be crashing against the Southeastern coast and may cause flooding. Heavy rain is forecast and dangerous surf was expected along the coasts of northeastern Florida, Georgia and South Carolina over the holiday weekend.

Forecasters are classifying the storm as Subtropical Storm Beryl, which has more to do with how the center of the storm is forming, not wind speed, according to Weather Underground's website. It is the second named Atlantic storm of the hurricane season that doesn't officially begin until 1 June. Often when subtropical storms remain over warm water for several days, they become tropical because thunderstorms start building close to the centre. Forecasters were not indicating that the storm would become a hurricane.

Singapore swimming pool 38 storeys above ground

LONDON, 27 May — A Singapore property developer plans to construct a swimming pool 38 storeys above the ground and connect two skyscrapers. The infinity pool will dramatically connect Sky Habitat Singapore's two towers once the ambitious project is completed in 2016, Daily Mail reported on Friday.

With 509 apartments, the Moshe Safdie-designed development in the central island suburb of Bishan will offer residents stunning vistas across the area. Flat owners will also be able to traverse the two structures via sky bridges on the 14th and 26th floors, the newspaper said.

Wong Heang Fine, CEO of Capitaland Residential Singapore which is developing the site, said: "With Sky Habitat, we are creating a habitat for the future; a condominium that is also a house." — Internet

Obese UK woman cut out of house

LONDON, 27 May — Emergency workers who needed to take an obese teenager from her home to a hospital in Wales had to break through a wall of the residence to get her out and into an ambulance, officials said on Friday. The rescue on the second floor of the small house on Thursday used scaffolding as a ramp to lower the woman to the ground level, the local Rhondda Cynon Taf council said.

The unidentified 19-year-old remained hospitalized Friday and her medical condition was not released. Neighbours said her weight had risen as high as 380 kilos (835 pounds). The UK has one of Europe's fattest populations: more than 60 percent of adults and one third of children aged 10-11 are overweight or obese, roughly similar to US statistics.

Wildfire blows heavy smoke near Disney World

ORLANDO, 27 May — A wildfire that is burning in Orlando blew heavy smoke near the busy hotel and attractions district of Walt Disney world at the start of the busy Memorial Day weekend. The smoke also closed a section of Orlando's main highway in the city's tourist district for a couple hours Friday.

A section of Interstate 4 was closed in both directions because the billowing smoke cut down visibility. No injuries or damage to buildings were reported. By nightfall, the smoke had died down but the fire is still burning. — Internet

Pa mother charged with killing her toddler twins

PHILADELPHIA, 27 May — A woman was charged on Friday with killing her 18-month-old twins, named Adam and Eve, in the family home. Police said she also attempted suicide by cutting her wrists. Stacey Smalls, 41, was charged with two counts of first-degree murder, police said. Investigators believe one twin was strangled and the other was drowned. Authorities are awaiting autopsy results for the official causes of death.

Police also allege Smalls gave her 4-year-old daughter some type of substance to drink in an attempt to poison her. The girl is listed in stable but guarded condition at St Christopher's Hospital for Children. A police spokesman said Smalls, who worked as a nurse at a nursing home, then tried to kill herself by cutting her wrists. Her husband, Ronald Smalls, discovered the scene when he came home Thursday afternoon from his job as a corrections officer and called 911. Police have not officially commented on a possible motive for the killings.

"She had something that she felt was justification but there is no justification... it's a tragedy, two young babies dead and there is no excuse for that," Police Commissioner Charles Ramsey said. Ron Smalls told WPVI-TV on Friday that he and his wife had been having marital difficulties, but he did not elaborate. "We've had some problems and I'd suggested therapy for both of us," he said. "She didn't think it was important."

Stacey Small changed her Facebook profile picture 19 May to a photograph of a car spray-painted along its side with the words, "Hope she was worth it." She also listed her relationship status as divorced. A Facebook friend asked about the car image and Smalls replied that she found the photo online and "I liked her style. Friend Ronald Smalls and check out what I wrote on his page."

The message may have been deleted, as Ronald Smalls' most recent post appears to be on 13 May when he wrote, "Happy Mothers Day!" Stacey Smalls' Facebook page also includes photos of her twins and 4-year-old daughter. She remained in police custody Friday and was on suicide watch, authorities said. — Internet

Florida Keys mayor wants crocodile gone

A mayor in the Florida Keys says he wants crocodiles removed from areas occupied by humans for the safety of children and pets.

Islamorada Mayor David Reckwerdt said he wants experts on the reptiles to address the Village Council on 24 May to discuss keeping the crocs away from populated areas, The Miami Herald reported.

"There weren't any crocs around when I was a kid," Reckwerdt said.

However, he said recent crocodile attacks on people and pets in the Key Largo area have made him fear for the safety of pets and children. He said he no longer allows his young children to swim in the canal. "What's it going to do to our tourism economy when another pet is killed or, God forbid, something else?" Reckwerdt said.

The mayor said he is hoping a solution can be found that doesn't involve killing the crocodiles but he will not rule out euthanizing the animals. "At what point do we do something about this?" Reckwerdt asked. "You look at areas where they're plentiful — Australia, the Nile — they eat people."

US Supreme Court Justice Breyer robbed again

US Supreme Court Justice Stephen Breyer, who was robbed in February at his Caribbean vacation home by a man armed with a machete, recently was the victim of a burglary at his residence in Washington, a court spokeswoman said.

Spokeswoman Kathy Arberg said no one was home at the time of the burglary, which was discovered on 4 May by a housekeeper. The Washington, DC, police were investigating, she said.

Breyer and his wife, Joanna, have a townhouse in Washington's upscale Georgetown neighbourhood, according to the Los Angeles Times. In the February incident on the island of Nevis, the intruder stole about $1,000 but no one was hurt. Breyer, his wife and two guests were present at the time.

There have been previous instances of crimes involving US Supreme Court justices.

In 2004, then-Supreme Court Justice David Souter suffered minor injuries when he was mugged by a group of young men as he jogged alone near his residence in Washington. In 1996, Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg had her purse snatched as she walked home with her husband and daughter from the John F Kennedy Centre for the Performing Arts to their nearby residence in their Watergate apartment complex. No one was hurt.

Will.I.Am uses autotune to make music

LONDON, 26 May—Black Eyed Peas singer Will.I.Am has admitted to using autotune to make his music, while he works on his singing abilities.

The writer and producer said he utilised the technology to allow him to make music quickly, without waiting for a proper singer to come into the studio while he works.

The hip-hop star, who is paid an estimated 200,000 pounds to coach singers on the BBC's 'The Voice' competition, made the revelation while appearing on Alan Carr's 'Chatty Man'.

As the comedian interviewed him down an autotune microphone, he jokingly told him "I'm working on my singing abilities".

He said he liked to work long hours in the studio making music, with the computer allowing him to work at the speed he thinks.

"I use autotune because I write and produce. The computer allows me to make music singing myself and not wait around for singers to come and sing it," the Telegraph quoted him as saying.

"It's a rare combination to have someone who can write songs and sing well. The computer allows me to execute my ideas at the speed I think them.

"So that's why I lean to the autotune. It's just an effect. But I am working on, you know, my singing abilities," he added.

Actor Will Smith

My kids are fame-savvy: Will Smith

LOS ANGELES, 27 May—Actor Will Smith admits his two kids understand the fame game better than him.

"Do I worry about Willow and Jaden? No, they were born into that world. They're on the internet all the time, so they know the game. They know where to go, what to say. They're far more savvy," showbizspy.com quoted Smith as saying.

The actor has two kids — Jaden, 13, and 11-year-old Willow — with wife Jada Pinkett Smith.

Smith feels his well-guarded kids might suffer with things that will hurt their self-esteem in the future.

"Of course, there are going to be things that are hurtful and self-esteem issues, like we all have, but I grew up in a neighbourhood, where I saw a guy get shot and take nine bullets to the chest, so Hollywood is a far safer experience than where I grew up," he said.

The 43-year-old has been spending more time at home recently as he has been working in the production department rather than in front of the camera. He admits his family is ready to see him back at work.

"Willow's doing her music and whipping her hair, Jaden's got a TV show. And daddy's been sort of producing at home. But everyone's really ready for daddy to go back to work now," he said.—Internet

Young secures England win in Oslo

Manchester United winger's early goal secures victorious start for new coach Roy Hodgson LONDON, 27 May — Norway 0 - England 1. Manchester United's Ashley Young scored a fine goal as new England coach Roy Hodgson enjoyed a winning start to his tenure in Norway. The winger raced past Fulham defender Brede Hangeland and finished smartly into the corner in the early stages to ensure victory in the friendly international in Oslo.

It was a relatively comfortable night for the visitors as they faced a Norway side which rarely threatened despite enjoying some lengthy spells of possession. Everton's Leighton Baines went close with a free-kick which forced a good save out of Norway keeper Rune Jartsein after the interval.

Manchester United's Phil Jones struck the post, although Liverpool's Andy Carroll was in an offside position and the effort was unlikely to have stood. Fulham's John Arne Riise provided the most uncomfortable moments for England with some searching crosses but Hodgson's side held out for their first win over Norway since 1980.

Chapman takes 5-stroke lead at Senior PGA

BENTON HARBOR, 27 May — Roger Chapman arrived at Harbor Shores this week a virtual unknown. The highlight of his career was probably a victory in Brazil—a dozen years ago. Even overseas, Chapman is hardly a star. The Englishman plays on the European Senior Tour, which has held only one tournament this year and is pressed for sponsors. Now Chapman is one round from a surprising victory at the Senior PGA Championship. After shooting a 7-under 64 on Saturday, he's not only leading, he's threatening to rout the rest of the field.

Chapman leads John Cook by five strokes heading into to what could be a sweltering Sunday finish.

"Hopefully, if all goes well tomorrow, maybe we can attract a few more sponsors and hopefully get our purses up," Chapman said. Chapman finished the day at 14-under par. Cook began the round tied with Chapman for the lead, but couldn't keep pace and settled for a 69 to drop into second place. "It felt like I shot a hundred compared to Roger," Cook said. "He played phenomenal. He had it. It was a pleasure to watch."

Chapman's 54-hole score of 199 tied the tournament record set by Sam Snead in 1973, although Snead was 17 under when he set the mark. Steve Pate had a 67 to join 66-year-old Hale Irwin at 7 under.—Internet

Donovan hat-trick as US hit five past Scots

JACKSONVILLE, 27 May — Landon Donovan struck a superb hat-trick as the United States crushed Scotland 5-1 in a friendly international on Saturday handing the Scots one of their most humiliating defeats. Juergen Klinsmann team's fifth successive win was a sparkling performance against a woeful Scotland team who were unable to match the speed and creativity of the Americans.

The US were 2-0 up inside 11 minutes and never looked back as they produced the kind of high-tempo display their German coach has demanded of them.

"We had a wonderful start with two early goals which really set the tone and the team really kept the rhythm throughout the entire game," said the former Germany striker and coach. Donovan had said earlier in the week he

Bulgaria stuns Netherlands with win in Amsterdam friendly

AMSTERDAM, 27 May — The Netherlands was disappointed with a 2-1 loss to Bulgaria in Amsterdam on Saturday in the first of three friendlies before the start of Euro 2012 soccer championship. Keselowski starts big weekend with win for Penske

CONCORD, 27 May — Brad Keselowski won the NASCAR Nationwide Series event at Charlotte Motor Speedway on Saturday, leading the final 67 laps to give Penske Racing a winning start on auto racing's biggest weekend. Keselowski raced to his first Nationwide victory of the year. He'll try to double up in Sprint Cup's longest race of the season, the Coca-Cola 600 on Sunday night. In between comes the Indy 500, a race that owner Roger Penske's cars have won 15 times. Penske driver Ryan Briscoe will start from the pole there Sunday.

Penske Racing has "three shots at winning races this weekend," Keselowski said. "We're one for one." Don't bet against more Penske wins this weekend. The team's other drivers in Indianapolis, Will Power and Helio Castroneves, start fifth and sixth. Power has won three times already this year, and Castroneves is a three-time Indy winner. "I'm happy for" Penske, Keselowski said. "One way or another, the checkered flag at Penske Racing is going to fly this week."

Serena and Sharapova set for French Open bids

PARIS, 27 May—Serena Williams and Maria Sharapova, two players better known for their hardcourt and grasscourt abilities, are the form players going into the climax of the claycourt season at the French Open.

Between them they won the four main leadup events on the surface at Charleston and Madrid for the American and at Stuttgart and Rome for the Russian.

The question is whether one of them can sustain their form through two weeks and seven matches in the often unpredictable playing conditions that are a mark at the famed Roland Garros complex on the western edge of Paris. Williams, whose only win came 10 years ago when she defeated sister Venus in the final, has staged yet another impressive return to form in recent weeks.

The 30-year-old defeated Lucie Safarova in the final at Charleston before pouncing world number one Victoria Azarenka 6-1, 6-3 to take the Madrid Open title at the start of May. She subsequently withdrew from the semi-finals of last week's Italian Open with a lower back injury but has expressed confidence she will be fully fit to challenge for the title in Paris.

On top of that she has re-dedicated herself to her sport following the nightmare she went through with injuries and illness in 2010-2011. "I think in general I have much better commitment in tennis. I just am really 100%," the 13-time Grand Slam champion said.

"I love being on the court now. I love every moment. This is what I live for. After going through everything that I went through, I really kind of appreciate every moment more, especially being out on the court."—INTERNET

Comfortable win for Spain in Euro warm-up

MADRID, 27 May—The Spanish national team enjoyed a comfortable 2-0 win over Serbia in their first preparation game for the European Championship this Saturday. Playing in the Swiss town of Saint Gallen, the reigning European and world champions fielded a side without players from FC Barcelona and Athletic Club Bilbao, who played the Kings Cup final on Friday night.

Dos Santos stops Mir, keeps UFC heavyweight title

LAS VEGAS, 27 May—When a state athletic commission official asked Frank Mir where he was between rounds, he named the wrong casino.

That's a pretty good indication Junior Dos Santos' punches already were doing their job.

The UFC's heavyweight champion knew exactly where he was and what he was doing — and Dos Santos swiftly showed Mir the door.

Both are due to resume training at Ireland's training camp in Montecatini in Italy next week after knee and ankle injuries respectively but, while Trapattoni is confident they will make the squad, Paul McShane will travel as cover for O'Shea and Kevin Foley, who is recovering from a hamstring strain.

Trapattoni, whose side warmed up for the tournament with a 1-0 friendly win over Bosnia in Dublin on Saturday, said: "They will have to show us on Monday they are ready. Richard Dunne showed that to us on Friday after his injury."

Aside from the injuries, Trapattoni and his players will head to their training camp in good spirits after Shane Long's 78th minute header secured a well-deserved victory over the Bosnians.

Ireland were denied by both the post and the crossbar as first Aiden McGeady and then Jon Walters, both half-time substitutes, went close, while Asmir Begovic produced fine saves to deny both Walters and Long in a strong finish by the Irish.

"We had more opportunities, more shots around the box and also more corners and we deserved to win a very important game," Trapattoni said. "We also made two little mistakes and they could have scored a goal. But we played well, with a good attitude, mentality and performance."

Trapattoni was impressed by Sunderland winger James McClean, who marked his first Ireland start with a dynamic display that suggested he could play a major role at the finals.—INTERNET

NAY PYI TAW, 27 May—Union Minister for Agriculture and Irrigation U Myint Hlaing and Union Minister for Cooperatives U Ohn Myint visited 500-acre Nyaungbingyisu plantation in Pobbathiri Township where Director-General of Agricultural Department U Kyaw Win reported on strains production of Basmati hybrid paddy and Palethwe hybrid paddy this morning.

Union Minister U Myint Hlaing called for extending researchers on the hybrid paddy species.

The Union ministers and party inspected production and storage of strains.

They then proceeded to 100-acre Tegygion plantation in Zabuthiri Township where Union Minister U Myint Hlaing urged the staff to educate farmers so as to minimize wastage in post harvest duration.

They also visited 100-acre strain production plantations in Dekhinathiri managed by Myanmar agriculturalists and scholars of Chinese CETC company. They heard reports submitted by officials and inspected pollination of paddy plants. Union Minister U Myint Hlaing called for bringing about farmer centered development and establishing of modern rice mill for quality rice production.—MNA

Nadal braced to shatter Djokovic Slam bid

Novak Djokovic at the AFP Rome Tennis masters on May 21. Djokovic will accept the 'unique' French Open challenge of becoming the first man in 43 years to monopolise all four Grand Slams.

INTERNET

PARIS, 27 May—Novak Djokovic will accept the 'unique' French Open challenge of becoming the first man in 43 years to monopolise all four Grand Slams, but six-time champion Rafael Nadal has his own history to make.

Only Don Budge, in 1938, and Rod Laver in 1962 and again in 1969, have achieved the feat of holding the Australian Open, French Open, Wimbledon and US Open trophies at the same time.

Now world number one Djokovic is just seven matches away from joining that exclusive club.

There's only one problem and it comes in the shape of Nadal, who will become the only man to win seven French Open titles if he triumphs again on Roland Garros' famed red brick courts.

"This is a unique opportunity that very few tennis players have in their lives. I'm aware of that, but I accept it as a challenge," said Djokovic, ahead of the tournament which starts on Sunday.

"It makes me even more motivated. It makes me feel good about it, rather than feeling pressured and worried if something bad is going to happen."

Since Laver's 1969 achievement, only Pete Sampras, Roger Federer and Nadal have had opportunities to complete a non-calendar year Grand Slam.

Sampras lost to Jim Courier in the quarter-finals at Roland Garros in 1994; Federer lost to Nadal in the final at the 2006 and 2007 French Open while Nadal lost to David Ferrer in the quarter-finals at the 2011 Australian Open.

Djokovic defeated Nadal in the finals of Wimbledon, the US Open and this year's epic Australian Open to arrive at his date with destiny.

Until the start of the claycourt season, he had also beaten Nadal in a total of seven successive finals.

But world number two Nadal has since defeated the Serb on clay in the finals in Monte Carlo and Rome.

Roland Garros remains the only major where Djokovic has yet to make the final.

Three times the 25-year-old has been a semi-finalist, losing to Nadal in 2007 and 2008 before seeing a remarkable 43-match winning run ended by Federer at the last-four stage in 2011.

Ten-time a Grand Slam title winner, Nadal, 25, has a remarkable CV at the French Open — six trophies in 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2010 and 2011 — and a match record of 45-1.

His only blip, a 2009 fourth round loss to Robin Soderling, came at a time when he was plagued by the acute knee problems which have often threatened to overwhelm him.

Spain's Fabregas ruled out up to 10 days

MADRID, 27 May—Barcelona midfielder Cesc Fabregas is set to miss a big chunk of Spain's preparations for Euro 2012 after being ruled out for seven to 10 days with a hamstring strain, the Spanish club said on Saturday.

Fabregas picked up the injury when he came on for the last 10 minutes of Barca's 3-0 King's Cup final win over Athletic Bilbao on Friday.

The former Arsenal player is likely to be named on Sunday in Spain's final 23-man squad to defend their title in Poland and Ukraine next month.
