Government speeds up national development strategy reforms for flourishing of social environment where people can do well apart from rise in GDP figures Government builds Myanmar society where equality and harmony flourish by reinforcing social protection amidst rapid reforms

NAY PYI TAW, 25 June— President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar U Thein Sein delivered an address at the opening ceremony of Social Protection Conference held at Grand Ballroom of Thingaha Hotel in Nay Pyi Taw Hotel Zone, here, at 8.30 am today.

Also present on the occasion were Union Ministers, Hluttaw Committee members, deputy ministers, region and state ministers, departmental heads, representatives of UNICEF (Myanmar), experts from international community, representatives entirely is a huge challenge for a developing country like us. Social Protection Strategy Framework needs comprehensiveness as well as all-inclusiveness. It is an important requirement. Moreover, it must be in conformity with the government-sponsored national socioeconomic development strategies. Based on requirements of multiple classes and sectors including social protection projects for children, the vulnerable, the aged, women and the disabled, we must adopt a Myanmar Social Protection System. Assistance and support of

Although policies vary among countries in adopting a wide-scale social protection network depending on their objective conditions their goals are the same. In our country rural and border areas lag behind in development, so their socioeconomic level is low when compared with the urban. Regional disparity rises from transport, infrastructural and economic opportunities.

The government adopted the Rural Development and Poverty Alleviation Strategy soon after taking the State duties.

of NGOs, guests and officials.

On the occasion, the President said:

Today's Social Protection Conference is a national level meeting. We hope this conference will produce sound results that can be linked with reform strategy for national development.

In fact, the word "Social Protection" has a broader meaning and to realize it the international organizations including the UN, other organizations such as NGOs, and internal and external humanitarian organizations have an important role in social protection coverage.

Because of the inequalities stemming from class disparity and income distribution gap, the vulnerable in our country are facing difficulties.

It is now implementing the strategy. Our country's poverty rate is still high when compared with regional counterparts, and all-round socio-economic development of low-income people is our priority task. As microeconomic level socioeconomic development has relations with stable and sound macro economy, we are implementing macroeconomic reform strategy as a second priority.

The basic need of every citizen is comprehensive health care as well as income security or in other words job security. This requirement calls for opportunities such as the access to education and social security. The government has been enacting new laws, amending the existing ones and revoking out-of-date laws as necessary to promote rights of workers and farmers and holding workshops on the establishment of a universal health insurance system for low-income rural people. We are in the process of enacting a law to fix minimum wage for workers to enjoy basic social rights they deserve.

Government has already speeded up our national development strategy reforms for flourishing of a social environment where people can do well apart from rise in GDP figures. During the past few weeks, we have explained in detail the means to implement the Second Wave Reform Strategy. We firmly believe we can collectively build a Myanmar society where equality and harmony flourish by reinforcing social protection amidst the rapid reforms.

Constructive cooperation

With people-centred system at the heart of our reform process we are exploring more and more workable means in providing greater care for the people especially, the vulnerable, the disabled, the aged, children, women and kith and kin of remote border areas.

As the multiple care projects for our people call for wider activities and greater efforts, the government is striving utmost in implementing action plans covering poverty alleviation and rural development, comprehensive access to health, education and social security, microeconomic growth, border areas development drive and so on. Now, it has entered a new area which is called social protection that can contribute to fair growth, social stability, enhanced productivity and the people-centred system through effective work programs.

Today, our country saw the national level conference on social protection at which the President called for the adoption of a Myanmar Social Protection system based on requirements of multiple classes and sectors including social protection projects for children, the vulnerable, the aged, women and the disabled.

Generally, social protection is the work of preventing, managing, and overcoming situations that have adverse affect on the people's well being. Social protection consists of policies and programs designed to reduce poverty and vulnerability by promoting efficient labor markets, diminishing people's exposure to risks, and enhancing their capacity to manage economic and social risks, such as unemployment, exclusion, sickness, disability and old age.

In fact, social protection needs a great deal of financial resources apart from government goodwill. So, it is a huge challenge for a developing country like us.

As our people are also the members of global family, they too need social protection like others around the world. They should not be neglected by the international community for any reason as the country lacks social protection. Now the government has opened the door to international community, we hope constructive cooperation from abroad apart from government and domestic contributions.

Muslim Brotherhood's Morsi wins Egyptian presidency

CAIRO, 25 June—Egypt's Muslim Brotherhood's candidate Mohamed Morsi has won the presidential election, head of Egypt's Higher Presidential Election Commission (HPEC) Farouq Sultan announced on Sunday afternoon.

Morsi, now chairman of the Brotherhood's Freedom and Justice Party, got 51.73 percent of all the votes in the run-off round, defeating his rival Ahmed Shafiq, who got 48.27 percent. According to the commission, Morsi won 13.23 million votes, while Shafiq got 12.35 million. The eligible voters were 51 million, while the turnout was 51.8 percent, or 26.3 million, said Sultan.

Invalid votes were 834,252, he said, adding that the results in 13 sub-committees were cancelled after the commission reviewed the results over the submitted appeals. On his Twitter account, Morsi hailed the Army, police and Egypt's lofty judiciary.

"An appreciative and respectful greeting to the integral, honest and fair Egypt's judiciary and brave Army and police officers who protected the democratic process with honesty and congratulations for all Egyptians," Morsi said. After hearing the news of Morsi's victory, members of his campaign stood silent for one minute to mourn the death during last year's turmoil.

"We thank all the Egyptians, to them we are grateful to win the presidency and also our thanks are extended to Egyptian Army, judiciary and police," said Ahmed Abdel Aaty, a senior campaigner of Morsi. The membership for Morsi in the Muslim Brotherhood movement has ended, to affirm the pledge for the movement that Morsi will be the president for all Egyptians. MNA/Xinhua

Turkey asks for int'l supports following Syria's downing of Turkish jet ANKARA, 25 June — Turkey has stepped up efforts to appeal article 4 of the NATO charter after Syria shot down its military aircraft, which triggered regional tense in the past few days. "Our plane was shot down in international airspace, 13 nautical miles from Syria," Turkish Foreign Minister Ahmet Davutoglu told TRT television on Sunday, dismissing Syria's claim that the plane was flying just 1 km off the Syrian coast when it was shot down. The Syrian state-run SANA news agency said on Friday that the plane was inside Syrian airspace when it was shot down.

"The plane unintentionally violated Syrian airspace, but returned to the Turkish airspace immediately upon the warning of Turkish radars," the minister said. "Syria have created the impression that they felt like it was an act of aggression and they shot it down... From our perspective, that's not the case," Davutoglu said, stressing the plane was unarmed, not sending hostile signals, flying on a training mission and undertaking a national radar system test. The minister also dismissed Syria's allegation that it only considered the aircraft as "unidentified" at first and established its Turkish origin later.

Turkey has intercepted radio communications from the Syrian side, which suggested they knew it was a Turkish plane, the Turkish minister said. "We have both radar info and Syria's radio communications," Davutoglu said, adding there was no warning from Syria before it shot down the plane. —Xinhua

Israel, India ink cooperation agreement to boost tourism

JERUSALEM, 25 June — Indian and Israeli tourism ministers on Sunday signed a memorandum of understanding to further boost bilateral ties in tourism, with Israel opening a tourism office in Mumbai and increasing the number of El Al flights to the Asian country. During a Press conference in Jerusalem, Israeli Tourism Minister Stas Misezhnikov and his Indian counterpart, Minister Subodh Kant Sahai, announced that the main goal of this agreement is to increase tourism to and from Israel, India by half in the next three years. With over 40,000 Indian visitors per year to Israel, and equal number of Israeli citizens traveling to India, both ministers said that they saw an opportunity to expand the tourism market between the two countries.

"About 50,000 Israelis go to India every year and the same number of Indians visit Israel. We want to double this number in three years through mutual cooperation," Misezhnikov said during the conference. And to double the number, Israel will open a new tourism office in Mumbai and will construct 200,000 new hotel rooms as well as increase the number of El Al flights, the Israeli air carrier, from three times a week to one per day. "We are also looking into opening new El Al destinations, such as Kolkata and New Delhi, and to convince other air carriers to open more routes between our countries," Misezhnikov said. —Xinhua

Iraq's Sadr demands reforms for support of PM

NAJAF, 25 June — Cleric Moqtada al-Sadr, head of a powerful Shi'ite movement in Iraq, on Sunday called for more political reforms, saying he would back a no-confidence vote against the prime minister if they were not made. Sadr, a Shi'ite cleric who led uprisings against the US presence before American forces withdrew last December, is now an influential player in government after his bloc's support of Iraqi Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki helped secure his position.

"Our main demand and the last demand is reforms," Sadr told journalists during a rare news conference at his family home in the Shi'ite holy city of Najaf, southern Iraq. "I said and I am still saying that there is a promise from me to the other blocs if the votes (for a no-confidence motion) reach 124, my 40 votes are with them." He did not elaborate on what kind of political reforms he would like to see and said he would only support a no-confidence vote provided it did not prove harmful to Iraqis.

News Analysis: Putin's visit to Israel more symbolic than strategic JERUSALEM, 25 June — Iran's nuclear programme will be at the top of the agenda in Israeli officials meetings with Russian President Vladimir Putin, who will arrive in Israel on Monday for a one-day visit. With close business ties with Iran and as a permanent member of the United Nations Security Council (UNSC), Russia wields considerable influence over Iran's nuclear issue, which Israel will want to exploit toward imposing tougher sanction on Iran, meant to convince it to end its alleged nuclear military programme.

However, analysts told Xinhua that all the main issues to be discussed at the head-of-state-level meetings have already been dealt with in lower level preparatory meetings held months ago, and no drastic changes are likely. "I don't think that there will be any very serious political discussions during this one-day visit; mainly it will be a ceremonial visit," Dr Baruch Gur-Gurevitch of the University of Haifa told Xinhua on Sunday. "There will be a short meeting in which some political matters will be discussed. In general there will be a bit on Syria and a bit on Iran but it won't be a very important political visit," he added.

The situation in Syria, which continues to look more and more like a civil war, is of lesser interest to Israel, although Israel and Russia share a concern the conflicts in the country might spread and affect other nations in the region. —Xinhua

Greek PM to miss EU summit due to eye surgery

ATHENS, 25 June — Greek Prime Minister Antonis Samaras will not attend the forthcoming critical EU summit in Brussels on 28 June, as doctors advised him against air travel following an urgent eye surgery he underwent on Saturday. US seizes Tyrannosaurus bones on suspicion of smuggling

NEW YORK, 25 June—US officials on Friday seized the skeleton of a Tyrannosaurus dinosaur that Mongolia wants returned on suspicion that it was smuggled to the United States from the Gobi desert.

The bones of the tyrannosaurus bataar, an eight-foot-tall, 24-foot-long cousin of the Tyrannosaurus rex, were taken in a moving van from the Cadogan Tate Fine Art storage company in Queens, where they had been stored in four large wooden crates.

The President of Mongolia, Elbegdorj Tsakhia, demanded that the skeleton be returned to his country after it was auctioned on 20 May for $1.05 million by Dallas-based Heritage Auctions.

The buyer of the skeleton was never disclosed. But the man who acquired the skeleton and offered it to Heritage for auction, said he has been unfairly labeled as a smuggler.

“I’m just a guy in Gainesville, Florida trying to support my family, not some international bone smuggler,” commercial paleontologist Eric Prokopi said in a statement. “It’s been claimed that I misrepresented what was being imported and did not properly declare its value.

I can wholeheartedly say the import documents are not fraudulent,” Prokopi said in the statement issued through Heritage.

A US government

lawsuit filed on Tuesday on behalf of Mongolia said the customs forms filed when the skeleton was imported incorrectly stated the country of origin was Great Britain, its value was $15,000 instead of $1 million it sold for, and mentioned only reptiles not dinosaurs.

Prokopi did not say in his statement where or from whom he acquired the skeleton. He said that when he received the tyrannosaurus bataar, it was a collection of loose, mostly broken bones and rocks with embedded bones.

Prokopi said he and his wife spent thousands of hours preparing and mounting the skeleton, which increased its value, before it was auctioned.

On Monday, US Attorney Preet Bharara filed a lawsuit seeking the forfeiture of the skeleton to the Mongolian government.

An order to seize the fossil was issued on Tuesday. Robert Painter, the lawyer representing Mongolia, said that the dinosaur will be held by the US government while legal proceedings on its future continue.

Anyone who comes forward to claim ownership of the skeleton will have to prove they are the rightful owner or the US will repatriate the skeleton to Mongolia.

“Today we send a message to looters all over the world: We will not turn a blind eye to the marketplace of looted fossils,” Mongolian President Tsakhia said in a statement.

The skeleton was discovered in 1946 during a joint Soviet-Mongolian expedition to the Gobi Desert, Bharara said.

Heritage Auctions and the Mongolian government agreed in May to jointly investigate the ownership of the skeleton. Several paleontologists examined the bones and determined they were removed from the western Gobi Desert between 1995 and 2005.—Reuters

UNSG’s Message on the International Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking

26 June, 2012

Drug abuse and illicit trafficking continue to have a profoundly negative impact on development and stability across the world.

The billions of dollars generated from illicit drugs fuel terrorist activities and abet other crimes such as human trafficking and the smuggling of arms and people.

Illicit drugs and related criminal networks undermine the rule of law. And the impunity with which they go about their business causes tremendous fear and sows disillusion with governance at all levels.

Central America, for example, faces rising levels of violence fuelled by transnational organized crime and drug trafficking. The region is now home to the highest homicide rates in the world.

Development in Afghanistan is being hindered by the highest rates of opiate prevalence in the world. In parts of Myanmar, farmers are trapped by food insecurity compelling them to grow poppies as a cash crop.

The challenge is also greatly testing West and Central Africa, which lies along one of the main drug trafficking routes to Europe. With often weak legal and financial institutions, countries in the region are highly vulnerable.

Moreover, transit countries are no longer simply links in the chain of supply; they have become points of arrival. About half of the cocaine trafficked through West and Central Africa now remains in the region. Such changing patterns of drug consumption jeopardize hard won gains in sustainable development and good governance.

The drug, crime and corruption conventions of the United Nations form a solid basis for global solutions to these challenges. Together, these instruments offer a balanced approach to halt trafficking, promote viable alternatives to the farmers of cash crops, and offer drug users their health and human rights.

Our efforts to promote development and fight drugs and crime will be more effective if they are rooted in partnerships with the young, civil society, governments and the international community. Working together, we can alleviate the suffering of millions and break the hold of drugs and crime on countries, communities and families.

‘Brain-hacking’ technology sought

LONDON, 25 June—Stanford University researchers say they are working on a device that would allow them to “pretty much hack” into the brain of British genius Stephen Hawking.

Professor Philip Low and his colleagues at Stanford in California have been working with the disabled British theoretical physicist to develop technology that would enable them to communicate with Hawking through brain waves, The Daily Telegraph reported on Sunday.

“We’d like to find a way to bypass his body, pretty much hack his brain,” said Low, who invented the iBrain, which detects brain waves and communicates with them via computer.

Hawking, 70, has motor neurone disease that robbed him of his ability to speak nearly 30 years ago. He uses a computer to communicate but his condition is deteriorating.

The British newspaper said the researchers will provide an update on their work at a conference in Cambridge next month, and may demonstrate the technology on Hawking. Low describes the research into biomarkers as an attempt to provide “a window into the brain.”

“We’re building technology that will allow humanity to have access to the human brain for the first time,” he said.

“The emergence of such biomarkers opens the possibility to link intended movements to a library of words and convert them into speech, thus providing motor neurone sufferers with communication tools more dependent on the brain than on the body.”

Pasta made from green banana flour offers tasty treat for gluten-free eaters

WASHINGTON, 25 June— Researchers from the University of Brazil have developed a gluten-free pasta product from green banana flour, which tasters found more acceptable than regular whole wheat pasta.

The product will be a boon to people with celiac disease, who struggle with has less fat and is cheaper to produce than standard pastas.

“There was no significant difference between the modified pasta and standard samples in terms of appearance, aroma, flavor, and overall quality,” said lead investigator Renata Puppim Zandonadi, PhD, Department of Nutrition,

Researchers compared a standard whole-wheat pasta preparation made from whole wheat flour and whole eggs with one made from green banana flour, egg whites, water, and gums. The alterations reduced the fat content and increased the protein value of the modified pasta, important because gluten removal typically reduces some proteins responsible for some sensory characteristics of pasta products.

The egg whites and gum result in pasta that is less sticky than typical gluten-free pastas, and promote firmness, elasticity, moisture, and uniformity.

The modified pasta decreased fat content by over 98 percent. This reduction is particularly important to patients with celiac disease, because many gluten-free products compensate for the removal of gluten with high levels of lipid content.

Fifty testers who did not have celiac disease and 25 celiac disease patients compared the pastas. In both groups, the modified pasta was better accepted than the standard in aroma, flavor, texture, and overall quality, indicating that the product can possibly be commercialized to a wider market than just those with celiac disease.

The modified pasta had a high quantity of resistant starch, which may help control glycemic indexes, cholesterol, intestinal regularity, and fermentation by intestinal bacteria.

“Considering that untreated celiac disease promotes cancer in intestinal cells and a highly inflammatory mucosal status, developing gluten-free products with bioactive compounds such as the ones present in green banana flour is important for celiac disease patients,” said Dr Zandonadi.

“Patients will benefit from ingesting a product with a better nutritional profile made from an ingredient that is produced and consumed throughout the world,” she added.

Their research has been published in the Journal of the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics.

Stress can be good for immune system

WASHINGTON, 25 June— Stress is bad for you—you’ve heard it a thousand times. But it can be good for your immune system, says a study.

Short-term stress, the fight-or-flight response, a mobilisation of bodily resources lasting minutes or hours in response to immediate threats — stimulates immune activity, said Firdaus Dhabhar, associate professor of psychiatry and behavioural sciences and member of the Stanford University Institute for Immunity, Transplantation, and Infection.

And that’s a good thing. The immune system is crucial for wound healing and preventing or fighting infection, and both wounds and infections are common risks during chases, escapes and combat, the Journal of Psychoneuroendocrinology reported.

Working with colleagues at Stanford and two other universities, Dhabhar showed that subjecting lab rats to mild stress caused a massive mobilization of several key types of immune cells into the bloodstream and then onto the skin and other tissues, according to a university statement.

This large-scale migration of immune cells, which took place over two hours, was comparable to the mustering of troops in a crisis, Dhabhar said. He and colleagues had previously shown that a similar immune-cell redistribution in patients experiencing the short-term stress of surgery predicts enhanced postoperative recovery.

Investigators were able to show that the massive redistribution of immune cells throughout the body was orchestrated by three hormones released by the adrenal glands, in different amounts and at different times, in response to the stress-inducing event. These hormones are the brain’s call-to-arms to the rest of the body, Dhabhar said.

“Mother Nature gave us the fight-or-flight stress response to help us, not to kill us,” said Dhabhar, who has been conducting experiments for well over a decade on the effects of the major stress hormones on the immune system.

The findings paint a clearer picture of exactly how the mind influences immune activity.

“An impala’s immune system has no way of knowing that a lion is lurking in the grass and is about to pounce, but its brain does,” Dhabhar added.

BMW, Toyota eye close partnership

BERLIN, 25 June— Bayerische Motoren Werke and Toyota Motor Corp are planning to expand cooperation beyond green car technology and diesel engines, Der Spiegel magazine reported on Sunday, without citing any sources.

Chevy Cruzes recalled

DETROIT, 25 June— General Motors on Friday recalled 413,418 Chevrolet Cruzes for a problem with the engine shield under the vehicle.

GM said a modification to the shield will keep liquids from becoming trapped in the engine compartment where they could start a fire.

The recall affects 2011-12 model year vehicles built from September 2010 to May 2012 at Lordstown, Ohio.

Separately, GM will inspect all welds in the rear compartment of the recalled vehicles to make sure they were properly applied. The company said there could be a problem in about 249 cars that may affect the fuel tank strap secondary brackets attachment to the floor and a sub-assembly to the rear floor pan.

GM said it is unaware of any crashes or injuries related to either problem. Only vehicles sold in the United States and Canada, and a few hundred exported to Israel, are affected.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration began investigating the issue following two engine compartment fires, GM said.

GM said the modification will take about 30 minutes and be performed at Chevrolet dealerships free of charge. Owners will begin receiving letters 11 July.

Fructose may help improve blood sugar control in diabetics

WASHINGTON, 25 June— Fructose may not be as bad for us as previously thought and it may even provide some benefit, a new study has suggested.

“Over the last decade, there have been connections made between fructose intake and rates of obesity,” Dr John Sievenpiper, a senior author of the study, said.

“However, this research suggests that the problem is likely one of overconsumption, not fructose,” Dr Sievenpiper said.

The study reviewed 18 trials with 209 participants who had Type 1 and 2 diabetes and found fructose significantly improved their blood sugar control.

The improvement was equivalent to what can be achieved with an oral antidiabetic drug. Even more promising, Dr Sievenpiper said, is that the researchers saw benefit even without adverse effects on body weight, blood pressure, uric acid (gout) or cholesterol.

Fructose, which is naturally found in fruit, vegetables and honey, is a simple sugar that together with glucose forms sucrose, the basis of table sugar. It is also found in high-fructose corn syrup, the most common sweetener in commercially prepared foods.

In all the trials they reviewed, participants were fed diets where fructose was incorporated or sprinkled on to test foods such as cereals or coffee. The diets with fructose had the same amount of calories as the ones without.

“Attention needs to go back where it belongs, which is on the concept of moderation,” said Adrian Cozma, the lead author of the paper and a research assistant with Dr Sievenpiper. “We’re seeing that there may be benefit if fructose wasn’t being consumed in such large amounts,” Cozma said. “All negative attention on fructose-related harm draws further away from the issue of eating too many calories,” Cozma added.

Message sent by Chairman of Central Committee for Drug Abuse Control Union Minister for Home Affairs Lt-Gen Ko Ko on the occasion of International Day against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking

Today is the International Day against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking. Every country in the world holds commemorative ceremonies. At the same time, I strongly believe that Regional Committee for Drug Abuse Control will hold ceremonies and activities on eradication of narcotic drugs across the country on extensive scale. In addition, ceremonies to destroy seized precursor chemicals and paraphernalia including narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, are being held in Yangon, Mandalay and Taunggyi.

Successive governments in Myanmar have addressed narcotic drug problems, based on their own capacity. A comprehensive 15-year National Plan (1999-2000 to 2013 to 2014) was laid down. Setting eradication of narcotic drugs as national duty, the two strategies namely development of the life of national races and totally eradication of narcotic drugs, have been implemented through three tactics—supply eradication, demand eradication and law enforcement.

This year is the third year of third five-year plan. Total eradication of poppy cultivation is being implemented in cooperation with international organizations after three-year development plan in poppy cultivation areas has been laid down.

Myanmar government signed MoU with neighbouring countries, regional countries and sub-region countries as it needs to make cooperation in eradication of narcotic drug with the global countries. Thanks to cooperation between international law enforcement agencies, drug trafficking gangs involved in transnational crimes could be arrested and punitive actions against them taken.

With the cooperation of local people, the government has intensified its efforts to destroy poppy plantation and control narcotic drug traffickers. As a result, the government has taken action against 3991 people from 2617 drug-related cases in 2011.

The government is making strenuous efforts for eradication of narcotic drugs while families, schools, social organizations and religious organizations can make preventive measures against narcotic drugs. Likewise, economic organizations could support the efforts by opening vocational training courses. Cooperation with civil societies would make the country drug-free by 2014.

Various kinds of narcotic drugs and stimulant tablets have been a threat to the people even though drug abuse control is being undertaken across the world. Drug trafficking, once viewed largely as a social and criminal problem, has transformed in recent years into a major threat to the health and security of people and regions.

The theme of International Day against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking for this year is "Global Action for Healthy Communities without Drugs". This reflects action and cooperation to achieve the goal of an international society free of drug abuse. Use of narcotic drugs can lead to HIV/AIDS epidemic, and youth could fail before reaching their goals. People all are to prevent and control the danger of narcotic drugs in unison. Let me take this opportunity to urge all to continue to make strenuous efforts by joining hands to become a healthy community free of drug abuse.

Will Duanwu festival still be celebrated by Vietnamese youngsters?

HANOI, 25 June — "Do not get out of the bed. Eat it first! It will kill all insects inside your body, said my mother while giving me a bowl of fermented sticky rice right after I woke up in the morning today, the Duanwu festival," Nguyen Mai Lan, a 20 year-old Vietnamese girl told Xinhua reporter in capital Hanoi on Saturday. Duanwu festival, as known as the "Killing inner insects Festival" in Vietnam, is celebrated every year on the fifth of the fifth lunar month, the transition between spring and summer.

The name "Killing inner insects Festival" derives from the fact that farmers, on this day, get rid of all worms to start growing their crops for the new season. Furthermore, the day of changing weather from spring to summer is the time easy to get pathogen." My mother made the fermented sticky rice few days before the festival. Not so many people do it nowadays. They often bought it in the market," Lan added. "I steamed sticky rice first and left it a long time to cool down. The rice is then mixed with yeast. The compound of sticky rice and yeast would be kept in a big jar for about two or three days depending on weather until it is fermented," Nguyen Thi Mai, Lan's mother told reporter.

"This is the mid-year festival to prevent diseases and to ward off evil spirits. Therefore, on this occasion, the whole family must wake up early and eat fermented sticky rice and fruits," Mai said. "In our belief, eating fermented sticky rice before doing any other things in the morning will help cleaning the digest system," Mai added. After having fermented sticky rice, fruits like plums and litchi are also indispensable. "In central and southern part of Vietnam, people have the tradition of eating sticky rice cakes and dumplings, especially lye water dumplings, extends from the belief that the dumplings will cleanse one's body of any unwanted parasites," Mai told reporter.—Xinhua

Bomb scare at Johannesburg airport turns out to be empty threat

JOHANNESBURG, 25 June — No explosives had been found in an abandoned bag which prompted the evacuation in terminal buildings at the Lanseria Airport west of Johannesburg, South Africa, airport authorities said on Saturday.

The article found in the bag was harmless, the airport's spokesperson Johan Opperman said. All operations and services would resume after everything was cleared, Opperman said. Meanwhile, Gauteng police Captain Katlego Mogale said the bag contained a "white substance" which has been sent to the laboratory for testing.

Mogale said cigarettes, dried dates and clothing were also found in the bag. The bag set off a bomb scare that led to the evacuation of all passengers and staff earlier in the day. Incoming flights were disrupted and outgoing flights were delayed due to the bomb scare.— Xinhua

Robber who fled Ore tripped up by Facebook posts

PORTLAND, 25 June — James Tindell skipped out of state this spring rather than attend drug treatment and follow other conditions he accepted to avoid prison after pleading guilty to robbery in 2010. But rather do everything possible to avoid detection, he used Facebook to taunt his probation officer and write angry messages about the Multnomah County judge who sentenced him, The Oregonian reported.

"Fresh out of another state," Tindell wrote on 20 April, "Catch me if you can." Later, he signed a rant about the criminal justice system: "the 1 who got away." Tindell apparently didn't realize who might be reading his Facebook page, with such posts as, "I'm in Alabama." He also posted a sonogram of his unborn son that showed the name of the county general hospital in Alabama where it was taken. But probation officer Todd Roberts does monitor the social network and he collected the posts.

He figured out where Tindell might be, and asked prosecutors to issue a nationwide arrest warrant, which Oregon Gov John Kitzhaber signed. "The way we found out where James Tindell was, was through Facebook," deputy district attorney Michael Schmidt said. "And, it's not because we were super sleuths." Last month, Tindell was arrested for speeding in Daphne, Ala. An officer ran his license and found the warrant. Soon, he was on a flight to appear before the same judge he had criticized on Facebook. "Mr Tindell," Judge Eric J Bloch said at a 8 June hearing in Multnomah County Circuit Court.

"You turned in some good periods of performance. And then, for whatever reason, you decided that you had had enough, and you just took off, and you never looked back." Tindell, in tears, pleaded for leniency. Bloch cut him off. "Sir, you could have stayed here and done treatment. You decided to run away. So how could you now be asking for me to give you another chance to avoid prison?" "Crying, Tindell admitted, "I messed up." Bloch sentenced him to 2 ½ years in prison and ordered him to reimburse the state for the cost of flying him back: $2,600.

Torrential rains leave 16 dead in China

NANNING, 25 June — At least 16 people have been confirmed dead after torrential rains battered southern and northern regions of China over the past three days, local authorities said on Sunday. Floods triggered by rainstorms have killed six people, affected the lives of more than 450,000 people, destroyed some 1,000 houses and inundated almost 17,000 hectares of cropland in the Guangxi Zhuang autonomous regions, a government spokesman said.

Direct economic losses were estimated at 128 million yuan (20.3 million US dollars), the spokesman said, adding local authorities have launched relief operations. Local meteorological authorities forecast that more heavy rainfalls will hit parts of Guangxi on Monday. Around 8 pm on Saturday, rainstorm-triggered floods also affected three counties in the Ulanqab city in Inner Mongolia, said authorities with the city government of Ulanqab.

As of 8:40 pm on Sunday, eight people have been confirmed killed in the floods, which have also cut the road communication and power supply in some regions, said the authorities. Strong downpours also battered east China's Jiangxi Province from Friday, leaving over 734,000 people in disaster, the provincial flood prevention and control headquarters said. Local governments have relocated about 26,890 people to avoid flood risks. By 8 pm on Sunday, ten major reservoirs in Jiangxi have seen their water level rising above the warning levels, said the headquarters.—Xinhua

But, let me say frankly the task is formidable for a developing country like us. We need a lot of assistance from international organizations and NGOs. Unless there is energetic cooperation, integrated and all inclusive Myanmar social protection system could not be built firmly as we aspire. In all seriousness, I would like to invite scholars, UN agencies and international organizations here to join hands with us. I would like to request you to fill the gaps for the vulnerable, children and the aged. I would like you to help them find greener pasture and pleasure of life and to resurrect the hopes of the jobless and low-income people.

Our people are also the members of the global family. The disabled, malnourished children, HIV/AIDS patients needing treatment, and the unemployed youth are also the part of global family like citizens from other countries. Our country lacks a lot in social protection. However, due to various reasons, we have been neglected by international organizations denying our rights. Our government has opened the door to international community. So, you all should welcome our move with constructive view and cooperate with us, I request. Our open-door policy is for the sake of all of our people. We hope you would give assistance as soon as you possibly can to our people, particularly the vulnerable who are in desperate need of social protection. Our government's focus on economic performance is mainly intended to fulfil these needs.

We are obliged for our people. This is the concept of our government. Social security and social protection need a great deal of financial resources like social financing apart from the goodwill of the government. We are taking steps to draft and enact laws to make sure the unemployed have more job opportunities and the workers effective social and security protection. Social protection plans would not progress well without the solid support of legal regulation. We hope to acquire legal advices reflecting our country's objective conditions from this conference.

I would like to suggest the formation of national high-level institution in order that social protection works progress report, further requirements, policy and strategy formulation, assessment of the effectiveness of works during project periods and policy review and so on can be monitored in long-term. Scholars from international community, representatives from international organizations, donors and representatives of donor organizations at home and abroad can join the association. Strategy adopted by the organization must be assessed and review of the practical implementation must be informed to the policymakers and the public.

In conclusion,

I would like to urge the conference to map out strategies and work programmes for social protection of our country. We would much appreciate if you would kindly suggest programmes that can go in harmony with ongoing rural development and poverty reduction scheme of our government. With this I conclude my speech hoping you would bring strategic and practical plans for the sake of our people.

After that, Union Minister for Labour and for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement U Aung Kyi extended greetings. He said that while facing challenges of labours and social welfare policy changes, economic and social aims of the State will be implemented. New Social Security Bill has been submitted to the Hluttaw for creating more effective rights for the employees to enjoy retirement pension and for implementing the social security housing project. Moreover, the conference is being convened for adopting the new social protection programme so as to raise social protection for the people.

The noblest aim of the conference will contribute towards much to vocational tasks of the people and creation of opportunities for income, employment, education and health sectors. It will include care for children and disabled persons and response to suddenly-hit natural disasters. The discussions from the conference will benefit social protection tasks for the people.

Next, UNICEF resident representative Dr Ramesh Shreshtha extended greetings. After the opening ceremony, President U Thein Sein, the Union ministers and guests posed for a documentary photo.

The President and guests cordially greeted those present.

Later, the agenda of the conference continued. The conference will continue on 26 June.

Summer paddy threshed, winnowed in Yamethin

YAMETHIN, 25 June—Local farmers in Yamethin Township of Mandalay Region are busy with threshing and winnowing summer paddy. Some farmers grow Paethwe and Hsinthukha paddy strains on the plots of Kyenigan irrigated areas.

This year, fine weather and supply of water contributed to production of Hsinthukha paddy at 135 baskets per acre and Paethwe paddy 165 baskets per acre.

As summer paddy was harvested in rainy season, the farmers immediately used machinery for winnowing paddy and then stored paddy.

After that, they continued farming works for nurturing of paddy saplings and ploughing works.

KUALA LUMPUR, 25 June — Search teams were on Sunday looking for six scuba divers who went missing a day earlier off a Malaysian resort island after apparently failing to resurface, a maritime official said.

The group, including a diver from Singapore, one from China and four Malaysians, disappeared after going diving off Tioman island on Malaysia's east coast on Saturday, according to an official with the Malaysian Maritime Enforcement Agency. Only one person with the group, whose members were aged between 25 and 33 and which included two women, resurfaced after the dive, he said. Three boats and eight navy divers are involved in the search. Malaysia's east coast islands, famed for their corals and marine life, are a popular dive destination. Accidents are rare.—Internet

Cancer kids numbers in Fiji keeps increasing: experts

SUVA, 25 June — Fiji Cancer Society President Nirmala Nambia said on Sunday that at least 40 children are diagnosed with cancer annually in the island nation with a population of over 800,000 people.

Just from January to date there have been 10 new cases recorded, which are just the ones that are reported to the Ministry of Health, says the expert. She told the media that Leukemia was still the leading cancer for children in Fiji.

Doctor Isaia Immanuel, Colonial War Memorial Hospital's (CWM) Child-en's Ward acting chief medical officer, confirmed that there is an increase in the number of children suffering from cancer and treating them remains a big challenge. Immanuel said doctors and patients faced huge challenges before and during treatment. "The challenge we face is that the treatment and recovery process is long and takes up to three years." Chemotherapy was available and more favorable compared to five or 10 years ago, says the doctor.

Fiji's CWM Hospital recorded 23 brain tumor cases, 19 acute lympho-blastic leukemia cases, 14 acute myelogenous leukemia cases and 13 lymphoma cases between 2005 and last year. "Blood cancer or leukemia is the most common form of cancer among children all over the world," said Immanuel, adding "other cancers that affect children include brain tumors, lymphoma and soft tissue sarcoma."

Immanuel held that brain tumor was very challenging because patients had to be evacuated abroad for treatment while renal cancer was treatable as there was 80 percent to 90 percent survival rate.— Xinhua

Mail service suspended due to crows

Canada Post said it has suspended mail delivery to a neighbourhood due to birds dive-bombing a letter carrier. The postal service delivered a notice Tuesday to about 30 residents of Ralph Avenue in Winnipeg, Manitoba, explaining mail delivery has been suspended due to crows dive-bombing the neighbourhood's letter carrier, the Canadian Broadcasting Corp reported. "Due to the ongoing safety concern caused by the aggressive crows attacking your letter carrier, all mail delivery is temporarily suspended until Canada Post and the city of Winnipeg can determine a solution," the notice read. Canada Post said the residents can pick up their mail from the depot. Resident Len Chapko said the birds in question are nesting in a tree in front of his house and have been attacking him when he goes outside. "He come so close, he raised the hair on the back of my head. So I looked up and the neighbours are laughing because he came after me!" Chapko said.

Manitoba Conservation said the birds may have become aggressive to protect their young, which are likely hear the point when they leave the nest and learn how to fly. The agency said the period can last anywhere from a day to about a week, or longer if the young birds are injured.

Woman upset over corpse on flight

A Swedish woman says she had to fly overnight from Europe to Tanzania next to a man who died after the plane had departed.

Lena Pettersson, a reporter for Sveriges Radio, said the man was having convulsions before the Kenya Airways flight departed from Amsterdam, the Netherlands. The plane took off anyway, The Local.se reported. He died several hours later while the plane was in the air. Pettersson said she then had to sit across from the dead man for the rest of the flight. "Of course it was unpleasant, but I am not a person who makes a fuss," Pettersson told the Expressen newspaper. She later decided, however, to seek compensation. It took a couple of months of e-mails but she was finally refunded $713 — about half of the cost of her ticket, Sveriges Radio said.

Jennifer Lopez treated for back pain and robbed in Argentina

Jennifer Lopez

MELBOURNE, 25 June— Jennifer Lopez, who is in Argentina as part of her 'Dance Again' tour, was robbed just hours after she left a clinic after being treated for a stabbing pain in her lower back. According to local entertainment website Primicias, the thief took personal items from the 42-year-old singer's dressing room, while she performed at the GEBA stadium in Buenos Aires on Thursday. The stolen goods included a computer, a camera and a bag with personal documents such as IDs and passports. Complicating matters, Lopez's manager Benny Medina, who has also been robbed, has not been able to leave the country since he has lost all forms of identification. According to Spanish network Univision, the 'On the Floor' singer had experienced extreme back pain and had to interrupt her sound stage and had to be taken to a clinic. Lopez later took to Twitter to talk about the incident, revealing that her kids had something to do with the hospital scare. "Got an xray this morning...all good...pulled back muscle," the Daily Telegraph quoted Lopez as writing on Twitter on Thursday. "Coconuts getting to big to carry both at once. Awww... #timeflies:)" she wrote. Despite the accident, Lopez did not cancel her elaborate, two-hour concert, in which she performed old tunes such as 'Get Right', 'Let's Get Loud', 'Waiting for Tonight' and her popular song 'Jenny From the Block'.—Internet

Italy ousts England 4-2 on penalties, through to Euro semis

KIEV, 25 June — Substitute Alessandro Diamanti, only on his third cap, struck the decisive penalty to help Italy oust England 4-2 on penalties here on Saturday to set up a Euro 2012 semifinal clash with Germany. The regular time of the eye-catching quarterfinal ended in 0-0, which was the first goalless tie of the tournament. After the goalless extra time, the penalty shootout began with Italian striker Mario Balotelli's flash goal. However, Italian midfielder Riccardo Montolivo shot wide in the second round, and both Steven Gerrard and Wayne Rooney scored to lift England to a 2-1 lead. After Andrea Pirlo tied the score 2-2 with a mysterious dink, both Ashley Young and Ashley Cole failed in their attempts. Young missed the target and Cole's shot was saved by Gianluigi Buffon. As Antonio Nocerino and Diamanti sent the ball home, Italy won. England coach Roy Hodgson said after the duel, "We tried our best and we took penalties in training." Both Young and Cole showed their form in penalties before but today the luck was not on their side, Hodgson said.

Italian coach Cesare Prandelli told the Press conference, "We controlled the game and created many chances. We would have opportunities to end the game in regular time. We deserved the win." "To win a penalty shootout, I think, luck accounts for 80 percent," Prandelli said. "Pirlo's dink showed his calmness. Although Montolivo missed his penalty, he was great tonight in the regular and extra time." Answering a question about why Balotelli was chosen to be the first one in the shootout, Prandelli said, "He himself asked for it and we all trust him."

Commenting on the match, Prandelli said, "The opponents did not want to come out, so we have to play quickly. We dominated the match especially in the second half." Italy boasted 64 percent of ball possession and 35 shots, 20 on target, against England's nine and four. During the game, England made a flying start, but after 10 minutes, Italy started to be in control. The most splendid chance came in the 25th minute when Balotelli was sprung clean through over the top but England keeper Joe Hart came out, and John Terry made a vital block as he got his leg in the way of Balotelli's attempted chip.

In the 49th minute, Italian midfielder De Rossi missed a great chance. The corner was cleared, then nodded back in and De Rossi was all alone six yards out but dragged his volley wide. In the 52nd minute, Italy squandered a triple chance. Pirlo fired in the first effort and Hart parried, then his legs block Balotelli's follow up from eight yards before Montolivo volleyed over to end a breathless passage. In the 60th minute, Balotelli brought down a looping ball in the box and teed it up before sticking an overhead kick over the bar. England made substitution first in the 61st minute. James Milner and Danny Welbeck went off, Theo Walcott and Andy Carroll came on. The 63rd minute witnessed a nice work by Balotelli, down the right and holding it up, he laid it back to Pirlo who found De Rossi at the back post but the latter's shot went wide. England's chance came in the 65th minute. Walcott crossed, and Carroll confused Ignazio Abate. The ball broke free but Young scuffed it wide from 12 yards. In injury time, Rooney made a bicycle kick in the box but it flew over the bar. In the extra time, Italy still laid siege to the England goal. Substitute Nocerino scored at the goalmouth with a header but was deprived as offside. Prandelli said, "The semifinal with Germany will be very difficult as Germany have two more days to prepare the game."—Xinhua

Lang claims 1st LPGA win with playoff birdie binge

ONTARIO, 25 June — American Brittany Lang earned her first LPGA Tour victory, winning the Manulife Financial Classic by making birdie on the par-five 18th hole three consecutive times in a playoff. Lang on Sunday held off a wave of South Korean contenders in the playoff after shooting a four-under 67 in regulation to reach 16-under 268. "I just tried to stay down in the putt and have nice tempo," Lang said. "I haven't been in this position much. I'm just trying to learn."

"I can't believe I finally won. I've had my chances and I still can't believe I did it." She edged out South Koreans Seo Hee-kyung, Chella Choi and Inbee Park at the Grey Silo Golf Course. Choi was knocked out on the first extra hole, third-round leader Park was eliminated on the second hole, setting the stage for a head-to-head battle between Lang and Seo. Lang rolled in a five-foot putt for the win. Four of the top six and six of the top 13 finishers Sunday were from South Korea.

The birdie made amends for a shorter putt that

Lang missed on the 18th hole in regulation that would have clinched the tournament for her. Choi closed with a 63 on Sunday, Park a 69 and Seo a 67 to get to 16-under. Reigning US Women's Open champion Ryu So-yeon and American Stacy Lewis both fired seven-under 64s on Sunday to finish in a tie for fifth at 15-under. Lewis is a two-time winner this season. Playing partners Lang, Seo and Park all settled for pars on 18 to set up the playoff.

Kim Clijsters plays at Wimbledon for last time

WIMBLEDON, 25 June — As a reporter began to formulate a question about the first time Kim Clijsters retired, only to return to tennis, the four-time major champion cut off the query with a smile and a quick response. "No, this is it," she said on Sunday. "If that's where you're going, this is it." No doubt at all? "No, no, no," Clijsters repeated. The Belgian, who turned 29 on 8 June, is back at Wimbledon for only the second time in the past six years - and, yes, the absolutely, positively last time. Clijsters already has announced that she'll be leaving the sport for good after the US Open in September. Why?

"Too old. Too old to play the game that I want to play physically. I've put my body through enough strain and everything. The whole lifestyle, that's what I'm dealing with now, the lifestyle I've had for the last 15, 20 years. It's been great. I wouldn't change it for a thing," explained Clijsters, one of only three mothers to have won a Grand Slam title. "But I'm not going to be the type of player that's going to change the way I play or the way that I move."

The daughter of a professional soccer player, Clijsters has derived much of her success on a court from pure athleticism that helped her produce punishing groundstrokes and stretching-into-the-splits court coverage. Those abilities allowed her to win the US Open in 2005, 2009 and 2010, and the Australian Open in 2011. "I naturally have that strong movement, powerful shots, and that's been able to have me on top of women's tennis and be, you know, I think on the highest part of women's tennis, with Venus (Williams), Serena (Williams), Justine (Henin), to be part of that," Clijsters said.

Djokovic feeling confident for Wimbledon defence

WIMBLEDON, 25 June — The question drew a chuckle from Novak Djokovic. Could the prestigious Grand Slam tournament Wimbledon, officially called simply The Championships, be thought of as a dress rehearsal this year? After all, the tennis portion of the London Olympics will be held on the same grass courts at the All England Club, starting on 28 July, three weeks following the end of Wimbledon.

"I don't believe that Wimbledon can be rehearsal for anything," Djokovic said on Sunday, gently tapping his fingers on the desk in front of him. "It's (the) most respected, most well-known, most valuable tennis tournament in the world. This is, in my opinion, the pinnacle of our sport. Of course, Olympic Games are something (beyond) comparison with any other tournaments."

OK, so forget the notion of Wimbledon-as-tuneup. Still, the No 1-ranked Djokovic and others are excited about the prospect of playing at their sport's most hallowed ground for more than one prize this season. "It is very emotional, because it is not just you who matters there, it's the whole nation. So there is a huge excitement going on with all the tennis players prior to the Olympic Games," said Djokovic, who will carry Serbia's flag at the opening ceremony next month.

Serena Williams explained: "As a tennis player, you get to play Grand Slams, which you get to play every other week, it seems. You don't think about the Olympics. It's just an added bonus." Djokovic begins the defense of his Wimbledon title — and, um, Olympic preparations — on Monday, playing the first match on Centre Court, an honor given the previous year's male champion. He'll face Juan Carlos Ferrero, who won the French Open in 2003 and briefly held the top spot in the ATP rankings that year.

Phelps sticks with 400m medley at US trials

OMAHA, (Nebraska) 25 June — Michael Phelps confirmed on Sunday that he would compete in the 400 meters individual medley at the US Olympic swimming trials, raising the prospect that he could better his record haul of eight gold medals at the London Olympics. Phelps won the lung-bursting event at the past two Olympics but was considering dropping it from his programme for London, which will be his final appearance at the Games. But the 26-year-old left open the possibility that he could eclipse his record from Beijing four years ago when he did not withdraw from Monday's race by the scratch deadline.

He needs to finish in the top two at the trials to swim the event in London. If he wins it, he will become only the third swimmer, and the first male, to win the same event at three Olympics. "I had always said that, and I still say and I believe it more now than I really ever have, that there comes an end to everything, and for me and my career, I never want to look back and say "What if I did this one way and that one way?," he told a news conference on Saturday.

At least 32 killed in bus accident in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, 25 June—At least 32 people were killed in Mexico on Sunday after the bus they were travelling in turned over on a wet road in the southwestern state of Guerrero, a Red Cross official said.

At least seven people were injured and believed to be in a serious condition, the official said. "In the area where it happened it's raining very hard," he added.

The official said most of the people inside the passenger bus were wearing T-shirts emblazoned with the logo of Mexico's Labour Party (PT), a small grouping in Congress supporting leftist presidential hopeful Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador.

Other emergency crews were dispatched to where the accident took place about 2-1/2 hours drive southwest of Mexico City.

Guerrero state police department had no immediate comment. Mexico holds a presidential election on 1 July.

Bus crashes and other road accidents are common on Mexico's main roads, causing hundreds of deaths a year.

In April, at least 43 people were killed when a

Owen urges England coaching revamp after Euro agony

LONDON, 25 June—Former England striker Michael Owen led calls for an overhaul of the country's coaching on Monday after another major tournament campaign ended in disappointment.

England bowed out of Euro 2012 in Kiev on Sunday with their sixth penalty shootout defeat in seven attempts after a one-sided quarter-final against Italy finished 0-0 following extra-time.

But unlike previous disappointments, there was universal recognition on Monday that England had got exactly what they deserved from the encounter and that the technically superior Italians were worthy victors.

The match statistics later underscored Italy's superiority in all departments, with the Azzurri enjoying 64 percent possession to England's 34 percent, with 35 goal attempts to England's nine.

England's failure to maintain possession was also reflected in the telling passing statistics, with Italy completing 815 passes to England's paltry 320.

Owen said the only way England could hope to be competitive in future was to change coaching at grass-roots level.

"Easy for people to say 'until we keep possession better we will never win anything'. We are not as good as others at doing that," Owen wrote on Twitter.

"We played to our strengths but are just not quite good enough. We were hoping to 'do a Chelsea' (referring to the tactics they adopted to win the Champions League last season). 'If you are not the best team then you have to find an alternative way to win. The other option is to forget results for a while and start from scratch playing a different style.'"—Internet

Briton dies after jumping from Eiffel Tower

LONDON, 25 June—A British man has committed suicide by climbing up the Eiffel Tower in Paris and jumping to his death, officials said on Monday. Police spotted the man climbing the structure of the tower around 11:30 pm (2130 GMT) on Sunday. They evacuated the tower, sealed off the area and tried to negotiate with the man.

Firefighters tried to talk the British man down from the tower but failed and he jumped from between its second and third levels, a height of between 125 and 310 metres (410 to 1,017 feet), said Frederic Grosjean, deputy spokesman for the Paris firefighters' brigade.

Suicides by jumping from the tower "happen frequently enough, but it is rare for someone to be able to climb so high", a police source said.

Firefighters intervened again on Monday when a woman aged about 30 also attempted to jump from the tower. She was talked out of the suicide and lifted by helicopter from the structure.

Reached by AFP, Eiffel Tower management refused to comment on the number of suicides at the site every year, saying only: "It is always too many."—Internet

NAY PYI TAW, 25 June—Myanmar goodwill delegation led by Speaker of Pyidaungsu Hluttaw and Amyohta Hluttaw U Khin Aung Myint paid a call on President of the National

national assembly committees held talks at the meeting hall of the assembly.

In her speech, the national assembly president extended her thanks to Myanmar delegation for their visit to Laos, expressing her hope that the discussions between the two parliaments during the visit would bring fruitful results both for governments and parliaments of two nations. The president then introduced the assembly committee chairpersons to the Myanmar delegation.

The Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Speaker in his speech spoke the world of long-established amity between the two countries, expressing his heartfelt thanks to Laos for its constant support for Myanmar in regional and international arena. The speaker then clarified political developments in Myanmar, progress in economic reforms and internal peace-making process, establishment of the parliament in line with the constitution and plans for holding the fourth parliamentary regular sessions in coming July, pledging efforts for closer relations between the two parliaments.

The national assembly president expressed her pleasure to see Myanmar hosting SEA GAMES in 2013, taking the ASEAN chair in 2014 and experiencing internal political developments. She then explained long-term and short-term plans, economic, social, health and foreign relations affairs of Laos. She then invited the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Speaker and Myanmar parliamentary delegation to attend the 7th ASEP Meeting to be held in Laos in October, 2012. They then had a frank discussion on promotion of bilateral relations between two parliaments, exchanging parliamentary experiences of each other.

The Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Speaker and party then paid a floral tribute at unknown soldiers mausoleum.
