Children and toys

With the advent of a variety of toys, safety should be the first priority when selecting a toy, especially for children under five who may be curious but unable to sense the danger from toys.

A safe toy is the one that cannot get stuck in the mouth, nose or ear. Sharp edges should be avoided. Artificial colouring can also cause harm as the children often suck or swallow the toys and their wrappings, so parents should make sure that the toys are free from harmful substances and, preferably, are made from natural products.

Parents should select toys according to the age and developmental stage of the children in order to maximize the beneficial effects on emotions, social skills, intellect and imagination. A good toy should also allow multiple players or let the parents participate in some way. Board games and guessing games offer chances for interaction with other family members, something crucial to child development.

Some expensive toys may have benefits that are worth the price, but many can often be substituted with less costly options. Some parents can even make toys themselves, which can impress their children. Parents should remind themselves that price does not equal quality, love or parental understanding.

Meanwhile, parents should not give in to their children's whims too often, by buying toys as that could spoil them. On the other hand, they should not be too strict either, or an unhealthy distance can be created. And don't be more indulgent towards your children.

LONDON, 16 July—London's Olympic Games is not threatened by a major security contractor's failure to find enough staff, ministers and the head of the city's organizing committee said on Sunday, seeking to quell a political storm ahead of athletes' arrival.

No games security threat despite guards fiasco

Three days ago, the government announced it would draft in 3,500 extra troops as cover after concerns over the safety of athletes and spectators, and raised fears that those trying to get into venues would face long queues to get through security.

"(Security) has not been compromised," Sebastian Coe, chairman of the London Olympic organising committee (LOCOG), told BBC radio.

"This is not about numbers. This is simply about the mix. We will have a safe and secure Games. Would I prefer not to be dealing with this two weeks out? The answer of course is yes."

Safety has been at the top of organizers' list of concerns ever since four young British Islamists killed 52 people in suicide bomb attacks in the capital the day after London was awarded the games in 2005. Last month Jonathan Evans, the head of the MI5 domestic intelligence agency, warned that the Games presented an attractive target.

While senior officials say there is nothing to indicate any attack is being planned, holes in the security apparatus have been highlighted before thousands of athletes and officials start arriving on Monday.

The Observer newspaper on Sunday cited an unnamed senior border official as saying that suspects on government watch lists were being allowed into Britain without proper checks because inexperienced recruits were being used to man borders.

About 150,000 children die of preventable disease annually in Indonesia

JAKARTA, 16 July—The Unicef has reported that nearly 150,000 Indonesian children under five die of preventable diseases every year, a media reported here on Monday.

Edward Carwardine, the Head of UNICEF's Communication and Partnership Cluster for Indonesia blamed that low awareness of basic preventable healthcare among economically weak and under-educated people, and a lack of basic health services and health facilities in a number of areas, especially in more remote parts of the archipelago, contributed to the alarmingly high number of deaths.

"The preventable diseases are closely related to personal and environmental healthcare," Carwardine was quoted by the Jakarta globe as saying.

The head of the Unicef noted that awareness of basic preventable healthcare among economically weak and under-educated people is still low.

Consequently, many children under five are susceptible to diseases caused by poor sanitation, such as diarrhea, dengue fever, and other communicable illnesses, he said.

"In fact, the diseases can be prevented if they have a good knowledge and awareness of healthy lifestyles," said Carwardine.

UNICEF also said around 10,000 Indonesian women die due to complications following childbirth each year.

Back in Russia flood zone, Putin tries to protect image

KRYMSK, 16 July—Vladimir Putin flew to southern Russia on Sunday for the second time in eight days to meet survivors of deadly floods, determined to dispel an image of leading a weak state two months after returning to the presidency.

Dressed casually in a blue-and-white check shirt, Putin chatted with residents of the town of Krymsk whose homes were damaged in floods that killed 171 people in Russia's traditional "bread basket" area known as the Kuban on 7 July.

"We need to help people in the true sense of the word—to help them clear their homes and lands," Putin said, promising to send 5,000 servicemen to the region to help provide food, water, medicine and tents for the needy. Lines of military trucks were already parked outside the mountain town of 57,000 people near the Black Sea, where most of the deaths happened.

In the centre, white tents have been erected to treat and shelter survivors, and bulldozers were still clearing mud and debris shortly before midnight.

Television footage of the visit was beamed across Russia, and was clearly intended to depict Putin as in control and playing the role of the nation's leader.

Local authorities have been accused by residents of failing to issue proper flood warnings, and Putin wants to deflect any blame after being accused of reacting too slowly to disasters soon after he was first elected president in 2000.

Putin often goes to the scene of big natural or man-made disasters but it is unusual for him to go twice in such a short time, underlining his nervousness about his image following opposition protests that have undermined his authority.

Just how effective his visit was remained unclear. He had met only officials and not flood victims during his first visit a few hours after the flooding began last week. But some residents remained unimpressed on Sunday.

Two killed, 16 injured in Iraq armed attacks

BAQUBA, 16 July—Two people were killed and 16 others injured on Sunday in separate gunfire and bomb attacks in Iraq's eastern province of Diyala, a provincial police source said.

Gunmen using assault rifles shot dead a civilian near his house in the town of Khalis, just north of the provincial capital city of Baquba, some 65 km northeast of Baghdad, the source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

In a separate incident, a young girl was killed by gunmen in front of her house in the town of Muqadiyah, some 40 km northeast of Baquba, the source said.

In addition, a home-made bomb went off near the house of a leader of the government-backed Awakening Council group in northeastern Baquba, wounding 15 people, the source added.

Some of the 15 wounded were inside their houses as the powerful blast damaged six surrounding buildings, he said, adding that the group leader himself survived the attack unharmed.

The Awakening Council group, also known as Sons of Iraq Movement or Sahwa, consists of mostly anti-US Sunni insurgent militant groups, who turned their rifles to fight al-Qaeda network after Sahwa's leaders became dismayed by al-Qaeda's brutality and religious zealotry in the country.

Also in Diyala, an unidentified gunman threw a hand grenade on a police patrol in al-Tahrir area just south of Baquba, injuring one policeman, he added.

Diyala Province, which stretches from the eastern edges of Baghdad to the Iranian border east of the country, has long been a stronghold for al-Qaeda militants and other insurgent groups since the US-led invasion of Iraq in 2003.

18 wounded in twin blasts in E Afghanistan

PUL-E-ALAM, 16 July—At least 18 people were wounded Sunday morning in twin bomb attacks in eastern Afghan province of Logar, the police said.

"Our report said that a total of 18 people with majority of them civilians were injured in two back-to-back bomb blasts in provincial capital Pul-e-Alam this morning," deputy provincial police chief Rahis Khan Saddiq told Xinhua.

He said the first blast occurred at round 8:40 am local time near the Red Crescent office in the province 60 km south of capital Kabul. A second explosion ripped through the scene of the first blast after people and security forces gathered to evacuate the victims, the source said.

Some injured were in critical conditions, he added. The attackers seems to have followed old tactics which depends on creating initial blast to attract security forces and people, then they set off another blast to get higher casualties.

A total of 14 civilians were killed and nine injured in similar bomb attacks in southern Kandahar Province on 8 July.

Violence has been on the rise since Taleban launched an annual spring offensive on 3 May.

In a separate incident, five militants were killed when an Improvised Explosive Device (IED) detonated prematurely in Koh-e-Safi district of Parwan province, 55 km north of Kabul Saturday night, a provincial official said on Sunday.

The Taleban insurgent group, who launch massive IED attack against security forces, has yet to make comments.

Indian gov't likely to give nod to Mars mission soon

NEW DELHI, 16 July — India's state-owned space agency, the Indian Space Research Organization (ISRO), has said that the government is soon going to give its nod to the country's Mars mission, local media reported.

"Many studies have been done relating to this mission," Radhakrishnan said. The ISRO chief also said that India's first dedicated astronomy satellite, AstroSat, will be launched in 2013. "All the instruments are going through their final evaluation and it'll be a national laboratory available to scientists both in India and abroad," he said.

Our friends' weight influences our weight gain and loss

NEW YORK, 16 July — People who hang out with friends heavier than they are tend to gain weight. Those who socialize with leaner friends tend to maintain their weight, or even lose a few pounds. But why? Is it that friends influence our behavior? Or do we simply tend to have friends that resemble ourselves—the birds of a feather flock together effect.

To find out, researchers looked at students from two high schools. One school is rural and mostly white. The other is urban, with a racially mixed student body. The researchers analyzed the students' body mass and social networks.

They found that overweight students who had lean friends had a 40 percent chance of dropping weight within a year, versus only a 27 percent chance of gaining weight during that time.—Internet

HONG KONG, 16 July — Lenovo Group Ltd is on track to overtake Hewlett-Packard Co as the world's biggest PC maker by sales as soon as this year, making it the first Chinese company to grab the top spot globally in a technology sector. The ThinkPad maker's rise highlights the advance of China's technology firms on the world stage in recent years thanks to a combination of aggressive pricing, overseas acquisitions and their taking advantage of a fast-growing home market. Analysts, however, also warn that Lenovo's rapid gains in market share have come at the expense

China's Lenovo inches closer to a global tech title

2PC vendor in the third quarter of 2011, had a 14.9 percent global market share in the April-June quarter this year, a mere 0.6 percentage point away from HP's 15.5 percent, according to research firm IDC's latest data. Figures from industry tracker Gartner show an even narrower gap, with Lenovo just 0.2 percentage point from HP.

In another technology sector, China's Huawei Technologies Co Ltd, the world's No 2 maker of telecom equipment, had been expected to surpass Sweden's Ericsson in 2011 sales. But slow telecom spending, stiff competition in the handset market and difficulties in tapping the massive US market held it back. Lenovo's rise has been helped by its purchase of Germany's Medion and a joint venture with Japan's NEC Corp last year, as well as its acquisition of IBM Corp's PC business in 2005. Investors have rewarded Lenovo for its market share gains, sending its stock up by around 16 percent this year and outpacing rivals HP, third-ranked Dell Inc and No 4 Acer Inc, whose stocks have dropped over the same period.

Lenovo currently trades at a multiple of 12.5 times forward earnings, the second-highest among the top-five PC makers and well above the 4.6 times multiple for HP, Thomson Reuters StarMine data showed. But profit margins have suffered. Lenovo had a 1.4 percent operating margin in the latest quarter, lower than HP's 7.4 percent and Dell's 6.2 percent, the data showed.

"HP, Dell and Acer have switched lanes in the PC race and passed the baton to Lenovo in terms of focusing on sales rather than margins," said Dickie Chang, an analyst at IDC in Hong Kong. Another risk is slowing growth in the PC market as the global economy, including Lenovo's home turf and stronghold China, eases. China accounts for about 42 percent of Lenovo's total revenue, with the bulk of that coming from PC sales.—Reuters

Microsoft, NBC dissolve MSNBC.com joint venture

In this 14 Dec, 1995, file photo, Robert Wright, president and chief executive officer of NBC, speaks in New York with Microsoft Chairman Bill Gates, displayed on screen, speaks from Hong Kong, during a news conference announcing that NBC and Microsoft would form a joint venture to start a cable news channel and related online service called MSNBC. Microsoft is pulling out of the joint venture that owned MSNBC.com so it can build its own online news service. The breakup, announced late on 15 July, 2012, dissolves the final shred of a 16-year marriage between Microsoft Corp. and NBC News, which is now owned by Comcast Corp.—INTERNET

SAN FRANCISCO, 16 July — Microsoft is pulling out of the joint venture that owned MSNBC.com, freeing the world's largest software maker to build its own online news service. The breakup announced late Sunday dissolves the final shreds of a 16-year marriage between Microsoft Corp and NBC News, which is now owned by Comcast Corp. The relationship began to unwind in 2005 when Microsoft sold its stake in MSNBC's cable TV channel to NBC. NBC is buying Microsoft's 50 percent interest in the MSNBC website for an undisclosed amount. MSNBC.com will be rebranded as NBC News.com, and readers who logged into MSNBC.com late Sunday were automatically redirected to NBC News.com.

The website will move its headquarters from Microsoft's corporate campus in Redmond, Wash., to NBC News' longtime home in New York. The online divorce stemmed from the two partners' desire to gain greater control over their digital destinies as the Internet becomes an increasingly important part of their businesses. The inherent constraints of being locked into a joint venture sometimes handcuffed Microsoft and NBC. Microsoft, in particular, had grown frustrated by contract terms requiring it to exclusively feature MSNBC.com content on its own websites. That exasperation was exacerbated by the MSNBC cable channel's strategy to counter Fox News Channel's appeal to conservative viewers by tailoring its programming for an audience with a liberal viewpoint. The strategy fed a perception that material from MSNBC's website was politically slanted, too. "Being limited to MSNBC.com content was problematic to us because we couldn't have the multiple news sources and the multiple perspectives that our users were telling us that they wanted," said Bob Visse, general manager of MSN.com. Now that it has shed those shackles, Microsoft is preparing to launch its own news service this fall. Although he declined to provide many details about the operation, Visse said the news staff will be about the same size as the roughly 100 people who created original content for the MSNBC.com. By hiring its own news staff to feed material to its websites, Microsoft is embracing the same strategy as the owners of two other major Internet companies, Yahoo Inc and AOL Inc.

Microsoft has leaned on its lucrative franchise selling personal computer software to pay for massive Internet investments that have rarely paid off, much to the frustration of its shareholders. The software maker initially invested $220 million in the MSNBC joint venture. It's unclear if Microsoft ended up making any money on the alliance. As a whole, the company's online operations, which include the Bing search engine and MSN portal, have lost more than $10 billion in the past seven years. Even as it sets out to compete against NBC News, Microsoft will continue to highlight the top stories from its former partner for the next two years under terms of the split. NBC News, in turn, believes it will be able to attract more traffic to its stable of websites by forging other partnerships that were off limits when it was tied to Microsoft.—Internet

Viewers turning to YouTube as news source

NEW YORK, 16 July — A new study has found that YouTube is emerging as a major platform for news, one to which viewers increasingly turn for eyewitness videos in times of major events and natural disasters. The Pew Research Center's Project for Excellence in Journalism on Monday released their examination of 15 months of the most popular news videos on the Google Inc-owned site. It found that while viewership for TV news still easily outpaces those consuming news on YouTube, the video-sharing site is a growing digital environment where professional journalism mingles with citizen content. "There's a new form of video journalism on this platform," said Amy Mitchell, deputy director of the Pew Research Center's Project for Excellence in Journalism.

"It's a form in which the relationship between news organizations and citizens is more dynamic and more multiverse than we've seen in most other platforms before." More than a third of the most-watched videos came from citizens. Than more half came from news organizations, but footage in those videos sometimes incorporated footage shot by YouTube users. The Japanese earthquake and tsunami was the most-viewed news event during the length of the study, which spanned January 2011 to March 2012. The top videos from Japan included footage from surveillance cameras, a news network and a Japanese Coast Guard vessel — a typical variety of sources. Such dramatic events were often among the most watched videos. Other popular news events included the Russian elections, unrest in the Middle East, the collapse of a fair stage in Indiana and the crash of an Italian cruise ship.

"One of the things that emerges here is the power of bearing witness as a part of a news consumption process," said Mitchell.—Internet

GSK in weekend talks to buy Human Genome: sources

LONDON, 16 July — GlaxoSmithKline is holding talks this weekend with Human Genome Sciences to agree a deal to acquire it for some $2.6 billion, after pursuing the US biotech company for three months, sources familiar with the situation said on Sunday.

The British pharmaceutical giant could sweeten its previous $13 per share offer for Human Genome with a small bump and a deal may come as soon as Monday, one of the sources said. An agreement has yet to be reached and the talks could still fall apart, the sources cautioned. They asked not to be identified because the matter is not public. Human Genome, which rejected GlaxoSmithKline's $2.6 billion offer in April as too low and launched an auction process, has come under pressure from investors to try and strike a deal with the British drugmaker in the absence of any alternative bids.

The US company—an early pioneer of gene-based drug discovery—has set itself a 16 July deadline for finding higher bids, but interest has been limited because GSK, its long-time partner, already has marketing rights to its drugs. US biotech company Celgene Corp was on stage considering whether to bid and conducting due diligence, according to a separate source familiar with the matter, but negative analyst and investor reaction when news of those discussions broke deterred the US group. Without alternative bids, Human Genome shareholders have been pressing the company's management to engage with GSK before 16 July to avoid a share price collapse—and that argument has been a trigger for the weekend discussions.

Human Genome, which has been trying to find another buyer in a separate auction process after GSK took its offer directly to shareholders, reached out first to its hostile suitor to negotiate a deal, according to one of the sources.

New Zealand to clamp down on 'legal' highs

WELLINGTON, 16 July — New Zealand announced plans on Monday to ban the use of drugs offering so-called 'legal' highs unless manufacturers can provide clinical evidence that they are safe.

Associate Health Minister Peter Dunne described the move as a knockout blow to the market for products such as synthetic cannabis and legal "party pills", which mimic the effects of drugs like ecstasy without using illicit substances.

Dunne said current legislation was failing because as soon as regulators banned a synthetic drug, manufacturers simply tweaked its formula slightly and relaunched it in the marketplace.

"The new law means the game of catch-up with the legal highs industry will be over once and for all," he said.

At the moment, authorities must prove a synthetic drug is harmful before ordering it off the shelves. Dunne said that under the new law, all synthetic psychoactive drugs will be illegal until their producers can provide clinical proof, such as toxicology reports and evidence from human trials, that they are safe.

"Companies wishing to sell these products will need to apply to this regulator with scientific data similar to that which is required for the assessment of new medicines," he said.

The department of health estimated that carrying out clinical tests would cost manufacturers up to NZ$2.0 million ($1.6 million) for each synthetic drug, effectively deterring them from trying to sell such substances in New Zealand.

Scientists see AIDS vaccine within reach after decades

CHICAGO, 16 July — At an ill-fated press conference in 1984, US Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler boldly predicted an effective AIDS vaccine would be available within just two years. But a string of failed attempts - punctuated by a 2007 trial in which a Merck vaccine appeared to make people more vulnerable to infection, not less — cast a shadow over AIDS vaccine research that has taken years to dispel. A 2009 clinical trial in Thailand was the first to show it was possible to prevent HIV infection in humans. Since then, discoveries have pointed to even more powerful vaccines using HIV-fighting antibodies. Now scientists believe a licensed vaccine is within reach.

"We know the face of the enemy," said Dr Barton Haynes, of Duke University in Durham, North Carolina, and recent director of the Center for HIV AIDS Vaccine Immunology (CHAVI). The research consortium was funded by the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID), founded in 2005 by the National Institutes of Health to identify and overcome roadblocks in the design of vaccines for the human immunodeficiency virus, which causes AIDS. NIAID's funding of CHAVI ended in June.

Unlike many viruses behind infectious disease, HIV is a moving target, constantly spitting out slightly different versions of itself, with different strains affecting different populations around the world. The virus is especially pernicious since it attacks the immune system, the very mechanism the body needs to fight back. "The virus is far more crafty than we ever thought," said Haynes, who will outline progress in vaccine research at the International AIDS Society's 2012 conference being held in Washington from 22-27 July.

Thanks to drugs that can control the virus for decades, AIDS is no longer a death sentence. New infections have fallen by 21 percent since the peak of the pandemic in 1997 and advances in prevention — through voluntary circumcision programs, prevention of mother-to-child transmission and early treatment — promise to cut that rate even more. Still, as many as 34 million people are infected with HIV worldwide. And with 2.7 million new infections in 2010 alone, experts say a vaccine is still the best hope for eradicating AIDS.

Teams have been working on a vaccine for nearly three decades, but it wasn't until RV144, the 2009 clinical trial involving more than 16,000 adults in Thailand, that researchers achieved any hint of success.

The test of a combination of two vaccines followed several big failures, including the stunning news that Merck's vaccine may have increased the risk of infection among men who were both uncircumcised and had prior exposure to the virus used in the vaccine.

"It had an extremely chilling effect on the whole field," said Colonel Nelson Michael, director of the US Military HIV Research Program at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research, which led the RV144 trial.

eBay's hottest business brings benefits, risks

SAN FRANCISCO, 16 July — "Neither a borrower nor a lender be" is a well-known warning from Shakespeare's "Hamlet." PayPal, eBay Inc.'s online payment service, heeded that advice for much of its existence, charging fees for processing transactions rather than lending money that may not be repaid. But Bill Me Later, one of eBay's fastest-growing businesses, is changing that. BML, as it's known, offers credit to online shoppers, letting them pay typically a few months after purchases. eBay bought the business for almost $1 billion in the midst of the 2008 financial crisis. Last year, BML accumulated $2.3 billion in loans, up 64 percent from the previous year. Wall Street will be looking for the unit to keep up its hot growth streak when eBay reports second-quarter results on 18 July.

BML is a potentially juicy new source of profit growth for eBay. The business also helps other parts of the company — for example, it could make PayPal more profitable by reducing funding costs, analysts say. "This is one of the most prominent and fastest-growing businesses eBay has, and I think it becomes more prominent going forward," said Gil Luria, an analyst at Wedbush Securities. "BML is very important because it allows eBay to expand PayPal into a true financial product, as opposed to a purely transactional service," Luria added.

"But PayPal will take on more credit risk as BML expands," Luria warned. If BML gets big enough and PayPal's growth slows, that could pressure eBay's valuation, he added.

US Air Force tests biofuel at $59 per gallon

WASHINGTON, 16 July—The US Navy angered Republicans by spending $26 a gallon for biofuels for this week's Great Green Fleet demonstration, but the Air Force received little attention when it paid twice as much per gallon to test synthetic jet fuel last month.

The Air Force bought 11,000 gallons of alcohol-to-jet fuel from Gevo Inc, a Colorado biofuels company, at $59 a gallon in a programme aimed at proving that new alternative fuels can be used reliably in military aircraft - once, that is, their pricing is competitive with petroleum, which now costs $3.60 a gallon.

The cost of the Air Force demonstration — $639,000 — was far less eye-catching than the $12 million the Navy spent for biofuels to power a carrier strike group on alternative energy for a day.

But it was part of the same Pentagon push, which has escalated under the administration of President Barack Obama, to adopt green solutions to rising fuel costs.

Some Republican

lawmakers have criticized the high price-per-gallon paid by the Navy as wasteful Pentagon spending at a time of significant budget cuts and a shrinking fleet.

They have also blasted Obama for making green energy a cornerstone of his agenda, with federal funds flowing to alternative energy companies that may not make economic sense, as in the case of bankrupt solar-panel maker Solyndra.

An A-10C Thunderbolt II flies over Florida's Gulf Coast on 29 June, 2012, marking the second flight of an aircraft powered solely by an alcohol-derived jet fuel blend. Gevo Inc recently sold the US Air Force 11,000 gallons of fuel at $59 per gallon to complete certification testing to ensure it can be used in military jets.—REUTERS

Jeff Scheib, Gevo vice president for fuels, said the alcohol-to-jet fuel made for the Air Force was expensive as it came from a small demonstration plant in Silsbee, Texas, which makes only 7,500 to 8,000 gallons of biofuel a month.

Once the company builds a commercial-scale refinery, expected around 2015, "we believe we can be cost competitive on an all-in basis with petroleum jet fuel over the life of a contract," Scheib said.

Pentagon officials say alternative fuel development is strategically important because the United States relies too heavily on fossil fuels from foreign sources, leaving it vulnerable to price shocks and disruptions.

The Air Force spends about $10 billion a year on energy, with nearly $9 billion of that being for jet fuel, Kevin Geiss, Air Force deputy assistant secretary for energy, said recently.

Planning is done two years in advance, so officials in 2009 were expecting jet fuel to cost about $2.37 a gallon in 2011. Instead, prices rose as high as $3.96 a gallon.

"What that results in, for this year, was about a billion dollar shortfall from what we had budgeted for in fuel," Geiss said. Geiss said Air Force work on biofuels was focused on ensuring that products likely to achieve commercial-scale production are formulated correctly for use in aircraft engines. The Navy's mission is much broader, he said.—Reuters

Rescue workers use heavy equipment to remove rubble and look for survivors buried under debris of damaged buildings following the collapse of an 11-story building under construction onto three adjacent buildings that killed at least 10 people in the Gomrouk neighbourhood of Alexandria, Egypt, on 15 July, 2012.—INTERNET

11 killed in high-rise collapse in Egypt

ALEXANDRIA, 16 July—An apartment tower under construction collapsed on adjacent buildings in the Mediterranean city of Alexandria, killing 11 people, Egypt's Health Ministry said on Sunday.

The ministry said five other people were injured and that search teams were searching for survivors buried under rubble. The 11-story building in the poor Alexandria neighbourhood of al-Gomrouk collapsed late on Saturday onto three adjacent buildings, reducing much of the structures to rubble. All the dead and injured lived in the three smaller buildings.

Building collapses are not uncommon in Egypt, where shoddy construction is widespread in shantytowns, poor city neighbourhoods and rural areas. With real estate at a premium in big cities like Alexandria and Cairo, developers seeking bigger profits frequently violate planning permits and exceed the number of stories allowed.—Internet

Bus falls into Nepal river killing nine

Local residents watch as a rescue team searches for the bodies of Hindu pilgrims after a bus fell into an irrigation canal near the pilgrimage site of Triveni, Nawalparasi some 100km southwest of Kathmandu, on 15 July.—INTERNET

KATHMANDU, 16 July—A bus swerved off a road in central Nepal before dawn on Monday and plunged into a river, killing nine people, police said — the latest in a string of deadly accidents on the country's highways. The incident came less than 24 hours after at least 39 pilgrims were killed when an overcrowded bus taking them from India to a Hindu festival in southern Nepal fell into a canal.

Police said on Monday's deaths occurred when the night-bus fell 200 metres (650 feet) down a cliff after the driver was thought to have fallen asleep.

"A passenger bus on its way to Kathmandu from Katari slipped off the road at Krishnabhir and fell into the river," police sub-inspector Narayan Prasad Chalise said.

"We recovered six bodies from the accident site and three seriously injured died in hospital in Kathmandu. Another 17 people are injured and are undergoing treatment."

Accidents are relatively common on Nepal's highways because of poor roads, badly maintained vehicles and reckless driving.—Internet

Polio campaign troubles imperil 350,000 Pakistan children

PESHAWAR, 16 July—Pakistan on Monday postponed a polio immunisation campaign in parts of its tribal belt, jeopardising the health of more than 350,000 children after the Taliban banned inoculations.

Local Taliban and Pakistani warlord Hafiz Gul Bahadur, whose followers are fighting Western troops in Afghanistan, banned the vaccinations in the northwestern region of Waziristan to protest against US drone attacks.

They have condemned the immunisation campaign, which began nationwide on Monday, as a cover for espionage. Pakistani doctor Shakeel Afridi was jailed for 33 years in May after helping the CIA find Osama bin Laden using a hepatitis vaccination programme as cover.

Fighting between government troops and local warlord Mangal Bagh also made it difficult to inoculate all children in Khyber district, officials said.

"The campaign has been postponed in North and South Waziristan and Bara (district) of Khyber," Mazhar Nisar, in charge of the polio monitoring cell at the prime minister's secretariat, told AFP.

Officials in Miranshah, the main town of North Waziristan, said a meeting of tribal elders to discuss immunisation had been postponed due to a military curfew.

In Khyber, administration official Irfanullah Wazir told AFP that the target was to vaccinate 200,163 children, but conceded the campaign would be affected in parts of Bara and the Tirah valley, where 111,556 children need the drops.

Waterfall-like rain eases in Japan, but 27 dead

TOKYO, 16 July—Most of the quarter-million people forced to flee massive flooding in southwest Japan were able to return home by Monday, but weather officials warned the danger had not fully passed from the record rainfall that left at least 27 people dead over the weekend.

Thousands of homes and hundreds of roads were damaged, and hundreds of landslides were reported. The military airlifted food by helicopter to stranded districts.

The rain "was like a waterfall," Yoko Yoshika said in Yamaguchi prefecture (state). "It was horrible."

Yoshika, wife of an award-winning Hagi-yaki style potter, said workers scrambled to carry out a bucket relay with plastic pails to get rid of the water flowing into their shop.

In Yame, a city of 69,000 in Fukuoka prefecture, 74 people in three separate areas were stranded by the flooding.

"Our region gets hit with heavy rain every year, but I have never experienced anything like this," city employee Kumi Takesue said.

"Rice paddies and roads all became water so you couldn't tell what was what," she said, adding that she had to wade in knee-high water, even near her home, which was not as hard hit as other areas.

Killed in Yame city were Katsutoshi Matsumoto, a 70-year-old who died when caught in a landslide while he was out looking at his rice paddies, and Shinobu Fueta, 83, whose home was buried in mud.

Weather officials warned people to be careful even in areas where rain had subsided because the land was still mushy and prone to landslides. Rain could start again later on Monday, further endangering the area, they said.

Even as some of the water subsided, homes and farms on the southern island of Kyushu, hardest hit by the downpour, were still getting food shipments, although mostly by land, local officials said.

The farmers who primarily owned those farms could get relevant wages now, working at the mechanized farmland based on their skills with their job opportunities and incomes getting improved.

Region/State governments can handle regional issues on the ground under the law. Regarding the question of U Tin Maung Oo of Shwepyitha Constituency about the strategic food management measures for food security of the State, the deputy minister replied that the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation and Ministry of Commerce are taking care of rice production and rice exports based on daily consumption of the people. The Commerce Ministry keeps rice reserve in support of the farmers. The Agriculture and Irrigation Ministry is working in partnership with private sector for establishing modern rice mills for increased production of rice in milling process. It is targeted to put 19.31 million of acres under paddy this year, the second year of the fifth five-year plan, and to put 19.46 million of acres on 2015-2016.

In addition, Myanmar Rice Association and Central Cooperatives Association purchase monsoon and summer rice directly from farmers to ensure there is no shortage of rice. In addition, rice dealers and farmers are working in cooperation for a switch to high-yield monsoon paddy.

Deputy Minister for Construction U Soe Tint replied the questions of two Hluttaw representatives.

Regarding the question of U Kun Thein Pe of Hopong Constituency about if there is any plan to upgrade Kyuntaung-Kyauktalone-Saikaung-Honan-Maukme road into road of the Public Works or Union Highway, the deputy minister replied that the road in Shan State (south) is 88 miles and one furlong and its nine miles and one furlong Loisaung-Saikaung section was undertaken by the Ministry of Border Affairs. But, the Construction Ministry has proposed to take over the road from the Border Affairs Ministry.

In 2010-2012 financial year, maintenances of roads and bridges was undertaken with the revenue maintenances funds. In 2012-2013 financial year, it would be carried out with the Shan State government's fund. That road has been put on the road lists of Public Works managed by Union Government. Funds would be submitted in 2013-2014 financial year.

With respect to the question raised by U Nyan Win of Hlinethaya Constituency on behalf of U Tin Maung Win of Mingaladon Constituency, on "there is a plan to repair Nyaungdon road between mile post 1 mile and four furlongs and mile post two miles and six furlongs, in Hlinethaya Township, Yangon Region", Deputy Minister for Construction U Soe Tint replied: This road section includes in Aungzeya Bridge approach road (three miles and two furlongs long) implemented by Ministry of Construction. to be shared to lower staff and repaid into the government budget in the name of other income, Deputy Minister for Health Dr Win Myint replied:

Sharing of income that comes from the current expense-sharing health system to the lower level staff does not exist. Incomes of separate patient room, Lab, X-ray room and pathology departments in People's Hospitals have to be paid as government's revenue income, used in Hospital's maintenances and in providing needy hospitalized patients with medicine. Ministry of Health is scrutinizing and supervising monthly reports of sending to the government as revenue and allocation sent by respective hospitals.

To provide health care coverage to all citizens, especially the needy people, Ministry of Health conducted the research on the probabilities of township-based health care expenses protection programme in Yedasha and Daik U Townships in Bago Region in 2011. Based on these research findings, township-based social health care guarantee system that will be ideal for Myanmar will be tested.

On behalf of Dr Nay Lin of Seikkan Constituency, U Han Sein of Teikgyi Constituency raised the question on "According to the health care programme, projects on reducing the mortality rates of pregnant women and children under five are being implemented. I would like to know the current conditions from 2000 to date and the objectives for 2015."

Under the programme of Myanmar health care programme, projects on reducing the mortality rates of pregnant women and children under five are being implemented. From 2000 to date, the mother mortality rate in 100,000 live births was 300 in 2000; 230 in 2005, 200 in 2010; and is expected to be 130 in 2015. Death toll under five per live birth was 66.1 percent in 2003; 46.1 in 2009; and is expected to be 43.3 percent in 2015. Ministry of Health is making cooperation with World Health Organization (WHO), UNFPA and UNICEF so as to get necessary health care expenses. And the Ministry is also cooperating with International organization Aus Aid. Coordination is being made to prescribe necessary laws and by-laws.

At the proposal-submitting session, U Than Nwe of Budalin Constituency submitted the proposal on "with the aims of ensuring the restoration of natural environment and eco-system stability and long-term extraction of timbers and forest products, special emphasis should be paced on perpetuation of natural forests" and Dr Than Win of North Okkalapa Constituency, on "urging the Government to form Myanmar Traditional Cultural Conservation Commission and lay down the projects for promoting the standard of national culture".

The Health Department has not yet planned to construct the building for the station hospital in the 2012-2013 fiscal year. However, the department will give top priority to construction of the building in the 2013-2014 fiscal year.

Regarding the second question, the deputy minister replied that in-service doctors can pursue the medical diploma courses, master courses and post-graduate Ph. D courses while post-graduate diploma courses are conducted for out-service doctors.

The issue of allowing out-service doctors to attend post-graduate medical courses have been discussed at meetings of the Management Committee of the Ministry of Health and today, the courses cannot provide enough seats even to in-service doctors due to training capacity.

To promote the capacity of out-service doctors who are working at private hospitals and clinics, the hospital they are working for will take responsibility for their sustainable learning opportunities. They will be accepted to attend the post-graduate courses when an opportune situation happened.

Regarding the third question, the deputy minister replied that the old ECG machine at Taninthayi Township Hospital was replaced with the new one about four months ago and the hospital spent its funds to get the new one. The 50mAX-ray machine is being repaired at the Central Medical Storage Department in Yangon on 6 July, 2012, and it the machine is beyond repair, the ministry will provide a new machine to the hospital. Concerning surgical operations, the township hospital will provide surgical operations that it can perform and it will transfer patients who need to receive treatment given by specialists to a People's Hospital. staff would explain the patients until they understand why they are sent to the People's Hospital.

Still, there is no plan to assign a surgeon to Taninthayi Township Hospital due to its organizational set-up as it is the 50-bed one. However, one assistant surgeon and one township health officer will be assigned to the hospital when the number of patients increases in the future.

Regarding the fourth question, the deputy minister replied that the Health Department has already issued an order dated 13, January, 2011, to construct a 16-bed hospital in Hpakant Township, Kachin State and work on construction of the building for the hospital will start in the 2013-2014 fiscal year.

Union Minister for Rail Transportation U Aung Min replied to the query raised by Representative Dr Myat Nyana Soe of Yangon Region Constituency (4) on "whether or not there is any plan to take action against the bus lines running in town and expresses that break the bus line laws and fail to meet the standard of a passenger bus", and by Representative U Myint Tun of Bago Region Constituency (10) on "when will the required gravels to be used in repairing the remaining sections of Latpadan-Tharawaw railway section delivered to the site". He said that Road Transport Administration Department issued a license to a passenger bus only if it has acceptable capacity. But some bus owners added more seats than usual in their buses so as to get more profits. The Department did not give green light to such owners. For most of the buses plying in town were Japan-made, the department issued licenses to them in accord with their type approval. Officials from the department together with officials from the Transport Planning Department and the Traffic Police Force continue inspecting buses at highway terminals and bus-stops before those buses were in operation. Effective actions would be taken against the buses that are not in conformity with the set standards with the

Two US states probing banks over Libor manipulation

NEW YORK, 16 July—New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman has launched a probe into possible manipulation of the Libor benchmark international lending rates by global banks, his spokesman said on Sunday.

Schneiderman, along with Connecticut's Attorney General George Jepsen started the investigation six months ago into the possible rigging of Libor, the London interbank offered rate, New York Attorney General spokesman James Freedland told Reuters.

Libor is compiled from estimates by big banks of how much they believe they have to pay to borrow from each other. It is used for $550 trillion of interest rate derivatives contracts and influences rates on many lending transactions, including mortgages, student loans and credit cards.

"Working together, the New York and Connecticut attorneys general have been looking into these issues for over six months, and will continue to follow the facts wherever they lead," Freedland said.

Jepsen's spokeswoman did not immediately respond to a call and an email for comment. Barclays Plc, the bank at the center of the Libor scandal, was fined a record $450 million last month by US and British authorities for manipulating the rate, but the deal does not shield Barclays employees from criminal prosecution.

The US Justice Department is also building criminal cases against several financial institutions and their employees related to the manipulation of interest rates. The New York Times reported on Saturday.—Reuters

Billionaires seek BP shareholder backing for TNK-BP resolution eliminate the internal contradictions that are tearing TNK-BP apart."

Shareholder relations, which have often been rocky at TNK-BP since BP came in as an equal partner in 2003, worsened last year when the British major tried to reach a strategic alliance with state-controlled Russian oil major Rosneft.

AAR blocked the deal in the courts, successfully arguing that it violated an exclusivity clause in the TNK-BP shareholders' agreement. The ensuing fallout has left the company without a board quorum, blocking dividend payments. Fridman quit in May as CEO and BP at the start of June put its stake up for sale.

Under a timeline set by the shareholder pact, AAR has until the end of this week to express its interest in buying BP's stake. BP can negotiate with other interested parties but cannot do a deal with them for a further 90 days.

AAR will submit an expression of interest on July 19, Polovets said. It would be willing to buy one-half of BP's stake in TNK-BP—or a 25 percent stake—at a current market price of around $10 billion (6.42 billion pounds). But AAR's preferred option would be to exchange its stake in TNK-BP for cash and a stake of 10-12 percent in BP. "It would make more sense for all parties involved," Polovets told Reuters.

Such a deal would release BP from the obligations under the TNK-BP shareholders' agreement barring it from partnering with other companies in Russia, such as Rosneft and gas export monopoly Gazprom, Polovets added.—Reuters

Merkel urges more Europe, stresses conditioned aid

BERLIN, 16 July—German Chancellor Angela Merkel reaffirmed her support for a closer and more centralized European Union on Sunday, which should be the price for Berlin's continued aid for indebted neighbours.

"Without Europe, we cannot represent our values, our ideas and our ideals," Merkel said in an interview with German public television ZDF that was aired on Sunday evening.

In the long run, the EU should be a closer political union, which has more binding force over member states and could discipline those who breach the rules, she said. Merkel said the future of Europe would be the dominant theme in Germany's federal election next year, when the chancellor is seeking the third term.

Voters have to answer

these questions: "what is Europe and what ideas we have of Europe", she added.

Merkel stressed that Germany's rescue efforts in the eurozone debt crisis are not without conditions. Those heavily indebted nations which received lifelines from outside should keep their fiscal targets and accept more supervision from Brussels.

Any attempts "saying 'let us show solidarity but meanwhile has no supervision and no conditions' will have no chance with me or with Germany," Merkel said.

For Thursday's voting in the Bundestag, or the lower house of parliament, on a 100-billion-euro rescue package for Spanish banks, Merkel said she is confident on securing absolute majority from lawmakers.

That was the position presented by Mikhail Fridman, one of the quartet of investors who own half of Russia's third-largest oil company through the AAR consortium, to meetings in

New York and Boston with large institutions that own BP stock.

Dengue mosquitoes found in Nepali capital

KATHMANDU, 16 July—Significant numbers of Aedes-egypti and Aedes-albopictus mosquitoes that spread dengue and chikungunya have been found in Nepali capital Kathmandu in the recent surveillance carried out by District Public Health Office (DPHO), Kathmandu, local media reported on Monday.

According to Monday's Republica daily report, the team led by entomologist Sishir Panta that conducted a week-long surveillance in various parts of Kathmandu last week, has submitted its report to DPHO on Sunday with proofs of vectors.

"They brought some Aedes-egypti and Aedes-albopictus mosquitoes found in various locations of Kathmandu," Chief of Kathmandu DPHO Mahendra Prasad Shrestha was quoted by the daily as saying showing the specimens.

Shrestha said that the report will be forwarded to the Department of Health Services and the Health Ministry.

The DPHO has deployed 70 health workers in door-to-door awareness program after learning about high prevalence of dengue vectors in Kathmandu.

Entomologist Panta said humidity and rising temperatures provide favourable environment for the vectors to spread. People store water in households due to water shortage providing habitat for dengue spreading Aedes-egypti mosquitoes which live in clean water and bite during daytime.

Lemurs the world's most threatened mammal

PARIS, 15 July—Lemurs, the furry apes brought to fame by the Disney animation film "Madagascar", are the most endangered mammals on Earth, an International Union for Conservation of Nature conference found. An IUCN workshop met in Madagascar this week to discuss the world's 103 lemur species as conservation deteriorates amid political turmoil that has lasted three years.

"Madagascar has, by far, the highest proportion of threatened species of any primate habitat region or any one country in the world. As a result, we now believe that lemurs are probably the most endangered of any group of vertebrates," said primatologist Christoph Schwitzer, one of the conference organisers.

Over 90 percent of the world's lemur species—found only on the Indian Ocean island—were upgraded to critically endangered, endangered, or vulnerable on the IUCN's Threatened Species list. The destruction of the primates' tropical forest habitat and an upsurge in bushmeat hunting have depleted lemur numbers since conservation efforts broke down after a coup in 2009, the body said in a statement late on Friday.

Heavy rain plagues South, East China

BEIJING, 16 July—Heavy rain has swept across central and southern China, killing dozens and forcing thousands to evacuate. Rain-triggered floods have killed 10 people and affected over 2 million others in central China's Hubei Province. Recent rainstorms in Guizhou Province left at least 11 people dead and affected nearly a million others. And east China's Anhui Province and central Hunan have also been badly affected by extremely heavy rain over the past few days.

It's not easy to live a normal life here when your whole city has been mired in floods for days.

Here in Anyang City in Anhui Province, hundreds of people are still trapped in their houses, waiting to be taken to safety. Meters-high water forced rescuers to try different ways of reaching to those trapped.

Families' belongings are also passed out, one thing at a time. Over the course of 3 hours, rescuers managed to take over 200 people to safe areas. They also brought in disaster relief goods such as blankets and rice, to help those left homeless.—Xinhua

1,500 aquarium fish, corals seized at Manila pier

MANILA, 15 July—Philippine authorities seized some 1,500 live aquarium fish and about 150 live pieces of brain coral at a Manila pier on Friday just before they were to be shipped to Japan.

The fish and corals in water-filled plastic bags stored in styrofoam boxes were seized by quarantine officers, said fisheries bureau law enforcement chief Andres Menguito.

He said the fish and corals were headed for Japan and likely being smuggled because there was no permit to export them. Nobody who had been transporting the aquatic species could be found. "The quarantine officers were able to inspect the cargo. Perhaps when the person in charge of the fish saw some quarantine officers were already inspecting, they disappeared," Menguito told AFP. The officer expressed hope suspects could be traced through documents used to bring the fish, hidden inside some cartons, to the pier.

The export of live aquarium fish without a permit is forbidden, and gathering or possessing corals is illegal in the Philippines. A conviction

2-faced kitten dies in RI; had 4 eyes, 24 toes

A kitten with two faces born days ago in Rhode Island has died.

His name was Gemini. He had four eyes, two noses, two mouths, two ears and 24 toes — seven on each front paw and five each on the back.

WJAR-TV reports Gemini died Friday. He was one of five kittens in his litter. He was tiny enough to fit in the palm of a hand.

His owners in Providence say he had two tracheas going into one throat. They fed him by bottle because he ate very slowly.

Veterinarian Ernest Finocchio (fin-OH'-kee-oh)

is president of the Rhode Island Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

He says he'd never seen such a kitten. He says it could've been twins that didn't separate properly.

Two-faced kittens are very rare and seldom survive.

LOS ANGELES, 16 July — "Ice Age: Continental Drift," the fourth of the successful "Ice Age" franchise, beat "The Amazing Spider-Man" to top the North America box office with better-than-expected 46 million US dollars at the weekend, according to studio estimates released by Hollywood.com Sunday.

"Ice Age: Continental Drift," the family friendly animation from the 20th Century Fox, debuted in 3,880 theaters of the North American market after it has been released in international territories since the weekend following 29 June. The film has drawn huge numbers of kids and parents to theaters and is on its way to rule all 34 global markets with its shattering opening performance, despite the fact that the other two 3D animated films "Brave" and "Madagascar 3" are still being screened in theaters.

The fourth installment, like its predecessors full of humor and love, has taken in more than 200 million dollars before it was released in North America. The other three installments of the "Ice Age" franchise has raked in more than 2.1 billion dollars worldwide, including nearly 600 million in North America.

The Sony's reboot "The Amazing Spider-Man" was the second with 36 million US dollars at its second weekend screening, bringing its two-week total to 200.2 million dollars in North America. With new director Marc Webb and leads Andrew Garfield and Emma Stone, the film has been enjoying a fantastic north American and international box office performance. The first 3D "Spider-Man" film passed the 400-million-dollar threshold worldwide on 11 July. Seth MacFarlane's "Ted" from the Universal Pictures, a R-rated film featuring a foul-mouthed but funny teddy bear, also enjoyed another solid week, taking in another 22.1 million dollars in earnings, bringing its three-week total to over 159 million dollars in US and Canadian markets. —Xinhua

Nolan delayed 'Dark Knight Rises' for Cotillard

NEW YORK, 16 July — It's possible French actress Marion Cotillard could have been replaced as a love interest for Christian Bale's Batman in the movie, "The Dark Knight Rises"

That's because she was due with her first child, a son named Marcel, around the beginning of filming for the third installment in the franchise. Director Christopher Nolan tells the August issue of Vogue magazine he wanted to "figure it out." Most of her scenes were pushed back a month and Nolan made room on set for Cotillard's family.

Still, he marveled at the Academy Award winner's ability to do her job so soon after giving birth, calling it "amazing to see" and describing her as "Superwoman." Nolan and Cotillard also worked together on the 2010 film "Inception."

Oscar-winning actress Celeste Holm dies at 95

NEW YORK, 16 July — Oscar-winning actress Celeste Holm—who was the original girl who couldn't say no in the musical "Oklahoma!"—has died aged 95, her family said.

Holm, who won the best supporting actress Academy Award in 1948 for "Gentlemen's Agreement" and later appeared in "High Society" (1956), died at her home in New York.

She was admitted to hospital a week ago, said her niece Amy Phillips, cited by CNN. "She passed peacefully in her home in her own bed with her husband and friends and family nearby," she said.

She also garnered Oscar nominations in 1950 for "Come to the Stable," in which she played a French nun, and in 1951 for "All About Eve," which starred Bette Davis.

The New York-born actress made her professional debut in a production of Shakespeare's "Hamlet" starring Leslie Howard, and got her first big part on Broadway in 1940, opposite Gene Kelly. The role which really made her name was Ado Annie in the original production of "Oklahoma!" in 1943, in which she sang the showstopper, exclaiming: "I Cain't Say No!"

She signed with 20th Century Fox and went to Hollywood to make a series of movies starting with "Three Little Girls in Blue" in 1946. "Gentlemen's Agreement" was her third film.

LONDON, 16 July — An epic Bruce Springsteen concert in London's Hyde Park ended on Saturday with organisers pulling the plug with the singer and ex-Beatle Paul McCartney still on stage and playing at full throttle after more than three hours of music.

Springsteen had danced and worked the crowd with the energy of a man of half his 62 years, running through most of his classics before being joined by McCartney to rip through the Beatles' "I Saw Her Standing There" and "Twist and Shout".

The pair were still singing for 65,000 rained-soaked but rapturous fans when the organizers turned off the microphones in line with an agreed 10.30 pm curfew.

The Hard Rock Calling festival was the New Jersey native's 45th show in a 67-date tour of North America and Europe tied to "Wrecking Ball", a new album full of angry songs about corporate greed and the plight of ordinary working men and women.

Unlike on other dates, when he has introduced new songs such as "Jack of All Trades" and "Shacked and Drawn" with commentaries on the economic crisis, he avoided political polemics for the most part in a city that has been rocked by a new round of banking scandals in the past month. The focus was on having a giant street party.

Springsteen opened with "Thunder Road", standing alone at the microphone accompanied only by pianist Roy Bittan. It was, he noted, the first song he had played in his debut appearance in London at the Hammersmith Odeon in 1975.

Rodgers: Borini can be Liverpool favourite

Fabio Borini previously worked with Brendan Rodgers at Swansea City.—INTERNET

LIVERPOOL, 16 July — Liverpool manager Brendan Rodgers says new signing Fabio Borini will be a great asset for the club in the future. After the Italy international signed a long-term deal to move from Roma to Anfield, Rodgers said Borini's versatility would make him a fans' favourite. "I was very keen to bring him here. Fabio fits the model of what we're trying to do in building not only for now, but also for the future," he told Liverpool's website.

"He's a big talent, 21 years of age, he scores goals, and his passion, focus and concentration is a very important part of his game — and a big part of what you want from a player." Borini previously worked with Rodgers in Chelsea's youth set-up and more recently when he was on loan at Swansea City in 2011. Rodgers added: "[Chelsea] took him in from Bologna when he was 16 and he progressed incredibly well as a young player to go on to play for the first team at Chelsea." It didn't work out in terms of he couldn't agree a contract, but before he left I took him on loan to Swansea and he made a big, big impression there and really helped us in our promotion charge that season. "He left and went away (to Roma) and in the last season he's done incredibly well. I think the supporters will love him. As I said, he's a goalscorer, but he's a multifunctional player who can play in a number of positions — and someone I believe has got great growth."

Borini, 21, made four first-team appearances for Chelsea, before firing six goals in 12 appearances at Swansea. Rodgers said: "He is arguably the best physical player I've worked with in terms of his pace, power and fitness. Mentally, he's very strong. We've got a player who is on the up and someone who I think Liverpool will benefit from." — Internet

Errani makes Italian history in Palermo

PALERMO, 16 July — Sara Errani captured the Palermo Open on Sunday to become the first Italian ever to win four WTA titles in a season. Errani, who had already won claycourt events at Acapulco, Barcelona and Budapest this year, routed eighth seed Barbora Zahlavova Strycova in the final, 6-1, 6-3. "It wasn't easy like the score looks — Barbora was playing very aggressively and it was tough for me," said French Open runner-up Errani. The previous record for most WTA titles in a season for an Italian came just last year, as Errani's best friend and doubles partner, Roberta Vinci, won three, at Barcelona, 's-Hertogenbosch and Budapest.

"I wasn't thinking about the record today, but I'm very happy to have the record — to win four tournaments in a season is incredible for me," Errani said. "It's a magic period for me. This year I've played some fantastic tennis on clay, losing only a few matches, but I really want to improve my results on hard and grass." — Internet

Barcelona in 60 million-euro deal for Neymar

RIO DE JANEIRO, 16 July — Barcelona has reportedly won the race to sign Brazilian sensation Neymar by securing a 60 million-euro deal for the striker.

The Catalan club is hopeful of bringing Neymar to the Camp Nou after the Olympic Games although it is unlikely he will move before the 2013-14 season, Lancelotti reported.

Neymar

The 20-year-old is currently contracted with Brazilian club Santos until the 2014 World Cup. Barcelona is understood to have made a down-payment for the star which guarantees his transfer to the reigning FIFA Club World Cup champion.

News of the deal follows calls from former Brazil international strikers Ronaldo and Rivaldo for Neymar to join a European club to fulfill his potential. The reported deal ends the hopes of Chelsea, Juventus and Real Madrid, which have also expressed their interest in the starlet. — Xinhua

Briton Khan knocked out in fourth round by Garcia

LAS VEGAS, 16 July — American Danny Garcia knocked out Britain's Amir Khan in the fourth round to add the WBA light-welterweight crown to his WBC super-lightweight title in Las Vegas on Saturday. Khan, 26-3 (18 KOs), looked the superior fighter early on, showing vastly superior hand speed as he landed right hands behind a long jab and opened up a cut on Garcia's eye with a left hook.

Garcia's defence remained tight and effective, however, and in the third round began throwing thudding shots to Khan's body and near the end of the round he landed a powerful counter left hook that dropped Khan hard on to his back. The Briton struggled to his feet, but was on shaky legs as the bell rang. Garcia dropped Khan again at the start of the fourth with a right hand and as he retreated, Garcia gave chase, launching huge punches as he did so.

A left hand put Khan down once more, and although he beat the count, referee Kenny Bayless stopped the fight though the Briton thought the stoppage may have been premature.

"I was a little surprised the ref stopped it," he said. I thought he was going to let us continue. My mind was clear, and I thought my legs were okay. "(But) it wasn't my night. I respect Danny. He was countering very well against me. I got a little complacent and he took advantage and he caught me." Garcia said he had felt the Briton had underestimated him.

"We knew Khan was going to come out fast because he thought I had no power," said Garcia who improved to 24-0 (15 KOs). "But I waited and stepped up and used the speed and power I have. And it worked." The loss was Khan's second successive defeat after he lost his WBA and IBF titles on a split decision to Lamont Peterson last December. Peterson subsequently tested positive for synthetic testosterone, which he admitted he took before the Khan fight, and the WBA reinstated Khan as champion on Thursday. — Reuters

Berbatov says Ferguson would sell him for five million pounds

LONDON, 16 July — Manchester United manager Alex Ferguson is willing to sell out-of-favour striker Dimitar Berbatov for five million pounds, the Bulgarian said on Sunday. Berbatov, who has scored a record 48 goals for Bulgaria, has lost his starting spot at United even though the club took up an extra year's option on his contract in March. He joined United from Tottenham Hotspur in 2008 for 30.7 million pounds.

"I read the papers and I see they say 10 million pounds is my price. I go and talk with Sir Alex, and he says to me five million," the 31-year-old Berbatov wrote on his Facebook page. So who is telling the truth, what do you think? I love this club but I am not going to be useful to anyone if I am not playing. And I want to play. "But for unknown reasons it's not going to happen, or my chances will be limited, so it's better for everyone if we say goodbye."

Berbatov scored 14 goals in his first season at United and found the target 12 times in his second season before finishing the following campaign as top goalscorer with 22. However, last season he found himself behind Wayne Rooney, Danny Welbeck and Javier Hernandez in the pecking order for a starting place as Ferguson admitted earlier this year that he would not be able to guarantee the Bulgarian regular first-team action.

Spain's Ferrer wins Swedish Open final

Spain's David Ferrer

BASTAD, (Sweden), 16 July — David Ferrer has won his second Swedish Open title after defeating fellow Spaniard Nicolas Almagro 6-2, 6-2. The No 5-ranked Ferrer was never challenged during the clay-court match, which was his 11th career victory over Almagro.

Almagro has never beaten Ferrer. Ferrer last won the Swedish Open in 2007. Robert Lindstedt of Sweden and Horia Tecia of Romania won the men's doubles at the tournament earlier Sunday, defeating Alexander Peya of Austria and Bruno Soares of Brazil 6-3, 7-6 (5). — Internet

Chapman wins US Senior Open to join trio of stars

LAKE ORION, (Mich), 16 July — Roger Chapman earned the right to be mentioned in the same sentence with Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Hale Irwin. Not bad for a self-described former European Tour journeyman. The Englishman shot a 4-under 66 on Sunday to win the US Senior Open by two strokes at 10 under at Indianwood. He won the Senior PGA Championship by the same margin two months ago on the other side of Michigan. Chapman, Nicklaus, Player and Irwin are the only players to win the US Senior Open and Senior PGA Championship in the same year. "It's a true honor," Chapman said. Before this year, his career highlight was a European Tour win in Brazil in 2000. Bernhard Langer (72), Fred Funk (67), Tom Lehman (68) and Corey Pavin (68) finished tied for second at 8-under 272 at the Champions Tour's fourth of five majors. Pavin's two-stroke penalty after his first round for hitting a ball that moved a fraction of an inch proved to be costly.

Entering the final round, it seemed as if the only lingering question was how easily Langer would win. Langer, though, found out what the first- and second-round leaders — Tom Kite and Lance Ten Broeck — did the previous two days: It's not easy to stay consistent at Indianwood. Langer took a four-shot lead into the final round and closed with a shaky performance that spoiled his shot at winning his second US Senior Open. — Internet

Bahrain's traditional market in Isa Town gutted by massive fire

MANAMA, 16 July— Firefighters are trying to control a fire that spread Sunday across a traditional market in Bahrain's Isa Town and destroyed several shops.

The fire has been continuing for over six hours and roads leading to the area were blocked by the police as a precautionary measure. It resulted in major losses, but no casualties were reported. The Interior Ministry said civil defense team were present at the site to extinguish the fire.

This is the second fire in almost five years that has destroyed the row of shops in the area, which is popular for its flea market and shops selling furniture and rugs. Xinhua

Colombian navy seizes one ton of cocaine

BOGOTA, 16 July—The Colombian navy captured four drug-trafficking suspects and more than one ton of cocaine in a recent operation along the Caribbean coast, authorities said Sunday.

Colombian Defense Minister Juan Carlos Pinzon said the four were travelling in a speed boat when spotted by a navy helicopter.

The navy unit alerted two frigates, which then sent other boats to chase it, Pinzon said, adding that passengers on the suspicious boat then dumped a number of packages into the sea.

"Four people were arrested by National Navy units, and 81 cocaine packages were recovered," which contained more than one ton of cocaine, said the minister.

Pinzon, who did not specify when the operation was conducted, said the suspected drug-traffickers first claimed they were Costa Ricans, but apparently they were Colombians. Xinhua

Serena beats jet lag to win Stanford title

STANFORD, 16 July— Top seed Serena Williams overcame a week fighting jet-lag to beat fellow American Coco Vandeweghe 7-5 6-3 to retain the Stanford Classic title on Sunday. Just eight days after winning her fifth Wimbledon single title, Williams fought off a set point in the first set before overcoming big-serving Vandeweghe, who had reached her first WTA final. The 30-year-old Williams used her experience and know-how to race past the 20-year-old, nailing 21 winners. Vandeweghe struck 20 winners but also committed 25 unforced errors.

Williams, who had been contending with jet lag much of the week after travelling from London to California, was satisfied with the title run. "I played well enough to win, but I can do a lot better and play stronger," she said. "But there are a lot of positives and I was fighting and I didn't quit. "I survived and didn't play my greatest, but mentally I was there and that really helped me a lot." Vandeweghe served for the first set at 5-4 but could not convert her only set point when Williams ripped a cross court backhand return off a second serve. It took Williams six break points to break back to 5-5, but the 20 year-old Vandeweghe finally handed it to her when she double faulted.

"I been serving well all week and I still feel like I served serve in the set and Williams sealed the title with a forehand winner down the line.

Williams won her 43rd career title, tying her with her older sister Venus for the most titles among active players on the WTA tour. The world number four has now also pretty well against Serena, but she's a great player and she going to take advantage of opportunities, especially on second serves on set point," Vandeweghe said. Williams took a 3-1 lead in the second set when Vandeweghe again double faulted and while she pushed Williams with her huge serve and heavy ground strokes, she could not get a break point on the Williams won 28 of her last 29 matches. She will now take a couple of days off, play an exhibition match and then head to London to prepare for the Olympics where she will defend her doubles title with Venus and attempt to win the singles gold. "A gold medal will mean a lot to me, but I can't lay all my hopes and dreams on that," she said. Reuters

Fourth regular session of first Pyithu Hluttaw continues for ninth day

Six questions answered, two new proposals discussed

NAY PYI TAW, 16 July—Pyithu Hluttaw session continued for the ninth day at Pyithu Hluttaw Building, Pyithu Hluttaw Complex, here, attended by Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker Thura U Shwe Mann and 407 MPs.

Six questions were answered and two new proposals discussed at the today's session.

First, the Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker explained his actions in response to the urgent proposal of Daw Nan Wah Nu of Kunhein Constituency on 13 July and the decision of the Hluttaw. The Hluttaw approved to coordinate with whoever can get sanctions lifted anyhow. In response to the decision, the Speaker met a delegation led by Under Secretary of State for Economic, Business and Agricultural Affairs Mr Robert D Hormats on 14 July. During the meeting, the Speaker expressed his thanks to US government for relaxing the economic sanctions. But the reliable sources said Mc Cornell and Mrs Feeinstein submitted the proposal to the congress for replacement of the nine years (period) in 108-61:50 USC letter No 1071 of the Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2003, for two times on 12 July and then the proposal was handed to the financial committee. If the proposal was approved, the period of economic sanctions against Myanmar would reach 2015. So, the Speaker requested the US under secretary to assist as possibly as he can in dissuading the proposal. In addition, the Speaker told the delegation that the releasing of economic sanctions was just for US firms only, excluding Myanmar businessmen, exports and foreign exchange, which was viewed as one-sided action. The Speaker said he requested the US delegation and US Ambassador to Myanmar Mr Derek Mitchell to review the case and to take interests of Myanmar citizens and national race people into consideration before Hluttaw representatives.

The Speaker in all seriousness urged the MPs to dissuade the US government from extending the term of sanctions against Myanmar but persuade it to lift sanctions both for two sides and for regular currency exchange in the interests of the nation and its people, if possible.
