Breeding giant sea perch with remarkable success in Taninthayi Region

The coast of Myanmar, east of the Bay of Bengal, is 2832 kilometres in length. Taninthayi coastal region is the longest among three coasts of Myanmar and it is 1200 kilometres long. Such coast is adjacent to Mergui Archipelago constituted with over 800 islands. Sea fish farming is the main business of the region, accounting for over 40 per cent of the gross domestic product.

In the business of Taninthayi Region concerning off and onshore fishing industries, sea water fish and prawn breeding, soft crab breeding, sea weed culture, cold storage and shipyards are securing success in their works.

In sea water fish and prawn breeding, giant sea perch is being bred in cage. It has been started by United Myeik Co Ltd in Kyaukpha River near Yaymyitkyi Village in Myeik Township since 2004. Giant sea perch is marketable species. Breeders in Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia, Hong Kong and Taiwan are engaged in breeding of giant sea perch on a commercial scale.

Priority is being given to breeding of giant sea perch because the scientific hatching can gain higher growth rate and best genes. Giant sea perch can be bred at sea or fresh water. It can be nurtured with the use of cage or in the pond.

Cage breeding system is being practised in Thailand, Malaysia and Taiwan. At present, Myanmar can breed such fish on a commercial Latest volcanic eruption shows challenge to Indonesia from its ‘ring of fire’

JAKARTA, 13 Aug—A deadly lava flow at the weekend that killed five people and sent hundreds fleeing illustrates the formidable challenges Indonesia faces in coping with the constant threat of eruptions from the world’s largest number of active volcanoes.

Mt Rokatenda at the eastern end of the archipelago off the island of Flores, on Saturday became the fifth serious volcanic eruption in just three years.

The most deadly in recent memory was Mt Merapi, near the densely populated city of Yogyakarta in central Java, which erupted in late 2010, killing over 350 people. “Observation centres in Indonesia have equipment that can detect an increase in geophysical or geochemical activity. So, if there are increasing tremors, it might be a sign of an imminent eruption,” said Dr Agung Harijoko, associate professor of volcanology at Gajah Mada University in central Java, Indonesia’s main island.

“But what is worrying is the capability and logistics to deal with such disasters, especially outside Java. The infrastructure isn’t very good and residents need to be alerted and educated better.”

BAGHDAD, 13 Aug—At least 16 people were killed and 41 wounded on Monday in a suicide bomb attack on a crowded cafe in Balad, 80 km (50 miles) north of Baghdad, part of the worst wave of violence in Iraq in around five years.

Two roadside bombs — one planted near a playground and another near a school — also killed six people and wounded dozens, some of them children, in the town of Muqadaya, 80 km northeast of the capital.

Those blasts underlined a shift in tactics by suspected Islamist militants, who are increasingly targeting not only military checkpoints and marketplaces, but also cafes and recreational areas used by families and children.

Deadly Iraq bombings target cafe, school and playground

The latest bloodshed came as al-Qaeda claimed responsibility for weekend bombings across Iraq which killed dozens of people during Eid al-Fitr, the festive end to the Muslim fasting month of Ramadan, heightening fears of even wider sectarian slaughter.

The Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL), formed earlier this year through a merger of al-Qaeda’s affiliates in Syria and Iraq, said on jihadist forums it was behind the attacks across Baghdad and southern provinces on Saturday.

It also warned the government to stop arresting suspected militants or face more violence.

“The Islamic State deployed some of its security efforts in Baghdad and the southern province and other places to deliver a quick message,” ISIL said, according to the SITE Monitoring group, which tracks jihadist websites.

Bombs ripped through markets, shopping streets and parks late on Saturday as Iraqi families were out celebrating Eid. Nearly 80 people were killed and scores wounded, police and medical sources said.

Mursi supporters stand firm, brace for Egypt crackdown

CAIRO, 13 Aug—Islamist supporters of deposed President Mohamed Mursi refused to abandon their protest camps in Cairo on Monday and said they would fend off any police crackdown with sticks, stones and their faith.

By nightfall, though, the streets of the capital were relatively quiet as the security forces held back from any action despite warnings on Sunday that they were ready to dismantle the camps. Foreign Minister Nabil Fahmy said every effort was being made to resolve the situation through dialogue.

In a political development, the Nour Party said it could join the assembly writing a new constitution for the country, adding Islamist support to the military’s political transition plan following its overthrow of Mursi last month.

Nour is Egypt’s second largest Islamist party after Mursi’s Muslim Brotherhood.

The crisis brought on by the removal of the Arab nation’s first freely elected president is now focused on the protest camps, where thousands of his supporters are demanding his reinstatement.

At the al-Nahda camp, centered round a traffic circle and extending down a palm tree-lined boulevard next to the Cairo zoo, the mood was solemn but not fearful.

Asked about the threat of a crackdown, Ahmed Shargawy, a 23-year-old translator, said: “They said that 15 days ago too. They always say they are going to finish it.”

A block away, half a dozen armoured troop carriers and a few squads of soldiers were positioned outside a police station, but they did not look like part of a strike force ready to move.

The authorities are keen to end the protests but they held off from acting over the Eid al-Fitr holiday after the Muslim fasting month of Ramadan. The holiday ended on Sunday.

A security source said the delay was also because crowds had swelled the camps after reports of an imminent crackdown.

Army chief General Abdel Fattah al-Sisi is under pressure from hardline officers to end the sit-ins, security sources say. But Western and Arab envoys and some senior Egyptian government members have pressed the army to avoid using force.

Fahmy said the right to peaceful protest would be guaranteed. But he suggested there was a limit to the government’s patience.

“It is not reasonable for any democratic government to have to accept sit-ins where violence is being used and the security of citizens and the country is being threatened,” state news agency MENA quoted him as saying.

Taleban group warns Pakistani government against executions

ISLAMABAD, 13 Aug—Punjabi Taleban have warned Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif’s government of revenge if it executes convicted militants as scheduled.

“The executions would be regarded as a declaration of war (on the Pakistani Taleban) by Pakistan Muslim League (N) and the party will have to pay its price,” said a letter the group sent to media organizations.

The letter asked both the ruling Pakistan Muslim League (N) and the Tehreek-e-Insaf party of Imran Khan to be wary of conspiracies with pro-India or pro-United States forces and not to become a part of the war on terror.

Punjabi Taleban is a powerful component of Tehreek-e-Taleban Pakistan with a sizeable following in southern Punjab.

The Pakistan Peoples Party government imposed a moratorium on executions in 2008 through an executive order, but it lapsed with the ouster of the government in general elections in May.

California billionaire lifts lid on 'Hyperloop' futuristic transport

SAN FRANCISCO, 13 Aug — Billionaire US entrepreneur Elon Musk unveiled plans on Monday for a futuristic "Hyperloop" transportation system to whisk passengers between San Francisco and Los Angeles in under half an hour.

The highly anticipated announcement put to rest some of the questions surrounding the ambitious project, which the Tesla Motors Inc founder and CEO has hinted at for months but declined to discuss in detail. Musk said the Hyperloop would cost less than $6 billion in total and could transport 7.4 million people each year.

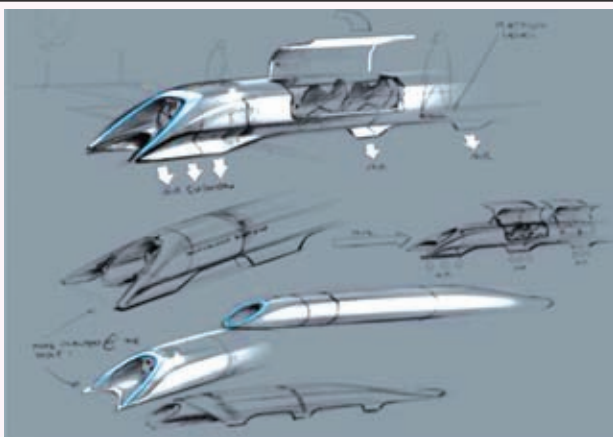

He said it would take 7-10 years for the project to be completed.

The solar-powered system, which Musk previously described as a cross between a Concorde, rail gun and air-hockey table, would shoot as many as 28 passengers in each enclosed capsule through a low-pressure steel tube at up to 800 miles per hour, according to the 57-page design plan.

Musk, who made his name as a PayPal founding member before going on to start SpaceX and Tesla, envisions capsules departing every 30 seconds and traversing the roughly 400 miles between Los Angeles and San Francisco — the busiest traffic corridor on the West Coast — along an elevated tube erected along the I-5 interstate highway.

The capsules ride a cushion of air blasted from "skis" beneath, propelled via a magnetic linear accelerator. Major questions remain, notably whether the California state government will ever approve the massive project, and whether any private companies are willing to step in and build it. The design remains theoretical and has yet to be tested in the field. Musk has said he is too busy running electric car company Tesla and rocket manufacturer SpaceX to build the Hyperloop himself. He said the design plans were open-source, meaning others can build on them. On Monday, however, he told reporters on a conference call he could kick off the project. "I've come around a little bit on my thinking here," he said. "Maybe I could do the beginning bit... and then hand it over to somebody else," he said.

He said he would be willing to put some of his personal fortune toward the project but stressed that building the Hyperloop was a low priority for him as he continues to focus primarily on SpaceX and Tesla.

He also asked the public for help improving the design. Corporations have resorted in the past to public assistance on their products. In 2009, Netflix Inc awarded a cash prize to a team that succeeded in improving by 10 percent the accuracy of its system for movie recommendations.

Facebook plans to buy voice recognition app maker

SAN FRANCISCO, 13 Aug — Facebook Inc plans to buy the maker of a speech recognition and language translation app, providing technology that could bolster the social networking company's mobile efforts.

Facebook did not disclose the financial terms of its deal for Pittsburgh-based Mobile Technologies. Facebook Management Director Tom Stocky said in a blog post on Monday, "Voice technology has become an increasingly important way for people to navigate mobile devices and the web."

The deal comes a week after Motorola, which is owned by Facebook rival Google Inc, unveiled its Moto X phone which has built-in voice recognition capabilities. Apple Inc's Siri feature, which functions as a personal assistant for iPhones, also uses voice recognition.

Mobile Technologies, founded in 2001, was the maker of the free Jibbigo Translator mobile app that automatically translates speech from more than 20 languages.—Reuters

US horse association will be ordered to allow clones on registry

NEW YORK, 13 Aug — A US horse association soon will be required to add cloned horses and their offspring to its prestigious registry, a federal judge in Texas ruled on Monday. The decision could encourage cloning and open the way for the animals to participate in lucrative horse races. US District Court Judge Mary Lou Robinson said she will sign an order requiring the American Quarter Horse Association to begin allowing cloned animals to be placed on its registry, according to the organization.

Two Texas breeders, rancher Jason Abraham and veterinarian Gregg Veneklasen, sued the American Quarter Horse Association last year, asserting the group was operating a monopoly by excluding clones. A jury last month ruled that the horse association violated anti-monopoly laws by banning cloned animals. The judge did not rule on the plaintiffs' request for an award of nearly $900,000 in attorney fees, according to the horse association. No other horse breeding registry allows cloned animals, although the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association allows cloned horses to compete in rodeos.

Some quarter horse owners and breeders have complained that cloned animals have an unfair advantage because they are selected according to superior genetic characteristics.—Reuters

Neandertals may invent "first specialized bone tools" in Europe

WASHINGTON, 13 Aug — Researchers from Germany and the Netherlands on Monday reported the discovery of the oldest specialized bone tools in Europe at sites where Neandertals, a dead-end species in human evolution, lived some 50,000 years ago.

The findings, described in the US journal of Pro- ceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, suggest that Neandertals, who lived during the ice age, may have invented the first specialized bone tools in Europe and passed their know-how on to the ancestors of modern humans.

The species is named after Neandertal, the location in Germany where it was first discovered. Researchers led by Shannon McPherron of the Max Planck Institute for Evolutionary Anthropology, unearthed three fragments of the four bone tools at the Neandertal site of Abri Peyrony in southwest France. A second group, led by Marie Soressi at the Leiden University, found a larger, more complete tool at a neighbouring Neandertal site called Pech-de-l'AzeI.

The researchers said the tools called lissoirs or smoothers are shaped from deer ribs and are similar to a tool type well known from later modern human sites and still in use today by high-end leather workers.

The implements have a polished tip that, when pushed against a hide, creates softer, burnished and more water resistant leather, they said.

"For now the bone tools from these two sites are one of the better pieces of evidence we have for Neandertals developing on their own a technology previously associated only with modern humans," McPherron said in a statement.

US sets up intelligence surveillance technology review body

WASHINGTON, 13 Aug — The Obama administration on Monday launched a formal review of its electronic intelligence gathering that has come under widespread criticism since leaks by a former spy agency contractor. The Review Group on Intelligence and Communications Technologies will examine the technical and policy issues that arise from rapid advances in global telecommunications, the White House said in a statement. The group will assess whether US data collection "optimally protects our national security and advances our foreign policy while appropriately accounting for other policy considerations, such as the risk of unauthorized disclosure and our need to maintain the public trust," the statement said. The high-level group of outside experts has 60 days to deliver its interim findings. A final report and recommendations are due on 15 December.

A separate statement by Director of National Intelligence James Clapper confirmed the review. Neither the White House nor Clapper released details on the size or composition of the panel. In a news conference at the White House on Friday, President Barack Obama vowed to improve oversight of surveillance and restore public trust in the government's programmes. US FDA approves GlaxoSmithKline's HIV drug Tivicay

WASHINGTON, 13 Aug — The US Food and Drug Administration said on Monday it has approved GlaxoSmithKline Plc's drug Tivicay to treat the most common strain of HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. The once-daily drug, known generically as dolutegravir, belongs to a novel class known as integrase inhibitors that block the virus from entering cells. Tivicay is owned by ViiV Healthcare, an HIV joint venture between GSK, Pfizer Inc and Shionogi & Co Ltd in which GSK is the largest shareholder, with a 76.5 percent stake. Analysts on average expect sales of the drug to reach about $900 million by 2017, according to six analysts polled by Thomson Reuters. Tivicay can be used to treat infected adults who have been treated with other drugs or are new to treatment.

The FDA also approved the drug for use in children aged 12 years and over, who weigh at least 40 kg (88 lbs) and who have not received treatment with a drug that has

Eyes may hold clues to stroke risk

WASHINGTON, 13 Aug — Eyes may someday be used to assess if you're more likely to develop a stroke, researchers reported Monday in the American Heart Association journal Hypertension. Researchers from the National University of Singapore tracked stroke occurrence for an average 13 years in 2,907 patients with high blood pressure who had not previously experienced a stroke. At the start of the study, each participant had photographs taken of the retina, the light-sensitive layer of cells at the back of the eyeball. Damage to the retinal blood vessels attributed to hypertension, called hypertensive retinopathy, evident on the photographs was scored as none, mild, moderate or severe.

During the follow-up, 146 participants experienced a stroke caused by a blood clot and 15 by bleeding in the brain. After adjusting for several stroke risk factors such as age, sex, race, cholesterol levels, blood sugar, body mass index, smoking and blood pressure readings, the researchers found the risk of stroke was 35 percent higher in those with mild hypertensive retinopathy and 137 percent higher in those with moderate or severe hypertensive retinopathy.

Even in patients on medication and achieving good blood pressure control, the risk of a blood clot was 96 percent higher in those with mild hypertensive retinopathy and 198 percent higher in those with moderate or severe hypertensive retinopathy, they said. "The retina provides information on the status of blood vessels in the brain," said Mohammad Kamran Ikram, lead author of the study and assistant professor in the Singapore Eye Research Institute at the National University of Singapore. "Retinal imaging is a non-invasive and cheap way of examining the blood vessels of the retina."

Worldwide, high blood pressure is the single most important risk factor for stroke. However, it's still not possible to predict which high blood pressure patients are most likely to develop a stroke.—Xinhua

Kids' chronic stomach pain tied to anxiety disorders

NEW YORK, 13 Aug — Children with chronic or recurring stomach pain without a clear medical explanation were also more likely to have an anxiety disorder than those without stomach problems, in a new study. By the time kids with stomach pain reached age 20, just over half had symptoms of an anxiety disorder at some point, most often social anxiety, researchers found. Anxiety tended to start in early childhood, around the same time as the chronic stomach problems.

Past studies suggest between eight and 25 percent of all youth have chronic stomach pain, researchers noted. When there's no clear medical cause for the pain — such as inflammatory bowel disease or celiac disease — it's known as functional abdominal pain. "It's very prevalent, and it's one of the most common reasons that children and adolescents end up in their pediatrician's office. It's one of the most common reasons kids are missing school," said Dr Eva Szigethy, head of the Medical Coping Clinic at the Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh Inflammatory Bowel Disease Centre. One small study of children with that type of pain found they were at a higher than average risk of anxiety disorders as young adults. To build on those findings, Lynn Walker from the Vanderbilt University School of Medicine in Nashville, Tennessee, and her colleagues followed 332 children who visited a doctor for unexplained stomach pain between age eight and 17.—Reuters

Machinists top Teamsters in vote to represent US Air mechanics

ATLANTA, 13 Aug — The machinists union on Monday won an election to represent nearly 5,000 US Airways Group (LCC.N) mechanics, beating back an attempt by the Teamsters to gain a foothold at the carrier ahead of its merger with American Airlines.

The International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers received 1,903 votes, or 57 percent of votes counted, in the month-long election, based on certified results from the US National Mediation Board. The International Brotherhood of Teamsters garnered 1,418 votes, or less than 42 percent of ballots counted.

In a statement, the Teamsters said it hoped the US Airways workers who supported its union would be heard. The US Air mechanics have been represented by the machinists union since 1949.

"Hundreds of mechanics and related (workers) at US Airways had the courage to launch a campaign and more than 1,400 voted for change," said Bret Caldwell, communications director for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters."

They reached out to the Teamsters because they are the lowest-paid mechanics and have the lowest standards in the industry and wanted a strong alternative to their failed representation," Caldwell added in a statement.

The Teamsters made a big push this year to displace unions at both US Airways and its merger partner American. In May, it filed with the US mediation board seeking an election for mechanics at American, who are currently represented by the Transport Workers Union.

Japan confirms Kenya oil exploration project with new government

NAIROBI, 13 Aug—Japanese Economy, Trade and Industry Minister Toshimitsu Motegi said on Monday that he has confirmed with the Kenyan government that the two countries will jointly undertake oil exploration in the southwestern part of the country.

The two countries' state-owned resource developers — Japan Oil, Gas and Metals National Corp. and National Oil Corp. of Kenya — agreed in April last year to jointly conduct exploration in the Great Rift Valley region. The project was reconfirmed with the government led by President Uhuru Kenyatta, who came into power in April this year, according to Motegi.

Motegi, who met Deputy President William Ruto in Nairobi on Sunday, told Kyodo News that "it is important for Japan to secure oil interests" in Kenya eventually.

Exploration is expected to be undertaken through the fall of 2014. Japan has been requesting Japanese companies be given concessions for test drilling if an oil deposit is confirmed.

Gov't security panel to discuss Japan's response to cyberattacks

TOKYO, 13 Aug—A government panel of experts tasked with considering lifting Japan's self-imposed ban on exercising the right to collective self-defense will discuss the country's response to cyberattacks, a government source said on Monday.

The panel on the legal framework for Japan's security issues will examine whether Tokyo should exercise the right to coming to the defence of an ally in the event of international cyberattacks targeted at computer systems of the allied country, the source said.

It will also consider how Japan will deal with progress in space development, according to the source.

Japan and the United States have cooperated on space security issues in view of China's expansion of its activities in the area outside the earth's atmosphere.

Under its current interpretation of the pacifist Constitution, Japan does not permit itself to exercise the right because doing so would go beyond the self-defence allowed under the war-renouncing Article 9 of the supreme law.

Fidel Castro's role in Cuba is chiefly offstage as he turns 87

HAVANA, 13 Aug—Fidel Castro turns 87 on Tuesday, largely out of sight but not out of mind, as Cuba struggles to move on from his half-century rule and as many of his policies are reconsidered under the leadership of his younger brother Raul.

The birthday of one of Latin America's most iconic revolutionary figures has been a low key celebration in recent years. A choral concert in his honour at the Jose Marti national monument in Havana on Monday evening was the only official event planned.

Castro goes about his daily activities out of the public eye, and how much influence the retired commandante still wields is unknown. He emerges every once in a while to reassure his followers that he is very much around, frustrating those who wish he was not. "No one believes anymore that Fidel has any real influence over day-to-day policy," a western diplomat said, "but that doesn't mean he is never consulted on big questions or that when he comes out it isn't important." The government has staged just three media events this year for Castro: first, to vote in January for National Assembly deputies and chat with local reporters; then, in February, to attend the new parliament's opening session where his brother's possible successor, 53-year-old Miguel Diaz-Canel, was named first vice president, and more recently, to inaugurate a school near his home on the outskirts of Havana.

asionally published, as well as some of his writings, though far fewer than his once frequent "Reflections," on global topics.

The once-towering, broad-shouldered man is now stooped. He has trouble walking, and his famed booming oratory has softened to a near whisper. It is a transformation which brought tears to two women interviewed for this story.

Spying scandal sets back US chances for fighter jet sale to Brazil

BRASILIA, 13 Aug—US hopes of landing a coveted deal worth more than $4 billion to sell 36 fighter jets to Brazil have suffered a setback with recent revelations that the United States collected data on Brazilian Internet communications.

When US Secretary of State John Kerry sits down with Brazilian officials in Brasilia on Tuesday to prepare a state visit to the White House by President Dilma Rousseff, the sale of the warplanes will not be on the agenda, a Brazilian source said. "We cannot talk about the fighters now—You cannot give such a contract to a country that you do not trust," a high-level Brazilian government official told Reuters on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the matter.

The official said Kerry's one-day visit to Brazil will focus on restoring the trust between Washington and Brasilia that was shaken by the spying disclosures, which set off a political uproar in the largest US trade partner in South America. Last month, Brazilian newspaper O Globo published documents leaked by fugitive former National Security Agency contractor Edward Snowden that revealed US surveillance of Internet communications in Brazil and other Latin American countries.—Reuters media said. Israel's Ynet website said it was the first time Israel's Iron Dome interceptor had struck a missile fired at Eilat. The military official declined to say from where the missile had been fired. Israel briefly shut its airport in Eilat on Thursday citing threats from militants in Sinai involved in a standing confrontation with the Egyptian military.

The violence picked up after former Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, an ally of Israel, was toppled from power in 2011. It has increased again since last month's military ouster of Muslim Brotherhood leader Mohamed Mursi as Egypt's president.

Four Islamist guerrillas in Egypt's Sinai were killed on Friday by a missile strike that al-Qaeda blamed on Israel. Israel dismissed the reports saying it respected Egypt's sovereignty.

Drought and anxiety of farmers

Mandalay and Magway Regions in central Myanmar are arid zones with frequent scarcities of water. Water is as precious as gold for those living in the arid zones. Local people in those regions are at the mercy of rain which is a decisive factor for improving their socio-economic status. However, most of the local people there are at best subject to drought which brings with it misery and anxiety.

Drought that occurred recently in the southern part of Myanmar had caused damage to a vast stretch of crops such as gram, sesame, maize and cotton. Local farmers of the region who rely largely on good rain felt deeply wounded by the unusual weather. With drought, some farmers remain uncommitted to repaying agricultural loans as their cultivation drags on for weeks and later meets with failure.

The only way of taking remedial measures against the frequent drought is the construction of dams and reservoirs in those regions. Tapping underground water and extended building of irrigated systems are also another option. The full water supply for agricultural purpose could release the distress of the local farmers to a greater extent.

President U Thein Sein at a meeting held out the prospect of concrete steps to be taken for full supply of irrigated water in the remaining 30 months of government's five-year term. When the plan is successfully translated into reality, local farmers in those regions including the west areas of Meiktila District will be overcome with joy and happiness, for irrigated water is simply their lifeblood and their lifeblood is simply irrigated water.

Merkel's chief of staff says US spies did not break German law

BERLIN, 13 Aug — Angela Merkel's chief of staff said on Monday that fears of mass US spying on Germans were unfounded, hoping to end a controversy that threatened to damage the chancellor as she seeks re-election next month. Media reports of the US National Security Agency's (NSA) electronic spying operation enraged Germans and put Merkel and her officials on the defensive when pressed to explain what, if anything, they knew.

Emerging from the latest in a series of confidential hearings by a parliamentary committee, Ronald Pofalla, responsible for Germany's intelligence agencies, said talks last week in Washington and London had brought clarity and the assurances Berlin wanted. "The NSA and the British intelligence agency have assured us they uphold German law in Germany, as indeed do Germany's foreign intelligence agency and the domestic intelligence agency," Pofalla said.

In June the United States confirmed the existence of an operation code-named Prism, after ex-NSA contractor Edward Snowden revealed data mining of users of Google, Facebook, Skype and other US companies. Since June, a stream of new allegations — that the British were also spying and that German agents were in cahoots with their foreign peers — had kept public anger simmering.

"The allegation of a supposed blanket surveillance in Germany is now, after information given by the NSA, British intelligence and our intelligence forces, off the table," Pofalla said. "In Germany there are no infringements of fundamental rights by the millions, as has been continuously, falsely alleged," he added.

Pofalla said that cooperation between intelligence agencies was essential and that data acquired by German spies had stopped 3-4 attacks per week on troops in Afghanistan, and 19 attacks against German soldiers since January 2011. He added the NSA had offered to strike a "no spy deal" with the Germans, which would be explored. He did not elaborate on what such a deal might entail.

Thomas Oppermann, an opposition Social Democrat who chairs the committee, called the offer a "face-saving confession"

Venezuela's Maduro to seek decree powers in graft fight

CARACAS, 13 Aug — Venezuela's President Nicolas Maduro said on Monday he will ask for decree powers last used by his predecessor Hugo Chavez to ramp up a fight against corruption that has begun to cost him politically with supporters. Maduro, who served as Chavez's foreign minister and vice president, narrowly won an election four months ago after his socialist mentor died of cancer. He has struggled with slowing economic growth and rising inflation while also trying to impose control on the diverse coalition he inherited from Chavez. It ranges from military officers to businessmen, leftist ideologues and armed militants.

A new anti-corruption drive that Maduro launched with great fanfare has led to the arrest of some relatively senior officials from state-run businesses and institutions. But it has suffered from a widespread public perception that "big fish" with political connections have been spared. In a nationally televised speech, Maduro said he would ask the National Assembly, which is dominated by his supporters, to grant him decree powers to step up his battle to defeat graft.

"I'm going to call a national emergency in the fight against corruption, and I'm going to ask for special powers in order to change the laws," he said. "If I have to change all the laws to confront corruption, I'm going to do it."—Reuters

US eyeing Syrian opposition alliances, chemical weapons moves

TEL AVIV, 13 Aug — The United States is gaining more insight into Syria's moderate opposition but must watch carefully to determine when occasional collaboration with Islamist radicals might turn into real alliances, the top US military officer said on Monday. The comments by General Martin Dempsey, chairman of the US military's Joint Chiefs of Staff, came at the start of a trip to close US allies Israel and Jordan likely to be dominated by discussions about Syria's conflict and broader regional unrest.

Syria's Western-backed rebels have been clamoring for the United States to make good on promises to provide weapons. But the Obama administration has been slow to act because of concerns that American arms could find their way to al-Qaeda-linked fighters.

Dempsey, who did not discuss in any detail the issue of weapons in his remarks to a small group of reporters in Tel Aviv, said some amount of collaboration between moderate and extremist rebels was "unsurprising" given their shared goal to oust President Bashar

Guests saved as Florida resort building falls into sinkhole

CLERMONT, (Florida), 13 Aug — Dozens of guests at a Florida resort near Walt Disney World were safely evacuated in the middle of the night on Monday when a large sinkhole opened on the property, swallowing a three-story building.

"I was hearing popping noises and I was hearing people screaming and glass breaking. The building actually twisted and separated," Summer Bay Resort security guard Richard Shanley said. "It was like something from a movie."

Shanley was driving a golf cart on the Orlando-area resort's main boulevard when a family hailed him to say they heard popping sounds and that something was wrong.

A spokesman for the Lake County Fire Department said there were no injuries in the collapse and that resort staff responded quickly to the first signs of danger. Paul Caldwell, general manager of the 64-acre, lakeside resort, said the building collapsed almost entirely within 45 minutes, leaving only the top floor visible ground level. He estimated the sinkhole to be 100 feet (30m) wide.

Shanley, whom Caldwell called "a hero," said he saw balconies breaking. He rushed into the building and began banging on doors, using his master key to open some doors and wake people so they could get out. He said that while he was on the second floor, he felt the building sink about 20 inches and saw the ceilings collapsing. By the time Shanley was on the third floor, he said that floor's ceiling had entirely collapsed.

Shanley kept going through the building until the fire department arrived and made him leave.

SEOUL, 13 Aug—Seventy-nine South Korean victims of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki filed a suit with the Seoul District Court on Monday, seeking compensation worth 10 million won (about $8,990) for each person from the South Korean government.

The group of survivors said in a statement that the South Korean government has not taken any action since the Supreme Court ruled in 2011 that it is unconstitutional for the government not to try to arrange negotiations with the Japanese government.

“The South Korean and Japanese governments should hold talks to clarify whether responsibility for compensating (for the South Korean victims) rests with the Japanese government or had been transferred to the South Korean government,” said Choi Bong Tae, a lawyer for the plaintiffs.

Japan has maintained that all compensation issues arising from Japan’s colonial rule of the Korean Peninsula have been settled by a 1965 treaty that normalized relations.

Philippine FDA intensifies monitoring of dairy products from firm in New Zealand

MANILA, 13 Aug—The Philippine Food and Drug Administration (FDA) vowed on Monday to heighten its monitoring of three batches of whey protein concentrate (WPC80) produced in Fonterra manufacturing site in New Zealand after the product was found to contain with hazardous substance.

FDA Acting Director General Kenneth Hartigan-Go said that his office would be collecting samples in the market for testing as part of its monitoring and surveillance activities.

“All consumers are advised to buy dairy products and infant formulae that are registered with the FDA. Moreover, all consumers are hereby informed that whey protein concentrates are also found in high-nutrient food or dietary supplements for body builders.

They are advised to make sure that the products that they buy have passed FDA safety and quality evaluation,” he said.

Three batches of whey protein concentrate produced at a single Fonterra manufacturing site in New Zealand were found positive for the presence of Clostridium botulinum on 31 July, 2013.

Clostridium botulinum is a species of harmful spore-forming bacteria that produce preformed toxin in processed food products, especially when manufacturing or processing plants fail to implement proper food hygienic practices and sterilization of canned goods or any tightly sealed food products.

Ingestion of preformed toxin may result to symptoms like double vision, drooping eyelids, slurred speech, difficulty swallowing and muscle weakness that is symmetric and descends through the body and possibly death, usually due to respiratory failure.

FDA, however, assured that so far consumer products imported by local importers and distributed by Fonterra Brands (Philippines) Inc do not contain the batches of WPC80.

HANOI, 13 Aug—The extradition treaty between Vietnam and India officially took effect on Monday after the exchange of the documents ratification, the state-run news agency VNA reported.

This is an important move forward of the two countries’ law enforcement agencies, which are about to put a treaty of criminal transfer into practice, Rae said.

Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Ho Xuan Son expressed his hope that both sides will continue working closely to implement the document effectively to reinforce the traditional friendship and comprehensive cooperation for both countries’ prosperity as well as regional and global peace and stability.

The extradition treaty between Vietnam and India was signed during a visit of Vietnamese President Truong Tan Sang to India in 2011.

Fall in New Zealand's overseas visitor spending levels off

WELLINGTON, 13 Aug — Chinese visitors buoyed up a flat New Zealand tourism market as they increased their spending in the country by 24 percent in the year to the end of June, according to government figures out on Tuesday. Total visitor spending remained constant at 5.49 billion NZ dollars (4.39 billion US dollars), but the rise in Chinese visitor spending offset a large fall in spending and visitor numbers from the United Kingdom, according to the Ministry of Business, Innovation and Employment.

A record 223 million

Chinese visited New Zealand in the year to the end of June, spending a total of 645 million NZ dollars, according to the ministry's International Visitor Survey.

Australia continued to be New Zealand's largest tourism market, with Australian residents spending 1.6 billion NZ dollars in the same period. The latest survey results show the decline in international visitor spending slowing, following a 2-percent fall in the year to the end of March and a 6-percent drop in the year to the end of December 2012.—Xinhua

LOS ANGELES/NEW YORK, 13 Aug—Matt Damon's futuristic thriller "Elysium," the story of an elite space outpost locked in battle with poor invaders from a ruined Earth, won a crowded box-office race among four new films at US and Canadian theaters over the weekend. "Elysium" grabbed $30.5 million in domestic ticket sales from Friday through Sunday, according to estimates from distributor Sony Pictures. The movie added $10.9 million from 17 international markets, for a combined global opening of $41.4 million.

"Elysium" edged the Jennifer Aniston comedy "We're the Millers," which took in $26.6 million, while "Planes," a spin-off of Walt Disney Co's Pixar franchise "Cars," took off with $22.5 million at domestic theaters, finishing in third. The other newcomer, fantasy movie "Percy Jackson: Sea of Monsters," landed fourth with $14.6 million. Effects-filled action movie "Elysium" came in at the low end of pre-weekend forecasts for a debut in the low $30 million range. The movie portrays two distinct worlds in the year 2154—a diseased and overpopulated

Earth and Elysium, a space station where the elite live.

Damon stars as Max, a blue-collar worker with a criminal past who needs medicine from Elysium to survive. Jodie Foster plays the Elysium defence secretary bent on keeping Max and all other illegal immigrants out. The $115 million production was produced and financed by Media Rights Capital. The movie was distributed by Sony, which stumbled earlier this summer with big-budget releases "After Earth" and "White House Down," although its other summer releases have fared better.—Reuters

Actress Lea Michele

NEW YORK, 13 Aug—Actress Lea Michele, in her first public appearance since the death of her boyfriend and cast mate Cory Monteith, dedicated her Teen Choice Award on Sunday in Los Angeles to the actor who died of an accidental drug and alcohol overdose last month.

With tears in her eyes and her hand on her chest, Michele, 26, thanked fans for the best actress in a TV comedy award for her role as Rachel Berry in the musical series "Glee" and for their support in dealing with Monteith's death.

"He was very special to me and also to the world, and we were very lucky to witness his incredible talent, his handsome smile and his beautiful, beautiful heart," she told the audience at the Gibson Amphitheatre.

Monteith, 31, was found dead in a Vancouver hotel room on 13 July. The actor, who played high school athlete turned glee club singer Finn Hudson in the Fox musical comedy, had struggled with substance abuse and was in rehab in April.

Dufner's Oak Hill win underlines golf's depth in strength

ROCHESTER, (New York), 13 Aug—'Ordinary looking' Jason Dufner struck a chord with club players everywhere while also underscoring the extraordinary depth in the modern game with his impressive victory at the PGA Championship on Sunday. With his characteristic pre-swing waggle and an almost disinterested demeanor, the American does not fit the mould of a golfing superstar yet proved to be the best player on the planet at Oak Hill with a brilliant display of ball-striking.

Known for his unflappable and ultra-laidback persona, Dufner seized control of the tournament by firing a record-tying seven-under-par 63 in Friday's second round, then came from a stroke back after 54 holes to claim his first major title by two shots. Dufner, who plays golf with a wad of snuff inserted inside his lower lip, was ranked 21st in the world at the start of the week and had only two top-10s in 17 starts on the 2013 PGA Tour, though both came in big events with ties for fourth at the US Open and also at the elite WGC-Bridgestone Invitational.

Undoubtedly his agonizing experience of losing the 2011 PGA Championship in a playoff to good friend Keegan Bradley, after letting slip a late five-stroke lead, helped him on Sunday but Dufner never felt he truly belonged in the select group of major winners until his breakthrough at Oak Hill Country Club.

Warriors-bound Nedovic targets Euro success

BELGRADE, 13 Aug—Serbian Nemanja Nedovic is thrilled to be heading to the NBA with the Golden State Warriors but says he is first focused on bringing glory to his national team in next month's European Championship. The Warriors plucked the versatile guard from relative obscurity in the first round of the 2013 NBA draft and will be closely watching his progress at the tournament in Slovenia.

Nedovic, who can play either as a point guard or shooting guard, spent four years at Red Star Belgrade until 2012 before he caught the eye of NBA scouts in one season with Lithuanians Lietuvos Rytas, even though his team made little impact in the Euroleague. "Being drafted to the NBA in the first round is the best thing that's happened to me and it has given me a tremendous confidence boost," Nedovic told Reuters in an interview. "I am overjoyed and looking forward to my first season with the Warriors, but right now I am completely focused on the national team," he added after Serbia's 91-66 rout of Slovenia on Sunday in the final of a four-nation tournament.

The 22-year-old's talents again came to the fore in that win which was a build-up to the 24-team European Championship where the Serbians will hope to finish in the top eight and qualify for the 2014 World Championship in Spain. "It was very important to win this tournament and it will be an incentive to keep working hard in order to peak in time for the European Championship," Nedovic said after scoring a game-high 20 points, garnished with several spectacular assists and iron-clad defence.

"The Slovenians will be fired up in front of their noisy home fans at Eurobasket 2013, while we have switched off regarding expectations where we might finish although the primary objective is to reach next year's World Championship in Spain." Nedovic made his Serbia debut last year in the European Championship qualifiers when the 2009 runners-up struggled for long spells before squeezing through with a last-gasp win over Israel.—Reuters

The 31-year-old had said she will end her illustrious career after the competition at the Luzhniki stadium, although she rowed back from that after qualifying by saying her mind was not yet made up. While Isinbayeva contemplates retirement, the precocious Kirani James, 20, is set to continue his global domination of the men's 400 metres by adding a second world gold. The Olympic champion has American LaShawn Merritt — the only man to beat the Grenadian this season — to contend with.

In the absence of injured Olympic champion and world record holder David Rudisha, the men's 800m title is wide open, although Ethiopia's 19-year-old 2012 world indoor winner Mohammed Aman has enjoyed an impressive season. Americans Duane Solomon and Nick Symmonds, along with Saudi Arabia's Abdulaziz Ladan Mohammed should provide the main threat to the African. The women's 3000m steeplechase final has also been robbed of a marquee name after Russia's Olympic and world champion Yuliya Zaripova of Russia had to withdraw after suffering a season-ending leg injury in training.

Ethiopian duo Sofia Assefa and Hiwot Ayalew, Kenya's African record-holder Milcah Chemos Cheywa — the last woman to beat Zaripova — and compatriot Lydia Chepkurui should fight it out for the medals. Two air force men killed in small plane crash in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, 13 Aug—Two Brazilian Air Force officers were killed on Monday in the crash of a small plane in Pirassununga, Sao Paulo state, according to local authorities. The victims, captains Joao Igor Silva Pivovar and Fabrico Carvalho, were the pilot and copilot of a Smoke Squadron plane which crashed onto the ground during training, authorities informed.

The accident took place near the country's Air Force Academy. The two captains tried to eject from the plane, an A-29 Super Tucano model, but did not manage to escape successfully, the authorities said.

The Smoke Squadron is a famous Air Force demonstration squadron which performs air shows all over Brazil and abroad. The A-29 Super Tucano was manufactured by Brazilian aircraft maker Embraer and is also used in border patrol in Brazil. The Smoke Squadron was founded in 1952 and rarely registers any lethal accidents. The Air Force is investigating the cause of the accident.—Xinhua

Masterful Fraser-Pryce completes Jamaican double

Moscow, 13 Aug—Shelly-Ann Fraser-Pryce obliterated the field as Jamaica completed a 100 metres double at the world championships on Monday and showed it still has the edge in the battle of sprinting's superpowers. The United States had four athletes in the final for the first time, including defending champion Carmelita Jeter, but they had no answer to Fraser-Pryce who took gold with the biggest winning margin in world championships history.

It was a second world title for the 26-year-old, who also won in 2009, and followed hot on the heels of compatriot Usain Bolt's victory in the men's final on Sunday. Fraser-Pryce's lightning-quick run on the bright blue track at the Luzhniki stadium was Boltesque in its dominance as she set a world leading time of 10.71 seconds and finished streets ahead of her rivals. Murielle Ahoure was second in 10.93 to give Ivory Coast its first world championship medal and she became the first African woman to finish on the podium in a sprint.

Jeter was the best-placed American in third with 10.94. "I was just focused on getting that start," Fraser-Pryce, who is renowned for her devastating ability out of the blocks, told a news conference. "I knew I had to do that to actually do well and when I crossed the line I didn't know I was that far ahead. I was just completely in that zone and trying to do my best I wasn't focused on anybody else." From the moment twice Olympic champion Fraser-Pryce shot out of the blocks there was only going to be one winner.

The Jamaican, whose compact frame gives little indication of the power she can produce, was ahead in the first few strides and her rivals were left watching the soles of her bright pink spikes and matching hair extensions as she powered to the line. "It was an amazingly fast race and I am still pleased to be on the podium," said Jeter. "This has to be a medal that means a little more than my others because this has been a tough year," added the 33-year-old who has struggled with injury. Jamaica has missed out on just one global 100 metres title since the 2008 Olympics and that was Jeter's world victory in Daegu two years ago.

Bolt made sure the Jamaicans drew first blood in Moscow against their US rivals when he beat Justin Gatlin in the men's final. "I was so happy for Usain and (bronze medallist) Nesta (Carter) but at the same time that was their day and I was excited for them," Fraser-Pryce said of her giant compatriot. "But I was just focused on what I needed to do," she added. "I've been training for this and mentally I was prepared."
