Ancient monastery, ordination nearing bank erosion in Maubin Township

YANGON, 16 Aug—Due to bank erosion, an ancient monastery and ordination halls caused nearing collapse in East Takapaw Village in Maubin Township of Ayeyawady Region.

The monastery and ordination halls are over 100 years old. Despite preserving the monasteries and ordination halls in successive eras, the local people now face the danger of collapse, said School Board of Trustees U Bo Bo Win.

In our Maubin District, the monasteries and ordination halls of over 100 years old are very rare. Since its establishment, the monastery was located on five acres of land but now it is on about two acres of land. The monastery is just 30 feet to the river bank. In this region, bank erosion causes about 30 feet wide landslide,” he said.

U Kesarasiri of Abaya Wihara Monastery remarked, “I am 88 years old and 68 years vasa. In my novicehood, the monastery was over 4000 feet far from the bank. Now it is adjacent to the bank. I would like to request the local authorities to preserve and maintain the monastery and ordination for their durability.”

Members of the monastery board of trustees said, “There are one monastery, one ordination hall, two-storey Dhammayon and one pagoda. The construction is going on. Wellwishers are ready to make donations. But, we suspend our works due to bank erosion.”

Local people said, “We vow to preserve the monastery with outmost efforts as it is significant one. However, the cost will be high. We set a fund for prevention against flood. But, the fund from the village will be less than the estimated. The preservation of the State for the monastery and ordination will be better.”—Kyemon-Ko Thet (Botahtaung)

Biden to visit Japan in fall for talks with Abe

TOKYO, 16 Aug — US Vice President Joseph Biden is likely to visit Japan in the fall for a meeting with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, a Japanese government source said on Friday.

Tokyo and Washington are eying October or November for the trip, the source said.

During a meeting meant to signal the robustness of the security alliance between the two countries, Biden and Abe are expected to compare notes on developments in the Asia-Pacific region, including China and North Korea.

The plan comes as China flexes its muscles to push territorial claims to Japanese-administered islands in the East China Sea called Senkaku in Japan and Diaoyu in China, and North Korea continues down the path toward developing nuclear weapons.

Biden is expected to menting his plans to patch up relations with the world and ease international sanctions.

The parliament debated each of the 18 nominees over the course of four days, rejecting three minor candidates.

Rouhani's nominee for education minister, Mohammad Ali Najafi was turned down after coming under attack by conservative members of parliament for having ties to opposition leaders held under house arrest.

The proposed minister of science and Rouhani's nominee to head the ministry of sport were also rejected.

But parliament approved Rouhani's choice of foreign minister, Mohammad Javad Zarif, a US-educated former UN Ambassador who has been at the centre of several rounds of secret negotiations to try to overcome decades of estrangement between Washington and Teheran.

Rouhani, who took office on 3 August, has promised to repair Iran's image abroad after eight years of confrontation under his predecessor Mahmoud Ahmadinejad.

Parliament also approved Bijan Zanganeh, a former oil minister under the reformist president Mohammad Khatami, to return to that post where he will be charged with the task of increasing Iran's oil production and exports.

US walks careful Egypt line; some see mixed messages

WASHINGTON, 16 Aug — By cancelling a military exercise with Egypt but not cutting off US aid, President Barack Obama sought on Thursday to show his displeasure at the Egyptian army's violent crackdown on protesters — without totally alienating the generals.

Obama announced the move a day after at least 623 people were killed, according to Egypt's Health Ministry, as troops and police used force against protesters seeking the return of those objectives and weakens US credibility, after repeated calls by the US administration for Egyptian authorities to avoid bloodshed have been disregarded," members of the Working Group on Egypt said in a statement.

Former US officials said Obama's decision reflected his balancing act since the army ousted Egypt's first freely elected president, an action the United States appeared to tacitly condone by its deci-Critics argued that Obama had done too little, too late and that his administration has repeatedly sent mixed messages — among them its failure to brand Mursi's ouster a military coup — thereby eroding its ability to influence events.

A bipartisan group of US Middle East experts said the cancelling of the military exercise was necessary but fell far short of what is needed to meet US objectives in Egypt

The White House has tried to appear to support democracy in Egypt, while protecting the US strategic interest in Egypt's stability, its peace treaty with Israel and its military cooperation with the United States, including privileged access to the Suez Canal.

In his desire to maintain some links to Egypt's generals, Obama on Thursday cancelled the biennial Bright Star military exercise with Egypt rather than cut the $1.55 billion in aid - including $1.3 billion to the military — that Washington gives Cairo annually.

59 injured after explosion at firework festival in Kyoto

KYOTO, 16 Aug — Fifty-nine people were taken to hospital on Thursday evening after an explosion at a row of stalls at a summer firework festival in Kyoto with 19 of them having suffered heavy injuries such as burns over their entire bodies, firefighters said.

Five were particularly in serious condition including a 10-year-old boy who was being treated in an intensive care unit, they said. The blast occurred at around 7:30 pm just before the start of the fireworks in the main viewing venue on the bank of the Yura River in Fukuchiyama, across the firework launch site, according to the authorities.

The annual festival, which last year drew around 110,000 spectators not only from Kyoto but also from Osaka and Hyogo prefectures, was cancelled with no fireworks lighted. The local chamber of commerce, which organized the fireworks, said propane gas cylinders used at stalls may have exploded. Local residents said they had heard more than one explosion.

The firefighters said flames of fire and billows of smoke were seen and three stalls caught fire and were knocked down. They were among the around 350 stalls selling foods and goods at the festival venue, they said. "I heard a bang and then saw a billow of smoke," said a 37-year-old man of the chamber of commerce who was serving as a volunteer around 200 meters away from the site of the blast.

A 28-year-old woman from Ritto, Shiga Prefecture said, "It was a mess with blue sheets used by festival goers scattered at the viewing site, drawing a crowd of curious people while other people were leaving the venue."

About 6,000 fireworks were scheduled to be displayed during the 90-minute festival starting at 7:30 pm, according to the official Website of the festival.—Kyodo News

NASA calls off attempts to fix Kepler space telescope

An artist's composite of the Kepler telescope is seen in this undated NASA handout image. Two of Kepler's four gyroscope-like reaction wheels, which are used to precisely point the spacecraft, have failed and NASA reported on 15 Aug, 2013, that it is ending attempts to fully recover the spacecraft.—REUTERS

CAPE CANAVERAL, (Florida), 16 Aug—The Kepler space telescope's planet-hunting days are over because its broken positioning system cannot be fixed, NASA officials said on Thursday. The observatory was launched in 2009 to hunt for Earth-sized worlds suitably positioned around their parent stars for liquid water, a condition believed to be necessary for life.

The telescope was sidelined in May when it lost use of equipment needed to keep its gaze steady on about 100,000 target stars. Kepler worked by finding slight dips in the amount of light coming from a star, a telltale sign of a planet passing by, relative to the telescope's line of sight. The technique requires precise pointing, which was accomplished by three spinning wheels to control the telescope's motion up and down, left and right and side to side. Kepler also had a fourth spare wheel, but that was put into service after a previous wheel failure in July 2012. Engineers began tests last month to see if either jammed wheel could be recovered, but the efforts ultimately proved fruitless, the US space agency said.

"The wheels are sufficiently damaged that they cannot sustain spacecraft pointing control for any extended period of time," Charles Sobeck, Kepler deputy project manager at NASA's Ames Research Centre in Moffett Field, California, told reporters during a conference call on Thursday. Scientists may be able to use the telescope for projects that do not require such precise positioning, such as looking for asteroids, comets and other celestial objects. NASA is soliciting proposals for alternative Kepler missions and expects to make a decision early next year on whether to continue funding the telescope's operation. The Kepler project's budget currently is about $18 million a year.

So far, the telescope has found 135 planets beyond the solar system and another 3,500 possible planets that are awaiting confirmation, according to scientists. While some planets are even smaller than Earth and others have been found in potentially life-friendly orbits, so far a perfect Earth analog has yet to be identified. An Earth-sized planet orbiting a star about the same distance that Earth is from the sun would take a year to pass under Kepler's gaze. Scientists want three or four years' worth of data to be sure a change in the amount of light coming from a target star is due to a passing planet and not an eclipsing neighbour star, a stellar flare or some other phenomena.

Scientists have about two years of archived Kepler data yet been analyzed. "I'm confident that we are going to find what we expected ... but we're going to have to work hard for the next couple of years," said Kepler lead scientist William Borucki, also with Ames, referring to an Earth-sized planet hospitable to life. Kepler flies about 40 million miles (64 million km) from Earth, too far away for a robotic or astronaut-led repair mission.

Introducing the olinguito, the newest mammal discovery

WASHINGTON, 16 Aug—The long-tailed, orange-furred, big-eyed olinguito—said to resemble a cross between a house cat and a teddy bear—is the newest mammal and the first carnivore discovered in the Americas in 35 years, the Smithsonian Institution announced on Thursday.

Native to the high, misty cloud forests of Colombia and Ecuador, the olinguito is the smallest member of the raccoon family, according to Kristofer Helgen, a Smithsonian scientist who recognized it as a distinct species 10 years ago. The "aha" moment occurred not in a South American forest but at Chicago's Field Museum, the creature's discoverer, Helgen said at a news briefing.

"I pulled out a drawer ... and said 'Wow,'" Helgen recalled of his first view of a long-dead 20th century specimen, which had been identified as a related species, the olingo. "It was like nothing I'd ever seen before." Helgen said the teeth and skull of the specimen were much different from those of an olingo, which is larger and has more prominent ears than the olinguito. He said he could have published this finding in a scientific journal then, but in the interest of being thorough, he sought out colleagues to confirm the existence of the new species in its natural habitat.

Olinguitos are considered carnivores, even though they eat mostly fruit, Helgen said. These creatures have teeth that look fully capable of eating meat, he added. They have thick, woolly fur that is brighter than that of the more drab-colored Olingos. Olinguitos are about 2.5 feet (.76 metre) long and weigh about 2 pounds (900 grams). Males and females are about the same size, and females raise a single baby at a time, the scientists said.

Olinguitos are hard to spot in the cloud forests of the northern Andes, which are thickly wooded and often shrouded in fog or mist with elevations of 5,000 to 9,000 feet above sea level. Largely nocturnal, they spend most of their time in the forest canopy and are adept at jumping from tree to tree. Helgen and his team closely observed the animal's habits and environment. Andean cloud forests are considered unique ecosystems because of the variety of species they support, but they are being deforested to make way for agriculture, urbanization and the illegal drug trade.

Hackers use new tactic to attack US media sites

NEW YORK, 16 Aug—Hackers promoting the Syrian Electronic Army simultaneously targeted websites belonging to CNN, Time and the Washington Post on Thursday by breaching Outbrain, a firm which publishes content recommendations on those sites. That resulted in some WashingtonPost.com and Time.com customers being redirected to the website of the Syrian Electronic Army when they clicked on the content from Outbrain, said Outbrain Vice President Lisa LaCour.

The CNN International site briefly displayed a headline that said "Hacked by SEA," she said. The Syrian Electronic Army is an online group that supports Syrian President Bashar al-Assad and has been linked to several high profile attacks. They include one on the Associated Press' Twitter feed in which a bogus message was sent out about explosions at the White House.

The latest attacks were significant because the hackers simultaneously targeted several sites by breaching a single supplier whose content is published on multiple platforms. In previous campaigns linked to the Syrian Electronic Army, hackers have breached networks using similar tactics. But in those cases emails were sent to employees of a single specific media outlet they were targeting, which made preparations for the attacks more labour intensive. Outbrain, which posts content on a large number of prominent news sites, took down its entire network at about 11 am EDT on Thursday, before the hackers could do any more damage, LaCour said. The company's technicians, who are based in Israel, cleaned up the network and planned to restore service late on Thursday, she said. Outbrain said the hackers got in after sending a phishing email to all company employees on Wednesday that purported to be from the CEO. An employee provided login credentials in response to that email and then the hackers were able to get other credentials for accessing internal systems, the company said.

Chris Wysopal, chief technology officer for software security firm Veracode, said he believes that hackers will increasingly choose to go after third-party providers because their security is likely to be more lax than that of their customers. "As the Internet becomes more interconnected, this risk is going to increase," he said.—Reuters

Monsoon rains 4 per cent below average in past week

NEW DELHI, 16 Aug— Monsoon rains were below average in the week ended on 14 August, data from the weather office showed on Thursday, easing concerns about damage to crops such as soybeans and cotton. Rainfall was 4 per cent below average, compared to 1 per cent below the previous week.

The June to September rains were very heavy in the first half of the season, which initially helped sowing but later raised worries of crop damage. “The monsoon rains have now eased in most parts of central and south India,” said a weather official.

India, one of the world’s biggest producers and consumers of farm commodities, is heavily reliant on the annual monsoon for its huge harvests of rice, sugar and cash crops like cotton. The monsoon, crucial for 55 per cent of Indian farmland that does not have irrigation, was the heaviest in nearly two decades during the first half of the season with the fastest ever coverage of the country — almost a month ahead of schedule.

The ample rains could mean higher rural incomes in the world’s second most populous country, improving sales of everything from cars and gold to refrigerators. Finance Minister P Chidambaram has already said the monsoon could help agricultural growth and spur the overall economy.

Metformin tied to longer prostate cancer survival

NEW YORK, 16 Aug— In older men with diabetes and prostate cancer, taking the diabetes drug metformin was linked to a lower risk of death, according to a new study. Researchers found metformin’s apparent benefits accumulated over time. Among men with diabetes in Ontario, Canada, who were over age 66, the study found a 24 percent reduction in prostate-cancer mortality for every six months of metformin use, and a similarly lower risk of death from any cause for the first six months.

“Among diabetic men with prostate cancer metformin should be considered the drug of choice, not only for diabetes control but possibly to improve prostate cancer outcomes,” Dr David Margel, a urologist at Rabin Medical Centre, Petah Tikva, Israel, and lead author of the study, told Reuters Health in an email. The World Health Organization estimates that prostate cancer is among the top five leading causes of cancer death worldwide. Approximately 1 in 7 men in the US will be diagnosed with prostate cancer at some point in their lives, with roughly two-thirds of these cases found between the ages of 55-74. According to the National Cancer Institute, more than 29,000 American men will die from prostate cancer in 2013. Likewise, the World Health Organization estimates that 347 million people worldwide have diabetes, and that it will be the seventh leading cause of death by 2030.

According to the US Centres for Disease Control and Prevention, more than 25 million Americans are affected by diabetes and over one-quarter of people older than age 65 have the disease. How metformin would work in someone with prostate cancer but without diabetes is unknown, however. Margel’s research team is planning a randomized controlled trial to see if metformin also improves prostate cancer outcomes for non-diabetic men. “Metformin is cheap, safe and has minimal side effects among patients without diabetes and therefore may be an ideal drug

Rising vegetable prices to push up WPI inflation

MUMBAI, 16 Aug— Owing to rising vegetable prices and a weakening rupee, global brokerage firm Nomura has revised its average wholesale price index (WPI) forecast for FY14 to 5.7 per cent from 5 per cent earlier.

According to Nomura, higher food prices, weak domestic demand and the depreciating rupee may even drive the WPI inflation above 6 per cent in the coming months. Rising for the second consecutive month, inflation shot up to 5.79 per cent in July, driven largely by double digit rise in prices of food articles, mainly vegetables, including onion.

Inflation based on WPI stood at 4.86 per cent in June. In July 2012, it was 7.52 per cent. On 14 August, rupee closed at 61.19 against the dollar. “Core inflation rose in July, led by higher textiles, chemicals and leather products prices,” the firm said in a report in Mumbai. Vegetable price inflation jumped to 46.6 per cent in July from 16.5 per cent in June, led by a steep increase in prices of onion and potato. “This (vegetable inflation) will continue to be higher in the next month as well, considering that onion prices have continued to ascend in August,” it said.

Similarly, mineral oil price inflation shot up to 16 per cent in July from 9.6 per in June as rising global crude prices and a weak currency have resulted in oil rates jumping to an all-time high in rupee terms. This trend has persisted in August, suggesting fuel price inflation will also continue to inch higher, it said. Nomura, however, expected vegetable prices to drop later in the year.

“Vegetable prices may reverse (uptrend) and demand may remain weak, but a weak rupee and adverse base effects will continue to drive input costs higher, which is likely to drive the WPI to 6 per cent in coming months,” the Japanese brokerage said.

“We do not see demand-driven inflation as a problem. In the current demand environment, supply shocks such as rupee, commodity prices and food inflation will be the main drivers of inflation.

High food price inflation remains the key structural irritant,” it said. Nomura observed that monetary policy has been hijacked by financial stability considerations with growth-inflation dynamics taking a backseat.

Dutch hospital uses Google Glass during jaw operation

THE HAGUE, 16 Aug— Surgeons at the Dutch Radboud University hospital in Nijmegen used Google Glass during a jaw operation, allowing medical students to follow the surgery from the doctor’s perspective, it was announced on Thursday.

The aim of the experiment was to see if the eyewear had added value for students compared with traditional fixed camera observations. The hospital is enthusiastic about the results. “The quality of the images was sometimes even better than when you would use traditional over-the-shoulder-camera observations. It offers a lot of new possibilities,” Radboud press officer Marloes de Vink told Xinhua.

De Vink said another potential advantage of Google Glass is “that colleagues world-wide can watch operations via Skype in case extra advice is needed.” But according to the hospital, there was also room for improvement. The footage collected by Google Glass was sometimes jumpy as surgeons walked around. Also, strong light in the surgery room had a negative impact on image quality.

The hospital said it was the first time in Europe that Google Glass was used to take footage during operations. The hospital plans to carry out more research into potential applications of Google Glass in healthcare. The system may also be used by home nursing staff so that doctors can assess patients from a distance.—Xinhua

South African farmers use polluted water to irrigate crops

CAPE TOWN, 16 Aug— South African farmers use polluted water to irrigate their crops, putting not only the health of South Africans at risk but also the country’s reputation as a food exporting country, Timeslive reported on Thursday. River water in South Africa is too polluted to be used to irrigate crops, but farmers are unaware of this and untreated contaminated river water is commonly used in agriculture, said Timeslive, a local news outlet.

South African rivers contain levels of E.coli bacteria over 10,000 times higher than the number allowed by the World Health Organization and South Africa’s own Department of Water Affairs, according to the report. This finding was based on a research project undertaken in 2007 by the food sciences department at Stellenbosch University near Cape Town and commissioned by the National Water Research Commission.

Head of the research project Professor Trevor Britz said the situation is so bad that falling into some of the rivers in South Africa could be fatal. The trouble is, much of this river water comes into contact with the food eaten by South Africans, said the report. This river water irrigation affects crops like maize, citrus, grapes, wheat and vegetables. According to the research, human excrement was a serious pollutant in the rivers.

Britz advised consumers to be sure to clean their fruit and vegetables in sterilizing fluid before eating them. Spokespeople for the Department of Water Affairs and Department of Health both told Timeslive they have yet to closely examine the results of the report, and will respond once they have done so.

UN agencies in N Korea could run out of cash in weeks

Ghulam Isaczai, UN resident coordinator in North Korea, is interviewed by Kyodo News at the UN headquarters in New York on 15 Aug, 2013.

NEW YORK, 16 Aug—Facing a serious cash shortfall, UN agencies operating in North Korea are concerned their humanitarian work will be adversely impacted as soon as next month, North Korea's resident coordinator said on Thursday.

“For some (UN agencies) they are in desperate need (of cash), perhaps it could probably last a couple of weeks, for others maybe a couple of months, for others maybe three to four months,” Ghulam Isaczai, the UN resident coordinator in North Korea, told Kyodo News in an interview while in New York. Since the international community tightened sanctions against the country for carrying out its latest, and third, nuclear underground test in February, international agencies and diplomats working there have increasingly faced challenges in carrying out bank transactions.

“We need money and this money comes through these banks and therefore it has affected the UN system and we are now trying to find a solution working with member states to see if we can find a solution to our cash problem,” the resident coordinator explained, adding it was the first time they have faced such a cash crunch.

Senior UN officials, he said, have been in contact with the US government to raise concerns with hopes that a “humanitarian exemption” could be an option.

There are six UN organizations in North Korea, officially known as the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, which provide a range of assistance from life-saving food aid, to agricultural support and health interventions to help the most vulnerable populations.

Isaczai, who took up the post in May, explained how one agency, has “completely suspended” its operations to keep its office open and running through the next four to six months, but added that although the money is running out, the UN agencies are “not going to shut down,” as much of the assistance and supplies are procured externally.—Kyodo News

Death toll in Egypt crackdown tops 600

Supporters of ousted Egyptian President Mohammed Morsi pray at a mosque in Nasr City, Cairo, on 15 Aug, 2013, the day after clashes between security forces and protesters in various parts of the country left more than 500 people dead and over 3,700 injured. The bodies of many victims were carried to the mosque.

KYODO NEWS

CAIRO, 16 Aug—The death toll in the military crackdown on protesters in Egypt had reached 638 by Thursday night, the Egyptian health ministry said.

Clashes between security forces and protesters including supporters of ousted President Mohammed Morsi on Wednesday left about 4,000 injured, according to the ministry.

The clashes prompted the government to declare a one-month state of emergency for the entire country and impose a curfew in Cairo and elsewhere.

A total of 288 people were confirmed dead in Cairo's Nasr City district where security forces stormed camps of protesters, while 90 died at a sit-in camp near the Cairo University campus.

Amid the continuing violence in the country, the interior ministry on Thursday warned of the use of live ammunition against attacks on public facilities and security forces. Vice President and Nobel peace laureate Mohamed ElBaradei, who had opposed the forcible removal of protesters, resigned in protest. The protesters were calling for Morsi's reinstatement after the military ousted Egypt's first democratically elected president on 3 July.—Kyodo News

Flight recorders retrieved from UPS cargo jet in Alabama

BIRMINGHAM, (Alabama), 16 Aug—An initial investigation into the wreckage of the UPS cargo jet that crashed on approach to Birmingham, Alabama's airport has found no evidence of pre-impact fire or engine failure, the National Transportation Safety Board said on Thursday.

The downed plane's cockpit voice and flight data recorders were also retrieved.

The so-called black boxes will be sent to the NTSB headquarters in Washington for evaluation of possible clues about the cause of the fiery crash of the United Parcel Service Inc aircraft in which two pilots were killed, Robert Sumwalt, a senior NTSB official, told a Press conference in Birmingham.

Sumwalt said the flight data and cockpit voice recorders were covered in debris and plastic that melted in the fire and then hardened onto them. It took three hours to dig them out.

Investigators hoped to get them opened later Thursday and should know by Friday whether the data is still good.

“They weren't made to be opened. They'll have to saw into them,” Sumwalt said. “We are optimistic we will be able to obtain good data from those recorders.”

He said there was debris in the engine that was apparently sucked in when the plane clipped the trees. It was “indicative of an engine coming through trees and striking dirt,” Sumwalt said.

Sumwalt said they also would be looking at lighting and navigational issues that might be involved with the runway.

The cargo plane, an Airbus A300, clipped trees and nearly hit a house before plowing across about 200 yards of empty field well short of the Birmingham-Shuttlesworth International Airport, the NTSB has said.

The pilots of UPS flight 1354 issued no emergency or distress calls before the plane crashed and burst into flames.

UPS identified the two crew members as 58-year-old Carea Beal Jr, a resident of Matthews, North Carolina, and Shanda Fanning, 37, of Lynchburg, Tennessee.

Kevin Hiatt, president and chief executive officer of the Flight Safety Foundation, an Alexandria, Virginia-based international watchdog group, said Birmingham-Shuttlesworth can be tricky to land at because it is nestled into surrounding hills.

That is especially true of Runway 18, which the UPS jet was approaching when it crashed into a tall hill at the north end of the airport, said Hiatt. A veteran former Delta Airlines pilot, Hiatt said he had touched down on the runway many times himself.

“It is not a full instrument landing. You have to visually fly into that runway. Sometimes it takes nuance to land there. You have to realize that hill is there or you could come in too low,” Hiatt told Reuters.—Reuters

Kevin Rudd unveils special development plan for northern Australia

CANBERRA, 16 Aug—Australian Prime Minister Kevin Rudd unveiled on Thursday his party's plan to drive growth in the largely underdeveloped northern Australia.

The new plan, named Growing the North: A Plan for Northern Australia, is a three-point strategy to develop and diversify the economy of northern Australia, which straddles a vast area across North Queensland, the Northern Territory and northwest Australia.

It includes a commitment to establish a Northern Special Economic Zone focusing on the Northern Territory to encourage businesses to expand and to attract new businesses to the region.

“My personal objective for the territory is it would be great to have a company tax rate here one-third lower than that of the rest of the country,” Rudd said.

The special zone would begin from 2014 and be fully operational by 2018, when the new tax rate would kick in.

The plan also pledges to build the third stage of the Ord River irrigation scheme in Western Australia, and 20-year growth plans for northern hubs including Darwin, Cairns, Townsville and Mackay to increase trade and investment.

Expanding the Ord Irrigation Scheme Stage 3 includes 10 million AU dollars (9.1 million US dollars) to the Northern Territory government to help facilitate expansion of the scheme from its current 29,000 hectares to 43,000 hectares.

This will increase economic output in northern Australia by an estimated 150 million AU dollars (136.5 million US dollars) every year, mainly through expanded sugar production and agricultural crops.

Rudd's plan, still subject to talks with the local government and business chiefs, was labelled “catch-up politics” by Opposition Coalition leader Tony Abbott, who in June, to ridicule by the then-Labour leadership, announced a Coalition government would produce a white paper on northern Australia.

Labour said northern Australia has tremendous natural advantages. However development in the region has been held back by infrastructure shortages, high business and living costs and a lack of economic diversity.

Authentic Abhidhamma Teaching in Theravâda Buddhism

Yangon bus ride

It is not the surface of Mars and do not hope to see a NASA spacecraft making expeditions despite all those gaping holes on it. It just implies you are on the streets of Yangon, the holey commercial hub of Myanmar.

Of course you are not on the back of a galloping horse. You are just on a bus on the streets of Yangon, driving at the terrific speed which even the best Formula racing driver like Lewis Hamilton would find himself helpless with awe. Yes, such amazing driving skills, our commuter bus drivers possess and are never hesitant to demonstrate them.

Getting on a bus in the rush hour, especially in the mornings, is easier said than done. Without technique, it is almost impossible, but it is still a Hobson's choice since being late for work means deductions from your salary or less seriously long lectures from your boss. Nonetheless, commuter buses have long been a cohesive force in our social relations, no space between commuters when packed like sardines.

To take the specially-modified buses (it is quite difficult to call the exact names of hybrid reassembled buses here), you would sometimes need some acrobatic skills especially when you are over 170 cm tall. When you have a seat (though it rarely happens) and sit, your knees would lose freedom, being confined in narrow space between two rows. When you stand, a bow is a must to avoid a bump on a galloping bus.

Meanwhile, fatal road smashes have been reduced significantly over the past few months thanks to the speed-limiting measure on Yangon streets that make sure vehicles are crawling and not running on overcrowded streets during traffic peak hours. Being cost-effective, it has also contributed to job creation, providing hawkers with business opportunities at Shwegondaing Traffic Lights, Thamine Junction and some other places.

This is the rhythm of the daily life of Yangonites, and part of their heartbeats which makes them complete.

Abhidhamma is regarded as the higher and genuine teaching of Lord Buddha by Theravâda Buddhist. However, not all Theravâda Buddhist countries give priority to the Abhidhamma comparing to Suttanta and Vinaya as the Teaching of Lord Buddha except in Myanmar. The obvious reluctant of Abhidhamma teaching can be seen in the modern Buddhist scholars' writings such as David Kalupaha, a Srilankan scholar and so on. Is there not any reason behind that why only Myanmar Buddhist gives special attention to the Abhidhamma but not other countries? It is believed that Myanmar people regard Abhidhamma as higher teaching because of the following reasons: firstly, Abhidhamma teaching is difficult to understand; however, due to the guidance of the learned monks in Myanmar even the lay people can access the teaching without any difficulty. Secondly, the teaching of Abhidhamma discusses the ultimate reality, being a Buddhist, it is essential to understand the ultimate reality for those who want to be free from the suffering of birth and death. Someone might ask, whether other Buddhists want to be free from the suffering of birth and death or not? It is assumed that most of the Buddhist wants to realize Nibbâna; nevertheless, in order to be free from suffering, a Buddhist does not require to understand all the Abhidhamma teaching (or texts). In terms of higher teaching, Theravâda Buddhist regarded the Abhidhamma as noble teaching. Therefore, to understand and know the noble teaching is highly beneficial.

The interpretation of Abhidhamma differs from scholars to scholars. It is so called Abhidhamma because it explained much more detailed and analytical way which is the common interpretation from the Southern Buddhism's (Theravâda) perspective. Furthermore, the Chinese interpretation of Abhidhamma is "great dharma, peerless, excellent dharma, and the study about dharma or facing dharma" (Galmandgoda, Sumanapala, An Introduction to Theravâda Abhidhamma, 7). The following interpretations are also interpreted by the Abhidhammikas that the "Abhidharma is able to investigate and discriminate the characteristics of phenomena thoroughly". According to Vasumitra, Sarvastivadin scholar that it is expounded from the Sûtra. (Loc.cit.) In Pârûva's understanding of Abhidhamma seems to be a closer understanding of the Theravâda Abhidhamma; it is so called Abhidharma because it is ultimate, excellent and infallible wisdom (Loc.cit.). Not only the above meanings defined by the Abhidhammikas, there are also more, nevertheless, it is not going to illustrate further.

The modern scholars usually hesitate, how the teaching of Abhidhamma can be decided as the genuine teaching of Lord Buddha. Did the Buddha really visit Tavatimsa and preach Abhidhamma to his former mother who is now devaputta? Why the Buddha needed to go to Tavatimsa to preach Abhidhamma? It will emphasize on some of the fundamental reasons whether it proves or not regarding the Buddha's preaching of Abhidhamma in deva realm. While Buddha preached the first sermon of dhammacakkapavattanasutta and the commentary of Sîhasutta states that "among the five disciples however, only Aññāsikondaññathera with eighteen crores of Brahmas attained first path and fruition knowledge" (Samyutta Nikâya Atthakathâ, 2.261). This statement is the evident that the number of devas and brahmas is higher in terms of attainment of path and fruition knowledge as comparing to human beings.

That is one of the reasons it is recorded that the Buddha preached the Abhidhamma teaching in the Tavatimsa heaven. Second reason is that Buddha chose to teach Abhidhamma in the deva realm rather than in the human realm is because it has to be expounded in a complete picture of Abhidhamma teaching from the beginning to end to the same audience in a single session. Since the full exposition of the Abhidhamma requires three months, only devas and Brahmas could receive it in unbroken continuity, for they alone are capable of remaining in one posture for such a length of time" (Bhikkhu, Bodhi, A Comprehensive Manual of Abhidhamma, 10). The final reason is that every Buddha to be has to preach dhamma to the devaputta's mother who was the former mother in the human realm, for repaying gratitude is considered as the law (dhammatâ) of the Buddhas. Through the assumption of the preaching dhamma in the Tavatimsa realm to Devas and Brahmas headed by devaputta (former Bodhisatta's mother) and the records of preaching Abhidhamma seems to match that Lord Buddha taught it in the deva realm.

Abhidhamma teaching in the deva realms seems as a mystery for others. Why it is so? Is it impossible for Buddha? Mahânidessa explains plainly that the Buddha's return from Tavatimsa heaven after he had preached the Abhidhamma (Mahâniddesapâli, 352). Moreover, Vimânavatthu and Petavatthu also remarked many events about Mahâmoggallana visited in the deva realms, brahma realms, and even in hell. Venerable Mahâmoggallana, who was the disciple of Lord Buddha capable to travel from realms to realms, why is it impossible for the Buddha. He is the teacher of deities and human beings (satthâ-devamanussânam). Due to Lord Buddha's responsibility to teach Dhamma to all beings according to their fulfillment of perfection (pâramî), he preached the Abhidhamma in the Tavatimsa heaven. In fact, it is not beyond the possibility of Lord Buddha to preach Abhidhamma in the deva realm.

Modern scholars think Abhidhamma teaching did not exist during the Buddha's time which agitates many Theravâda Buddhists. Nyanaponika states that the Sautrântikas regarded only Suttanta and VinayaPimaka as canonical texts but not the Abhidhamma (Nyanaponika, Abhidhamma Studies, 13). The reason why the scholars say it does not exist is because of the subject matters (viz. aggregate, base, element, etc.) which discussed in Abhidhamma also found in the Suttanta Pitaka. In addition, Abhidhamma occurs in the Suttanta Pitaka of several early recessions, moreover, Watanabe states, Buddha's own disciples formed the conception of Abhidhamma as an elementary philosophical study that attempted to define, analyse, and classify dhammas and to explore their mutual relation (Bhikkhu Bodhi & Nânamolî, The Middle Length Discourse of the Buddha, 1226). In some Buddhist traditions venerable Sâriputta is regarded as the literal author of Abhidhamma treatises. (A Comprehensive Manual of Abhidhamma, 11). Because he brought the teaching to the human world. Then, what is the response from the Theravâda literature. The commentary of Dhammasa Eganî states that "What is known as Abhidhamma is neither the province nor the sphere of a disciple; it is the province of, the sphere of the Buddhas" (Pe Maung, Tin, The Expositor, 519). Indeed, in Mahâgosi Egasutta (Majjhima Nikâya I, 32) and Gulissânisutta, (MN. II, 69) clearly stated that "the monks discussing on Abhidhamma which demonstrates the existence of Abhidhamma during the lifetime of Lord Buddha." Although the same subject matters of Abhidhamma discussed in Suttanta Pitaka but their explanations are not much more detailed and do not approach from different aspect comparing to Abhidhamma teaching. Consequently, the opinion of the existence of the Abhidhamma is only after the passing away of Lord Buddha which seems to be contrary to the information in Tiṭṭipitaka.

The purpose of Abhidhamma teaching will not be clear if it does not explain its essence. Suttanta Pitaka provides common use (of language) (voharadesanâ), Abhidhamma Pitaka explains the ultimate teaching (paramatthadesanâ) and Vinaya Pitaka describes about "command" (ânâdesanâ) (Pârâjikakand -Atthakathâ, I, 17). Is there any difference among the purpose of Tipitaka? In terms of its purpose whether Vinaya, Suttanta, or even the philosophical Abhidhamma Pitaka have the same purpose of realising the essence of deliverance (vimuttirasa). In other word, the teaching of Lord Buddha is a means (raft) for overcoming (crossing) the endless samsâric journey of birth and death. Buddha's teaching tells how to see thing as they really are, such as noting the body (kâya), mind (citta), feeling (vedanâ), and mental object (dhamma) with mindfulness. In fact, Abhidhamma teaching also does. If Abhidhamma discusses about the noting of the activity of either the mind or body, it means indicating us how to live with mindfulness. If a person is living with mindfulness (sati), he could be able to abstain from arising unwholesome mind (akusala-citta). Finally, he will be able to eradicate all the mental impurities. Hence, Abhidhamma teaching coheres its purpose with the other two Pitakas.

Despite of many opinions on Abhidhamma teaching, but to expound without the omniscient knowledge (sabbaññutanânam) of the Buddha is impossible. Because Theravâda literature provides the sufficient evidence for the existence of Abhidhamma. Thus, it is assumed that Abhidhamma teaching is totally connected with the teaching of Lord Buddha. Therefore, the teaching of Abhidhamma is a genuine teaching in Theravâda Buddhism.

Publication of the actions of ministries concerned regarding the suggestions made to Public Service Capacity Assessment Committee

1. Regarding the phrase "bill can be paid either in USD and FEC" on business-purpose electricity bill notice, the Ministry of Electricity and Ministry of Finance explained that the Ministry of Electricity in its electricity bill notices demands the foreign companies, foreign missions, joint ventures with foreigners and residences of foreign houses to pay the electricity bill in US dollars and FEC, but after the Central Banks has announced the launch of FEC abolishment programme announced in newspapers, the word FCE has been excluded from the bill since April 2013.
2. Regarding the suggestion, the Ministry of Finance, in response to the instruction of the Union government to all Union ministries and all region/state governments to collect, pay, receive and hand over the taxes in local currency Kyat as of 1-7-2013, instructed the Myanmar Foreign Trade Bank to allow the ministries/organizations to put their received foreign currency into their respective accounts without examining the relevant documents before the Union government's instruction could be followed. In paying bill for business-purpose electricity use, it can be paid in Kyats and if it is to be paid in foreign currency from abroad, it can be done so according to account transfer.
3. Regarding the letter that says the imposition of pre-income tax for exports is making things difficult for the Chief of the General Staff (Army, Navy and Air), Union ministers, senior military officers, deputy ministers, members of the Nay Pyi Taw Council Area, guests and wellwishers.

In Ottarathiri Township of Nay Pyi Taw Council Area, four Samvejaniya places are under construction. Of them, Bodh Gaya replica Thatta Thattaha Maha Bo Tree Pagoda has been built successfully.

businessmen and thus it is suggested that 2 per cent income tax should be deducted from the sale revenues put into exporter's account by the buyer on depending on the currency exchange rate of the day on which the buyer pay money for the goods he buys, the Ministry of Finance explained as follows:

- (a) For exports, the date for the 2 per cent pre-income tax is set the date of shipment and for imports, it is the date of custom clearance at Customs Department. If the goods are exported from Yangon Port and Airport, the tax is to be paid at Companies' Revenue Department, if it is from Mandalay Airport, the tax is to be paid at the office of the head of Pyigyidagun Township Internal Revenue Department, if it is of border trade, the tax is to be paid at branches of Myanmar Economic Bank concerned taking out receipt from OSS concerned. For specific conditions, the authorities concerned still accept the tax by crossed-cheques. For imports, tax is to be paid together with customs duty at the customs department upon clearance.
- (b) The procedure for paying pre-income tax for exports from Yangon Port and Airport is to take out form at the office, No.33/12 in middle block of 36th Street showing ED Form of Revenues Department and (See page 10)

copy of company registration and pay at Myanma Economic Bank Branch-1 in person. Regarding those who could not pay in person, the bank still accepts the tax by crossed-cheques. Regarding those who do not want to pay the 2 per cent pre-income tax separately for separate business deals, he can pay for all depending the volume of goods he is going to export and the amount is deducted every time he exports.

- (c) Two percent of the foreign currency deposited into the bank was collected as the income tax in advance before the issuance of Order No. 148/2012. There was tax collection for taxpayers from the changes in the rate of notifications and collection from the tax-exempted taxpayers. As it had no full effect on the border trade but it had full effect on the ordinary trade activities, it harmed the competitiveness in the market.
 - (d) The respective department has made it cleared that it would not change 2% tax rate but it would rather amend the procedures to lessen delays in the taxation.
4. The Ministry of Finance made the following conclusions over the recommendations to increases tax for wheat powder as the entrepreneurs face losses as the tax rate of wheat seed is 5%:-

- (a) All the imported goods are being taxed as mentioned in the table in Section-4 of the Commercial Tax Law of Internal Revenue Department. As the wheat seeds and raw and fine wheat powders are the goods in Table (1), meaning they will not be taxed for sale and purchase inside the country. They would be taxed 5% only when they are imported.
 - (b) If the tax rate for wheat powder is raised to a non-trade tax level, they will have to pay the taxes for both imports and sale inside the country at the increased rate.
 - (c) According to Myanma Revenue Table (2012) by the Internal Revenue Department, the wheat seed with outer shell is ranked in HS Code 1001.11.00 and 1001.91.00 in HS Chapter (10) and levied 0% tax on it and the wheat seed without outer shell is ranked in HS Code 1104.19.90 and the wheat powder in HS Code 1101.00.10 and levied 5% tax.
5. The import of the wheat seed with outer shell will be taxed 0%. So, there is no need to increase the tax and there is no loss by the entrepreneurs. Two different tax rates for the import and local trade of the same commodity could not be levied so that the balance in the tax structure could be maintained and the market would be stable.
6. If there arise any disagreements and questions, one could report to the Public Service Capacity Assessment Committee.

TEPCO starts pumping out more groundwater to stop flow into sea

TOKYO, 16 Aug—The operator of the crippled Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant said on Thursday it started pumping up more groundwater from the site with new vacuum pumping equipment to prevent radioactive water from flowing into the adjacent Pacific Ocean.

Tokyo Electric Power Co plans to install a total of 28 pipes underground at 2-metre intervals along the coast. Groundwater is pumped up through the 4.6-metre-long pipes and TEPCO started to use the first one at around 11:30 am on Thursday.

TEPCO is expected to finish installing all the pipes on Sunday, which will increase the amount of removed groundwater to about 70 tons a day. The water, once pumped out, will be transferred to an underground tunnel connected to the No 2 reactor turbine building.

After the government announced an estimate last week that about 300 tons a day of contaminated groundwater may be flowing into the sea from the plant, TEPCO on Friday started collecting some groundwater from a well it has created as an emergen-

Operating the vacuum pumping system is another measure TEPCO has decided to take to address the leakage of radioactive water. A massive amount of radioactive water is accumulating at the plant as a result of continuing water injections into the Nos 1 to 3 reactors that suffered meltdowns in the midst of the nuclear crisis, triggered by a huge earthquake and tsunami on 11 March, 2011.

Groundwater penetration is also leading to an increase in the total amount of polluted water.

Cambodia opposition reiterates call for independent poll probe committee

PHNOM PENH, 16 Aug—Cambodia's opposition leader Sam Rainsy on Friday reiterated his call for the establishment of an independent committee to look into the widespread allegations of irregularities during the poll last month which the ruling party of long-serving Prime Minister Hun Sen won.

Speaking to reporters in front of the Phnom Penh International Airport upon his arrival from the United States, Sam Rainsy, president of the Cambodia National Rescue Party (CNRP), said that an independent committee must be established to investigate irregularities during the national poll on 28 July, or the poll results would not be recognized.

"Definitely, I believe that the committee will be set up because no one will recognize any government standing from fake election," he answered a reporter's question.

The National Election Committee (NEC) released initial official results on Monday, showing that the ruling Cambodian People's Party (CPP) of Prime Minister Hun Sen got 3.23 million votes and the CNRP of Sam Rainsy received 2.94 million votes. The CPP calculated that with its 3.23 million votes, it won 68 seats of the 123 parliamentary seats, while the CNRP, with its 2.94 million votes, got the remaining 55 seats.

This victory would allow Hun Sen, who has ruled the country for 28 years, to continue to stay in power for another five years.

But the CNRP rejected the results, claiming that its party should win 63 seats, with the CPP getting the remaining 60 seats if an independent poll probe committee is formed to investigate and resolve poll irregularities.

"The whole world knows that CNRP won the election and the whole world would help CNRP to expose the truth," Sam Rainsy said on Friday. "I will demand justice for the people."

Tep Nytha, NEC's secretary general, said Wednesday that there was no need to talk about the joint poll probe committee as the initial results had already been released.

"No more negotiation for the joint committee as the temporary results were released," he told Xinhua, adding that the final poll results would be issued on 8 September. CNRP's Vice President Kem Sokha said on Thursday that the party would boycott the first parliamentary session and call for mass protests if an independent poll probe committee was still not established.—Xinhua

S Korea proposes inter-Korean talks on family reunions next week

SEOUL, 16 Aug—South Korea proposed to North Korea on Friday that Red Cross officials of the two sides meet on 23 August to discuss reunions of families separated by the 1950-53 Korean War, according to South Korea's Unification Ministry.

The South's offer to hold the talks at the truce village of Panmunjeom was conveyed to the North through a channel at Panmunjeom earlier Friday.

It follows up on President Park Geun Hye's offer, made on Thursday, to hold additional rounds of temporary reunions of families.

In a speech marking the 68th anniversary of liberation from 35 years of Japanese colonial rule, Park said, "I ask North Korea to open the door of its mind for separated families to hold reunions on the occasion of the Chuseok."

Chuseok, which is Korean Thanksgiving Day, falls on 19 Sept. The two Koreas have held more than a dozen rounds of reunions for separated families since a landmark summit in June 2000, bringing together more than 20,000 family members who had not seen each other since the war. But none have been in recent years due to strained ties.—Kyodo News

Nepal's Election Commission resumes voter registration for seven days

KATHMANDU, 16 Aug—Nepal's Election Commission on Thursday decided to restart the already closed voter registration works for a short period of seven days from 17 to 23 August targeting the upcoming legislative election.

"We have reopened voter registration on the condition that it will not affect the already declared date of the second Constituent Assembly election on 19 November this year," Bir Bahadur Rai, the Commission's spokesperson, told Xinhua.

The decision, signed by all five commissioners, came after requests from various quarters to do so. Earlier, the voter enrollment task ended on 15 July, after 12.3 million voters were registered across Nepal for the upcoming election.

From this time onward, Nepal is introducing voter ID cards with digital records, so that election fraud and the number of duplicate voters could be reduced.

Around 4 million voters are not estimated to have not yet registered as compared to the last legislative election in 2008. But all these missing voters are not expected to register, as a number of them are either fake voters or have already gone abroad.

12 parties to take part in Indonesia's 2014 polls

JAKARTA, 16 Aug—Indonesian President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono said on Friday that 12 political parties and 3 local parties in Aceh are to participate in the legislative and presidential elections in 2014. President Yudhoyono stressed that he would not take part in the poll after his second term end.

"We hope there will be a change and continuity after the presidential election," Yudhoyono said on his annual speech at the parliament building ahead of anniversary of Indonesia's Independent Day on 17 August.

On parliamentary polls, the president said that 560 members of new parliament would be elected. "We expect political parties to use the polls in 2014 as a moment to boost the quality of democracy in the country," said Yudhoyono.—Xinhua

Egypt sends rain, flood relief to Sudan

KHARTOUM, 16 Aug — Two Egyptian military planes on Wednesday landed in the Sudanese capital of Khartoum, carrying relief supplies for people affected in recent rain and floods in the country.

The planes brought 25 tons of shelter materials and food that the Egyptian government provided for the Sudanese victims.

Egyptian interim President Adly Mansour earlier made a phone call to his Sudanese counterpart Omar al-Bashir, reiterating his country's support for the Sudanese people in their effort to cope with the disaster.

Heavy rain and floods hit a wide range of areas in Sudan, resulting in 42 deaths and collapse of thousands of houses, according to the latest statistics of the Sudanese Civil Defence Authority.

The Sudanese Meteorological Authority forecasted that heavy rain would hit most part of the country again in the coming two days and advised the citizens to take precautions against possible accidents.

In the meantime, the water level of most part of the Nile's upper stream continues to rise, particularly in the Jabel Awliya area south of Khartoum, raising fears of imminent destructive floods.

shay Kumar) taking over as the reigning don after killing his predecessor Sultan Mirza (Ajay Devgn). Sridevi was awarded the Padma Shri in 2012.

Sridevi: Child star to Queen Bee

NEW DELHI, 16 Aug — In a film industry of heroes who don't age beyond 30 and heroines beyond 25, comebacks are hard to pull off, especially if you are female and have crossed into the twilight zone of 40 plus.

Last year, Sridevi changed that by starring as a decidedly middle-aged homemaker, low on glamour and grammar, in English Vinglish. 15 years away from the arc-lights have not dimmed Sridevi's talent or her star quality and now, at 50, she is a bona fide star once again, a feat last achieved by a 58-year-old Amitabh Bachchan whose career was resurrected by Mohabbatein in 2000.

It all started with 1967's Kandam Karunai in which a four-year old Sridevi starred in Kandam Karunai opposite Tamil great Sivaji Ganesan.

Little Sridevi, who was born into a lawyer's family in Sivakasi, then appeared in a number of Tamil, Telugu and Malayalam movies.

Her performance in 1971's Poombatta won her the Kerala State Film Award for Best Child Artist. In 1976, 13-year-old Sridevi scored her first role as leading lady in Moondru Mudichu, opposite two men who would become Tamil cinema's biggest stars - Rajinikanth and Kamal Haasan. By the time Sridevi made her Bollywood debut as a leading lady in 1979's Solva Sawan, she was a name to reckon with down South. Sridevi continued to appear in Tamil and Telugu cinema well into the Eighties, after becoming a Bollywood superstar.

Solva Sawan, which co-starred Amol Palekar and flopped at the box office, was not Sridevi's first Hindi outing. In the hit 1975 film Julie, Sridevi played the heroine's younger sister.

Her Bollywood breakthrough came four years after Solva Sawan in 1983 with Sadma, a remake of Moondram Pirai starring herself and Kamal Haasan, and the blockbuster Himmatwala opposite Jeetendra. Despite the critical acclaim Sadma received, it was Himmatwala, with its peppy dance number Naino Mein Sapna, that made Sridevi a star. In 1986, Sridevi appeared in Nagina as a shape-shifting snake-woman, a role that had been turned down by many actresses including Sridevi's reported rival Jaya Prada. Nagina was a surprise hit and made Sridevi the undisputed queen of box office charts, a position she occupied for the rest of the Eighties and late into the Nineties.—PTI

Aamir Khan's Dhoom 3 body

MUMBAI, 16 Aug — An ominously stormy sky, skyscrapers, choppers flying in the air and a topless man watching all this standing behind a window — this is the first look of the much awaited film Dhoom 3. It's dramatic and makes you curious.

Although the face is not visible, the man in the poster looks like Aamir Khan giving a glimpse of his well-toned body, something which audiences appreciated in his 2008 hit Ghajini. He is seen wearing a pair of trousers and has teamed it up with a hat.

Aamir Khan is playing an antagonist in Dhoom 3.

The film is scheduled for a Christmas release, an auspicious time for Aamir's films, and the poster's tag line proclaims: "This year will end with a Dhoom". The 48-year-old is playing an antagonist in Dhoom 3, the third installment in the franchise that started in 2004 with John Abraham playing the villain. Hrithik Roshan played the negative role in Dhoom 2.

It is reportedly said that Aamir has used a lot of acrobatic skills to pull off heists in the Vijay Krishna Acharya directed action thriller that also features Katrina Kaif as his love interest.

Abhishek Bachchan once again returns to play a cop, chasing the super villain with Uday Chopra as his sidekick.

Fox Sports to reach 90 million homes for its Saturday debut

LOS ANGELES, 16 Aug — Fox Sports 1, the new sports cable channel, will reach 90 million homes when it goes live on Saturday and will be carried by all major TV operators, the network said on Thursday. A top-ranking executive of the new cable channel, which is owned by Rupert Murdoch's 21st Century Fox, also said that Fox would consider bidding on Thursday night National Football League games for the new channel should the league decide to sell those rights.

"We will certainly take a look at it," if a package of Thursday night games become available, Randy Freer, chief operating officer and co-president of Fox Sports' media group, said. "The question is, the NFL always comes at a pretty hefty price tag. ... Can you make it work in a way that creates any economics for anyone other than the NFL?" Freer told Reuters on the sidelines of Variety's Sports Entertainment Summit. While the NFL Network currently has the rights to show most Thursday night matchups, sports networks and broadcasters expect the league to eventually sell the rights to those games, sparking a bidding war between media companies. No other programming would help Fox Sports 1 grow more quickly into a full-fledged competitor to ESPN, the highly profitable cable sports leader owned by Disney. Consultants estimate the rights to those Thursday football games could fetch more than $1 billion. For now, Fox Sports 1 will hit TV sets without any NFL, unlike ESPN, which has the rights to Monday Night Football.—Reuters

Ashton Kutcher explores the glamour and glitches of Steve Jobs

LOS ANGELES, 16 Aug — Ashton Kutcher may be best known for his goofier comedy roles in "That '70s Show" and "Two and a Half Men," but the actor takes a rare dramatic turn in new film "Jobs" as visionary Apple co-founder Steve Jobs. Kutcher, 35, who bears a strong physical resemblance to a young Jobs with his wavy dark hair, brown eyes and five o'clock shadow, told Reuters that as a fan of Jobs' work, he was surprised when learning details about the Apple CEO's life.

"When I read the script, Steve was a guy that I really admired, and he was not always being shown in the best light, and I was a little taken aback. I really admire who he is and what he's done. I want to in some ways protect the legacy of a guy that I admire," Kutcher said. "I also had the challenge of playing a guy who very much is still in the zeitgeist ... I had to play the guy that became the guy that everybody remembers," he added. "Jobs," directed by Joshua Michael Stern and out in theaters on Friday, outlines 30 defining years of Apple's co-founder, who revolutionized the way people listen to music with the iPod and home computers with the Apple Macintosh. 'Big Four' reach star-studded Cincinnati quarters

Novak Djokovic of Serbia hits a return to David Goffin of Belgium during their men's singles match at the Cincinnati Open tennis tournament in Cincinnati, Ohio on 15 Aug, 2013.—REUTERS

CINCINNATI, 16 Aug—Novak Djokovic, Andy Murray, Rafa Nadal and Roger Federer all picked up third round wins at the Western and Southern Open on Thursday to set up a star-studded last eight in Cincinnati. The ATP Tour's big four were joined in the quarter-finals by 2009 US Open champion Juan Martin Del Potro of Argentina, the only other man to hoist a grand slam trophy since Marat Safin at the 2005 Australian Open. Djokovic, Murray, Nadal, Federer and Del Potro have accounted for the last 34 grand slams and it is just the second time this year all five have reached the last eight of a tournament.

The marquee matchup on Friday will see world number five and 17-time grand slam winner Federer take on long-time rival Nadal, the world number three. Nadal, whose grand slam resume lists 12 titles, and Federer will clash for the 31st time, adding yet another chapter to what will go down as one of the sport's all-time great rivalries. Nadal has been in superb form coming off a win Montreal and ran his hardcourt winning streak to 12 matches with a 6-2, 5-7, 6-2 win over Bulgarian Grigor Dimitrov on Thursday. "Always play against Roger is a special feeling," said Nadal, who has reached the finals in 10-of-11 events he has entered this season, claiming eight titles.

"We have a great history behind us in our confrontations, so it's another quarter-finals." It's a special one because you're playing against a very special player. Our matches were very special always. "But, again, it's a quarter-finals match, not the final, so that's a big difference."

Federer, the five-time defending champion in Cincinnati, also needed three sets to see off evergreen German Tommy Haas 1-6, 7-5, 6-3 as he struggles to build some momentum going into the US Open after missing the start of the North American hardcourt season with a sore back.

In contrast, the world's two top-ranked players, Djokovic and Murray, cruised into the quarter-finals with no-nonsense straight sets decisions.

Looking to end a run of four runner-up finishes on the Cincinnati hardcourts, world number one Djokovic needed just 50 minutes to hand Belgian qualifier David Goffin a 6-2, 6-0 tennis lesson. While Cincinnati has been a happy hunting ground for Federer, it has been a frustrating tournament for Djokovic. But if the big Serb is the last man standing on Sunday he would become the first player to complete what the ATP Tour has dubbed the 'Career Golden Masters', winning all nine World Tour Masters events.

"I played four times (in the finals, so it's been one of the tournaments where I've performed well actually in the last five, six years," said Djokovic. "Never managed to take final step and hopefully this year I can do so." I have an extra motivation and an opportunity to make history in this tournament, so I'm very inspired to play well day after day." at home as he steamrolled Frenchman Julien Benneteau 6-2, 6-2 in 69 minutes. The Scot will be chasing his third Cincinnati title as he continues to prepare for the defense of his US Open crown later this month at Flushing Meadows.

Djokovic will take on top-ranked American John Isner in the last eight while Murray will meet Czech sixth seed Tomas Berdych. "You want to try and get off quickly because you need to play the next day," said Murray. "But also in 10 days' time, we're going to have to play best-of-five sets, so sometimes the long matches can kind of set you up for that well. "But in terms of winning this event, better to get off quick because you have to play five days in a row if you want to win." Seventh seed Del Potro battled into the quarter-finals with a 6-4, 1-6, 6-4 win over Spain's Feliciano Lopez and will meet Russian qualifier Dmitry Tursunov, who pulled off the upset of the day dumping world number four David Ferrer of Spain 6-2, 6-4.

Press highlights Argentina "wins even without Messi"

BUENOS AIRES, 16 Aug—The Argentine national soccer team "learned to play without (Lionel) Messi and passed the exam" by defeating Italy 2-1 in the friendly match played in Rome, Argentinean Press highlighted on Thursday. "Without Messi, the national team stomped its feet strong before Italy," daily "Clarín" entitled its front page, adding that the team led by Alejandro Sabella "did not shine but played well."

In the sports section, "Clarín" summarized: "The day when the team learned to play without Messi," adding that "without his biggest star, it passed the test of facing a big rival." The sports daily "Ole" wrote: "Without Messi and the Pope (in the stadium), Argentina won Italy 2-1 in Rome. Sabella's team has approved."

The friendly match against Italy was in honour of Pope Francis, who is Argentinean. The match was played on Wednesday in Rome's Olympic Stadium, with goals scored by Argentines Higuain at minute 19 and Ever Banega (minute 48) and Italian Lorenzo Insigne (minute 75).

Bondarenko wins men's high jump gold with Championships record

MOSCOW, 16 Aug—Ukraine's Bohdan Bondarenko broke a 20-year-long Championships record to claim the men's high jump title at 2013 IAAF World Championships here on Thursday. The 23-year-old Bondarenko, who will turn 24 by the end of August, cleared 2.41 metres with his second attempt to clinch the gold, equalling his world leading performance and bettering the former Championships record of 2.40m set by Cuba's Javier Sotomayor in 1993 Stuttgart worlds.

Bondarenko, wearing one red shoe and one yellow, also tried to beat Sotomayor's world record of 2.45, set on 27 July, 1993, but failed all the three attempts at 2.46m. The Ukraine has been enjoying a huge progression so far in the 2013 season, improving his personal best by 10 centimetres. The seventh finisher at London Olympics set the world leading in Lausanne as he went over 2.41m, a height not achieved for 19 years. At his last competition in London just over two weeks ago, Bondarenko went well clear over 2.38m before two audacious attempts at 2.47m.

Starting at 2.29, Bondarenko showed great confidence on Thursday and skipped 2.32 and 2.38 before leaping over 2.41 with only his fourth jump in the evening.—Xinhua

Greensboro specialist Garcia back in title hunt

GREENSBORO, (North Carolina), 16 Aug—Sergio Garcia's love-affair with Greensboro shows no sign of waning, as he proved in Thursday's first round at the $5.3 million Wyndham Championship. Back at the site of his American coming-out-party 15 years ago, the Spanish former world number two did not record a bogey on his way to a five-under-par 65 at Sedgefield Country Club.

"I'm very happy with the round and hoping to do more of the same tomorrow," said Garcia, who was among eight players trailing co-leaders Chris Stroud and Ross Fisher by one stroke. Garcia was an 18-year-old amateur when he nearly won a secondary PGA Tour event at Sedgefield in 1998, creating headlines of his own with a third-place finish. The Donald Ross course has been redesigned since then but it clearly remains a good fit for the 33-year-old Spaniard, a 10-times winner on the European Tour. Garcia missed only one green in regulation, although that statistic disguises that he was not entirely happy with a few of his approach shots which ended up a long way from the hole. "I did have some pulls with some of my irons but other than that I probably feel the most comfortable I have in the last three weeks," the Spaniard said.—Reuters

UN chief Ban appeals for North Korea aid funding

16 Aug—UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon appealed on Thursday for funding to urgently provide food, healthcare and sanitation to millions of North Koreans, stressing that donors should not be deterred by the reclusive state's nuclear ambitions.

The United Nations said it needs almost $100 million to fund aid programs for the rest of 2013 in North Korea, where there are about 2.4 million very vulnerable people in need of regular food assistance. The world body said almost a third of children under age 5 in North Korea suffer chronic malnutrition.

"The lives of many people are at stake, including children who are vulnerable to lasting suffering if they do not receive aid," Ban's press office said in a statement.

"The secretary-general calls on prospective donors to respond to this serious situation. He stresses that humanitarian assistance should not be linked to political or security considerations," it said.

Top seeds advance but Bartoli buzz remains

CINCINNATI, 16 Aug — As the tennis world took stock of Marion Bartoli's shock decision to retire, Victoria Azarenka tried to put the focus back on court with a controlled display against Magdalena Rybarikova at the Western and Southern Open on Thursday.

The world number two's 6-3, 6-4 third round victory was impressive but it could not turn attention away from Bartoli, the Wimbledon champion having stunned the sport 24 hours earlier by announcing she was quitting following a second-round defeat.

Even when world number one Serena Williams closed out the action under the center court floodlights with a 63 minute 6-4, 6-1 demolition of Germany's Mona Barthel, Bartoli's departure remained firmly in the spotlight at the sprawling Lindner Family tennis center."Marion Bartoli is such a great fighter and she has a great attitude," Williams told reporters. "I remember the first time I saw her, I was actually in Paris for the Paris Indoor Championships." It was a long, long, long time ago, probably in like the early 2000s, and I just remember her being so young and working so hard, and that was her whole career. Reuters

Los Angeles Dodgers streak into history books

LOS ANGELES, 16 Aug — It was nearly midnight on Wednesday when Los Angeles Dodgers first baseman Adrian Gonzalez sent a pitch from Pedro Feliciano into left field for a double, producing a come-from-behind 5-4 victory over the New York Mets in what has become season of heroics for the Major League Baseball team. Gonzalez's shot extended the Dodgers winning streak to eight games, and erased a 4-0 deficit, the team's second come-from-behind win in six days. On Friday, the Dodgers scored four times in the ninth inning to beat Tampa Bay 7-6.

"The magic has happened again," Vin Scully, the Dodgers' fabled 85-year old announcer Vin Scully, excitedly proclaimed to his listeners as the Dodgers stormed back on Wednesday night. The victory over the Mets gave the Dodgers a 40-8 record since 22 June, the best 48-game performance since the 1942 St Louis Cardinals went 41-7, according to information

Fab Friday beckons with the Felix, Farah and Bolt show

Moscow, 16 Aug — Usain Bolt starts his quest for a second world track gold in Moscow but American sprinting great Allyson Felix looks set to steal the limelight as she goes for a fourth world 200 meters title on Friday. Briton Mo Farah should also rubber-stamp his status as one of the all-time distance running greats -- and repeat his Olympic feat from London -- by adding a 5,000 meters gold to the 10,000 title he won on the first day of the championships. The graceful-striding Felix won three Olympic golds in London last year at 200 and in the 4x100 and 4x400 meters relays and is firmly on course to become the athlete to win most individual world championship golds. Felix, Carl Lewis and Michael Johnson have all won eight. The 27-year-old has most to fear from Jamaican Shelly-Ann Fraser-Pryce, whose 100 meters victory on Monday was probably the most impressive of the championships.—Reuters
