Yangtze River to see largest flood peak this year

YICHANG, 20 July—The Yangtze River, China's longest, will brace for its largest flood peak so far this year due to continuous rainfall upstream, authorities said Friday.

Water flow into the reservoir of the Three Gorges Dam will reach 48,000 cubic meters per second on Sunday, the largest since this year's flood season, said the Yangtze River Flood Control and Drought Relief Headquarters.

Water flow into the reservoir has increased rapidly in the past two days, by 11,000 cubic meters per second. As of 2 p.m. Friday, the water flow hit 34,500 cubic meters per second. The water level of the reservoir stood at about 147.5 meters. The weather forecast said in the next one to three days, heavy rain will hit the upstream region. From 12 a.m. Friday, water flow discharged out of the reservoir will be increased to 35,000 cubic meters per second. As the world's largest hydropower project, the Three Gorges Project consists of a dam, five-tier ship docks and a total of 32 hydropower turbo-generators.

Andean condors in Peru

COLCA CANYON, 20 July—The number of Andean condors, one of the world's largest birds, has been declining due to development and poaching.

Local residents including indigenous people have set up a group for the protection of the Andean Condor in the Colca Canyon in southern Peru.

The bird has a wing span of more than 3 meters and weighs about 15 kilograms.

Illegal arms, fake alcoholic drinks confiscated

MAWLAMYINE, 20 July — Measures are being carried out to take punitive actions against drug smugglers and users, unlicensed distillers and illegal arms owners in Mawlamyine District.

Acting on a tip-off, a combined team led by Police Major Kyaw Soe Lwin of Ye Township police force conducted a search of the house of U Tin Hsan, guard of a distillery at Thiri Khaymar ward in Ye Township on 13 July.

They discovered one pistol, one magazine, three bullets, one empty bullet, one hand-made pistol that doesn't work properly, 50 iron balls from Kyaw Min Min (a) Min Min, son of U Tin Hsan and seized 20 bottles of fake alcoholic drink (Army Rum), documents and devices used for distilling fake alcoholic drinks and K 181,000.

Kyaw Min Min (a) Min Min was charged over illegal possession of arms and fake alcoholic drinks and investigation is ongoing.

Drunken father beats his six-month-old baby boy to death for crying

KYAUKPYU, 19 July — A 31-year-old father was taken into police custody for being accused of beating his six-month-old baby boy to death at Ywathit Village in Lake-kha-maw village-tract in Kyaukpyu Township on 9 July. Police said they were called to the scene at about 1 pm on that day by Ma Aung San Htwe, mother of the child.

According to the victim's mother, the suspect, Maung Maung Htwe, 31, was a drunkard and he was drunk at the time when the tragic incident occurred. He allegedly punched the infant with his fist on the latter's chest for three times and slapped on the back for two times as the baby boy cried out while he held him.

As the baby scream was abruptly silenced, she checked him and found the baby dead. Maung Maung Htwe fled away from home.

So, police conducted a search for the suspect and arrested him three hours later on the same day.

Kachin State parliamentarians visit 500-acre model integrated farmland

NAY PYI TAW, 20 July — Union Minister for Livestock and Fisheries U Ohn Myint met with parliamentarians led by Deputy Speaker of Kachin State Hluttaw U Sai Myint Kyaw at 500-acre model integrated farmland, here, on 17 July.

"The integrated farmland is a model farmland for breeders and growers. The Ministry of Livestock and Fisheries is implementing the task of ensuring public fitness and meat sector development by stepping up its efforts in dairy cattle breeding. As dairy breeding in a manageable scale can generate more per capital income, there will be a rise in national income. Only the use of modern methods in agriculture and livestock breeding could help not only provide domestic food sufficiency but also ensure global food security," said the Union minister.

He called for systematic storage of cattle dung for production of biogas and use of manure as natural fertilizer, thereby contributing towards improvement in poverty alleviation and rural region development scheme. He pledged to sell fowls, cattle and pigs to breeders in Kachin State under an installment plan.

Next, Kachin State lawmakers visited dairy farm and Mya-Sein-Yaung milk processing factory. During their excursion tour, they were given knowledge on dairy breeding, production and use of biogas and milk processing.

Lawmakers, officials concerned hold talks on modification of mining bylaws

NAY PYI TAW, 20 July — In inviting foreign investors to do businesses in Myanmar after Foreign Investment Law was enacted for national economic development, it needs accuracy of laws and bylaws and completion of infrastructures.

Being a country which is rich in above and underground natural resources, modification of existing bylaws is needed to fulfill the requirements of local and foreign investors in mining sector.

So, a meeting between Pyithu Hluttaw Mineral and Natural Resources Affairs Committee and officials of the Ministry of Mines was held at Building I-7 in Hluttaw Complex on 11 July. Law makers held talks with officials concerned on emergence of firm bylaws to enable Union government and region/state government to practice same standards in allowing companies to deal with mining in manageable

"There are various kinds of mineral deposits across the country. It is required to carry out mineral extraction systematically, without harming the environment as natural resources are non-renewable. It can be rapidly running out if profitability is centered. The Ministry of Mines has banned direct sale of low-grade industrial raw materials, but raw metals are being produced on a wider scale and smuggled to other countries by some businessmen in border regions. If it is allowed to sell, they should be subjected to scrutiny in quality and amount. Sale of raw materials is not beneficial to the country. That's why, the inclusion of effective methods and accurate bylaws is needed while modifying the mining bylaws," said Mansi Township Pyithu Hluttaw Representative U Tun Tun.

Obama to attend G20 meeting in Russia

WASHINGTON, 20 July—US President Barack Obama will attend the Group of Twenty (G20) summit slated for September in the Russian city of St Petersburg despite two American senators' call for a relocation of the meeting over row about fugitive intelligence leaker Edward Snowden, the White House said on Friday.

"The G20 is a body of 20 nations, Russia is the host of the G20 this year in St Petersburg," spokesman Jay Carney said at a regular Press briefing.

"And its is our intention, the president's intention, to travel to Russia for that meeting," he added, but he did not say whether Obama will have a summit with his Russian counterpart Vladimir Putin as planned ahead of the G20 meeting.

Republican senator Lindsey Graham and his Democratic pal Chuck Schumer introduced a resolution on Friday asking for a changed venue for the G20 summit, in case of Moscow's failure to hand over Snowden to face espionage charges. Snowden, a 30-year-old former American spy agency contractor, was charged by Washington with espionage and theft of government property following his disclosure in early June of massive secret phone and Internet surveillance programmes

Kerry says Israel, Palestinians lay groundwork for peace talks

AMMAN, 20 July—Israel and the Palestinians have laid the groundwork for resuming peace talks after an almost three-year stalemate, US Secretary of State John Kerry said on Friday, although he cautioned the deal was not final and required more diplomacy.

Kerry, winding up his sixth Middle East brokering mission this year, gave few details.

He anticipated Israeli and Palestinian envoys would come to Washington soon for what a US official said would mark the launch of direct negotiations.

"I am pleased to announce that we have reached an agreement that establishes a basis for resuming direct final-status negotiations between the Palestinians and the Israelis," Kerry told reporters in Amman.

"The best way to give these negotiations a chance is to keep them private," he said, saying that the deal was still being "formalized" and he would therefore not discuss it in detail.

"We know that the challenges require some very tough choices in the days ahead," he added. "Today, however, I am hopeful."

Peacemaking has ebbed and flowed for two decades, last breaking down in late 2010 over Israel's settlements in the occupied West Bank and East Jerusalem, where, along with the Gaza Strip, Palestinians seek statehood.

North Korean ship was carrying sugar donation, Cuba told Panama

PANAMA CITY/MIAMI, 19 July—When a North Korean ship carrying Cuban arms was seized last week in Panama on suspicion of smuggling drugs, Cuba first said it was loaded with sugar for the people of North Korea, according to a Panamanian official familiar with the matter.

Cuban officials were quick to request the ship be released, pledging there were no drugs on board, and made no mention of the weapons which two days later were found hidden in the hold under 220,000 sacks of brown sugar, the official told Reuters.

"They said it was all a big misunderstanding," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Cuba declined to comment on the official's account. Questions still surround the cargo of sugar and what Cuba called "obsolete" Soviet-era weapons which it said it was sending halfway around the world to be repaired in North Korea. The discovery has put the already isolated Asian nation under increased diplomatic pressure because the cargo is suspected of being in breach of a UN arms embargo against Pyongyang over its nuclear and ballistic missile programme.

Portugal political crisis rages again as talks break off

Antonio Jose Seguro speaks during an interview with Reuters in Lisbon on 24 May, 2012.—REUTERS

LISBON, 20 July—Portugal's main political parties broke off talks on Friday on a "national salvation" pact to ensure an EU/IMF bailout stays on track, leaving it to the president to decide how to proceed.

Political turmoil has already forced Lisbon to request a delay in the eighth review of the bailout by its creditors, which was initially due to start last Monday, until the end of August or early September.

The 78-billion-euro ($102.5-billion) bailout programme and attached austerity policies are associated with the worst recession in Portugal since the 1970s.

The leader of the main opposition Socialists, Antonio Jose Seguro, said the ruling coalition had rejected most of his party's proposals aimed to renegotiate the terms of the bailout.

The crisis, which started as an internal political rift in the ruling coalition and expanded to a debate over the bailout plan, has threatened to derail Portugal's planned exit from the bailout and full return to debt markets in mid-2014.

The government says abandoning austerity would undermine Lisbon's credibility with lenders and investors.

Abe vows economic recovery as parties pitch before Sunday election

TOKYO, 20 July—Prime Minister Shinzo Abe pledged on Friday to keep Japan's economic recovery on track while opposition parties struggled to erode public support for his administration as they made their final pitches before Sunday's upper house election.

"I will ensure stable economic growth," Abe said in a stump speech in Mie Prefecture, touting his "Abenomics" policies under which the government is aiming to replace nearly two decades of deflation with mild inflation.

Voters will give their judgment on Abe's seven-month rule in the upcoming House of Councillors election, the first national election since his Liberal Democratic Party returned to power in December's

House of Representatives election. The ruling camp is aiming to wrest control of the upper chamber, which it lost in 2007 during Abe's previous stint as prime minister, and put an end to the divided Diet.

The outcome of the election will become clear by early Monday.

A total of 433 individuals have filed for candidacy with 121 seats at stake. Half of the chamber's 242 seats come up for election every three years.

Of the 121 seats up for grabs, 73 will be filled by the winners from 47 prefectural electoral districts and the remaining 48 by those chosen under the nationwide party-list proportional representation system.

A poll by Kyodo News showed this week that the LDP-led ruling coalition is set to obtain a comfortable majority in the upper house, securing at least 129 seats including the 59 it already holds that will not be contested on Sunday.

Such an outcome would allow the ruling camp of the LDP and the New Komeito party to take control of all standing committees as well as the upper chamber, facilitating the passage of bills as the ruling bloc already holds an overwhelming majority in the more powerful lower house. Opposition parties are finding it tough to erode the Abe administration's relatively high public support. Banri Kaieda, head of the main opposition Democratic Party of Japan, said Friday that keeping the LDP in power would threaten the nation's welfare system.

AMD eyes gaming consoles to offset slowing PC sales

WASHINGTON, 20 July — Advanced Micro Devices forecast stronger-than-expected revenue growth of 22 percent in the third quarter from the second, as the chip maker expands into new game consoles and other markets to offset slowing sales of personal computers.

However, the stock reversed earlier gains on Thursday after AMD said gross margins would fall as it seeks a foothold in game consoles.

AMD, which for decades has competed against market leader Intel Corp in supplying chips for PCs, is rushing to refocus on new markets as consumers buy fewer laptops and more tablets and smartphones.

AMD processors are being used in Microsoft Corp's upcoming Xbox One and Sony Corp's next-generation PlayStation game consoles. These are largely behind AMD's up-beat revenue forecast.

AMD said its gross margin in the second quarter was 40 percent and would fall to about 36 percent in the third quarter. Analysts on average had expected a third-quarter gross margin of 39 percent.

With consumers increasingly playing games on tablets, it is also unclear how many of the new consoles Microsoft and Sony would sell, but optimism about the impact on AMD's revenue has helped drive its stock up 73 percent since the beginning of April.

Bernstein analyst Stacy Rasgon said AMD's gross margin forecast was probably behind the after-hours drop in the company's shares.

AMD's report comes after Intel warned on Wednesday that it does not expect revenue to grow in 2013 due to slowing PC industry. Global shipments of personal computers dropped 11 percent in the second quarter, the fifth straight quarterly decline in a market that has been devastated by the popularity of tablets.

AMD reported second-quarter revenue of $1.161 billion, down from $1.413 billion in the year-ago quarter. It said third-quarter revenue would rise 22 percent, plus or minus 3 percent, compared with the June quarter. That increase would be about $1.416 billion.

Analysts, on average, had expected revenue of $1.108 billion in the second quarter and $1.223 billion in the third quarter, according to Thomson Reuters I/B/E/S.

AMD posted a net loss of $74 million, or 10 cents a share, in the second quarter, compared with a profit of $37 million, or 5 cents a share, in the same quarter last year.

The company said its non-GAAP loss per share was 9 cents, better than the 12-cent loss expected by analysts.

Nokia Lumia 625 with 4.7-inch display spotted online

NEW YORK, 20 July — Nokia is working on a new smartphone that would feature a big 4.7-inch screen, if a Chinese website is to be believed.

The Chinese official certification website, TENAA has revealed the existence of a new Lumia smartphone, the Nokia Lumia 625. It is being said that it would be the most affordable Lumia phone and would come with the biggest screen ever, for a Nokia phone. The uni-body design of the Lumia 625 looks very similar to that of the Lumia 620 and would likely be pegged as its successor for the global market.

The alleged specifications of the next Lumia 625 point to a 4.7-inch display with a resolution of 480x800 pixels. The screen resolution seems to be similar to some of the budget Lumia devices launched by Nokia.

The device is said to be powered by a 1.2GHz Snapdragon S4 processor along with 512MB RAM. It's expected to feature a 5.0-megapixel rear camera but it's not known if it will also feature a secondary camera. The listing mentions GPRS, WCDMA, HSPA support and the phone is also likely to include LTE.

The Nokia Lumia 625 is likely to be launched in China first. At the moment, there is no news about when the Finnish handset maker would launch the handset, globally.

Meanwhile, after creating a lot of buzz, Nokia launched its new Windows

Phone 8 device that sports a 41-megapixel, dubbed as the Nokia Lumia 1020, last week.

The device is powered by a 1.5GHz dual-core Snapdragon processor. The highlight of the device ever since it got leaked has been the PureView 41-megapixel sensor which offers Optical Image Stabilization (OIS), backside-illuminated image sensor, 6 lens optics accompanied by a Xenon Flash. Nokia has also added some camera software such as the Nokia Pro Camera and Smart Camera Mode, while there is a 1.2-megapixel front camera. The phone comes with 32GB internal storage and 2GB of RAM.

Return of long-absent bumblebee near Seattle stirs scientific buzz

OLYMPIA, (Washington), 20 July — A North American bumblebee species that all but vanished from about half of its natural range has re-emerged in Washington state, delighting scientists who voiced optimism the insect might eventually make a recovery in the Pacific Northwest. Entomologists and bee enthusiasts in recent weeks have photographed several specimens of the long-absent western bumblebee — known to scientists as Bombus occidentalis — buzzing among flower blossoms in a suburban park north of Seattle. "It's a pretty big deal," said Rich Hatfield, a biologist for the Oregon-based Xerces Society for Invertebrate Conservation, which documents and reports such findings.

"It gives us hope that we can do some conservation work, and perhaps the species has a chance at repopulating its range," he told Reuters this week.

The multiple sightings, including observations of several queens, are evidence of western bumblebee colonies in the area, although it hardly proves the species has returned in force and or that it will thrive in the region, Hatfield said.

incremental updates. According to a hands-on video uploaded by Android Central, the update will increase the touch responsiveness of the Nexus 4. The new update will bring an additional feature to the phone's dialler suggesting phone numbers from your contacts as you dial by matching digits or looking up names. It also adds an option to add pauses while calling a number. Android 4.3 also seems to bring a new Wi-Fi setting, 'Scanning always available' which will allow apps to get location data through Wi-Fi even when Wi-Fi is set to off and not being used for data access.

As revealed in previous leaks, Android 4.3 also offers a new updated Camera app that features a new arch based menu that makes it easier to control and switch camera settings.

In addition to these, the update brings the OpenGL 3.0 graphics standard for better 3D rendering for visual effects in apps and games, and Bluetooth LE (Low Energy) support, through which devices running the OS will be able to sync with low power wearable devices like health monitors and smart watches.—PTI

G20 supports global taxation reform

Moscow, 20 July—The Group of Twenty (G20) nations will back a global taxation reform which will help avoid double taxation and consolidate the taxation base, Russian Finance Minister Anton Siluanov said on Friday.

The international community has been drafting a document on major changes of the existing taxation system, Siluanov told reporters on the sidelines of a meeting of the G20 finance ministers.

“We are considering the question to revise the model agreement over the avoidance of double taxation. We are ready to consider the conclusion of a multi-party agreement on this issue, but not bilateral agreements as now,” Siluanov said. A multilateral agreement will be “more efficient” than simply upgrading bilateral agreements over the avoidance of double taxation, he said.

An action plan on taxation reform, drafted by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), offered 15 measures to “drastically” change the global taxation system, OECD Secretary General Angel Gurría told reporters here.

The OECD and the G20 nations vow to fight against the use of interstate differences for profit transfer in certain “tax harbors,” said Gurría, adding the action plan will not set unified tax rates.

Lifestyle changes may hike child asthma cases

BEIJING, 20 July—To keep her 7-year-old daughter’s asthma under control, Zhang Yun has already gotten rid of her stuffed toys, and her room is fitted with an air purifier which cost about 3,000 yuan (488.7 US dollars).

Yet the mother realizes she is powerless when it comes to the air outside.

“She sneezes and coughs when the air quality is not good,” she said. “Sometimes my daughter sneezes so hard her nose bleeds.”

Zhang is among the many parents in Beijing and other Chinese cities who worry that the increasing air pollution may worsen their children’s condition.

In the past two decades, the prevalence of child asthma has risen significantly. But experts are cautious over what role pollution has played.

A survey found that national prevalence surged from 1.09 percent in 1990 to 3.01 percent in 2010, with 23 cities indicating an increase in all three surveys, in 1990, 2000 and 2010.

The prevalence of asthma among children under 14 in Beijing is 3.68 percent, up from 0.88 percent in 1990 and 2.69 percent in 2000, while in Shanghai it has risen from 1.79 percent in 1990 to 7.57 percent in 2010, higher than any other city surveyed that year.

Liu Chuanhe at the Capital Institute of Pediatrics in Beijing, who helped conduct the survey, said changing lifestyles has been a definite cause for the increase.

“In Beijing, we found most children diagnosed with asthma were allergic to mites and mold, some to pollen or animal fur,” he said. “We enjoy air-conditioning in summer and heating in winter, so people barely open their windows

Samsung close to mobile-device deal with FBI

NEW YORK, 20 July—Samsung Electronics Co Ltd is close to signing a deal to sell its popular line of Galaxy devices to the US Federal Bureau of Investigation, sources familiar with the situation said on Friday.

The deal would be a boost for Samsung, which is increasingly seeking to cater to the needs of government agencies, a niche long dominated by Canadian smartphone maker BlackBerry Ltd.

The FBI, with more than 35,000 employees, at present uses mainly BlackBerry devices. It is unclear whether the agency plans to replace all BlackBerry equipment with Galaxy models or whether it will use hardware from both companies. A spokeswoman for the FBI declined to comment on the matter, saying that the selection of its new smartphones is part of an active acquisition process and any current discussions are proprietary to the government.

The imminent deal was initially reported by the Wall Street Journal late on Thursday. The WSJ also said Samsung is close to signing a smaller order for its devices with the US Navy, citing people familiar with the matter.

Representatives of BlackBerry and Samsung declined to comment. BlackBerry emphasized, however, that it regards its operating system as the best in the market in terms of security features.

“The security of mobile devices is more important now than it has ever been before,” BlackBerry’s chief legal officer, Steve Zipperstein, said in an interview. “It is fair to ask why in this context anyone would consider moving from the gold standard in security, which is the BlackBerry platform.”

In May, the US Pentagon cleared Samsung’s Android mobile devices and a new line of BlackBerry devices powered by the BB10 operating system for use on Defence Department networks.

Samsung has been pushing hard to convince government agencies and corporate clients that its Galaxy devices, powered by Google Inc’s Android operating system, can meet their stringent security needs.—Reuters

WB project to benefit Vietnam’s low-income people

HANOI, 20 July—The World Bank is set to support the Vietnamese government with a 55.6 million US dollars project on innovations targeting people with low incomes, which will be carried out nationwide from 2013 to 2018.

The information was unveiled at a conference held by the Ministry of Planning and Investment along with the Vietnam Academy of Science and Technology in southern Ho Chi Minh City on Friday, State-run Vietnam News Agency reported.

Accordingly, the project aims to create opportunities for Vietnamese businesses to access loans and capital so that they can enhance their proficiency in implementing innovations through applying, perfecting and expanding their operations, as well as com-mercializing technology to improve living standards for low-income people.

According to the project management board, developing traditional medicine, information technology and communication, agriculture and aquaculture will be a priority in implementing the project.

In addition, scientific research on the above-mentioned spheres must be practical, applicable, environmental friendly and cost effective, and may be implemented in two or three years. The studies must ensure cooperation among domestic and foreign researchers, entrepreneurs, partners and people generating innovative initiatives that are in line with local conditions and have potential to be internationally competitive, said the report.

Hobby Lobby wins a stay against birth control mandate

NEW YORK, 20 July—A federal judge has temporarily exempted Hobby Lobby Stores Inc from a requirement in the 2010 healthcare law that it offer workers insurance coverage for birth control, which the retailer said violated its religious beliefs.

The preliminary injunction issued by US District Judge Joe Heaton in Oklahoma City, where Hobby Lobby is based, covers the arts and crafts chain and its affiliated Mardel Christian bookstore chain.

He put the case on hold until 1 October, giving the federal government time to decide whether to appeal a 27 June decision by a federal appeals court in Denver to let Hobby Lobby challenge the mandate on religious grounds.

A US Department of Justice spokesman had no immediate comment. The government has said contraception coverage is needed to promote public health and gender equality. The Becket Fund for Religious Liberty, a nonprofit law firm representing Hobby Lobby, said there are 63 lawsuits nationwide challenging the mandate.

It said Hobby Lobby is the largest company to be excused, at least temporarily, and doors to ventilate their apartment. This makes it easy for mites and mold to grow, like on pillows, sheets and in the air conditioners.”

Also, consumption of high-protein foods increases the risk of allergies in children, including asthma, Liu said.—Xinhua

It also said it could have under Obamacare faced $1.3 million in daily fines by not providing such coverage.

In a written order, Heaton said the size of those penalties, the “substantial” public policy issues involved, and the amount of similar litigation justified an injunction for Hobby Lobby.—Reuters

Boeing 787 probe looks at condensation, wiring

WASHINGTON/SEATTLE, 20 July — Officials investigating the fire on an Ethiopian Airlines 787 in London last week are focused on how condensation in the plane and a possible pinched wire in an emergency beacon may have sparked the blaze, according to people familiar with the probe.

The US Federal Aviation Administration said on Friday it will call for inspections of the beacons made by Honeywell on Boeing Co 787 jetliners, but stopped short of requiring airlines to disable or remove the devices, as British authorities investigating the fire had recommended.

The FAA said inspections should ensure wires are properly routed, and should look for pinched wires or signs of unusual moisture or heat. It gave no further details on how those factors may have contributed to the fire.

But one source close to the inquiry told Reuters that investigators had found a pinched wire in the casing of the emergency locator transmitter (ELT) aboard the aircraft.

The news comes after the British Air Accidents Investigation Branch (AAIB) on Thursday said the Honeywell beacon was the likely source of the fire, but said it was still trying to understand what ignited the plane.

The 12 July fire rekindled concern in the industry about Boeing's advanced carbon-composite Dreamliner, which was grounded for more three months this year after two incidents involving overheated lithium-ion batteries. The AAIB said the London fire was not related to those batteries.

The Honeywell ELT is delivered fully assembled and is installed by Boeing. The unit that was involved in the fire had not been opened, suggesting the pinched wire originated at the Honeywell plant, according to one person familiar with the investigation.

Honeywell declined to comment. Boeing declined to comment on the investigation but said it is working with airlines to either inspect or remove the beacons to meet regulatory guidelines.

Investigators also are trying to determine if condensation on the plane seeped into the ELT, triggering a short circuit in the unit's lithium-manganese battery, which is made by Ultralife Corp, according to people familiar with the investigation. The sources were not authorized to speak publicly because the probe is still going on.

1,973 Fukushima plant workers have higher risk of thyroid cancer

TOKYO, 20 July — Tokyo Electric Power Co said on Friday 1,973 workers at its disaster-crippled Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant have estimated thyroid radiation doses exceeding 100 millisieverts and are therefore at higher risk of suffering from thyroid cancer.

The workers will be allowed to undergo annual ultrasonic thyroid examinations free of charge, the utility said.

TEPCO gave health checks to 19,592 workers — 3,290 TEPCO employees and 16,302 employees of its partner firms — in connection with the plant's nuclear fuel meltdown triggered by the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami.

Saudi suspect in underwear bomb plots trained others, US says

A picture taken from a document released by the Saudi Interior Ministry on 1 Nov, 2010 shows Ibrahim Hassan al-Asiri. REUTERS

ASPEN, (Colo), 20 July — The United States believes the Saudi man suspected of designing underwear bombs for al-Qaeda's Yemeni affiliate has trained a small number of people on his advanced bomb-making techniques, a senior US official said on Friday.

The remarks by John Pistole, who heads the US Transportation Security Administration, were some of the most detailed public comments to date about Ibrahim Hassan al-Asiri and the thwarted May 2012 plot by al-Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula, or AQAP, to blow up a plane with an underwear bomb.

"There is intelligence that he has unfortunately trained others and there's a lot of effort to identify those folks," Pistole told the Aspen Security Forum in Colorado.

Asked by Reuters afterward about the nature of that intelligence, Pistole said Asiri was believed to have trained a small number of people. He added that the intelligence was "credible." Believed to be in his early 30s, Asiri, who survived a US drone missile attack in 2011, has drawn scrutiny for his skill at fashioning hard-to-detect bombs and hiding them in clothing or equipment.

He became an urgent priority for Western counterterrorism officials after his suspected role in planning strikes on the United States in 2009 and 2010, plots that included the failed bombing of a Detroit-bound airliner on Christmas Day in 2009.

The Detroit plot was discovered only when the explosive sewn into the bomber's underwear misfired as the airliner flew over US territory.

Pistole said Asiri's 2012 attempt utilized a more sophisticated device using a new type of explosive the United States had not seen previously.

Asiri also used a double-initiation system for igniting the bomb and enclosed the device in caulk to prevent leakage of any explosive vapours that could be detected by airport equipment or bomb-sniffing dogs, Pistole said.

"He gave (the presumed attacker) instructions to get on the plane ... and fly to the US and blow himself up over the US," he said. "Fortunately, that terrorist was a double agent," Pistole said, referring to the US-British-Saudi undercover counterterrorism operation.

A Riyadh-born former chemistry student who once plotted to bomb oil facilities in Saudi Arabia, Asiri served nine months in jail in Saudi Arabia for attempting to join a militant group in Iraq to fight US troops there.

He later moved to Yemen and joined AQAP, and is suspected of providing the bomb that killed his younger brother in a failed bid to assassinate Saudi counterterrorism chief Prince Mohammed bin Nayef in 2009.

Briton kidnapped near Nigerian Airport

LAGOS, 20 July — A British national has been kidnapped earlier this week after unknown gunmen ambushed his car near an airport in Nigeria's economic and commercial capital Lagos, local police said late Friday.

The Briton was abducted on Tuesday after leaving Lagos Murtala International Airport, a police officer told Xinhua. The case was under investigation.

"We have set our dragnet and we will get the kidnapers and rescue the victim," the officer said by phone.

The British High Commission in Nigeria confirmed the abduction, saying that it was working closely with relevant organizations to secure the release.

In March, a Briton was ambushed and kidnapped by unknown gunmen in Victoria Island of Lagos, and was later released.

High-profile kidnappings and abductions of foreigners for ransom are rampant in Nigeria's southern oil-rich states and most victims were released unharmed after ransoms were paid.

The Nigerian Islamist extremist group Boko Haram and another Islamist Ansaru sect have recently claimed responsibility for the abduction of some foreigners.

Take pride of being democratic generation

Now we are in more than the two and a half democratic transition from the half a century of military-rule. The country has been introduced to sweeping reforms by the elected new government. Now, the country is on the right track to a genuine democracy for peace and prosperity, catching global attention, not regional only.

Resurrection of a new political culture in the wake of ending the blame game led to a paradigm shift in Myanmar's political landscape. It encouraged all-inclusiveness and peaceful co-existence. Withdrawal of media censorship and restriction on the Internet, release of political prisoners and successful ceasefire agreements with non-state armed groups and ongoing measures to end years of internecine conflicts were tangible. As result, the country regained international recognition and all economic sanctions were lifted. It means a place that Myanmar deserves returned to her.

International community admitted Myanmar's bold move to democracy was found exciting and amazing. Turning a page of the second half of the office, the government is making great strides in realization of nationwide ceasefire to silence the guns and to bring a lasting peace to the nation for the first time in more than sixty years. Moreover, the country sees a foreign investment law that invites responsible trade and investments to ensure national economic development and job creation for the youths to be able grab same opportunities as their peers in other Asian countries.

But, our young democracy is being tested by invisible factors that can plunge the nation to a state of backsliding for our good reputation for tolerance towards difference in religion. Healthy skepticism and negotiation culture are desperately needed in the country. On our long road to democracy, it is a must to brace ourselves against malicious rumors and instigators of the disturbances and to be mindful that only harmonious pluralism could bring an atmosphere of community peace and tranquility. Now is the time to put all differences aside and to take pride of being a democratic generation while advancing to pluralistic democracy.

Towards an Efficient Monetary Management: Central Bank's Independence

Its seemingly slow responses to the changing monetary situations and conservative approaches to every monetary issue, mingled with bureaucratic sentiments in implementing monetary policies have made the Central Bank of Myanmar (CBM), the country's monetary authority, most responsible for the current weak banking system - one of the main restrictions for potential investors.

A good example of the central bank's weak monetary policies can be seen in the country's prolong negative real interest rates most of the time during the last decade, allowing Ponzi type schemes of service companies to exploit the weaknesses of the financial system which led to a bank-run in 2003.

The strong financial restrictions adopted immediately after the bank-run on deposit taking, loan extension, innovation of new products, expansion of banking network have had a negative impact on innovation and development of the banking sector. Furthermore, one has to bear in mind that even imposing strong restrictions cannot automatically prevent a new banking crisis from occurring.

Playing a key role in shaping the economy, a central bank is responsible for implementing a sound monetary policy to achieve a sustainable and equitable economic development. Critics including such international organizations as the International Monetary Fund repeatedly pointed out the Central Bank of Myanmar's lack of explicit monetary anchor and its passive monetary conduct; they blamed its lack of independence for its weak monetary management which had resulted in volatile inflation and distorted exchange rates.

The new Central Bank of Myanmar Law

The new Central Bank of Myanmar Law has been enacted. The Law gives the CBM the authority and responsibility to carry out all central banking functions including implementation of the country's monetary policy and exchange rate policy independently.

While shepherding the flock of young local banks carefully, the CBM will play its traditional role as the lender of last resort under the new law. Foreseeing development of security markets in the country, the CBM will exercise 'open market operation' together with other traditional tools of monetary policy such as interest rate policy, minimum reserve requirement and other measures including management on bank credits in implementing a stable monetary system. The Law entrusts the CBM to manage money markets and foreign exchange markets.

Other salient points of the law are: (1) primary objective of the CBM is price stability in the country and thus inflation must be kept under control; (2) in conformity with its primary objective, CBM shall strive monetary and financial system stability while promoting efficient payments and clearing mechanisms to support the government's economic policy to attain a sustainable economic development; (3) acting as a banker to the Government, CBM is the sole authority to issue domestic currency; and (4) CBM can allow establishment of a credit information bureau to gauge the credit worthiness of a borrower.

Most importantly, the Law gives the CBM its legitimate independent power to implement its duties and responsibilities mentioned in the Law. Moreover, the Law upgrades the status of CBM's governor to the ministerial level.

Accountability and transparency

It is heartening to learn that the Law reflects the government's good governance policy of accountability and transparency. According to the Section (5) of the Law, the CBM shall submit its reports on the country's monetary affairs to the Government and Pyidaungsu Hluttaw at least twice a year and its reports on monetary developments shall be published quarterly.

The role of central bank in economic development

Playing a leading role in shaping and promoting the economy, the central bank, especially in a developing country, is responsible for implementing a sound monetary policy to have a sustainable and equitable growth. The main objective of its monetary policy is to achieve price and financial sector stability in the country.

While implementing its primary functions as a central bank, the CBM is responsible for managing the country's financial system to be able to effectively mobilize domestic financial resources for channelling them to productive investment.

The task ahead

Using its legally entrusted autonomous power, the CBM is expected to adopt a sound and proactive monetary policy to achieve price stability - meaning low and stable inflation and stability of the monetary system.

Another important task is to adopt and implement an appropriate exchange rate policy which supports the government's economic policy of export-led growth with diversified value-added products of goods and services by creating competitive edge for exporters in international markets. The CBM's managed floating exchange rate system adopted since April last year is seemed to be functioning well. The local currency 'kyat' is depreciating against the US dollar. As there are always pros and cons for every development, the kyat's depreciation is good for exporters but bad for importers and consumers of imported items. But in the long term, depreciated kyat will give impetus to the promotion of the country's exports of goods and services, resulting in its favourable external performance. Notwithstanding, the CBM must be able to set the desirable level of kyat's exchange rates vis-a-vis its trading currencies and adopts an efficient exchange rate policy to maintain stability in the exchange rates, which is crucial for both exporters and investors.

The new Central Bank of Myanmar Law entrusts the CBM with the task of managing the country's official foreign exchange reserves. Luckily, thanks to the country's strong exports of oil and gas and inflows of foreign investment, Myanmar could be able to accumulate a respectable amount of foreign exchange reserves. Building up foreign exchange reserves is a good way to promote the country's credit worthiness and confidence in local currency. It also gives strength and tools to the monetary authority to intervene in the markets.

Modernization of the payment system

The existing payment systems infrastructure is predominantly cash based. Banknotes are still the most important payment medium for general public. The Myanmar Payment Union (MPU) has been formed with the objective of transforming the current cash-based into an electronic payment system using state-of-the-art equipment and by coordinating with international payment service providers. MPU hopes, in coordination with foreign payment companies, to facilitate visitors' access to payments and cash during the Southeast Asian Games scheduled to be held in Myanmar in December this year. In cooperation with the MPU, the reformed CBM can speed up the financial sector modernization process. The move would reduce the banknotes in the circulation which in turn would reduce the cost of printing banknotes.

Myanmar's financial intermediation (deposits/loans as a percentage of GDP) is low (around 10%) in comparison to other ASEAN countries.

De-dollarization

Given the current high demand for the US dollars, Myanmar's economy has been largely dollarized. Dollarization undermines the role of national currency in the payment system.

important task for the CBM is to preserve the role of our national currency 'Kyat' in the payment system. Of course, the national currency should be the linchpin of the country's payment system.

Accepting foreign banks in the country

The Law indicates that there will be more institutions in the country's financial system: security market, foreign exchange market and money market.

While taking series of reform measures, the CBM has to strengthen its regulatory and supervisory framework to be able to cope with the new issues and challenges in the financial sector.

Ex-CIA official detained in Panama returns to US

WASHINGTON, 20 July—Former CIA Milan station chief Robert Seldon Lady, who was convicted in Italy of kidnapping an Egyptian Muslim cleric and detained in Panama this week, returned to the United States on Friday, a State Department spokeswoman said.

The ex-spy was among 23 Americans sentenced in absentia by an Italian judge in 2009 for the abduction of the cleric. It was unclear whether any action would be taken against Lady, who was sentenced by Italy to a nine-year jail term, after his return to the United States.

Lady was originally sentenced in the first trial of its kind against “rendition” flights practiced by the administration of former US President George W Bush.

Italy’s top court last year upheld the guilty verdict against Lady for the kidnapping of Hassan Mustafa Osama Nasr, who was snatched from a Milan street in 2003 and flown to Egypt for interrogation where he says he was tortured. The rendition flights by the Bush administration have been condemned by human rights groups and prompted investigations into the procedure in countries allied to the United States.

Marie Harf, a State Department spokeswoman, said she had no details on whether Lady would be questioned by US authorities, or whether the United States would cooperate with Italy on the case.

A Panamanian foreign ministry source said Lady was detained for 24 hours at the border with Costa Rica pending an extradition request from Italy.

He was let go because Panama does not have an extradition treaty with Italy and because documentation sent by Italian officials was “insufficient,” the source said. Italy expressed disappointment at Panama’s actions, saying it had taken all the diplomatic steps seeking his temporary detention so that the extradition procedure could be started.

“I am astonished to observe that our request was disregarded without plausible explanation,” Italian Justice Minister Anna Maria Cancellieri said in a statement.

In April, Italian President Giorgio Napolitano pardoned US Air Force Colonel Joseph Romano, who had been among the Americans sentenced for the kidnapping.

Lady was quoted by Il Giornale newspaper in 2009 as saying: “I’m not guilty. I’m only responsible for carrying out orders that I received from my superiors.” Also in that inter-

SAN MATEO, (California) 20 July—A teenage passenger on the Asiana Airlines plane that crashed in San Francisco died from injuries sustained after being run over by a motor vehicle, most likely a fire truck at the scene, officials said on Friday.

Ye Mengyuan, a 16-year-old girl who sat toward the rear of Flight 214, survived the Boeing 777’s crash-landing but died from blunt force injuries consistent with being run over by an emergency response vehicle, San Mateo County Coroner Robert Foucrault and San Francisco Fire Chief Joanne Hayes-White said at a news conference.

“Obviously this is very difficult news for us,” Hayes-White said. “We’re heart-broken. We’re in the business of saving lives.”

Ye was one of three

Chinese girls who died in the 6 July crash. More than half of the 307 people on-board the flight from Seoul were injured in the crash.

Hayes-White said Ye was struck by at least one specialized fire-fighting vehicle normally deployed at San Francisco International Airport, but left open the possibility that she was hit by more than one rig.

The coroner’s ruling settled lingering suspicions that emergency personnel racing to douse the fiery wreckage may have inadvertently played a role in the death of one the passengers. The announcement prompted a new set of questions over the circumstances of Ye’s death and whether the first responders, who have been generally hailed for an efficient performance, could have done anything to prevent it.

It remains unclear how firefighters failed to notice Ye before she was hit, or what she did in her final minutes amidst the crash wreckage and scenes of chaos.

Fire department officials have said Ye’s body was covered by a one-foot-thick (30-cm-thick) blanket of firefighting foam when she was found. Hayes-White said on Friday she did not know whether Ye was covered in the foam at the time when she was struck by the truck.

34 killed, 101 wounded in Iraq’s deadly attacks

BAGHDAD, 20 July—A series of violent attacks, including deadly bombings at mosques, across Iraq on Friday, killing 34 people and wounding 101 others, as the country struggles to contain the worst violence since 2008.

The deadliest attack occurred in Iraq’s eastern Province of Diyala when a bomb hidden under the podium of the Imam went off in the crowded Abu Bakr al-Sideeq mosque during the weekly Friday Muslim prayer, killing up to 26 worshippers and wounding some 80 others, according to the latest police report.

The attack took place in Wajihyah, a small Sunni town located some 25 km northeast of Diyala’s provincial city of Baquba, which itself is about 65 km northeast of the Iraqi capital of Baghdad.

Earlier in the day, the police said that a civilian was killed and two wounded when a bomb planted in his shop detonated in the city of Maqdadiyah, some 40 km northeast of Baquba, while a soldier was wounded in a roadside bomb explosion near his patrol in Buhruz area, some 10 km south of Baquba.

Sectarian tension and reprisal killings have been running high recently between Sunni and Shiite Muslims in the volatile province of Diyala, as Sunnis and Shiites accuse each other of supporting extremists and militiamen.

In a separate incident, a policeman foiled a suicide bomb attack when he spotted a suicide bomber trying to enter a Shiite mosque in the town of Jbala, some 50 south of Baghdad, a local police source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

The policeman prevented the suicide bomber from approaching the mosque, forcing him to blow up his explosive vest outside the mosque, which killed the policeman and wounded five worshippers, the source said. In the early hours of the day, the police said that two women were killed and two wounded when a mortar round landed on their house in al-Mahl-abiya area, in west of Mosul, some 400 km north of Baghdad.

Late on Thursday, unidentified gunmen broke into a house in Ur neighborhood in the eastern part of Baghdad and shot dead three women before they fled the scene, the police said.

TOKYO, 20 July—The total distance traveled by leaders of nine Japanese political parties during the upper house election campaign has reached around 110,000 kilometres, or more than two and a half times around the globe, party documents showed on Saturday.

Since official campaigning for the House of Councillors election started on 4 July, Prime Minister Shinzo Abe had visited 36 of the country's 47 prefectures through Friday as chief of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, traveling 19,368 km to push his

"Abenomics" policies to revive the economy.

Banri Kaieda, who heads the main opposition Democratic Party of Japan, covered 16,500 km in 28 prefectures, focusing on employment and social security issues.

Seven killed in foiled leftist rebel attack in S Philippines

DAVAO CITY, (Philippines), 20 July — At least seven people were killed during an attack launched by leftist rebels against a militia outpost in southern Philippines early Friday, military said later that day.

Six members of the leftist rebel group of New People's Army (NPA) and one pro-government militiaman died in the fighting which erupted about 5 am at a Citizen Armed Auxiliary detachment in Banagbanag village, Sibagat, a town in Southern Philippine Province of Agusan del Sur, said Major Leo Bongosia, spokesperson for the Philippine Army's 4th Infantry Division.

Bongosia told Xinhua by text message that at least 40 NPA gunmen assaulted the hinterland outpost, but they failed to take the installation which was defended by equal number of local militiamen.

Two MG-520 attack helicopters from the Philippine Air Force were sent to the area, firing rockets against the rebels, forcing them to withdraw after over an hour of fighting, he said.

The military spokesperson said villagers saw retreating rebels dragging at least half a dozen dead bodies of their comrades, and he believed dozens more could have been killed or wounded in the aerial bombardment. Bongosia said pursuit operation was now launched against the fleeing rebels.—Xinhua

Man shot in restive S Thailand

BANGKOK, 20 July — A sub-district headman was shot and seriously injured in restive southern province of Yala on Friday.

He was identified as Masakee Kanah, 38, headman of Katong sub-district in Yala's Yaha district.

Police said the shooting occurred in front of an apartment in Yala's Muang district shortly before Friday noon.

According to witnesses, Masakee was walking toward the apartment when a gunman approached and shot him with a handgun. The gunman fled on a waiting motorcycle. Masakee was shot once in his body and taken to Yala hospital.

Police are investigating and not yet concluded if it is involved southern Muslim insurgents.

More than 5,000 people have been killed and more than 9,000 hurt in over 11,000 incidents, about 3.5 incidents a day, in Thailand's Muslim, ethnic-Malay dominated three southern border provinces — Yala, Pattani, Narathiwat and four districts of Songkhla — since violence erupted in January 2004, according to Deep South Watch, which monitors the regional violence.—Xinhua

Unidentified gunman fires at Cambodian opposition party office

PHNOM PENH, 20 July—

An unidentified gunman fired a shot at a main office of the opposition Cambodia National Rescue Party (CNRP) in Phnom Penh early Saturday, and no injury has been reported.

"The bullet broke through the glass window and damaged a chair in the office," said the party's statement on Saturday. "The party strongly condemns this action that aims to intimidate and cause instability and turbulence during the election campaigning and on the Election Day."

The office was closed at night when the incident occurred around 3:30 am. Police were called to investigate the shooting on Saturday morning.

The shooting came just a day after the return of the party's exiled leader Sam Rainsy who received an exuberant welcome by supporters ahead of the 28 July parliamentary polls.

Sam Rainsy returned to Cambodia on Friday after spending nearly four years abroad in self-imposed exile to avoid an 11-year prison sentence on charges of disinformation and destruction of public property.

CNRP spokesman Yim

Sovann said at least 40,000 supporters rallied to greet his return, causing traffic jam on the road in front of the airport for hours.

Sam Rainsy's return came after Norodom Sihamoni, the King of Cambodia, granted him a royal pardon on 12 July at the request of Prime Minister Hun Sen on the grounds of national unification and reconciliation.

Upon his arrival, Sam Rainsy knelt down to kiss the ground at the airport complex before riding a pick-up vehicle.

"I am very excited, I am very happy to return to homeland to see all of you," said Sam Rainsy, speaking briefly to a huge crowd of supporters in front of the airport.

Indonesia takes steps to resolve beef scarcity problem

JAKARTA, 20 July—Indonesian trade minister finally took steps to address beef scarcity problem in the country and bring soaring beef price to an affordable level by allowing qualified abattoirs and feedlots to import live cows from foreign countries, slaughter them and distribute the beef to retailers at prices recommended by the government.

The move was facilitated by a decree that aimed at stabilizing beef price, which was issued by the trade minister and came into effect on Thursday, and would remain valid until the end of the year. Under the decree, the licenses to import livestock would be issued solely by the trade minister after considering recommendations on qualified abattoirs and feedlots submitted by agriculture ministry.

The abattoirs and feedlots licensed to import beef are obliged to report every batch of livestock import realization on a daily basis to the trade ministry, according to the decree.

"There will be up to 7,000 cows arriving in Indonesia by the end of this month," trade minister Gita Wirjawan told reporters in his office here on Friday.

Gita did not say in details how many livestock are planned to be imported to stabilize the price of beef in the country. He hinted it would depend on the capabilities of abattoirs and feedlots in providing fresh beef for the people.

The elements of capabilities considered by the trade ministry include their stalls, carcass storing facilities and slaughtering and delivery process. On a separate occasion, Agriculture Minister Suswono said on Friday that at least 20,000 livestock were planned to be imported to stabilize the beef price in the country.

He added that the import would be ended after the price fall to 80,000 rupiah (about 7.8 US dollars) per kilogram, the normal price level before it increased to more than 100,000 rupiah (about 9.8 US dollars) per kilogram now.

The soaring of beef price to uncontrollable level has made President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono upset. In a cabinet meeting held on Saturday last week, the president bashed trade and agriculture ministers over the issue, saying that it has caused trouble for citizens, especially during the holy month of Ramadan when demand on beef used to be increasing.

With an aim to swiftly provide beef for domestic market, the Indonesian Bureau of Logistics was also recently tasked to import 3,000 tons of frozen beef from Australia and New Zealand. Part of the import has been shipped in last week via cargo planes.

Lack of recycling blamed for mounting Chinese garbage

BEIJING, 20 July—Insufficient recycling has been blamed as a major reason behind increasingly mounting garbage surrounding cities in a rapidly urbanizing China, the China Youth Daily reported on Friday.

The report cited a government survey showing more than one-third of the nation's cities are besieged by rubbish, with the dumped garbage taking up 50,000 hectares of land.

Megacities such as Shanghai and Beijing each produce nearly 20,000 metric tons of rubbish daily and output is rising fast yearly, posing great challenges to the environment as recycling capacities fail to keep abreast of the output needing proper treatment, the report said.

The government listed a raft of cities that started piloting recycling programmes back in 2000 but those programmes have failed to prosper.

A survey by the newspaper showed that more than 60 percent of respondents believed the government's inadequate emphasis and investment concerning recycling have caused the current conundrum. The garbage problem is even accused of causing cancer and other health hazards, according to the newspaper.

Chen Changzhi, vice chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, said burning rubbish could be the best way to reduce the size of the garbage and the land it occupies. Meanwhile, the process could be harnessed for electric power generation.

However, residents worry this method could pollute local environments even though China already possesses technology to contain such pollution, the report said.

An official with the National Development and Reform Commission, China's top economic planning body, revealed late last year that the country will invest more than 50 billion yuan (8.1 billion US dollars) during the 2011-2015 period to promote clean garbage treatment.

UN peacekeeping chief urges extension of mission in Cote d'Ivoire

UNITED NATIONS, 20 July —Threats to peace and stability of Cote d'Ivoire should not be underestimated, the United Nations peacekeeping chief Herve Ladsous said on Thursday, urging the Security Council to extend the UN Mission in the country. Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations Ladsous told the UN Security Council that the presence of the UN Operation in Cote d'Ivoire (UNOCI) "remains essential, particularly with respect to its core priorities of protecting civilians, disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of former combatants, and security sector reform."

Ladsous presented Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon's report on Cote d'Ivoire at the council, noting that the country is on the right path following a violent post-election crisis in 2011. Meanwhile, he expressed his concern over the country's political fragmentation and called on all Ivoirians to resolve political differences peacefully.

UNOCI was established in 2004 by the Security Council to facilitate the peace process of the West African nation and has been extended for several times. Its mandate is due on 31 July, 2013. Cote d'Ivoire endured months of violence after a disputed 2010 presidential election when former President Laurent Gbagbo refused to step down after losing to Alassane Ouattara. Gbagbo finally gave up the post in April 2011.

However, the country still faces threats including uncontrolled circulation of weapons, former combatants, violence between communities and crimes.

New EU settlement guidelines bad news for Israel

JERUSALEM, 20 July — The new EU guidelines on the status of Jewish settlement in the West Bank could take a heavy toll on Israel, local analysts have said. According to the guidelines issued recently, as of 2014, Israeli entities located or active in the areas that Israel annexed since the 1967 Middle East War will not be eligible for EU grants, prizes or loans. Since its announcement in late June, Israeli politicians have been trying to get the EU to cancel or postpone the new guidelines. "It's very problematic (for Israel) because it's the first time in recent years a very message to the Israeli public that the EU takes very seriously the distinction between the occupied territories and Israel within the 1967 borders," Prof. Eyal Chowers, of Tel Aviv University, told Xinhua on Wednesday.

"Usually Israelis tend to ignore these lines, but here comes a very clear and painful message that the EU still holds the distinction between these two territories," Chowers said.

Fog strands 10,000 at Dalian Airport

DALIAN, 20 July—Rain-led fog has left about 10,000 flight passengers stranded in the northeastern Chinese city of Dalian on Friday, according to Dalian Airport's operation centre.

More than 70,000 people were expected to depart from or arrive at the airport on Friday with 467 flights on the airport's schedule, but as of 11 am, only two flights have left while 16 have arrived, the operation centre said.

The local weather bureau has forecast that downpours will continue, which is likely to further reduce visibility.

Kareena Kapoor to shoot love scene with Emraan Hashmi

MUMBAI, 20 July—Bollywood actress Kareena Kapoor Khan kissed her then-beau Shahid Kapoor in Jab We Met and even shot for bold scenes in Heroine. This time the actress seems to be going yet another step ahead to get cosy with Emraan Hashmi in her next film. According to sources, Bebo has given her nod for an intimate scene with Emraan. In fact, the makers were in for a surprise when the actress gave the go-ahead.

A source from the unit says, “Producer Ekta Kapoor was very keen that Kareena does the film but was not sure if she would agree for the explosive love-making scene. She convinced Kareena that the scene was quite significant to the storyline. Bebo being a professional gave her nod right away.”

Apparently initially Kareena had some date issues after which, the makers contacted Deepika Padukone for the role. The producers however soon went back to Bebo after which the logistics were worked out. Kareena remained unavailable for comment.

In the past, Bebo has shot cosy scenes with other co-stars as, including With then-beau Saif Ali Khan in Kurbaan. She also kissed Aamir Khan in 3 Idiots and got cosy with Arjun Rampal in Heroine. She also Kissed Akshay Kumar in Kambakth Ishq and shot for a lovemaking scene with Ajay Devgn for Omkara.—PTI

Selena Gomez wants to move out of parents’ house

LOS ANGELES, 20 July—Singer Selena Gomez is planning to move out of her parents’ house and is looking to buy a place of her own.

The 20-year-old singer revealed her plans in an upcoming episode of Ryan Seacrest with Selena Gomez, reports femalefirst.co.uk.

“Yeah, you know I think it’s time. I didn’t ever wanna be forceful to saying, ‘OK, I’ve made enough to get my own house and OK, let’s blow it off and do whatever’. I just love being with my family and I love knowing that they’re there. But yeah, I think it’s probably time for me to get my own house,” said Gomez.

The Come & Get It hitmaker also said that she has a 10-year plan but thinks that she may not be as popular in future as she is today.

“I do, but you just never know how it’s gonna execute. I have goals — personally and in my professional career, too — but what’s in today could be gone tomorrow, so you might not see me in five years,” she said.

Gomez, who has an on and off relationship with Justin Bieber, 19, hopes to have a huge family in the future.

“That’s when everything will probably slow down. I mean, I’m Latin, so ... I don’t know, obviously when that time comes I’ll decide, but of course I like having a big family,” she said.

Ronaldinho primed for Libertadores final second leg

BELO HORIZONTE, 20 July—Atletico Mineiro coach Cuca says he is unconcerned by the form of key playmaker Ronaldinho ahead of Wednesday's Copa Libertadores final second leg against Olimpia. An out of sorts Ronaldinho was substituted during the second half of Atletico's 2-0 loss to the Paraguayan outfit in Asuncion last Wednesday.

But Cuca backed the 33-year-old to turn around his fortunes in front of more than 60,000 fans at the Mineirao stadium. "Nothing went right for Ronaldinho in the first match," Cuca said on Friday. "He was very well marked and made errors that are not usual for him. "But he is the most technically gifted player that I have ever managed. He is the player which I think can most help us win the title. Wednesday will be his game, you can be sure of that. Atletico Mineiro have never won the Copa Libertadores—South America's premier club competition—while Olimpia are vying for their fourth title.

Vilanova to step down as Barcelona coach for more cancer treatment

MADRID, 20 July—Barcelona coach Tito Vilanova stepped down on Friday to undergo further cancer treatment, the club said.

Vilanova had a tumour removed from a salivary gland in his throat in November 2011 and in December 2012 he suffered a relapse.

He underwent surgery again followed by 10 weeks of chemotherapy and radiotherapy in New York. Vilanova returned in March and led Barcelona to the Spanish league title.

Barcelona president Sandro Rosell said the 44-year-old made the decision as his treatment clashes with his duty in the club. Vilanova's replacement will be announced "probably in the beginning of next week," Rosell said.

Woods primed for British Open tilt

Tiger Woods of the US acknowledges the crowd after his par putt on the tenth green during the second round of the British Open golf Championship at Muirfield in Scotland on 19 July, 2013.—REUTERS

GULLANE, (Scotland), 20 July—Tiger Woods will start the British Open third round on Saturday perfectly placed to mount a strong challenge for his 15th major title. The world number one trails overnight leader Miguel Angel Jimenez by one shot after battling his way to a level-par 71 on Friday to finish on two under, one behind Spaniard Jimenez.

Woods was level with Briton Lee Westwood, Sweden's Henrik Stenson and fellow American Dustin Johnson after sinking a birdie on the last hole to end an attritional second round with a flourish. "Just got to continue plodding along. Just continue just being patient, putting the ball in the right spots and trying," Woods said. "We're not going to get a lot of opportunities out there, but when I have, I've been able to capitalize, and hopefully I can continue doing that."

Jimenez added a 71 to his opening 68 to top a congested leaderboard. "I feel relaxed," he told reporters. "And I tell you, I love what I'm doing. I play golf. I do this for a living. And I've keep doing the same thing for 25 years. Westwood, bidding for his first major title, made six birdies in the first 12 holes of his second round before three bogeys stalled his progress.

"I felt pretty comfortable," he said. "I was hitting the ball well. Putting nicely. The golf course got really difficult. The finish is tough. 16, 17, 18 are playing hard. So it's like most major championships, it's a grind out there." Briton Martin Laird, Argentina's Angel Cabrera, American Zach Johnson and Spain's Rafael Cabrera-Bello will start the third round at one under par.—Reuters

Froome survives in yellow as Contador accepts defeat

LE GRAND BORNAND, (France), 20 July—Chris Froome had his maiden Tour de France title within reach on Friday after the Briton survived the 204.5-km 19th stage and Alberto Contador's camp conceded defeat. Team Sky rider Froome leads Spaniard Contador by five minutes 11 seconds with two stages left, one being Sunday's parade to the Champs-Élysées.

"It would take a lot for someone to take more than five minutes," Froome told reporters after the stage which was won by Portugal's Rui Costa. "Having said that, I don't want to be complacent so we have to stay focused and switched on until tomorrow night at least." As Contador, who earlier this week had marked the stage featuring four demanding climbs as the one where he could overhaul Froome, settled for second place, his Saxo-Tinkoff outfit rode to defend top position in the team standings.

REUTERS

"That was not our objective at the start of the Tour but at some point you have to admit that Chris was just much stronger than anyone else in the race," Saxo-Tinkoff sports director Philippe Mauduit told reporters. Contador will also need to defend his second overall as only 47 seconds separates him from fifth-placed Joaquim Rodriguez going into Saturday's 20th stage, a 125-km ride from Annecy featuring six climbs with a summit finish at Semnoz.

Spaniard Rodriguez and Colombian climber Nairo Quintana, who holds the white jersey for the best young rider, finished Friday's stage with Froome and Contador and pose the biggest threat. They were, however, controlled by Contador's team all day. "Maybe they were preventing attacks from Movistar (Quintana's team), it was perfect for us," Team Sky sports director Nicolas Portal told reporters.

Brazilians given 33% discount for World Cup tickets

SAO PAULO, 20 July—Brazilian fans will pay a third less than their international counterparts for standard tickets at next year's World Cup, world football's governing body FIFA said on Friday. While locals will pay as little as 30 US dollars during the tournament's group stage, the lowest price for international fans will be 90 dollars

For the first time in more than 60 years FIFA will offer half-price entry starting at 15 dollars to Brazilian students, senior citizens and low-income earners. The most expensive tickets are 990 dollars for a seat at the final in Rio de Janeiro.

FIFA's marketing director Thierry Weil said it was only the second time that fans had been offered discounted tickets for football's showpiece event. "This had only happened in the 1950 World Cup, also held in Brazil, showing that Brazilian government is a good negotiator," Weil said during a Press a conference.

In addition, 50,000 free tickets will be issued to Brazil's indigenous population and welfare recipients. Former Brazil striker and current federal deputy Romario welcomed the pricing structure. "FIFA has finally been brought down to earth. Tickets have to be cheap, after all, we're the ones picking up the tab for this party," the 1994 World Cup winner said on Twitter.—Xinhua

Wolff makes full test debut with Williams

(L-R) Williams Formula One drivers Pastor Maldonado and Valtteri Bottas and test-driver Susie Wolff pose with the new FW35 racing car during its presentation at Circuit de Catalunya racetrack in Montmelo, near Barcelona, on 19 Feb, 2013.—REUTERS

LONDON, 20 July—Susie Wolff made her full test debut with former champions Williams on Friday, the biggest step by a woman driver in Formula One for more than 20 years, with race regulars paying her compliments. “I think she was pretty good, she was pretty quick and that’s really fantastic to see a lady driving Formula One,” Ferrari’s Felipe Massa told reporters after the final day of a young driver test at Silverstone.

“I was really happy when I saw the lap times and pretty happy for her.” Wolff, now 30, may not be a young driver but she was as thrilled as any of those making their test debuts after completing 89 laps and setting the ninth fastest time of the 16 drivers on track during the day. Her best lap of one minute

35.093 seconds compared to the day’s fastest of 1:32.894 set by triple champion Sebastian Vettel in his Red Bull.

“It was important for me to show I had the performance,” the Scot, wife of Mercedes motorsport head and Williams shareholder Toto Wolff, told reporters. “It was fantastic today. The team did a great job getting me through the day, talking me through everything step by step. “Physically it wasn’t easy but it was what I was expecting. I was well prepared so it was completely manageable,” added the development driver who spent seven seasons racing in the DTM (German Touring Car) series but scored only four points.

Formula One has not had a female driver in decades, with Italian Giovanna Amati the last to try to get on the grid when she failed to qualify in 1992. Compatriot Lella Lombardi was the last to start a race, in 1976. Wolff has taken part in straight-line aerodynamic tests, without other racing drivers present, and as development driver was the first to drive this year’s car. “After such a tough end to my DTM career, many people presumed that I was just always at the back and wasn’t quick enough but I think today can show that that was possibly an unfair judgment,” said the Briton.

Spaniard Maria De Villota was appointed test driver for Marussia last year, before she lost an eye in an accident during an aerodynamic test in England. However she never took part in a general test with other drivers. Britain’s Katherine Legge also tested a Minardi in Italy in 2005. Race drivers such as Vettel and Massa were limited on Friday to testing the new type of Pirelli tire to be introduced at next week’s Hungarian Grand Prix after a spate of blowouts at last month’s British round at Silverstone.

Massa, who suffered a near-fatal head injury when struck by a bouncing spring that came off compatriot Rubens Barichello’s car in Hungary in 2009, said they seemed more consistent.

Relentless Kiprop races to fastest time since 2004

LONDON, 20 July—World champion Asbel Kiprop’s relentless pace proved too much for his rivals, including Mo Farah, as the Kenyan clocked the fastest 1,500 meters time since 2004 at the Monaco Diamond League meeting on Friday. With the world championships in Moscow just over three weeks away, world leads and minor records were set with seeming abandon on a still, warm evening in the Stade Louis II. Kiprop pulled ahead of the field shortly before the bell and raced away to win in three minutes 27.72 seconds to make him the fourth fastest man of all time over the distance.

Britain’s Olympic 5,000 and 10,000 meters champion Farah said before the event that he was dropping down to the shorter distance to work on his speed and the move paid off as he was dragged round in a European record of 3:28.81. “I’m definitely pleased, training has been going pretty well,” the 30-year-old, who goes sixth on the all-time list, told the BBC. “The aim was to come out here and work on my speed. It would have been nice to get closer to Asbel but he’s got another gear and he kept stretching away,” added Farah who plans to move up to the marathon next year.

Controversial sprinter Justin Gatlin won the men’s 100 metres, which was run against the backdrop of last weekend’s revelations that leading sprinters Tyson Gay and Asafa Powell had failed dope tests. American Gatlin, who served a four-year doping ban from 2006, got a great start and won in 9.94 seconds, in a race missing world-record holder Usain Bolt, to show he is likely to be the Jamaican’s main contender in Moscow. Murielle Ahoure of the Ivory Coast put herself in the mix for the world 200 title after blasting out of the blocks and holding off American Tiffany Townsend and Olympic 100 meters champion Shelly-

Ann Fraser-Pryce for victory in a national record of 22.24.

Farah would have watched the 5,000 metres, for which he is world champion, with interest as Kenyan Edwin Soi ran the fastest time of the year, 12:51.34, to beat the Briton’s meeting record set in 2011. Former Kenyan Albert Rop, now competing for Bahrain, was second in an arena record of 12:51.96. Time is running out for world and Olympic 100 hurdles champion Sally Pearson, who is still a way off her best after returning from a hamstring injury last month.

The Australian faded badly over the last three hurdles to finish fifth behind American Queen Harrison who won in 12.64. Olympic silver medalist Brigetta Barrett treated the crowd to a dance routine after clearing 2.01 first time in the high jump which was enough for victory. Renaud Lavillenie of France dominated the pole vault competition, securing victory with a Diamond League record and world-leading 5.96 meters, 18 centimeters higher than American Brad Walker in second.—Reuters

Hakuho wins Nagoya title with 2 bouts left

NAGOYA, 20 July—Bruised but far from broken, Mongolian yokozuna Hakuho defeated Bulgarian ozeki Kotooshu to clinch his 26th Emperor’s Cup with two days to spare at the Nagoya Grand Sumo Tournament on Friday.

The hardware was put on a plate for Hakuho after Aoiyama, the only other wrestler with a mathematical chance at the title, fell to a third loss at the hands of Takayasu. Despite being heavily taped up after injuring his right abdomen in Thursday’s win over Kotoshogiku, Hakuho was in total control and twice got hold of Kotooshu’s (9-4) right arm and yanked him around the ring.—Kyodo News

Natural gas begins flowing in Myanmar-China pipeline

NAY PYI TAW, 20 July —Union Minister for Energy U Than Htay made an inspection tour of Main Control Centre of SEAP Company near Thayatdan Village in Amarapura Township of Mandalay Region today. The centre is a part of Myanmar-China gas pipeline.

Next, the Union minister accompanied by SEAP Chairman Mr. Jaing Chang Liang observed preparations for opening ceremony, documentary photos and videos, and keeping records on gas which was starting to flow into the pipeline.

It was learnt that control station and all devices used in the project would be handed over to Myanmar when the term of contract ended and the quality devices could be used effectively later on.

“Mandalay Sport Palace”

- * Many years ago, Burma (Myanmar) was known as Mandalay all over the world.
- * Mandalay is very famous as Yadanarbon King’s Nay Pyi Taw. Everyone can visualize our golden palace,(Shwe Nan Taw) the pride of Myanmar.
- * Really, we cannot change or replace this place with New York city or Tokyo.
- * We can’t appraise the value of this palace. It is unlimited & eternal for us.
- * It’s amazing, Surprisingly, created by ...Supernatural....
- * The new sport palace is appeared in Mandalay.
- * The new land mark for Mandalay, Gigantic, Enormous, Marvelous football stadium same to Wunna Theikdi & Zeyar Thiri football stadiums in Nay Pyi Taw.
- * Thirty Thousand seated, complete with track & field including all the systems as international standards in line with FIFA.
- * It’s lovely & delightful just like a flying saucer landing from the other planet.
- * Want to stay & play in this new Arena, but won’t forget playing, shouting in Bahtoo ground.
- * Well done Max Myanmar.
- * Thanks a lot to Max Myanmar.
- * Please exert all of your work forces to be completed as soon as possible.
- * Also thanks to the Government for your Present for the people as great as the Golden Palace.
- * We, Mandalars are so grateful and highly appreciate for handing over this stadium. In honour of XXVII SEA Games to be held in December 2013.

US to help Tilapia fish farming in Myanmar

The United States has planned to provide technical assistance to farming freshwater Tilapia fish in Myanmar, said an official of the Myanmar Fisheries Federation.

As part of efforts for promoting Tilapia fish farming, a US team comprising experts made a visit to Tilapia fish farms in Myanmar on 17 July.

The United States is currently assisting in Tilapia fish farming in Bangladesh, Nepal, Sri Lanka and Bhutan in terms of farming techniques.

The US team would give advice and farming techniques to Myanmar to be able to export high-quality fish and fish products and to get foreign markets.

Meanwhile, the US team would also help

Myanmar to ensure organic fish farming.

Myanmar needs to promote export sector of fishery products and to ensure that quality levels of fish and fishery products reach the high-quality required.

Currently, Myanmar exports over 120 items of fishery products.

Myanmar has over 100 marine product factories,

Byline: Maung Thitsa

but some of them can produce quality products only.

In the 2012-2013 FY, Myanmar exported over 37000 metric tons of marine products.
