Police will be trained for quell violence and riots in accord with modified manual: Deputy Home Affairs Minister

NAY PYI TAW, 3 July — Today's Pyithu Hluttaw session covered nine agendas in which 10 questions were answered and one bill submitted.

In his reply regarding the matter of security and narcotic drug, Deputy Minister for Home Affairs Brig-Gen Kyaw Zan Myint answered that actions were being taken against any illegal organizations that are carrying out disturbance acts, causing negative impact on the interest of the country and its people after making necessary investigation into it.

Next, he replied that tasks of heightening the public awareness of dangers of narcotic drugs were in progress including Kunhein Township and departments concerned would be committed to alternative crops growing, education and rehabilitation works.

Afterwards, he responded to the question about formation of more anti-riot squads and giving trainings meeting international standards to them that police battalions had been formed for quell violence and riots and plans were underway to form one more battalion in Meiktila and to add three more security companies to auxiliary forces in Nay Pyi Taw and states and regions. After modifying the current anti-riot manual, police forces in states and regions would be trained in accord with the new manual and training courses organized by Myanmar Police Force would follow the manual.

"His answer is complete. I am glad to hear plans to conduct training courses with the help of Australia and EU" says U Myint Soe of Pyawbwe Constituency who raised the question.

Today's session came to an end in the afternoon.

NAY PYI TAW, 3 July — Today's Amyotha Hluttaw saw answering three questions, submitting two bills, making decision and seeking approval for two proposals after discussions.

A proposal to approve the bill regarding the waterway transport submitted by Deputy Minister for Transport U Han Sein was seconded by two representatives and the Hluttaw approved it.

Next, six representatives held discussions on the proposal to recheck facts and stats of irrigable land areas for accuracy in agricultural statistics and to seek the official approval of the Union government.

Regarding the proposal, Deputy Minister for Agriculture and Irrigation U Khin Zaw seconded the proposal submitted by U Myo Myint of Mandalay Region Constituency No (6), highlighting the importance of accurate agricultural statistics while comprehensive efforts were in progress to boost agricultural produce.

As the majority was in favour of the proposal, it was approved.

Regarding the proposal, U Hla Swe of Magway Constituency said that the proposal won unanimous support of the Hluttaw as obsession of stats and facts about irrigated farmlands occurred outside and statistics were to be subjected to close scrutiny.

Next, three representatives and Deputy Minister for National Planning and Economic Development Dr Set Aung held discussions on the proposal to establish National Single Window-NSW by Dr Myint Kyi of Yangon Region Constituency No (8). The proposal won the majority support and it was approved.

Then, Amyotha Hluttaw Public Complaint and Petition Committee read out a report on findings in connection to the case of Daw San of Kyaungsu village in Lemyathna Township of Ayeyawady Region, and the Hluttaw Speaker decided to discuss the report as a proposal at the Hluttaw.

Today's session ended in the evening and the seventh-day session continues tomorrow.

Ahlon robbery suspects held to police custody within four hours

AHLON, 3 July — A 14-year-old girl and a housemaid had fallen victims to an armed robbery at an apartment on the sixth floor of a building on Sittwin street at Hsinmin ward in Ahlon Township, here, at about 8 pm on 1 July.

While Ma Yamin Aye, 14, daughter of the house owner Daw Nge, 43, and housemaid Daw Aye Hmon, 48, were at home on that day, unknown five men arrived there. Two of them forced their way into the house and asked for K 3 million to give them, putting a knife on the back of Daw Aye Hmon.

After Ma Yamin Aye replied that the money they asked had already gone to Ma Thida, they took a one-tical MC necklace worth about K 600,000, a one-tical golden bracelet worth about K 600,000, a 0.25 tical gold ring studded with a white gem worth about K 150,000, a 0.25 tical locket worth about K 150,000, a pair of 0.25 tical golden earrings worth about K 150,000, a golden item worth about K 30,000 and K 150,000 in cash totaling about K 1.85 million. During the robbery, Daw Aye Hmon was beaten and stabbed by men. As soon as they left the apartment, Ma Yamin Aye ran to an emergency ladder at the back of the house and shouted for help, ward dwellers and authorities concerned rushed there and transported the injured housemaid to Yangon General Hospital.

Police carried out a search for the robbers and arrested them at a guest house in Hlinethaya Township within four hours. They were charged with armed robbery by Ahlon police station.

Nyaungshwe: A town of earning foreign exchange

NYAUNGSHWE, 3 July — Myanmar is thronging with flocks of globetrotters daily. Of them, 80 per cent of tourists visits Nyaungshwe. Nyaungshwe sees arrivals of tourists that range from 200 to 300. The state government charges a fee of five dollars for entrance at the Nyaungshwe tollgate. Tourists arrive in Nyaungshwe by air via Heho airport or by car via Bagan-NyaungU and Mandalay.

Arrivals of tourists at Nyaungshwe reach a peak during the period from October to February. French, German, Dutch, Spanish, British, Italian and American visitors represent a large number among the visitors to Nyaungshwe. They crowd Nyaungshwe individually or in groups under their own plans or arrangements of travel agencies.

There are 15 companies operating as travel agencies in Nyaungshwe. Visitors are picked up at Heho airport and they are accommodated at hotels in Nyaungshwe. Tourists take a motorized boat trip arranged by travel agencies to PhaungdawU Pagoda in Inlay Lake from Nyaungshwe. They like to photograph the scenic beauty of Inlay Lake. There are 150 licensed boats in Nyaungshwe. A return fare to Inlay is K 20000 per head. Nyaungshwe is home to 100 licensed tour guides and 100 local tour guides. As the present number of tour guides is not enough to provide services to the increased number of tourists, new generation tour guides are being nurtured by providing them with training courses. A licensed tour guide earns from USD 600 to USD 1200 a month. Twenty more hotels are under construction in Nyaungshwe as 29 hotels in

Iran says new US sanctions will complicate nuclear issue

DUBAI, 3 July—Iran has played down the impact of US sanctions that came into effect this week, but said the measures would complicate a resolution to the dispute over its nuclear programme. The new sanctions, which came into effect on Monday, target trade with Iran's shipping and automobile sectors, gold sales to Iran and handling of the Iranian currency, the rial - a further attempt to force Tehran to curb its nuclear activities.

In recent years, Iran has vigorously pursued its development of nuclear technology which Western countries suspect is masking its attempts to develop a weapons capability, allegations Iranian officials have repeatedly denied. "We have no doubt that sanctions are a broken policy and we are surprised about why the American government and other governments who take part in these sanctions continually repeat a mistaken and failed policy," the state television website quoted Foreign Ministry spokesman Abbas Araqchi as saying late on Monday.

"Removing sanctions would count as a confidence-building measure and can assist in a resolution of the issue but increasing sanctions would have no result, apart from making the issue more complex and harder to resolve," he said.

Obama ends Africa trip with power pledge

DAR ES SALAAM, 3 July—Ending his week-long tour of Africa, US President Barack Obama on Tuesday pledging a multi-billion-dollar power project for the continent.

The US president launched the "Power Africa Initiative" to help African nations overcome the electricity deficit.

Obama, who arrived in Tanzania on Monday, said the US has set aside 7 billion US dollars and that the private sector has also committed 9 billion dollars for the project which would be implemented through Public Private Partnership (PPP) model.

He was speaking when he visited Symbion Power Plant, an American energy firm at the Ubungu power complex in Dares Salaam, Tanzania's economic hub.

Obama said delaying the projects would not benefit the countries and their people.

Tanzania's Minister for Energy and Minerals Sospeter Muhongo said Tanzania, which is among six beneficiaries of the project in Africa, has already made the list of its power projects and handed them to the US Embassy.

The projects will begin to be implemented after completion of the environmental impact assessment, Muhongo said, adding that most of the projects aim to increase power access to rural dwellers. He said the US boost has come at appropriate time as Tanzania gears to roll out its plans to double power production from current level of 1,438.24 MW of installed capacity to 2,780 MW by 2015. "And our aim is to reach a point where we will be producing more than 3,000 MW," he said. Obama said his tour of Senegal, South Africa and Tanzania has shown him that there is a lot of potential for the countries to develop themselves.

He said Africa has all it takes for its countries and people to develop and what is needed is commitment to put into good use the ample resources at its disposal.

"In Senegal I have seen how farmers put into use new technologies which multiply their productivity hence income. I have seen farmers applying new technology, buying new tractors for the first time and tripling their income," he said.

While in Soweto, South Africa, Obama said he met young people who showed him their desire and commitment to change and become young leaders and entrepreneurs. "I have seen progress in a lot of areas such as health, agriculture, energy and leadership. I have been inspired a lot," he said.

Obama noted that the countries he has visited have demonstrated to him that Africa is ready to unleash its potential to full prosperity, committing his country to assist the continent realize the dream.—Xinhua

TEPCO to file for procedures to restart idled nuclear reactors

TOKYO, 3 July—Tokyo Electric Power Co said on Tuesday it will swiftly apply for a state safety assessment of two of its reactors in Niigata Prefecture to restart their operation, even as the utility continues to grapple with the crippled Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant.

The announcement was made ahead of the introduction of a set of new nuclear regulations next Monday, which will effectively restart the stalled procedures to resume the country's reactors, most of which are currently offline.

"As we have finished preparations for the Nos 6 and 7 reactors at the Kashiwazaki-Kariwa plant, we have decided to file applications (for their safety assessment) as swiftly as possible after the new regulations take effect," TEPCO President Naomi Hirose said at a Press conference in Tokyo.

Hirose did not say exactly when the company aims to submit the applications, while adding he hopes to meet the officials of Niigata Prefecture and local governments hosting the plant "as early as possible" to provide explanations.

But it remains uncertain whether TEPCO will be able to quickly win local consent for the safety assessments to be conducted by the Nuclear Regulation Authority, given that Niigata Governor Hirohiko Izumida has been critical of restarting the plant.

In Niigata Prefecture, Izumida expressed frustration over the latest development, saying, "We have not heard any explanations. There is no greater disregard of local people than this."—Kyodo News

Nearly 50 killed in Iraq bombings

BAGHDAD, 3 July—At least 45 people were killed in bomb attacks across Iraq on Tuesday, most of them in busy markets and commercial areas of the capital Baghdad, police and medics said.

The deadliest assault took place in the predominantly Shi'ite Shaab neighbourhood of northern Baghdad, where two car bombs killed eight people. There were also explosions in the mainly Shi'ite districts of Abu Dsheer, Kamaliya, Tobchi and Shula.

"A blast hit near a crowded market full of people shopping," said Ali Sadoun, a policeman whose patrol was stationed in Shula. "When police and people gathered to help the wounded, a second bomb went off, tearing through bodies." Sunni Muslims were the apparent targets of blasts in Amriya and Abu Ghraib, on the city's western outskirts.

A sustained campaign of attacks since the start of the year has increased fears of wider conflict in a country where ethnic Kurds, Shi'ite and Sunni Muslims have yet to find a stable power-sharing compromise.

Insurgents including al-Qaeda's Iraqi affiliate have been recruiting from the country's Sunni minority, which resents Shi'ite domination since the US-led invasion that toppled Saddam Hussein in 2003.

Intercommunal tensions have been inflamed by the civil war in neighbouring Syria, which is increasingly being fought along sectarian lines, drawing in Shi'ite and Sunni fighters from Iraq and elsewhere to fight on opposite sides of the conflict.

Outside Baghdad, a bomb blast near a funeral tent in the city of Baquba killed six people.

Further south, a car bomb in Amara Province killed four people and in the city of Basra, three blasts hit a hotel frequented by foreigners working in the oil industry, wounding three guards.—Reuters

700-year-old shipwreck antiquities found in central Vietnam

HANOI, 3 July—Thousands of antiquities from an ancient sunken ship have been discovered in Binh Son District in Vietnam’s central Province of Quang Ngai, state-run news agency reported on Monday.

Among the discovered objects, over 4,000 artifacts, including coins and ceramics, were recovered undamaged, which are believed to date back to the 13th century.

The objects were collected from the seabed during an excavation on 4-23 June, according to the Quang Ngai provincial steering board for archaeological exploration and excavation of underwater cultural heritage.

The ship measures 20.5 metres long and 5.6 metres wide with 13 holds. Remnants left from holds 4 to 6 prove that the ship caught fire before sinking. The findings are expected to contribute to the research of Vietnam’s ceramics in the 13th century and enrich the country’s cultural heritage.—Xinhua

Bahrain to study restrictions on VoIP services

DUBAI, 3 July—Bahrain is to study whether to restrict Internet-based telecom services, the communications minister of the restive Arab state told Reuters, although no final decision was imminent. Internet-based communications including Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP), instant messaging and social media helped activists launch and nurture the uprisings that toppled long-standing rulers in Tunisia, Egypt and Libya in 2011.

Many Arab opposition activists prefer to use VoIP and other Internet technologies to communicate because they are much harder to bug than a regular phone line, and cheaper. Bahrain’s Minister of State for Communications said the government did not monitor conventional telecommunications and a decision to study the use of VoIP was motivated by a variety of risks posed by used in fraudulent enterprises like phishing and identity theft.” Since the Arab Spring uprisings, several Gulf governments have pushed for greater oversight and control of VoIP and other hard-to-trace communication tools such as BlackBerry Messenger. Apple plans Nevada solar farm in clean energy push for data centres

SAN FRANCISCO, 3 July—Apple Inc said it plans to build a new solar farm with NV Energy Inc for power supply to its new data centre in Reno, Nevada, a major step towards its goal of having its data centres run on renewable energy.

Apple and other technology companies such as Amazon.com Inc and Microsoft Corp, that build and run computer server farms have come under criticism for their high consumption of electricity and other resources.

These data centres cater to an explosion in Internet traffic, streaming content through mobile devices and hosting of services to corporations.

The new solar farm will provide power to Sierra Pacific Power Co’s electric grid that serves Apple’s data centre and when completed will generate about 43.5 million kilowatt of clean energy a year, Apple said in a statement.

Apple already runs its largest data centre in the US on solar power.

The centre in Maiden, North Carolina produces 167 million kilowatt hours, the power equivalent of 17,600 homes for one year, from a 100-acre solar farm and fuel cell installations provided by Silicon Valley startup Bloom Energy.

More Filipinos use cellphones as “mobile computers”

MANILA, 3 July—Filipinos are using their mobile phones not only to communicate but also as mobile computers as well, according to a recent market study issued on Tuesday.

TNS, a global customized research company, said in its report that Filipino consumers are not just using cell phones to call and texting messages and photos, but also as a means to have “internet-on-the-go,” allowing users to be always online. Of the 38,000 respondents in Metro Manila, 75 percent of the respondents surveyed used mobile phones to take photos or videos; 45 percent to browse the internet; 44 percent to access their social networking sites; and 37 percent to check their emails. The study was conducted from November 2012 to January 2013.

“Based on the findings of the study, the increase in various mobile activities explain the growing trend of Wi-Fi accessibility in public areas,” said TNS Philippines Managing Director Gary de Ocampo. About 35 percent of Metro Manila respondents connect to the internet via Wi-Fi access in public areas in 2013.

The study also showed that Filipino consumers changed their purchasing priorities from buying phones based on physical features to choosing a phone that will enhance personal experience. Smartphone usage in the Philippine is now at 53 percent compared to overall mobile phone usage of 89 percent.

The study identified five growth potential for increase mobile usage video calling, Wi-Fi at home, watching live TV shows, blogging and streaming video like YouTube. The sale of smartphone in the Philippine market is seen to increase significantly in the next few years as prices go down. The TNS study also revealed that most Filipinos living in Metro Manila own “multiple screens” or more than just one device. A typical household owns at least four of the following devices : a mobile phone (89 percent), smartphone (53 percent), tablet (14 percent), desktop (39 percent), laptop/netbooks (37 percent) and smart TV (4 percent.)—Xinhua

Avatar-based videos encourage women to lose weight

WASHINGTON, 3 July—Watching an avatar, or a computer-generated figure, that performs weight-loss behaviours in a virtual community might help some women shed pounds in the real world, according to a new US study released on Monday.

“This pilot study showed that you don’t have to be a gamer to use virtual reality to learn some important skills for weight loss,” Melissa Napolitano, an associate professor at the George Washington University, said in a statement.

She added the findings, published in the Journal of Diabetes Science and Technology, suggest that “virtual reality could be a promising new tool for building healthier habits.”

Previous research had shown that using virtual reality to reinforce behaviour could be effective, so Napolitano and her colleagues wanted to establish whether it could be used to help people lose weight.

To find out, the team first conducted a survey among 128 overweight women. Most of them had tried to lose weight during the last year and the majority had never used a virtual reality game.

Despite the fact that most of these women had no experience with the concept, the researchers found that 88 percent said they are willing to try it.

Eight of the 128 women were then chosen for the study and allowed to pick avatars that they thought resembled their own skin colour and shape.

These participants came to Napolitano’s clinic once a week and watched a 15-minute DVD featuring an avatar demonstrating healthy weight loss behaviours.

In one lesson, for example, the women watched the avatar sitting down for dinner and learned about portion sizes. In another lesson, they watched an avatar walk with moderate intensity on a treadmill and learned the walking pace needed to help with weight loss goals.

After four weeks of treatment, the women in this pilot study had lost an average of 3.5 pounds (about 1.6 kilograms), a fairly typical amount for traditional diet plans, Napolitano said.

“This is just the first step to show that women, even those who are not gamers, are interested in an avatar-based technology to help them with a weight-loss plan,” said Napolitano.

“We are excited by the potential of this technology as a scalable tool to help people learn the skills to be successful at weight loss over the long run.”

Factory orders rise, hint at stability in manufacturing

WASHINGTON, 3 July—New orders for factory goods rose for a second straight month in May, adding to tentative signs of stabilization in manufacturing after a recent slowdown.

The Commerce Department on Tuesday said new orders for manufactured goods increased 2.1 percent. April’s orders were revised to show a 1.3 percent rise instead of the previously reported 1 percent advance.

Economists polled by Reuters had forecast new orders received by factories increasing 2 percent.

Manufacturing slowed in recent months, weighed down by deep government spending cuts and slowing global demand, especially in China and the recession-hit Europe. However, there are signs the loss of momentum has run its course or is at least starting to ebb.

Data on Monday showed a gauge of national factory activity bounced back into growth territory in June, with new orders pushing higher.

That improving tone was also evident in reports last month showing a modest rise in factory output in May and a pick-up in business spending plans.

The Commerce Department report showed factory orders rose in most categories, though orders for motor vehicles fell 2 percent. However, new transportation orders jumped 10.9 percent.

Orders excluding the volatile transportation category rose 0.6 percent after edging up 0.2 in April.

Outside transportation there were gains in orders for machinery, computer and electronic products and primary metals. Orders for electrical equipment, and appliances and components orders also rose.

The department also said orders for durable goods, manufactured products expected to last three years or more, rose 3.7 percent instead of the 3.6 percent increase reported last week.

Durable goods orders excluding transportation were up 0.5 percent rather than 0.7 percent.

Orders for non-defence capital goods excluding aircraft—seen as a measure of business confidence and spending plans—increased 1.5 percent instead of the previously reported 1.1 percent rise.

Brazil’s trade deficit highest in 18 years

RIO DE JANEIRO, 3 July—Brazil registered a trade deficit of 3 billion US dollars in the first six months of 2013, the highest in the past 18 years, the government said on Monday.

According to the Ministry of Development, Industry and Trade, the first half of this year has seen the worst economic figures recorded in any initial six-month period since 1995, when Brazil registered a trade deficit of 4.22 billion US dollars. Exports amounted to 114.5 billion US dollars, down 4.8 percent from the same period last year, while imports reached 117.5 billion US dollars, a record-high level. The government attributed the poor results to the financial crisis in developed countries that caused the market for Brazilian products to shrink, and to an accounting delay that let the cost of some late 2012 oil imports to appear in the 2013 accounts.

Despite the poor results registered so far in 2013, the government expects improvements in the rest of the year.

Last year, Brazil had its worst trade performance in a decade, with a trade surplus of 19.43 billion US dollars, down 34.7 percent from 2011.—Xinhua

Japan’s MUFG agrees to buy $5.61 billion stake in Thai lender

HONG KONG, 3 July—Japan’s Mitsubishi UFJ Financial Group (MUFG) (8306.T) has agreed to buy a controlling stake in Thailand’s Bank of Ayudhya Pcl BAY.BK for up to 560 billion yen ($5.61 billion) as Japanese lenders expand into fast-growing Southeast Asian economies to beat slower growth at home.

MUFG’s purchase of up to 75 percent of Thailand’s fifth largest lender would be the biggest acquisition by a Japanese bank in Southeast Asia. It also ends General Electric Co’s (GE.N) six-year-old investment in Ayudhya, with GE raising $2.41 billion by selling its stake in the Thai bank in two tranches.

The deal requires approval from Thailand’s finance ministry as foreign ownership in domestic banks is capped at 49 percent. MUFG told a briefing it believes Bangkok would “take a favourable view” and said it was considering merging its Thai operations with Ayudhya to comply with Thailand’s single presence policy on bank ownership.

MUFG has sizable operations in Japanese corporations in Thailand, where Toyota Motor Corp (7203.T) and other conglomerates own manufacturing plants. Under the terms of the deal, MUFG will make a tender offer priced at 39 baht per share, allowing GE to sell its entire 25.33 percent stake in the Thai bank.—Reuters

Chrysler’s US sales in June rise 8 percent

DETROIT, 3 July—Chrysler’s US sales in June rose 8 percent on strong demand for its two best-selling vehicles, the Ram full-size pickup truck and Jeep Cherokee SUV, the company said on Tuesday. Chrysler Group LLC, majority-owned by Italy’s Fiat, reported US sales last month of 156,686 vehicles, in line with analysts’ expectations and the company’s best June results since 2007.

Overall US auto industry sales in June are expected to show a rise of up to 8 percent and could reach their strongest monthly pace since before a recession pushed Chrysler and General Motors into bankruptcy in 2009.

Economists polled by Thomson Reuters expect an annual sales rate in June of 15.4 million vehicles. Several analysts and research firms who follow the auto industry closely anticipate a rate of 15.5 million to 15.7 million.

Chrysler falls in the optimists’ camp as it expects a sales pace in the month of about 16 million vehicles, including medium and heavy trucks. Those vehicles typically account for about 300,000 sales annually.

“The fundamentals for continued industry gains in new-vehicle sales remain intact,” Chrysler US sales chief Reid Bigland said in a statement. Monthly sales are seen as an early indicator of the US economy’s health.

The auto industry has held up better than the broader economy as easier credit availability and pent-up demand for vehicles have driven demand.

In May, US auto sales rose more than expected as construction workers and oil drillers bought more pickups to meet growing demand for their services, a trend major automakers expect to continue through the rest of the year.

Osaka seeks cruise ship tourists from overseas

OSAKA, 3 July—The Osaka city government has made efforts to lure high-income tourists on cruise ships from Europe, the United States and Asia in a bid to boost the city's economy.

Osaka port has fallen behind its rivals such as Yokohama, Kobe, and Hakata in visitor numbers from oceangoing cruise ships, with the trend partly attributed to low name recognition.

In 2012, a total of 33 cruise ships arrived at Osaka port, a 1.5-fold increase from the level in 2007, according to the Ministry of Land, Infrastructure, Transport and Tourism. But the number remains far smaller than Yokohama in Kanagawa Prefecture, south of Tokyo, which led the country with 142 ships, Hakata in Fukuoka Prefecture in southern Japan, with 112, and Kobe in Hyogo Prefecture, west of Osaka, with 110 ships.

The city government is currently touting its proximity to Kyoto and Nara, two ancient cities full of historical sites that are popular tourist destinations, in cooperation with the Osaka Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

"If we successfully attract about 50 cruise ships a year, we predict economic effects will surpass 20 billion yen," a city government official said.

cruise ship Diamond Princess, which is about 290 metres long with 18 stories and run by Santa Clarita, California-based Princess Cruise Lines Ltd, arrived at Osaka port.

Shigetaka Sato, head of the chamber of commerce, also appeared at the port to welcome about 2,000 passengers from the ship, showing his intention to spearhead the city's ongoing efforts to lure visitors.

Data from the tourism ministry also showed that a total of 1,105 cruise ships visited Japanese ports during 2012.—Kyodo News

Belarus to cooperate with China in national cyberspace protection

MINSK, 3 July—Belarusian President Alexander Lukashenko has said that Belarus is going to expand the scope of its cooperation with China significantly to improve the protection of its national cyberspace, local media reported on Tuesday.

The aim of the cooperation with China is to protect Belarusian databases, telecommunications links and state secrets from foreign interference, Lukashenko said in his Belarus Independence Day message in Minsk.

"I think that in the near future we will be able to discuss this problem with China's leader," he said.

"We have no other choice. The world has already entered into an era of undeclared cyber wars, and we have no right to lose here. This is why we must dramatically step up cooperation with our allies, particularly with the People's Republic of China — the country that has managed to create an effective system for the protection of the national cyberspace," Lukashenko noted.—Xinhua

US to delay key health-reform provision to 2015

Germany jails Russian couple who spied on NATO and EU for decades

STUTTGART, 3 July—A middle-aged, middle-class couple who are presumed to be Russian were jailed in Germany on Tuesday for passing on hundreds of NATO and EU documents in two decades of spying for Moscow.

At the moment of her arrest in 2011, Heidrun Anschlag was, in true spy-thriller fashion, receiving a coded radio transmission from Moscow, the court in Stuttgart said.

"Through their excellent training and carefully crafted cover stories ... the defendants posed a significant, abstract danger to Germany," said the judges, sentencing Heidrun Anschlag and her husband Andreas—not their real names—to 5-1/2 and 6-1/2 years' prison respectively.

The pair, now in their 50s, entered Germany in 1988 and 1990, posing as Austrian citizens from South America. While their cover has been broken, investigators have to this day failed to uncover their true identities.

From their home in the university town of Marburg, they passed on political and military secrets from the EU and NATO obtained from a contact in the Dutch Foreign Ministry's visa section, and sought out recruits.

From 2008, their main task became managing this contact, who was paid at least 72,200 euros (62,075 pounds).

Described by Moscow as a "valuable source in need of particular protection", the Dutch man was arrested in March 2012 and jailed for 12 years.—Reuters

SURREY, 3 July—Canadian police said on Tuesday they foiled an al-Qaeda-inspired plot to detonate three pressure-cooker bombs during Monday's Canada Day holiday outside the parliament building in the Pacific coast city of Victoria, arresting a Canadian man and woman and seizing their home-made explosive devices.

Police said there was no evidence to suggest a foreign link to the planned attack, which targeted public celebrations outside the parliament building in Victoria, capital of the Province of British Columbia.

They declined to detail any links between the two Canadians and the al-Qaeda network. They also said they were not aware of any connection to the 15 April bombings at the Boston Marathon in which three people were killed by devices built from pressure cookers.

"This self-radicalized behaviour was intended to create maximum impact on a national holiday," Wayne Rideout, assistant commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, told a news conference.

"They took steps to educate themselves and produced explosive devices designed to cause injury and death."

Police said there was no risk to the public at any time because they began monitoring the suspects in February and had known all along what was happening.

The two people charged are John Stuart Nuttall and Amanda Korody, Canadian-born citizens from Surrey, British Columbia, authorities said.—Reuters

Private filling stations in Yangon see longer queue

YANGON, 3 July—Vehicles in Yangon have to join long queues at private filling stations as the fuel demand is increasing and the number of the private filling stations reduced.

According to an in-charge of a station, the private filling stations have expanded sale capacity to 6000 gallons of gasoline a day from 4000 gallons.

The private filling stations are allowed to increase competitiveness in the market which was once monopolized by Myanma Petroleum Products Enterprise.

The return of longer queue at the filling stations was caused by temporary shutdown of the filling stations which failed to meet standards set by the ministry.

Understanding democracy

The democracy is the most longed for political system. But there is still no consensus how to define it. In essence equality, freedom and rule of law have been identified as the most important characteristics of democracy. We are on the right track of democracy. But we have to question ourselves if we do thoroughly understand these very basics of the political system almost new to us. The mere word "democracy" will not be able to shape our future and the future of our country, but our perception will.

The most cherished word "democracy" does not belong to the government nor the parliament nor any other institution. It does belong to the whole system. There is no such an institution that could alone represent and ensure democracy. But, there is only "democratic" institution that complies with democratic norms and standards, and practices democracy. It is not all about the government or the parliament alone. A political system is basically formed with government, legislature, judiciary and people. Any part of it needs to be "democratic" to establish democracy.

Democracy ensures that everyone is equal before the law. Law is the most important feature of democracy. It is the charter between the people and other institutions governing the people. An institution or community will never become "democratic" if it does not embrace the importance of laws, put the trust in them and obey them. People in democracy society have the rights to demand changes to the laws, but they are not entitled to defy them. The democracy cannot be built on the mistrust in the laws.

After two years of democratic governance, we have yet to answer these basic questions. What do we want: democracy or mob rule? Do we want exclusive rights at the cost to equality? Does freedom mean for us doing what we ever want? Is there any type of freedom or right to force anyone else to behave in any particular way? Do we actually understand and embrace the rule of law?

Pakistan rejects Afghan gov't claim over Taliban power sharing plan

ISLAMABAD, 3 July—Pakistan on Tuesday rejected as completely baseless the comments and “ideas” attributed to it by Afghan officials relating to alleged “power-sharing formula” with the Taliban or attempting to “bring fiefdoms to Afghanistan.”

Afghan Deputy Foreign Minister Irshad Ahmadi said in Kabul on Monday that Pakistan has suggested the Afghan government to share power with the Taliban as part of the end game.

Ahmadi had claimed that Pakistan’s security adviser Sartaj Aziz had floated the proposal in his meeting with Afghan ambassador Umer Daudzai in Islamabad on Friday.

Afghan President Hamid Karzai had also said in Kabul at the weekend that he has heard some rumours from Pakistan for handing over some parts to the Taliban.

Pakistan angrily rejected the Afghan government’s claim.

“This is a fabrication as no such notions have been expressed by any Pakistani official,” the Pakistan Foreign Ministry said.

“This is not our policy to encourage any fissiparous tendencies. In fact, Pakistan has always supported a peaceful, stable and united Afghanistan,” Pakistani foreign ministry spokesman said in a statement.

He said Pakistan is playing a constructive and positive role to facilitate an Afghan-led and Afghan-owned reconciliation process.

Pakistani Prime Minister Muhammad Nawaz Sharif has reaffirmed Pakistan’s commitment to support the efforts for peace and stability in Afghanistan and the region in his telephone conversations with Afghan President Karzai after taking office last month, he said. “The negative statements from Afghan leadership and officials tend to vitiate the atmosphere and constrain development of close and cooperative ties between the two countries,” the spokesman said.

The spokesman said “Pakistan hopes that Afghanistan will reciprocate our constructive efforts, refrain from attributing misleading ideas to us, and work together for sustainable peace and stability that is so vitally important for progress and prosperity of the two countries and the region.”

Japan to revive Ship for World Youth Programme

TOKYO, 3 July—The government plans to revive the Ship for World Youth Programme to promote understanding between Japanese and foreign youths and train leaders through a one-month global voyage, government officials said on Tuesday.

The programme was abolished by the previous government led by the Democratic Party of Japan to help reduce government spending for fiscal 2013 that began in April.

Since the Liberal Democratic Party won back the reins of government from the DPJ late last year, however, the present government of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe has viewed the programme as useful for training youths, the officials said.

The Cabinet Office considered details of the programme through a relevant panel and concluded the programme meets the aim of the government’s economic growth strategy, they said. The Abe government plans to earmark funds for the programme in a budget for fiscal 2014, they said.

Japan launched the annual Ship for World Youth Programme in 1967. Past participants until fiscal 2012 numbered about 6,600 from Japan and 63 foreign countries.—Kyodo News

Cambodia reports 9th bird flu death this year

PHNOM PENH, 3 July—Cambodia on Tuesday reported its ninth human death from bird flu this year, with the government warning that the virus remains a “serious threat” to Cambodians.

The victim, a six-year-old girl from Preyleu village in Kampot Province, was confirmed positive with H5N1 on 28 June and died later in the day after she was transferred from a private clinic to Kantha Bopha hospital in Phnom Penh, according to a joint statement released by the Health Ministry and the World Health Organization.

The statement said there had been poultry deaths in the village recently and the girl was likely to have been exposed to sick and dead poultry before she fell ill.

It was the 13th case this year and the girl was the 34th person to have been infected with the H5N1 virus in Cambodia. “Avian influenza H5N1 remains a serious threat to the health of all Cambodians,” Cambodian Health Minister Mam Bunheng said.

He said children seem to be most vulnerable as they like to play where poultry are found, urging parents and guardians to keep children away from sick or dead poultry.

Globally, there have been 632 confirmed human cases of H5N1 avian influenza since 2003 with 376 related deaths.

80 pct of trafficking cases in Vietnam target women, children

HANOI, 3 July—Up to 80 percent of trafficking cases in Vietnam target women and children, according to the General Police Department on Crime Prevention and Control under Vietnam’s Ministry of Public Security.

Statistics show that since 2005, Vietnam has recorded over 3,200 cases of human trafficking with over 7,000 victims. During 2012 and the first six months of this year, 700 cases involving over 1,300 victims were recorded, mostly people living in difficulties. More than 80 percent of them were taken out of the country.

These figures were released at a conference held in Vietnam’s capital Hanoi on Tuesday to launch a national project to enhance international cooperation against human trafficking. The conference was co-hosted by the Steering Committee on Crime Prevention and Control, the Ministry of Public Security and the United Nations Children’s Fund.

Vietnam is both an immediate scene of the crime and an entrepot for traffickers travelling to a third country. The perpetrators include foreign nationals. The crime is now on the rise in the country’s 63 cities and provinces nationwide, especially those bordering China, Cambodia and Laos.

Apart from women and children, traffickers also target men, infants, pregnant women and human organs.

The project targets at least 5 percent of all human trafficking cases dealt with via international cooperation. It also demands 100 percent of internationally funded projects be implemented as planned.

Vietnam is seeking to sign bilateral anti-human trafficking cooperation agreements with at least three countries and territories by 2015.—Xinhua

Three major US auto makers report soaring sales

CHICAGO, 3 July—All three major American automakers — Ford Motor Co, Chrysler Group and General Motors Corporation — reported strong sales gains last month in comparison with the same period a year ago, according to statistics released on Tuesday.

Ford said its sales went up by 13.4 percent in June. The Dearborn automaker's small cars, which include the Fiesta subcompact, Focus and C-Max compact cars, surged 39 percent. Ford's Escape compact SUV posted its best monthly sales total ever to hit 28,694 units. Chrysler sold 156,686 vehicles in June, a rise of 8.2 percent and the best June sales result since 2007. Chrysler's Fiat, Jeep and Chrysler brands all posted sales gains.

GM sales rose 6.5 percent to 264,843. Cadillac sales went up 14.9 percent while the Chevrolet brand had a 7.4 percent sales gain. Xinhua

Foreign translators awarded for promoting Chinese culture

BEIJING, 3 July—Ezra Vogel, an American expert on China, along with five other foreigners on Tuesday won the special book award for promoting Chinese culture around the world.

The other prize winners included Italian sinologist Lionello Lanciotti, Argentinean writer Jorge E Male-na, Egyptian writer Mohsen Said Fergani and Indonesian publisher Yoza Suryawan, according to the General Administration of Press, Publication, Radio, Film and Television.

Swedish translator Anna Gustafsson Chen, who has translated works by China's first Nobel prize winner in literature Mo Yan, also received an award. The Special Book Award of China was set up in 2005 to reward foreign translators, writers and publishers for their contribution to introducing Chinese culture to the world. A total of 33 foreign experts from 14 countries have won the prize.—Xinhua

Heavy rains kill 11, affect millions in SW China

CHENGDU, 3 July—Storms and flooding left 11 people dead and four others missing in southwest China's Sichuan Province as of Tuesday, according to the provincial flood control office.

Torrential rains have battered much of the Sichuan Basin since June 29. The central and northern parts of the basin have seen heavy rain, with precipitation in Suining's Chuanshan District reaching 623.7 mm, the highest since 1951, according to the provincial meteorological bureau.

The flood control office said 2.55 million people in 42 counties across the province have been affected by the rain as of 7 p.m. Tuesday. About 127,000 people have been relocated, 119,000 hectares of crops have been damaged and 6,600 houses have been destroyed.

The rain also damaged 13 reservoirs in the province, the office said.

Local civil affairs departments have allocated disaster relief supplies for those affected by the rain.

The National Committee for Disaster Reduction and the Civil Affairs Ministry dispatched work groups to affected regions to direct relief work on Monday.

In neighboring Chongqing Municipality, nearly 900,000 people have been affected by heavy rain since 30 June. Xinhua

Lindsay Lohan to go into hiding post rehab

LOS ANGELES, 3 July—Troubled actress Lindsay Lohan is planning to go into hiding after she gets out of the rehabilitation centre in August this year.

Sources close to the 26-year-old told tmz.com that Lohan has now realized that she has been powerless in combating her addictions. Lohan also feels New York and Los Angeles only feed her demons, so she needs to get out.

Lohan is scheduled to leave the rehab early August and she plans to move somewhere in the US where there is no paparazzi and go somewhere she can get back in touch with her true self.

The sources connected with her treatment claimed that the 12-step programme is working for Lohan's betterment.

Lohan is currently at the Cliffside Malibu rehab centre. She was previously getting her court ordered treatment at the Betty Ford Centre at Rancho Mirage.—PTI

Mick Jagger and his non-demanding girlfriend

LOS ANGELES, 3 July—Rolling Stone Mick Jagger reportedly loves the fact that his girlfriend L'Wren Scott never pressurises him for marriage. The couple has been dating each other for 12 years.

"She's been on Mick's case non-stop. What he liked about her at first ... was she absolutely didn't try to tie him down. She's a stylist, designer and has a jewellery and perfume range. Mick loved the fact she was totally independent," thesun.co.uk quoted a source as saying.

However, Jagger, who had been married twice before, might want to get married for the third time as he trusts Scott.

"He likes having someone around he can trust," the source said.—PTI

Tom Cruise in Cher's top five lovers list

LOS ANGELES, 3 July— Singer Cher, who dated actor Tom Cruise for a brief period, describes him as a great guy and says he was one of her best lovers.

The duo dated each other briefly for a while in the 1990s and Cher, 67, has only good things to say about Cruise, 50, reports thesun.co.uk.

She said of their relationship: "It was pretty hot and heavy for a little minute.

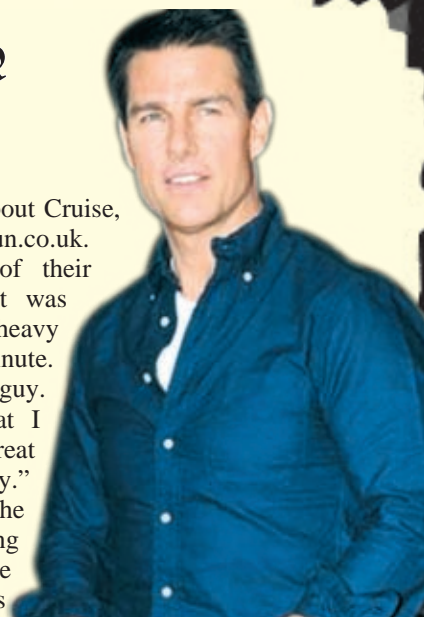

He's a great guy.

The person that I knew was a great and lovable guy."

Asked where he ranked in her long list of lovers, she said: "He was in the top five!

I just had the greatest lovers ever."

Pharrell Williams sues will.i.am over 'i am'

NEW YORK, 3 July—Music producer Pharrell Williams filed a lawsuit on Monday asking a US court to rule he has not violated any trademark that Black Eyed Peas rapper will.i.am owns for the phrase "I AM."

The lawsuit, filed in Manhattan federal court, said that will.i.am, whose real name is William Adams, has repeatedly sent letters to Williams demanding he stop using versions of the phrase "I AM" on a website founded by Williams, iamother.com.

The website, according to the lawsuit, focuses on "encouraging individuality through different forms of expression."

Trademarks owned by Williams's company, I Am Other Entertainment, do not have periods between the "i" and the "am," while those owned by will.i.am do, the lawsuit said.

Further, the lawsuit claimed, will.i.am's trademark for "I AM" covers clothing and is "relatively weak" because similar trademarks already exist.

An attorney for will.i.am was not immediately available for comment. The lawsuit asked the court to declare that the phrase "I Am Other" does not "infringe, dilute or unfairly compete" with will.i.am, said Brad Rose, counsel for Williams.

Williams is part of the musical duo The Neptunes and has collaborated with artists including Justin Timberlake, Kanye West and Jay-Z.

The Black Eyed Peas have sold more than 31 million albums, according to will.i.am's website.

LONDON, 3 July—Swansea City have signed midfielder Alejandro Pozuelo from Real Betis on a three-year deal, the Premier League club said on Tuesday.

Although the 21-year-old's contract with Betis had run out, Swansea said on their website (www.swansea-city.net) they paid an undisclosed transfer fee.

He is the third Spanish player to join the Swans for next season following the arrivals of Jose Canas, also from Betis, and Jordi Amat from Espanyol.

Swansea, who finished ninth last season under Michael Laudrup, travel to the Netherlands on Wednesday for a 10-day pre-season tour.

Former England boss McClaren joins QPR backroom staff

LONDON, 3 July—Former England soccer manager Steve McClaren has joined the backroom team at relegated Queens Park Rangers, the club said on Tuesday.

McClaren had been out of work since his second spell at Twente Enschede came to an end in February.

He joins the west London club as manager Harry Redknapp plots their return to the Premier League after they finished bottom last season.

"I'm delighted to take up this position offered to me by Harry and QPR," McClaren said on the club website (www.qpr.co.uk).

"Whilst it still remains my ambition to manage again this gives me an ideal opportunity to stay involved and work on the field with one of the top managers in this country and a very ambitious club.

"Rest assured, I'll be doing all I can for Harry, the club and the fans to help QPR return to the Premier League."

After McClaren's England team failed to qualify for Euro 2008, McClaren joined Twente and led them to the Dutch title in 2010.

He moved to Germany to take over at VfL Wolfsburg but was sacked in February 2011. He had a short spell at English second-tier club Nottingham Forest before resigning and returned for an unsuccessful second stint at Twente.

Redknapp said: "Everyone in the game knows what a top coach he is and he'll add something different to the group, regardless of how long he is with us for."—Reuters

Bartoli outbreaks Stephens to reach semis

LONDON, 3 July—Marion Bartoli beat Sloane Stephens 6-4, 7-5 in a bizarre rain-interrupted quarter-final that featured eight successive breaks of serve on Tuesday to leave the French 15th seed one match away from a surprise second Wimbledon final.

Bartoli, beaten by Venus Williams in the 2007 final, snaffled the first set by winning the first two points played after a two and a half hour rain break.

There followed an extraordinary second set that included eight straight dropped service games as Stephens, the only remaining American in the either singles competition, garnered only one point in four service games.

Both women finally managed a hold each before Bartoli, yet to drop a set in five matches in the tournament, broke to love to secure a semi-final clash with Belgian Kirsten Flipkens who upset 2011 champion Petra Kvitova.

"I've felt great here since 2007, obviously grass suits me," said Bartoli who was not so enamored with the lush lawns when refusing to play on in light drizzle late in the first set.

"The courts are already a bit slippery anyway and they can get dangerous when it gets wet so I don't know why the crowd got against me for that," she said after being booed for making her stand while Stephens was keen to play on.

"I was returning extremely well but not serving well—the opposite of before the rain delay really. I just need to put the two together in the next match."

Montgomerie fails to qualify for British Open

LONDON, 3 July—Former world number two Colin Montgomerie blew his chance of taking part in this month's British Open after a second-round 76 left him three over par in qualifying on Tuesday.

The 2010 European Ryder Cup captain was one shot off the lead after an opening-round 69 during Local Final Qualifying at Gullane in Scotland before a round of 76, featuring four bogeys and a double bogey, saw him miss out by four strokes. "I got to five under and threw it away—never mind," the 50-year-old Scot said in a news release. "It's not my schedule. I just played badly this afternoon. I didn't get going at all."

Montgomerie, who won a record eight order of merit titles on the European Tour between 1993 and 2005, has never won a major despite several close calls with five runner-up spots among a total of 10 top-10 finishes.

There were three qualifying spots up for grabs at Gullane with amateurs Ben Stow and Matthew Fitzpatrick joining Sweden's Oscar Floren in securing their places at the 18-21 July major at Muirfield.

At the qualifying event at The Musselburgh, Steven Tiley dominated the field to win by three shots to book his berth along with Scot Lloyd Saltman and Tyrrell Hatton. At Dunbar, amateur Grant Forrest shot 67 and 65 for an eight-under-par aggregate and was joined in The Open field by Indian Shiv Kapur and Australian John Wade, who finished a stroke behind.—Reuters

Radwanska outlasts Li in epic quarter-final

LONDON, 3 July—Last year's runner-up Agnieszka Radwanska, the highest ranked player left in the women's draw, moved closer to reaching successive Wimbledon finals after outlasting China's Li Na 7-6(5), 4-6, 6-2 in an epic last-eight duel on Tuesday.

The Polish fourth seed, seeking her first grand slam title after losing in three sets to Serena Williams 12 months ago, set up a semi-final showdown with German Sabine Lisicki having staved off a Li fightback, the distraction of two rain interruptions and then squandering seven match points.

"She was playing unbelievable tennis I had two that's why I was struggling with my legs." Former French Open champion Li wasted chances to take the opening set and after a short rain break, the sixth seed hit back to take the second from 4-2 down as her aggressive strokes to the corners of the court, combined with frequent net approaches, began to penetrate.

But Radwanska, who had her right thigh heavily strapped up before the start of the decider, regrouped under the now-closed roof following a second rain delay.

She secured a double break but spurned two match points at 5-1 up and another five in the next

Janowicz, Kubot no longer Poles apart at Wimbledon

LONDON, 3 July—What should have been a dream showdown between Roger Federer and Rafa Nadal has turned into the battle of Poland as Lukasz Kubot and Jerzy Janowicz unexpectedly find themselves in Wimbledon's quarter-final mix along with Novak Djokovic and Andy Murray.

The shock exits of seven-times champion Federer and Nadal during a topsy turvy opening week at the grasscourt major paved the way for Kubot to set up the unlikeliest of quarter-finals against 6-foot-8 countryman Janowicz.

"Whatever happens one of us will be in the semi-finals which makes history for Polish tennis. We are happy about what's going on right now—it's magical," said a beaming Kubot, who has entertained the crowds with his high-kicking celebratory can-can routine.

The two friends are poles apart in the rankings, with Kubot a lowly 130th while world number 22 Janowicz has been tipped as the next big thing in tennis.

On the eve of Poland's match of the century, though, the two stood side-by-side draped in their country's red-and-white flags as the world's media bombarded them with questions.

While Kubot and Janowicz are two new faces at what the players call the 'business end of a grand slam' Murray and Djokovic are old hacks. Top seed Djokovic, in pursuit of a second title at the All England Club, will be contesting his 17th consecutive major quarter-final against 2010 runner-up Tomas Berdych. The Czech beat six-times grand slam winner Djokovic in their only previous clash on grass—at Wimbledon in 2010—and in their most recent meeting, but the Serb will be more eager to rely on the overall 13-2 win-loss record he holds when the two lock horns on Wednesday.

Two killed, boy hurt in Texas boat collision

HOUSTON, 3 July—Two people were killed and a 12-year-old boy hurt after two boats collided in the US state of Texas, local media reported on Tuesday.

The accident took place in Lake Fork near Quitman, about 120 km east of Dallas city, around sunset on Monday night, local TV ABC13 said.

Two adults were pronounced dead by rescuers who rushed to the scene and the boy was hospitalized and his conditions were not immediately known.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said one of the boats sank at the scene and would be raised and towed to shore for examination.

It was not clear what happened exactly at the site and the identities of those involved have not been revealed.—Xinhua

China building emergency radio broadcast network

BEIJING, 3 July—China is constructing a special emergency radio broadcasting system to spread rescue and relief information in disaster-affected areas. The State General Administration of Press, Publication, Radio, Film and Television, China National Radio and other departments are jointly building the broadcasting network, according to a statement released after a Tuesday symposium on the construction of national emergency radio services.

The network is expected to be put into operation by the end of 2015, the statement said.

China currently has no special system for releasing essential information, such as warnings, relief materials transfers and reconstruction, to people in disaster-affected regions.

The plan, which experts have called an important measure for coping with disasters, was inspired by a similar but smaller-scale radio network established after a fatal 7.0-magnitude earthquake hit Lushan in southwest China's Sichuan Province on 20 April.

The radio service, jointly initiated by China National Radio and local radio and TV stations, broadcast government relief measures and secondary disaster warnings to disaster-affected people via loudspeakers, AM radio frequencies and satellite facilities between 22 April and 23 May.

Philippines cautions citizens in Egypt amid tension

MANILA, 3 July—The Philippine government warned on Tuesday its nationals in Egypt to take caution amid the political tension there.

Spokesman for the Philippines' Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) Raul Hernandez said that in light of the political tension in Egypt and the ongoing demonstrations in Cairo and its suburbs, the Philippine Embassy in Egypt has intensified its monitoring of the situation and has assigned duty officers to man the Embassy and its communication lines 24/7.

It is also in close coordination with the Filipino community, he added.

Hernandez said that the Philippine Embassy has "advised our citizens in Egypt to stay away from areas where protests are held and to exercise caution in public areas at all times." He said the Embassy there will also regularly issue public advisories regarding developments on the peace and order situation in that country.—Xinhua

Kyaukpantaung wildlife sanctuary: One more natural habitat for biodiversity of mountain ecosystem in Paletwa Township of Chin State

Chin State surrounded by mountain ranges is a region which is seen as representing the mountain ecosystem and providing a natural habitat for hundreds of species of plants and animals. Forest Department is trying hard to extend natural habitats offering protection for forest depletion, environmental degradation and endangered species which are in danger of becoming extinct.

Under the agreement of the Union Government, the Ministry of Environmental Conservation and Forestry had set up “Kyaukpantaung wildlife sanctuary” on an area of 50.43 square miles in Paletwa Township of Chin State in accord with Notification No (55/2013) dated 17-6-2013.

Now, Chin State sees two natural habitats—the newly-established Kyaukpantaung wildlife sanctuary and already-established Natmataung National Park on an area of 275.50 square miles.

Sofar 38 natural habitats that occupy a total area of 14681.54 square miles (5.62 per cent of a total area of the country) have been established in Myanmar. Moreover, eight parks/sanctuaries with a total area of 3113.95 square miles (1.19 per cent of a total area of the country) are under consideration in accord with rules and regulations for designation as natural habitats.

The ministry laid down a Myanmar forestry policy, targeting a total area of natural habitats to reach five per cent of a total area of the country and formulated a 30-year primary project for national forest sector with the aim of extending natural habitats up to 10 per cent of a total area of the country and works are in progress. Now, the ministry has accomplished the aim of the project of Myanmar forestry policy and extended establishment of natural habitats that occupy 10 per cent of a total area of the country is on target to reach, it is learnt.
