Heavy rains do not harm paddy plantations in Thaton

THATON, 12 Aug—As the continuous rains hit Thaton Township of Mon State from the late July to date, water levels of Bilin River and Thanlwin River rose, causing floods at some parts of the township.

Despite flooding is hitting the areas, it did not destroy cultivation of monsoon paddy.

Taungsun Village administrator U Win Zaw Oo said, “Our village has 4254 acres of monsoon paddy. About two months old paddy saplings have resist the inundation. So, there was no loss and damage in heavy rains. I think more heavy rains may not harm the paddy plants.”

“Although the paddy plants can resist the heavy rain, it may be worried about danger of landslide for some paddy plantations near the bank. Farmland owners face shortage of farming workers. In early days of the cultivation, they could not seek any farming workers. Most of the adults are now working in other country,” said a farmland owner U Nge of Thayettaw Village.

Flash floods batter Afghanistan, at least 22 dead

KABUL, 12 Aug—At least 22 people in Afghanistan were killed and farmland was damaged when flash floods hit a plain near the capital, officials said on Sunday.

Normally arid Afghanistan can get heavy rain in its summer and more than 60 people were killed early this month in flooding east of the capital, Kabul.

The latest floods followed hours of torrential rain and hail on Saturday, with the Shomali plain, just to the north of Kabul, particularly hard hit.

Six of the dead were children, said senior Kabul police officer, Sayed Ekramuddin Jalal.

"We have already sent teams of rescuers to the area and taken people out of danger," he said.

Several people were injured and about a dozen homes were washed away. Many irrigation canals and wells, as well as orchards and fields were damaged, he said.

Some of the victims were visiting relatives for the Eid al-Fitr holiday, he said.

Two women were killed and four people were injured in flooding elsewhere, said Ghulam Farouq, an official at the Ministry of Disaster Preparedness.

Fire crews extinguish blaze at Venezuela oil refinery

CARACAS, 12 Aug—Firefighters in Venezuela put out a blaze in a storage tank at an oil refinery that was caused by lightning on Sunday and led to the evacuation of people living nearby, a top official at state oil company PDVSA said.

Thunderstorms this weekend have drenched much of the South American OPEC nation, which has suffered repeated accidents at its oil refineries in recent years. Lightning bolts ignited two storage tanks at a different refinery just last year.

No one was hurt in the fire, but residents within a 1 km (0.6 mile) radius were moved away from the scene while fire crews fought the blaze in a downpour at the 187,000 barrel-per-day (bpd) Puerto La Cruz facility in the eastern state of Anzoategui.

"The fire has been completely extinguished," Asdrubal Chavez, PDVSA's vice president for refining, told state TV.

He congratulated the fire crews for their "sustained effort which allowed us to control this important fire in record time."

Separately, PDVSA said operations at its 146,000-bpd El Palito refinery had been stopped on Sunday by a power cut that was also a result of the torrential rains.

President Nicolas Maduro said earlier on Twitter that he was in direct communication with the teams tackling the blaze at Puerto La Cruz. Officials stressed that the evacuation of homes around the refinery was just a precaution.

In one of the global oil industry's worst accidents for decades, a gas leak caused an explosion and fire last year at Venezuela's giant 645,000-bpd Amuay oil refinery that killed more than 40 people and wrecked hundreds of nearby houses.

The country became a net gasoline importer last year, largely because the Amuay disaster forced PDVSA to import fuels to meet domestic demand.

Maduro's predecessor, the late Hugo Chavez, nationalized most of the oil industry during his 14-year rule and used export revenue from high prices to fund generous social programs that ranged from subsidized groceries to brand-new apartments.

Critics say PDVSA has been mismanaged as a result and has suffered from under-investment that they blame for a string of accidents and unplanned stoppages at its facilities.

In two very similar incidents less than a month apart last year, lightning set fire to two separate storage tanks at the El Palito refinery. No one was hurt in either case.—Reuters

For Dell, buyout uncertainty adds to poor PC sales outlook

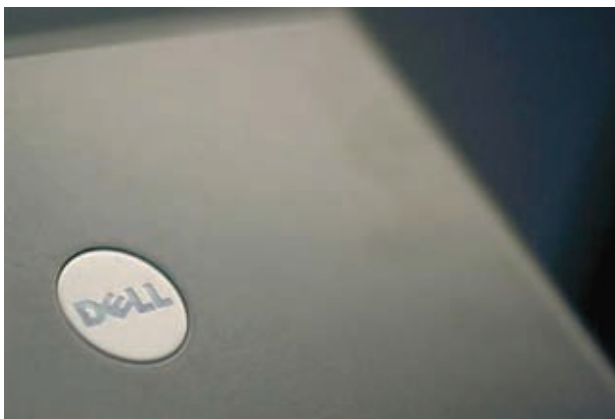

SAN FRANCISCO, 12 Aug — Months of public bickering, secretive backroom negotiations and eleventh-hour deals for control of Dell Inc belie the fact that the combatants are vying for a company facing steadily declining sales prospects. The tussle between Chief Executive Michael Dell and firebrand activist investor Carl Icahn is also starting to spook some customers. It's the last thing a company, grappling with the ever-darkening global outlook for personal computers, needs. IDC estimates Dell's PC shipments slid 4.2 percent in the second quarter, compared to a year earlier.

Some customers have begun asking if Dell is even going to be around in the longer term, said Michael Gavaghan, vice president of sales and marketing at Florida-based Dell reseller SL Powers. Sales are taking longer to close as well, he said. "We hold their hand and gently say to just table the purchasing decision another few weeks," said Gavaghan.

He stressed, however, that customers are "not fleeing by any means." The cacophony surrounding the $25 billion buyout bid proposed by Michael Dell and Silver Lake Partners has picked up over the past month. Icahn threatened to wage a campaign to replace the CEO and his board, and sued the company in Delaware to try to force an earlier shareholder vote.

Michael Dell raised his offer twice to try to win over major investors. A shareholder vote has been scheduled for September after being delayed three times. Morale within the company is stable for now, say some employees, though they add that could change rapidly if Icahn has his way and were to reshuffle management. John Pucillo-Dunphy, senior engineer and owner of Miracle Networking Solutions, a Dell reseller based in Middleboro, Massachusetts, said he supports Dell's going private and is more comfortable with Michael Dell's leadership since it remains unclear what Icahn's long game is. "I have seen the emails from Michael Dell. I haven't seen anything from Icahn," Pucillo-Dunphy said.

Icahn, who with 8.9 percent of the company is now its second-largest shareholder, has said little about what future he envisions for the company beyond that it has promising prospects based on its large base of PC customers, and that it should remain partly public. Pucillo-Dunphy said customers are not overly concerned about the drama. "For the most part, they kind of have that mentality that (Dell is) too big to fail."

The company declined to comment on the issue. Michael Dell sent employees an email on Thursday exhorting the troops to stay focused. He followed that up on Friday with a similar assurance for customers. "I know this hasn't been an easy time. The competition has been aggressive during this period of uncertainty, but we are, as we have always been, determined to prove to you why Dell is the best solutions provider to meet your needs," the CEO said. — Reuters

IBM forms alliance with Google, Nvidia to boost chips unit

NEW YORK, 12 Aug — Technology services provider IBM is teaming up with Google and a handful of other tech companies to license IBM's Power chip technology, in an effort to attract more users.

Under the alliance called OpenPower Consortium, IBM and Google — along with Israel's chip designer Mellanox Technologies, US chip-maker Nvidia Corp and Taipei-based server supplier Tyan Computer Corp — will build server, networking and storage technology based on the chips for cloud data centres.

The hardware and software, previously proprietary to IBM, will be available to open development and it will be licensable to others, IBM said in a statement.

The alliance is open to any company that wants to participate and innovate on the platform, IBM said. IBM competes with Intel Corp and ARM Holdings' chips, which dominate the market. Revenue from IBM Power Systems was down 25 percent in the second quarter compared with the previous year. — Reuters

Mold for "twin" ring pommel sword unearthed in western Japan

OSAKA, 12 Aug — A team of archaeologists found a pair of molds for producing bronze swords with a twin ring-shaped pommel in the western Japanese prefecture of Shiga, the first discovery of its kind in Japan, local Press reported on Friday. The sword molds, dating back to between the fourth century BC and third century AD, were excavated from the Kamigoten Mound in Takashima City of the prefecture, according to the daily Mainichi Shimbun.

The report said the team has uncovered an area of about 4,000 square metres since April this year and found in June the molds, which are made of silt, in the north side of the trench covering about 1,450 square metres. It added the two objects are 29.5 centimetres long, 8.8 centimetres wide and about 4 centimeters thick. The report cited local archaeologists as saying that the shape and design of the unearthed molds are similar to the ones used for short swords of the Ordos style, which were widely found in northern China, during the Spring and Autumn Period (770 BC-476 BC), an era in Chinese history.

Hidenori Yoshida, spokesperson for Shiga Prefectural Association for Cultural Heritage, told Xinhua on Friday that since the length of the handle of swords made from the discovered molds was supposed to be too short to hold tightly, the products could not be adequate for practical use.

"Considering the unique style which has never found not only in Japan but even in the Korean Peninsula so far, the new discovery in the prefecture tells us there were varied and multiple ancient trade routes between western Japan and China in ancient times," Yoshida said.

Maruti planning new car to take on Hyundai's Grand i10

NEW DELHI, 12 Aug — The competition in the compact car segment is revving up, with market leader Maruti Suzuki India set to launch a brand new model early next year in response to rival Hyundai's soon-to-be-launched Grand i10. According to sources, the new model along with the upcoming WagonR Stingray will be the key fresh products for Maruti Suzuki India (MSI) to defend its market share amid the ever increasing competition.

"The new compact model from Maruti will be positioned between the WagonR and the Swift. It will make its debut at the Auto Expo next year," a source said. When contacted, a spokesperson for MSI, however, said, "We do not comment on our future product line-up." India's Auto Expo will be held between 6 and 12 February, 2014, at Greater Noida, moving away from the traditional venue of Pragati Maidan. Hyundai Motor India is already looking to hit at MSI's successful Swift by bringing the Grand i10, slated for launch nationally on 3 September with both diesel and petrol options.

By bringing the new model a tad below Swift, MSI is looking at the new model to counter the Grand i10. While the WagonR is currently priced between Rs 3.57 lakh and Rs 4.48 lakh (ex-showroom Delhi), Swift is available in the range of Rs 4.48 lakh to Rs 6.87 lakh (ex-showroom Delhi). MSI is also gearing up to launch WagonR Stingray ahead of this festive season as it looks to enhance its leadership position in the market.

The Indian passenger vehicles market, including cars, stood at 6,07,469 units in the April-June quarter this fiscal year and MSI had a share of 40.38 per cent with 2,45,346 units. Car-makers are betting on new models to beat the downturn in the market. Sales have been on a continuous decline for a record eighth month in a row in June. In the first quarter of this fiscal year, passenger vehicles sales have declined by 7.24 per cent from 6,54,858 units in the same period last fiscal year.—PTI

British art exports hit post-credit-crunch peak

LONDON, 12 Aug — The value of British art exports has surged to its highest level since the credit crunch, despite new rules giving deceased artists' estates a share of their work's resale price, data compiled by a Thomson Reuters unit showed on Monday.

The value of art and cultural objects exported from Britain rose by 32 per cent to 1.97 billion pounds ($3.06 billion) in the year to May 2012, according to a statement from Sweet & Maxwell, a legal information provider owned by Thomson Reuters.

On 1 Jan, 2012, the Artist's Resale Rights Directive, which allows artists to claim a percentage of the resale value of their work, was extended to benefit the estates and heirs of artists who have been dead less than 70 years.

They became entitled to up to 4 per cent of an original piece's resale price. Rights in Britain previously applied only to living artists.

"Many art experts and dealers were concerned that London's position in the art world could suffer compared to New York or Hong Kong which haven't introduced any such levy on the resale of modern and contemporary art," Massimo Sterpi, co-editor of "The Art Collecting Legal Handbook", said in the Sweet & Maxwell statement.

"The early indications are that this hasn't slowed down the London market," he added.

Exports of modern art, the category most likely to be affected by the new rules, jumped by 105 per cent from the previous year to 687 million pounds by May 2012, a quicker rise than the rest of the market, Sweet & Maxwell said.

Cashing in on health scares, China online food sales boom

BEIJING, 12 Aug — Chinese consumers are responding to a powerful new marketing tactic that plays to a widespread fear of food contamination — the promise of safe groceries sold online. Pledging produce direct from the farm, vendors have found food is becoming one of the fastest-growing segments of Internet retailing as they cash in on scares from cadmium-tainted rice to recycled cook-

The trend is adding momentum to a Chinese online retail boom driven by a rapidly expanding middle class, with companies such as COFCO Ltd and Shunfeng Express betting that a decent slice of a 1.3 billion population will pay for the peace of mind they say their services offer. "I think people are willing to pay a higher premium than in the West. In other markets, like the UK, food e-commerce is about convenience. Here, there's going to be a higher quality and safety premium," said Chen Yougang, a partner at consultancy McKinsey. But convincing some skeptical Chinese consumers on food quality will remain a battle. Shanghai-based Zhang Lei expressed doubt on the credentials of some products being touted as organic.

"Everyone knows that in China organic is not the real thing," said the mother of one. Nonetheless, total online sales of fresh produce in China could rocket to 40 billion yuan ($6.5 billion) in five years from about 11.5 billion yuan this year, said Zhou Wen Quan, a senior analyst at Beijing Orient Agribusiness Consulting.

New genetic factors behind severe childhood epilepsy identified

WASHINGTON, 12 Aug — Researchers have identified 25 new mutations on six key genes associated with severe forms of childhood epilepsy, according to a large-scale international study largely funded by the US National Institutes of Health. The study, part of a project involving more than 40 international institutions, used a cutting-edge genetic technique, called exome se-quencing, to search for non-inherited mutations linked to epileptic encephalopathies in 264 children whose parents who do not have epilepsy.

"We identified an unusually large number of distinct disease-causing mutations — 25 in total, all of which were de novo (brand new) mutations," study author David Goldstein, director of the Human Genome Variation Center at the Duke University Medical Centre, in a statement. The study known as Epilepsy 4000 (Epi4K) found a total of six genes behind the devastating form of the disorder: four had been described before using other genetic techniques and two genes are implicated for the first time.

NZ's Fonterra pulls 'DCD' milk powder in Sri Lanka, disputes test

WELLINGTON/COLOMBO, 12 Aug — New Zealand-based dairy giant Fonterra Co-operative Ltd said on Sunday it had withdrawn milk powder under orders from the Sri Lankan authorities for showing traces of the toxic agricultural chemical dicyandiamide (DCD), although it disputed the accuracy of the testing.

It said two batches of milk powder had been removed from shops last month after Sri Lanka's Ministry of Health had said they tested positive for DCD, a nitrate inhibitor used in fertilizers. Sri Lanka also imposed a ban on advertising by Fonterra's Anchor powder brand.

But Fonterra's chief executive said the product was clean and safe and it was contesting the Sri Lankan results and the ban. "We are definitely fighting it, because we have clear certificates — DCD-free, stamped, when it was exported, when it was imported — all clear," Theo Spierings told Television New Zealand. He said Fonterra's own testing and that of independent bodies had shown the milk powder was safe.

which often produces debilitating seizures and a range of other symptoms. More than 2 million people in the United States suffer from epilepsies, and infants and children have a greater chance of having the disorders than adults.

Sri Lanka's Ministry of Health, however, said it has solid evidence to prove the presence of DCD.

"The tests were done by Industrial Technology Institute (ITI) of Sri Lanka and they have submitted a report on this. That is the evidence we have. We can prove it in the case of a legal battle," a health ministry official said on condition of anonymity. The Sri Lankan recall follows last week's withdrawal by Fonterra and several of its customers of infant formula, sports drinks, and animal feed in nine countries because of fears of contamination of a whey ingredient with a bacteria that can cause botulism.

Spierings said Sri Lanka's action could be related to the price of dairy products there. Sri Lanka is the fifth biggest importer of Fonterra milk powder.

HIROSHIMA, 12 Aug— In her efforts to convey the tragedy of the 1945 US atomic bombing of Hiroshima to the younger generation, Kuniko Watanabe, 32, is drawing attention to a famous comic series and its creator. In early June, Watanabe organized an event to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the start of the manga series "Barefoot Gen" (Hadashi no Gen), about a survivor's experience, at Hiroshima Peace

Memorial Museum.

The series, which started in 1973, is based on the late artist Keiji Nakazawa's experience of the bombing as a 6-year-old boy. Nakazawa, who died of lung cancer at the age of 73 last December, lost his father, sister and brother in the attack, and his baby sister, born shortly after the bombing, lived only four months.

Since graduating from university, Watanabe, whose grandparents survived the 6 August bombing, has helped her mother record the testimonies of atomic bomb survivors. Watanabe said she realized that "Hiroshima is in my blood" after encountering scores of survivors and listening to their stories.

Watanabe got acquainted with Nakazawa six years ago, saying she came to love him just like her own father. After listening to one particularly harrowing talk by Nakazawa, which she said left her almost with the smell of blood in her nostrils, Watanabe told him that she felt "sad and frustrated."

Nakazawa replied to her, "That's good because people in Hiroshima lack the feeling of 'chikusho' (frustration and infuriation)," according to Watanabe. To pass down Nakazawa's experiences as a survivor and his desire for abolition of nuclear weapons, Watanabe coproduced a documentary film about the artist in 2011, whose English title was "Barefoot Gen's Hiroshima."

Watanabe said Nakazawa always hoped that "Barefoot Gen" would continue to be read from generation to generation, and that it is her "mission to shape the spirit he left." As part of preparations for the June event, Watanabe spent several months reading through the manga series and even traced the footsteps of Gen on the day the bomb was dropped, together with volunteer university students.—Kyodo News

Film opens depicting Okinawa residents' fight against US Ospreys

TOKYO, 12 Aug—"The Targeted Village," a documentary depicting local residents' fight against the deployment of crash-prone Osprey aircraft at a US military base in Okinawa, began showing on Saturday in Tokyo theaters.

The 91-minute film is based on an award-winning TV programme produced by Chie Mikami for an Okinawa TV station in 2012.

It focuses on the residents of Takae, a community in northern Okinawa Island, who speak of feeling "targeted" by the US military and its plan to build six helipads in the surrounding area.

Chie Mikami, newscaster of Ryukyu Asahi Broadcasting based in Okinawa Prefecture, speaks during an interview in Tokyo on 27 June, 2013.

KYODO NEWS

The film takes its title from the fact the village was used as a mock target in the 1960s to train US forces for the Vietnam War. The US military set up a mock Vietnamese village there and had residents of Takae dress up as Vietnamese farmers to lend a semblance of realism to the guerrilla warfare training drills.

The area is still being used for training for jungle warfare, including guerrilla attacks, infantry training and helicopter drills.

The film concentrates on the deployment of the tilt-rotor Osprey aircraft as a symbol of the huge US

Argentine president faces election test

Argentina's President Cristina Fernandez de Kirchner speaks during a Security Council meeting at the United Nations in New York on 6 Aug, 2013.

REUTERS

BUENOS AIRES, 12 Aug—Argentine President Cristina Fernandez faces a mid-term primary election test on Sunday that will show whether she has enough popular support to push for a constitutional change allowing her to run for a third term in 2015.

Candidates for legislative elections in October will be chosen in Sunday's open primary but, with no competition among candidates on the lists presented by each party, it serves more as a survey on Fernandez's six years in power.

The left-wing leader has delivered steady economic growth and was easily re-elected two years ago. But heavy government spending has fueled annual inflation to over 20 percent, and her combative style has upset investors and many voters in Latin America's third-biggest economy.

Fernandez, 60, says she is not thinking about a possible third term but talk persists that her congressional allies want the constitution changed to allow her to run again.

For that to happen, Fernandez would have to increase her control of Congress in October, when half the seats in the lower house will be up for grabs along with a third of the Senate.

Fernandez's allies would need a two-thirds majority in both chambers to get debate started on permitting a third term.

"She doesn't have that now and she won't have it after October," said Ignacio Labaqui, a Buenos Aires-based analyst for emerging markets consultancy Medley Global Advisors.

"But if the ruling party gets 40 percent or better at the national level, it could still claim to have a strong enough mandate to pressure the opposition into a bargain allowing the third-term amendment."

Investors in government bonds and in Argentina's vast agricultural and shale oil resources are watching the primary vote for signs of whether voters are tiring of Fernandez's interventionist policies and might be ready for a market-friendly leader in 2015.

An overvalued currency, heavy-handed import and foreign exchange controls and Fernandez's decision to nationalize Argentina's private pension system, its main airline and top energy company YPF have all upset investors and trade partners.

The first step

For the peace process of Myanmar to be successful, it must be connected to the emergence of a more and inclusive national-identity. Myanmar people of all ethnic backgrounds and all faiths— Buddhist, Christian, Muslim, Hindu, and others, must feel part of this new national identity.

The government has been working tirelessly for peace. But it is not an easy thing. Mostly the conflicts have an ethnic character and are rooted in long-standing ethnic grievances and aspirations. And there are issues of autonomy and self-determination, of power sharing and resource-sharing, of cultural rights and language policy, of protection against discrimination and security sector reform.

It in fact is an honor for us that we have not only over the past two years signed ceasefires with all of the major armed groups but also that we have signed an initial agreement with the last remaining armed group, the Kachin Independence Organization.

We are a multi-cultural, multi-faith nation. The Myanmar people speak dozens of languages and include people of all the great world religions. And in Myanmar there is not just one non-state armed group but more than a dozen. So we can imagine the complexities of any peace process and then multiply it by twelve.

It is a common knowledge that in any transition towards political openness there are some quarters that will take advantage and stir up troubles. We must deal with this but in the framework of our emerging democracy. We cannot let ethnic or religious differences become an excuse to revert to authoritarianism.

Very possibly, we will have a nation-wide ceasefire and the guns will go silent everywhere in Myanmar for the very first time in over sixty years. But it will also be only the first step towards the just and lasting peace we must achieve.

South Korea warns of power shortages amid nuclear shut downs

SEOUL, 12 Aug—South Korea has warned of serious power shortages this week amid an expected rise in summer temperatures and as the resources-starved country struggles to keep up with demand after six nuclear plants have gone off-line.

The energy ministry said it may take emergency measures such as rolling power cuts to avoid a repeat of 2011 blackouts which cut electricity to businesses and homes across the country.

Separately, the ministry said some major companies, including Kia Motors Corp and Hyundai Motor Co, had not complied with energy saving regulations such as cutting power consumption during peak hours.

Both automakers refused to comment on the matter. Of the country's total 23 reactors, six units are currently off line — three for maintenance or expiry of operational approval, and the other three to replace cables supplied with fake certificates.

Oil, gas and coal produce most of South Korea's electricity, but nuclear plants generate more than 30 percent of power.

"If one nuclear reactor stops its operation all of a sudden, we may have to start rolling power blackouts like we did on 15 September, 2011," Energy Minister Yoon Sang-jick told a news conference. Rolling blackouts would initially affect residential areas, minimizing any impact on the country's export-focused businesses.

South Korea's power demand is projected to peak at up to 80,500 megawatts

33 fishers missing, 7,500 stranded as typhoon Utor hits Philippines

MANILA, 12 Aug — At least 33 fishermen in coastal province of Catanduanes were reported missing and 7,581 people were stranded at various ports as Typhoon Utor (locally called labuyo) is approaching eastern coast of the Philippines.

The missing fishermen went fishing on Saturday despite the warning of the upcoming typhoon. The initial missing numbers were put at 40, but seven of whom returned home later, local media reported on Sunday. By 3 pm Sunday (0700 GMT), the centre of Typhoon Utor was 130 km north of Virac in Catanduanes in northeastern Philippines, Philippine Atmospheric, Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration (PAGASA) said.

According to the latest report of the National Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Centre (NDRRMC), 7,581 passengers on board 33 vessels were stranded at ports. Red alert status was placed on a dozen of provinces in Luzon island.

Eight regional centers of the NDRRMC have been on standby to mitigate the effects of typhoon Utor since Sunday morning.

"We have advised local government units in the regions to be affected to prepare accordingly because typhoon Utor is strong," NDRRMC executive director and concurrent Office of Civil Defence administrator Eduardo del Rosario said. Del Rosario appealed to fishermen and residents in the eastern seaboard of Luzon and Visayas not to venture in the sea. "Its too risky and will only endanger our lives," he said.—Xinhua

Strong quake strikes off eastern Indonesia

JAKARTA, 12 Aug—An earthquake measuring 6.5 on the Richter scale jolted Maluku in eastern parts of Indonesia on Monday, but there was no tsunami potential or reports of damages, officials said here.

The quake happened at 07:53 am Jakarta Time (0053 GMT), and the epicentre, 121 km under sea bed, was 155 km northwest of Maluku Tenggara Barat of Maluku province, an official with the Meteorology and Geophysics Agency said.

"We did not issue a tsunami warning. So far there is no report of damages as the centre of the quake was deep," the official told Xinhua over phone. Spokesman of the National Disaster Management and Mitigation Agency Sutopo Purwo Nugroho also said that there was no reports of building damage or human injuries as a result of the quake. "The quake shakes were not felt, because the location is far and deep," he told Xinhua over phone.

Singapore raises growth forecast, but cuts trade projection

SINGAPORE, 12 Aug — Singapore's economy grew by 3.8 percent year on year in the second quarter, the strongest growth in three years, the Ministry of Trade and Industry said on Monday. It also represents an improvement from the growth of 0.2 percent in the first quarter.

The stronger growth also prompted the ministry to upgrade the official growth forecast for the economy this year from 1-3 percent, to 2.5-3.5 percent, a forecast that has been revealed by Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong earlier in his national day message.

However, the projections for total trade and exports were cut due to weaker statistics in the first half of the year. On a quarter-on-quarter basis, the Singaporean economy expanded by 15.5 percent in the second quarter, significantly higher than the 1.7 percent expansion in the previous quarter, partly thanks to the strength of the manufacturing sector. On a quarter-on-quarter basis, the manufacturing sector grew by 32.1 percent, a sharp rebound from the 12.1 percent contraction reported in the previous quarter.

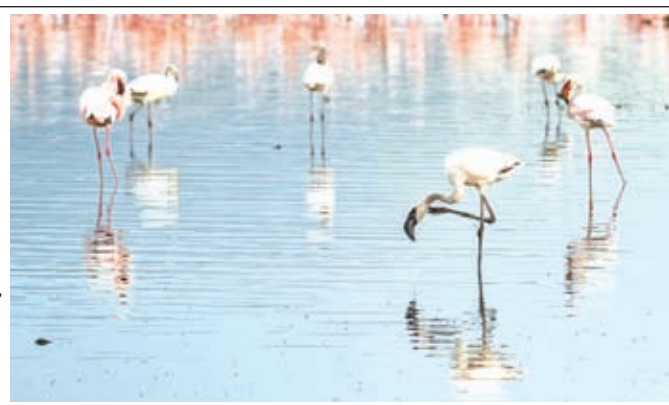

The construction sector jumped 11.2 percent, faster than the 10.3 percent growth in the preceding quarter. The wholesale and retail trade sector expanded by 22.1 percent, in contrast to the 2.6 percent contraction in the first quarter. In the first half of 2013, the economy grew by 2 percent.

"While economic growth in the advanced economies came in slightly weaker than expected in the first half of the year, global macroeconomic conditions are expected to pick up gradually in the second half," the Ministry of Trade and Industry said in a report. Nevertheless, it also noted risks such as the possible unintended consequences of China's economic policy adjustment if it results in an excessive tightening of liquidity, and the reaction of the market to a tapering of the quantitative easing programme in the United States.—Xinhua

Justin Bieber walked home with two girls following nightclub brawl

Justin Bieber reportedly got into a fight with a male club-goer after a female friend attempted to hit on him in his VIP section.

NEW DELHI, 12 Aug—Teen pop star Justin Bieber reportedly took home two cocktail waitresses home following his nightclub brawl last week.

The 19-year-old Boy-friend singer's visit to Southampton, New York, hotspot South Pointe ended in a vicious fight last weekend, but it wasn't all bad news for the star as he allegedly left the club with Diana Bhokasub, 24, and Sophia Rayo, 32, reported New York Daily News.

The Beauty and a Beat hitmaker is currently being investigated by police after he allegedly 'went nuts' on a fellow reveller as he partied the night away, leading to a physical altercation between members of the star's entourage and club patrons.

The fight is thought to have been triggered by a heated exchange between Bieber and a male club-goer after a female friend attempted to hit on the singer in his roped-off VIP section.

Bieber's security team quickly intervened and took the star out to the club's parking lot to cool off, but things took a turn for the worse inside the nightclub.

The singer's friends and members of his security were 'involved in a fight' after he was escorted out, and an eyewitness reported seeing blood.—PTI

Deepika Padukone: As actors, it is difficult to perform comedy

MUMBAI, 12 Aug—After debuting with a blockbuster Om Shanti Om in 2007, Deepika Padukone has hardly lost the taste of success. With Race 2, Yeh Jawaani Hai Deewani and now Chennai Express striking gold at the box office this year, one of Bollywood's star actresses says success is nothing but "relative".

Is it her year at the box office?

"If people are saying it's my year, it depends on my films," Deepika said.

"I think these things are relative. It feels nice to hear or to read about it. But, more importantly, I have been working really hard. I know I have pushed myself and sacrificed a lot of personal and family time. But in the end if the result is like this, you don't mind.

Deepika Padukone's newest comedy film Chennai Express released on 8 Aug, 2013.

But, yes, I think success is relative," she added.

Deepika's Chennai Express, featuring her Om Shanti Om co-star Shah Rukh Khan seems to be on its way to breaking records at the box office. The film released on Thursday (8 Aug, 2013) to a roaring opening day response.

The more the success, the tougher it gets to keep up to it, believes Deepika, who made a rare successful transition from modelling to film.

"I have to focus all my energies and hope that the next film is better. It does not get easier to live up to all of that. I want that with every film, the love, success and experience increase," said the 27-year-old daughter of former national badminton champion Prakash Padukone.

In her over five-year-long film career, the actress has been a part of various movie genres — thriller, romance, action, drama and comedy. She finds comedy the toughest.

"Comedy is the most difficult. Comic timing is something which you either have it in you, or you don't. You have to have a good sense of humour to be able to understand it. A split second can make you lose the punch."

"As actors, it is very difficult to perform it the same way every time, for the audience to find it funny," she said.

Yet, she seems to have given it a shot for Chennai Express, directed by the new age master of Bollywood comedies, Rohit Shetty. In the past, he has made the Golmaal series and comic hit Bol Bachchan. How was it working with him?

"I believe that he has his own school and style. It was a new style for me. His way of taking shots and directing his actors is different. He always had everything planned," she said.

But he gave her enough room to try to improvise on her character named Meena in Chennai Express.—PTI

Matt Damon: I was grumpy on Elysium set

LONDON, 12 Aug—Actor Matt Damon says he was always grumpy on the set of Elysium because he was on a strict diet to stay in shape.

The 42-year-old actor underwent a tough fitness regime and said giving up treats left him angry and unapproachable, reported Contactmusic.

"I was grumpy on this set, because I was on a diet for the whole movie. I think I shut up a little bit and keep to myself."

"It's not even that it was as extreme as diets I've done before, but it's like, at my age, I want to eat everything in my path, you know what I mean? I think I've become more of a glutton. It was really hard because I love to eat and I love to drink," he said.

Damon, who raises four daughters Alexia, 14, Isabella, six, Gia, four and Stella, two, said his wife does not mind when he changes shape for movies because she likes the variety.

"I'm at the point in my life where somebody was silly enough to marry me and won't leave me if I put on a few pounds. I think my wife likes the variety. When I did 'The Informant', I put on 40 pounds. I

Shraddha Kapoor enjoys vacation with friends

NEW DELHI, 12 Aug—Bollywood actress Shraddha Kapoor, who is riding high on the success of her film Aashiqui 2, enjoyed a short break to treat and pamper herself.

The 21-year-old had a wonderful time during the 10-day sojourn in Belgium, Amsterdam and Paris, and she even attended the dream music concert Tomorrowland with her friends.

"The actress recently took a 10-day leave after a very long time to celebrate her success with her close friends. She surely deserved this holiday," her spokesperson said in a statement. Shraddha, daughter of Shakti Kapoor, was also seen in Luv Ka The End before she struck gold with director Mohit Suri's Aashiqui 2.—PTI

Swiss luxury shop denies racism towards Oprah

ZURICH, 12 Aug—The owner of a luxury goods shop in Zurich has denied that racism was involved when Oprah Winfrey was discouraged from buying a 35,000 Swiss franc handbag.

The US talk show host, recently named the world's most powerful celebrity, was in Switzerland for the wedding of singer Tina Turner when the incident occurred last month.

The broadcaster said in two US interviews that a sales assistant had refused to show her the crocodile handbag, saying it was "too expensive" and steering her towards other, cheaper ones. Luxury shop Trois Pommés denied discriminating against Winfrey, an African-American, who asked to look at a "Jennifer" purse, designed by Tom Ford and named for actress Jennifer Aniston. The owner put the incident down to a language barrier.

"This is an absolute classic misunderstanding," shop owner Trudie Goetz told Reuters on Friday.

"This has nothing to do with racism, I am here for everyone and the customer is king." The sales assistant had wanted to show Winfrey that the bag was also available in other materials, which may have given the TV host the impression the shop did not want to sell it to her, Goetz said.

"Of course that's not

the case. Who wouldn't want to sell a purse for 35,000 francs?" Goetz said.

Trois Pommés operates various luxury-brand boutiques in Switzerland, including the Tom Ford shop in Zurich where Winfrey said she was refused.

Winfrey, 59, who runs her own TV network, earned $77 million in the year to June 2013, taking the No 1 spot on the Forbes most powerful celebrity list last month, the fifth time she has headed the annual ranking.

She also appears in a forthcoming movie, "The Butler", which examines race issues in a story about an African-American who works at the White House under several US presidents.—Reuters

Battling McIlroy sees positive signs after PGA

ROCHESTER, (New York), 12 Aug—A triple bogey may have crushed any remaining chance Rory McIlroy had of defending his PGA Championship crown on Sunday. But the Northern Irishman, who has battled all season, remained hopeful he could end the year on a high.

As McIlroy's reign ended he chose to look on the bright side of a sometimes dim week, signing off with a level par 70 to finish in a tie for eighth, seven shots back of winner American Jason Dufner. "I saw a lot of great signs out there today," said McIlroy. "Hopefully I can just bring that through to the next few weeks and have a strong finish to the season." Struggling through a season that has had more downs than ups after switching his club brand to Nike in a lucrative deal reported to be worth $250 million, McIlroy displayed plenty of fighting spirit during a rollercoaster week.

McIlroy, who coasted to victory by a record eight strokes in last year's PGA Championship at Kiawah Island, had not given up on his title bid this week, even after flirting with the outline during the second round. After playing his way back into title hunt with a 67 on Saturday, McIlroy effectively sank his title defence when he hit his second shot at the par-four fifth into water en route to a triple-bogey before hitting back with three birdies to finish on three under for the tournament. "I actually didn't hit a bad shot, pitched it just in the place where you can't pitch it I guess," said McIlroy.

"If I had of been a few feet right or a few feet left, it would have been fine, but just pitched in that difficult depression and came back into the water." "I really didn't hit a bad shot, but obviously it was disappointing. Came back okay at the end." The 24-year-old, who has been desperately searching for form is convinced he was close to getting back to his best. "I played the best golf of the week today. I hit some really good drives and really good iron shots," enthused McIlroy. "Didn't quite putt as well as I did the first three days, but really, really happy with my game going into the next few weeks. "I didn't hit many bad shots out there today."—Reuters

Dufner conquers Oak Hill for first major title

Jason Dufner of the US poses with the Wanamaker trophy after winning the 2013 PGA Championship golf tournament at Oak Hill Country Club in Rochester, New York on 11 Aug, 2013.—REUTERS

ROCHESTER, (New York), 12 Aug—American Jason Dufner erased memories of his heart-breaking late collapse two years ago when he clinched his first major title by two shots in the 95th PGA Championship on Sunday. One stroke behind playing partner Jim Furyk overnight, the ultra-laidback Dufner produced some scintillating approach play on the way to a two-under-par 68 and a 10-under total of 268 on the challenging Oak Hill Country Club.

"It probably still hasn't hit me yet," Dufner said after being presented with the coveted Wanamaker Trophy which he hoisted high before kissing it. "I can't believe this is happening to me." Dufner, 36, seized control with three birdies on the front nine and shut the door on his rivals with a steely display of precise shot-making, backed up by safety-first golf over the difficult closing stretch.

A stunning approach to a foot at the par-four 16th earned him his fourth birdie of the day and he could afford the luxury of bogeys at 17 and 18, two of the toughest holes on the course, as he secured his third victory on the PGA Tour. After putting out on the last green, Dufner retrieved his ball from the hole before partially raising both his arms in celebration with his eyes closed and a faint smile on his face.

Ajax suffer first defeat of season at AZ

THE HAGUE, (the Netherlands), 12 Aug—AZ handed Ajax their first defeat of the Eredivisie season on Sunday, by beating the reigning champions 3-2 in Alkmaar. AZ were the better side in the first half, but Ajax took the lead after a free-kick by Christian Eriksen. At the stroke of half-time Roy Beerens equalized after a mistake by Ajax goalkeeper Kenneth Vermeer. Due to sickness the latter was replaced by Jasper Cillessen at the start of second half.

Ajax took control in the second part with captain Siem de Jong giving the visitors the lead again. He headed in a cross by Bojan Krkic. However, a red card for Ajax-defender Ricardo van Rhijn, after stopping Nick Viergever illegally, became the turning point of the match. Aron Johansson converted the awarded penalty on fifteen minutes from time Viktor Elm earned AZ the victory.

"We were not playing well in the first half," Ajax coach Frank de Boer reacted. "In the second half we were better and we were waiting for the third goal. After the red card and the penalty things turned around unfortunately. I think it should not have been a red card."

Also on Sunday Feyenoord led already their second defeat of the season, 4-1 at home to FC Twente. On Saturday PSV Eindhoven beat NEC Nijmegen 5-0, thanks to a hat-trick by 17-year-old forward Zakaria Bakkali and two goals by Georginio Wijnaldum. PSV, FC Groningen, sc Heerenveen and PEC Zwolle are the only teams left with the maximum amount of six points after two match rounds. Groningen beat FC Utrecht 2-0 on Sunday, while on Saturday Heerenveen won 2-0 at NAC Breda and Zwolle won 3-1 at Heracles Almelo.

Nadal crushes Raonic to win Rogers Cup

MONTREAL, 12 Aug—Rafa Nadal thumped Canada's Milos Raonic 6-2, 6-2 in the final of the men's Rogers Cup on Sunday to capture his eighth ATP title this season and boost his confidence ahead of the US Open, starting later this month. Playing in his first tournament since his shock opening-round loss at Wimbledon, Nadal showed he was back to near his best and his ailing body was ready for the grueling demands of the North American hardcourt season.

Less than 24 hours after his hard-fought semi-final win over Novak Djokovic on Saturday, Nadal easily beat the dangerous Raonic in just over an hour, playing with all the conviction and freedom of a man near the peak of his powers. "To win here, I had to be playing my top level," Nadal told reporters. "I'm very happy the way that I played almost every match in this tournament. It's very important for me, this title." Sunday's victory provided Nadal with his third win at the Rogers Cup and his 25th career Masters title and the Spaniard will rise to three in the world rankings when they are released on Monday.

the top 10 for the first time after becoming the first Canadian man in more than half a century to reach the Rogers Cup final. "The breakthroughs I've had this week, with everything, from ranking to results, it's all great things to have happen, especially here at home," he said. "Even though I don't have the time now, there will be a time when I can stop, reflect upon it, learn as much as I can from it." Nadal was ruthless from the outset and never allowed Raonic to settle his nerves in front of a partisan capacity crowd in Montreal. The Canadian's big first serve, normally one of his most reliable weapons, was nullified by Nadal's aggressive returns, with the Spanish left-hander twice breaking Raonic's serve in the opening set.

By contrast, Raonic was unable to make any inroads on Nadal's serve with the fourth seed giving up just one solitary point on serve in the entire first set, which lasted a mere 32 minutes. Raonic fared better in the second set and earned three breaks points but was unable to convert any of them while Nadal capitalized on the two opportunities to get the double break and secure the title after 68 minutes. "At some points, I wasn't making him play enough," said Raonic, who enjoyed a hard-fought win over in-form Argentine Juan Martin Del Potro on his way to the decider. "I think I was rushing a lot of the first set and a half." The top four guys, when they get ahead that much, it's very hard to get back."

While Nadal's troublesome knees showed no signs of giving him problems this week, they remain under constant scrutiny, especially when he's preparing for the US Open, played on the most physically demanding surface of the four grand slam events.

Higher cigarette taxes make people drink less

BEIJING, 12 Aug—A rise in cigarette taxes can obviously lead to lower tobacco consumption, but a recent research suggested that higher cigarette taxes are also connected with the reduction of alcohol consumption among male and young adult smokers.

The study, published on Friday in the journal Alcoholism: Clinical and Experimental Research, compared about 11,000 people in 31 states in America that raised cigarette taxes between the 2001-2002 period and the 2004-2005 period, with a similar number of people from 15 states in which taxes remained the same.

The result showed that male smokers in states with higher tobacco tax drank almost 10 percent less alcohol and reduced seven times of their drunken revelry per year than those in the states with the same tax rate.

Young adult smokers between the age of 18 and 29 in states with higher cigarette taxes skipped nearly one-quarter of their binge drinking per year than the others.

“What our analysis shows is an association between increasing cigarette tax and decreasing (alcohol consumption) among segments of the population, those being male smokers, male hazardous drinkers, and young adult smokers in particular,” said Sherry A McKee, associate professor of psychiatry at Yale University Medical School, and one of the study’s authors.

Lab studies with animals have also shown the link between nicotine and alcohol. Researchers found that exposing a key part of the brain involved in reward and motivation to nicotine increases the response of dopamine-emitting neurons to alcohol. In other words, those given nicotine are likely to drink more liquor.

The study was carried out by researchers from Yale, Stanford and the Roswell Park Cancer Institute.—Xinhua

Williams hungry heading towards US Open

TORONTO, 12 Aug—Even though she did not drop a set in winning her eighth title of the season at the Rogers Cup on Sunday, Serena Williams believes she can play even better heading into the US Open. “Definitely can do a lot more,” she said after her 6-2, 6-0 victory over Romania’s Sorana Cirstea in Sunday’s final. “It’s always about constantly improving and never saying I did great and I can be satisfied.” “It’s like I did great but what can I do better? What can I improve on? That’s what I always strive for.”

Williams won the French Open in June and has lost just three matches all year but the 31-year-old said her defeats to young American Sloane Stephens at the Australian Open and Germany’s Sabine Lisicki at Wimbledon had reminded her she needs to manage her on-court attitude. “That could improve,” she said. “I get so intense and so emotionally charged, and I want it so bad that sometimes it works against me.”

“Cirstea discovered first-hand just how motivated Williams is when she faced the ruthless world number one on Sunday and the unseeded Romanian said she was impressed by what she saw.” She knows when to raise her level,” Cirstea said. “She knows when it’s enough to play and when she has to step it up.”

Williams rebounded from her shock loss to Lisicki at Wimbledon by winning a tournament in Sweden but was still unhappy at the way she played so returned to Florida to continue working with her coach, Frenchman Patrick Mouratoglou, and her father.

“I was really disappointed in how I played the last month,” she said. “Even though I won Sweden, I was not happy with the way I played.” So I went home and was working with my dad a lot and just going back to the basics. I didn’t show it so much in (Toronto). Hopefully I can continue to bring that game out.”

Her victory on Sunday was Williams’ 54th career WTA singles title, elevating her to outright fifth on the all-time list. Despite her incredible record, the American said she was still suffered from nerves and expected to have more when she starts her US Open defence last this month.
