Asphalt roads, concrete roads constructed in Kayan Township

Kayan Township sharing borders with Bago Region has easy access to Yangon City through Bago-Thantpin-Kawa-Kayan-Thongwa-Thanyin Road.

Local farmers are engaged in cultivation of paddy, groundnut, sunflower and green gram.

A total of 65 village-tracts in the township grow 112,284 acres of paddy, 1390 acres of cold season groundnut, 95326 acres of green gram and 1035 acres of sunflower.

The local people are carrying out breeding of fish at 5026 acres of ponds and 50 acres of prawn. They transport domestic products and vegetables to the Yangon City daily.

Kayan Township is being facilitated with 13 miles and six furlongs long Kayan-Maungma-Shwehlay road that link villages in western Kayan and Bago.

In addition, 16 miles and four furlongs long asphalt road is under construction for giving smooth transport to the local people from Kayan, Yekyaw, Aungthathan villages of eastern Kayan.

Due to the requests of local people and Pyithu Hluttaws, Yangon South District Public Works and Kayan Township Public Works are constructing the roads with the assistance of Ministry of Construction and Yangon Region government.

Construction of the roads will be undertaken spending the fund of Yangon Region Government.

At present, the local people eastern and western parts of Kayan can go to anywhere through concrete and asphalt roads linking Bago and Yangon via Kayan.—Kyemon-Byline: Kayan Soe Myint

China support political and national reconciliation in Myanmar, FM position paper says

BEIJING, 12 Sept—According to the news released by Chinese Embassy in Myanmar, China's Foreign Ministry released the Position Paper of the People's Republic of China at the 68th Session of the United Nations General Assembly on 9 September.

The paper, issued annually prior to the UNGA meeting, explains China's position on a wide range of issues that will be discussed at the meeting. Following is China's position on the issue of Myanmar:

Since the political transformation started in Myanmar, positive progress has been made in its political and national reconciliation. There is good momentum of development. As a friendly neighbour, China will continue to support Myanmar's efforts in realizing domestic stability and development and advancing political and national reconciliation.

China supports Myanmar in developing friendly and cooperative relations with other countries based on equality and mutual benefit, and welcomes the lifting of sanctions on Myanmar by relevant countries.

The international community should continue to create a sound external environment for Myanmar to steadily advance reform, achieve enduring stability and accelerate development, and respect the development path chosen by the people of Myanmar based on their national conditions.—NLM

Israeli PM welcomes Russian proposal for Syrian chemical weapon

Israel's Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu attends the weekly cabinet meeting in Jerusalem on 8 Sept, 2013.—REUTERS

JERUSALEM, 12 Sept—Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu welcomed on Wednesday the Russian proposal for Syrian chemical weapons. Speaking at a graduation course for the navy in northern Israeli city of Haifa, Netanyahu said that "The world must make certain that he who uses weapons of mass destruction pays a price," according to a statement released by Prime Minister Office.

Netanyahu added that the Russian proposal of placing Syrian chemical weapons under international supervision would be "well received" by Iran, a staunch ally of Damascus.

At the same ceremony, Israeli President Shimon Peres said that he "trusts" US President Barak Obama and Russian President Vladimir Putin to achieve a "credible and meaningful" deal. Netanyahu met with Israeli defence officials several times in the past two weeks to assess the situation. Last week, several hundred reservists were called up for military duty and anti-missile batteries were stationed across northern and central Israel.

The reservists were released later that week and the military has somewhat lowered the alert level. Officials said the probability that Israel will be attacked is "low" but the country will be prepared for any potential attack.

Russia could boost Iran arms sales if US strikes Syria

Moscow, 12 Sept — A senior lawmaker and ally of President Vladimir Putin suggested on Wednesday that Russia could increase arms sales to Iran or review cooperation over Afghanistan if the United States launches military strikes against Syria. Russia is a long-standing ally of Iran, Syria's main backer and the United States' chief antagonist in the Middle East. Moscow built Iran's first nuclear power station and has supplied it with anti-aircraft defences.

The remarks by Alexei Pushkov, head of the lower house of parliament's foreign affairs committee, appeared to be part of a drive to convince Washington to refrain from attacking Syria in retaliation for a poison gas attack in Damascus that killed hundreds of civilians.

Pushkov echoed Putin by saying Russia's initiative to have its ally Syria give up all its chemical weapons would succeed only if Washington and its allies rejected the use of force.

Outlining possible responses if Syria was attacked, Pushkov told the lower house, the State Duma: "This would include the expansion of defensive weapons deliveries to Iran, and discussing the possibility of reviewing our cooperation with the United States on Afghanistan."

Syria's chemical weapons; decades to build, years to destroy

AMSTERDAM, 12 Sept—If Saddam Hussein's Iraq is anything to go by, destroying Syria's massive chemical weapons arsenal will mean checking dozens of far-flung sites in a war zone while the government employs delaying tactics to hide the banned munitions, an expert involved in past UN disarmament missions said.

Bashar al-Assad's chemical weapons network comprises remote underground bunkers where hundreds of tons of nerve agents are stored, scud missiles and artillery shells, possibly armed with cyanide, and factories deep inside hostile territory used to produce mustard or VX gas, experts believe. "It's big. He has one of the biggest chemical weapons programmes in the region and even in the world," said Dieter Rothbacher, a former UN weapons inspector in Iraq who trained members of the team that just returned from Syria.

"There are calculations that to secure them up to 75,000 ground troops are needed," he said in a Reuters interview. "It took us three years to destroy that stuff under UN supervision in Iraq."

First there needs to be an iron-clad agreement, either by Syria joining the Chemical Weapons Convention, but more likely in the form of a UN Security Council agreement, in which Damascus relinquishes control of the weapons.

It could be similar to Iraq, where a UN Security Council resolution forcing Iraq to declare and destroy its chemical weapons. Certain militaries are already preparing for that scenario, Rothbacher said.—Reuters

Italy PM Letta says borrowing costs threatened by instability

ROME, 12 Sept—Prime Minister Enrico Letta warned on Wednesday that Italy could face higher borrowing costs if continued political instability undermined the progress it had made in reassuring financial markets over the state of its public finances.

"We can ruin this in a moment," he told parliament in a report on the recent meeting of the G20 economic powers in St Petersburg. Letta was referring to the market nerves which have taken Italy's borrowing costs above those of Spain for the first time in 18 months.

NEW YORK, 12 Sept—US officials will examine changes to Facebook Inc's privacy policy to determine whether they violate a 2011 agreement with federal regulators, a Federal Trade Commission spokesman confirmed Wednesday after certain changes drew fire from privacy advocates.

Much of the criticism has focused on a proposed "Tag Suggest" feature that would use facial recognition technology to match faces in photos with public profile features, part of a broad set of privacy changes the social networking giant announced on 29 August.

FTC spokesman Peter Kaplan said regulators would study the changes as part of the government's oversight of Facebook's privacy practices, which began in 2011 after Chief Executive Mark Zuckerberg apologized for privacy missteps and pledged to obtain users' permission before sharing their personal data. "As in all cases, we're monitoring compliance with the order and part of that involves interacting with Facebook," Kaplan said on Wednesday.

He added that the commission had no reason to believe that the company had violated its 2011 agreement. Facebook posted an update to its data use policies on the company website on 29 August to explain how users' personal information is used by advertisers and third-party applications.

The new policy proposal came days after the company finalized a $20 million class-action settlement related to how Facebook displayed its users' "likes" and pictures in its ads products.

Facebook said in a statement on Wednesday that it was in full compliance with the FTC and that its new policy did not grant the company expanded privileges in how it used personal data.

NASA enlists ex-Air Force drones for tropical storm research

CAPE CANAVERAL, (Florida), 12 Sept—NASA is using of a pair of decommissioned military drones to study how tropical storms develop over the Atlantic Ocean. The campaign, known as the Hurricane and Severe Storm Sentinel, or HS3, began last year with one Global Hawk unmanned aircraft outfitted with instruments to probe the environment around a developing storm.

With two planes available for the 2013 Atlantic hurricane season, scientists are focusing on the interior of storms as well. The project could improve storm prediction and forecast models by shedding light on how tropical cyclones can rapidly intensify. "The second aircraft will measure eyewall and rainband winds, and precipitation, something we didn't get to do last year," project lead scientist Scott Braun, a meteorologist with the US space agency's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Maryland, said in a NASA interview.

"Just as we did in 2012, the first aircraft will examine the large-scale environment that tropical storms form in and move through, and how that environment affects the inner workings of the storms," he said.

The NASA Global Hawks were built for the US Air Force by Northrop Grumman Corp, part of a fleet used for surveillance missions over Afghanistan, Iraq and Libya. Global Hawks, which first flew in 1998, also have supported disaster relief efforts in Haiti and Japan. NASA first used the planes for scientific research in April 2010.

Global Hawks are particularly suited for atmospheric studies since they can reach altitudes greater than 60,000 feet, about twice as high as commercial airplanes, and can stay airborne for up to about 28 hours. For its hurricane research programme, NASA is remotely flying its Global Hawks from the Wallops Flight Facility on Wallops Island, Virginia. Flights began in late August and are scheduled to run through 23 September. The Atlantic hurricane season runs from 1 June to 30 November and typically peaks in early to mid-September.

Climate change negotiators seek breakthrough at informal New Zealand talks

WELLINGTON, 12 Sept—Top-ranking international climate change negotiators gathered in Auckland on Tuesday for a second New Zealand government initiative aimed at injecting "fresh thinking" into the new United Nations climate change agreement.

Welcoming delegates to the informal talks, New Zealand Climate Change Minister Tim Groser said the initiative would use a different meeting and approach to help the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change work toward an agreement to replace the Kyoto Protocol by the end of 2015.

"The Protocol covers only 13 percent of global emissions, so it's simply not sufficient to solve climate change. The new agreement will need to be truly global in its coverage," Groser said in a statement.

"New Zealand participates actively in the negotiations, and uses what influence it can to support collective, collaborative action. New Zealand's greenhouse gas footprint makes a minimal contribution to the global carbon build-up, but we take responsibility for our emissions, and act in other ways."

The New Zealand government has drawn criticism from home and abroad for withdrawing from the Kyoto Protocol and for watering down its emissions trading scheme.—Xinhua

Botswana's elephant population increases

GABORONE, 12 Sept—Botswana saw a significant increase in elephant population between 1992 and 2012, while other animal species are either on decline or showing stagnation, a latest released aerial survey showed.

According to the official Botswana Press Agency on Tuesday, a study titled Aerial Census of Animals in Botswana/Dry Season 2012 has made observations on 26 animal species including wild animals like buffalo, eland, elephant, gemsbok, giraffe, zebra, etc., and livestock like cattle, donkey, horse, sheep and goats.

Deputy director in the Department of Wildlife and National Parks Cyril Taolo was quoted as saying that the national elephant population stands at 207,545, "which is a 297 percent change between 1992 and 2012." Elephants are concentrated in the north and central parts of the country.

Taolo said with such a big population of elephants, the country needs to manage them carefully and monitor their impact on the environment as they pose a threat not only to the environment, but other species of animals and human life.

The Botswana's government announced in 2012 that the country will ban commercial hunting from January 2014 over growing concerns about the sharp decline in wildlife species. The ban raised concerns and some people feared it might cause the population of wildlife such as elephants to grow at uncontrollable rates. There are reports that in communities that live around the elephants there is a question of wildlife-human conflict as elephants kill people and destroy crops.

Taolo brushed aside the concerns saying that hunting was not banned to manage elephant population, but to benefit communities who live within wildlife areas.

"As an example, we issued licences for 400 elephants per annum, how much of a difference would that have on 200,000 plus elephants," he said.

An elephant migration plan where a conducive environment is created in neighbouring countries to lure the elephants to cross over is one method that can be explored to manage elephants, he said.

He added that the hunting ban was only temporary to monitor the decline of certain animal species.

According to the survey, there were upward trends for all other species except lechwe, sable, sitatunga, springbok and tsessebe.

British central bank plans issuance of plastic banknotes in 2016

LONDON, 12 Sept — British central bank, the Bank of England (BOE), announced on Tuesday that it is soliciting public opinions on issuing plastic banknotes in a bid to ensure good quality genuine banknotes that the public can use with confidence.

According to BOE, based on a three-year research project looking at the materials on which banknotes are printed, the bank had reviewed the relative merits of printing banknotes on polymer rather than the cotton paper as at present.

The new material banknotes, which have the advantages of resistance to dirt and moisture, advanced security and more durability, will initially only be for the new-style five pounds and 10 pounds banknotes, with one denomination at a time.

The five pounds note will be featured with Sir Winston Churchill, expecting to be issued in 2016 at the earliest, with the 10 pounds note to follow.

If the decision is made to move to the polymer banknotes, the central bank said it would also introduce smaller banknotes for convenience to fitting into purses and wallets.

“Polymer banknotes

are cleaner, more secure and more durable than paper notes. They are also cheaper and more environmentally friendly,” said Charles Bean, BOE’s Deputy Governor of the Bank of England.

“However, the Bank of England would print notes on polymer only if we were persuaded that the public would continue to have confidence in, and be comfortable with, our notes.

“The results of the consultation programme on which we are embarking will therefore form a vital part of our assessment of the merits of polymer banknotes.”

The public consultation programme on polymer banknotes will run until 15 November, and BOE will announce the decision on whether to move to polymer in December.

Polymer banknotes are manufactured from a transparent plastic film, specially coated with an ink layer that enables it to carry the printed design features of banknotes. The material allows the inclusion of “windows” or clear portions in the design, which enhance protection against counterfeits.

EP outlines rules to limit risks for home buyers

BRUSSELS, 12 Sept — The European Parliament (EP) on Tuesday has outlined new rules to better protect home buyers in the European Union (EU) from various risks.

Under new rules “provisionally approved” by the EP, home buyers would be better informed about the costs and risks of taking on a mortgage and better protected if they default on the loan.

The legislation will cover mortgages on residential property, residential property including an office space and building land, according to a statement on the website of the EP.

Anyone signing up for a mortgage in the EU should receive comparable information about the products available, and understand the total cost and long-run financial consequences of taking out the loan.

Credit terms offered to borrowers would have to match their current financial situation and take account of their prospects and possible downturns, according to the new rules. Moreover, home buyers would have to be given a mandatory seven-day reflection before signing the loan, or a seven-day “right of withdrawal” thereafter.—Xinhua

Obesity tied to semi-frequent migraines

NEW YORK, 12 Sept — Overweight and obese people are at higher-than-average risk of migraines, suggests a new study.

Researchers looking at so-called episodic migraines — headaches that occur less than every other day — found they were almost twice as common among obese people as among normal-weight adults.

“This suggests patients and doctors need to be aware that obesity is associated with an increased risk of episodic migraine and not wait until a patient has chronic migraine to address healthy lifestyle choices, such as diet and exercise, and to choose medications that impact weight with care,” lead researcher Dr Lee Peterlin, from Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore, told Reuters Health in an email.

However, the researchers couldn’t be sure which came first — the extra weight or the headaches. And one migraine researcher not involved in the study said he would be cautious interpreting its findings.

“If this helps of course to make people believe they should lose weight, that’s great, but does it mean that reduction in weight will reduce migraine attacks, or treat migraines? That’s a question they haven’t addressed,” Dr Tobias Kurth, of the French national research institute INSERM and the University of Bordeaux, said. About 10 to 15 percent of people have episodic migraines, according to Peterlin. Previous studies have linked obesity to chronic migraines, which by definition occur at least every other day. But there’s less evidence on whether weight also plays a role in less frequent migraines, researchers said.

To try to answer that question, Peterlin and her colleagues analyzed data on 3,862 people who participated in a national US survey in the early 2000s, including 188 who reported having migraines an average of three or four times each month.

About 32 percent of people with episodic migraines were obese, based on their self-reported height and weight, compared to 26 percent of non-migraine sufferers.—Reuters

Spain’s financial sector receives 84.195 bln euros of public aid in 2011

MADRID, 12 Sept — Spanish banks received a total of 84.195 billion euros (111.638 billion US dollars) of public aid in 2011 to combat the crisis affecting the sector, Spain’s National Competition Commission reported on Tuesday.

The figure was almost 94.5 percent of the total public aid injected by the public sector that year (89.162 billion euros), which represented 7.84 percent of Spain’s Gross Domestic Product (GDP).

Each Spaniard paid 1,781.3 euros to reorganize Spain’s financial entities, said the Commission.

In annual terms, the amount received by the Spanish banking sector decreased by 4.967 billion euros between 2010 and 2011, from 89.162 billion euros to 84.195 billion euros, the Commission reported. A year later, in June 2012, the Spanish government asked for financial aid from the European Union (EU) in order to recapitalize its banking system.

The EU gave Spain 37 billion euros to recapitalize the EU’s so-called first group of banks (including Spain’s nationalized entities, Bankia, Catalunya Caixa, Banco de Valencia and NovaGalicia Banco) and 1.865 billion euros for the EU’s so-called second group: Liberbank, Caja3, BMN and CEISS.

Vitamin D disappoints in trial for infant diarrhea

NEW YORK, 12 Sept — Heavy supplementation of vitamin D did not reduce diarrheal illnesses among children aged three and younger in a large trial conducted in Kabul, Afghanistan.

The results are disappointing in light of a body of research that has consistently linked high vitamin D levels to improved immune system function and deficiency to a higher risk of infectious diseases, the researchers write in the journal Pediatrics.

“It was thought that vitamin D supplementation would help in the prevention of diarrheal illnesses,” lead author Dr Adam Aluisio of the Department of Disease Control at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine said.

“Vitamin D plays a role in the body’s defences against microbes such as viruses and bacteria—we know this from biochemical studies,” he told Reuters Health.

But previous studies have relied on laboratory experiments and observations from the field, both of which fall short of medicine’s gold standard — the randomized clinical trial. Aluisio and colleagues found evidence of only one other vitamin D trial for diarrhea that was conducted with fewer than 50 children in Bangladesh.

Around the world, and especially in poorer countries, diarrheal diseases kill 1.8 million children under the age of five every year, according to the World Health Organization.

Supplemental vitamin A and zinc have been shown to reduce diarrheal illnesses in children, and researchers have hoped that vitamin D might be another tool to protect young children.

For their study, Aluisio’s team extracted data from a trial conducted between 2007 and 2009 that looked at vitamin D’s possible effects on childhood pneumonia. During that trial, the researchers, who include some co-authors of the current study, recorded diarrheal incidents as well.

More than 3,000 babies under one year were randomly assigned to one of two groups. The first group received 100,000 international units of vitamin D3 in liquid form once every three months for almost two years. The second group received a placebo for the same time period.

Field workers collected data from participating families twice each week, asking parents whether their child had experienced diarrheal incidents in the previous 24 hours.

Both groups of families averaged roughly three diarrheal incidents per child, per year. There were no differences between the babies who got the vitamin D and those who didn’t in the number of diarrheal bouts, the average time until the first bout, or in other factors such as malnutrition and how often mothers washed their hands.

UN report ranks world's happiest countries

BEIJING, 12 Sept — Northern Europe seems to be the world's happiest place, according to a United Nations report that looked at a variety of lifestyle and well-being measures.

The 2013 World Happiness Report, the second of its kind, was published on Monday by the United Nations Sustainable Development Solutions Network.

Denmark, Norway, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Sweden, all in northern Europe, are the world's happiest countries, according to the survey of 156 countries.

The lowest ranked are Rwanda, Burundi, the Central African Republic, Benin and Togo, all in Africa, according to the report. The United States ranks 17 in the world in terms of overall happiness, lagging behind Canada (6), Australia (10), Israel (11), the United Arab Emirates (14), and Mexico (16), according to the survey.

Based on how people rate their overall satisfaction with life, the survey took into consideration economic conditions, life expectancy, social support, and other factors. The global survey, conducted between 2010 and 2012, showed overall increases in happiness from the first round, conducted between 2005 and 2011.—Xinhua

Russia beefs up naval presence in Mediterranean

MOSCOW, 12 Sept — Russia beefs up its naval presence in the Mediterranean Sea with three more warships heading to that region, the Defence Ministry said on Wednesday.

The guard cruiser Moskva has passed through the Strait of Gibraltar and is expected to reach the designated area next Tuesday, said the ministry.

Upon its arrival, Moskva would replace the anti-submarine ship Admiral Panteleyev as the flagship of the Russian Navy unit in the Mediterranean.

Meanwhile, the big landing ship Nikolai Filchenkov had also left from the Russian port of Novorossiisk late Tuesday, RIA Novosti news agency reported, citing an unnamed source in the Navy.

The Nikolai Filchenkov would enter the Mediterranean on Thursday, said the source, further noting that after its arrival, another guard ship Smetlivy would head toward Syria from the naval base of Sevastopol in Crimea, Ukraine.

The three ships would meet in a designated area on 15-17 September, the source added. At the end of September, Russia also plans to deploy two more warships in the Eastern Mediterranean: a missile boat Ivanovets and another small missile ship Shtil, the source told RIA Novosti.

30 killed, 55 wounded in suicide attack in Iraq's capital

BAGHDAD, 12 Sept — At least 30 people were killed and 55 others wounded in a suicide attack at a Shiite mosque in the Iraqi capital of Baghdad on Wednesday, an interior ministry official said.

A suicide bomber wearing an explosive belt blew himself up at al Temimi mosque in the Kasra area in northern Baghdad at about 6:40 pm (1540 GMT), killing at least 30 people and injuring 55 others, a source in the Iraqi interior ministry told Xinhua.

The Iraqi security forces closed all the roads that lead to the explosion site as the wounded were rushed to hospital for treatment, the source added.

No group has so far claimed responsibility for the attack, but the al-Qaeda front in Iraq, in most cases, was responsible for such violent acts in the country, raising fears that the terrorist group could return to widespread violence.

Since early this year Iraq has witnessed worsening security situation and repeatedly massive bombings that have targeted different cities, indicating that high-profile violent attacks are still common in Iraq despite the dramatic decrease in violence since its peak in 2006 and 2007, when the country was engulfed in sectarian killings.—Xinhua

A third of food is wasted, making it third-biggest carbon emitter, UN says

ROME, 12 Sept — The food the world wastes accounts for more greenhouse gas emissions than any country except for China and the United States, the United Nations said in a report on Wednesday. Every year about a third of all food for human consumption, around 1.3 billion tons, is wasted, along with all the energy, water and chemicals needed to produce it and dispose of it.

Sombre US ceremonies mark 12th anniversary of 11 September attacks

NEW YORK/WASHINGTON, 12 Sept — Americans marked the 12th anniversary of the 11 September attacks with solemn ceremonies and pledges not to forget the nearly 3,000 killed when hijacked jetliners crashed into the World Trade Centre, the Pentagon and a Pennsylvania field, in 2001.

In New York City, still scarred from the attacks that brought down the Twin Towers, residents repeated the ritual on Wednesday of reading the names of the 2,983 people who died that day. Officials, including former Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and his successor Michael Bloomberg, observed a citywide moment of silence at 8:46 am EDT (1246 GMT), the time American Airlines Flight 11 crashed into the North Tower, with a second pause at 9:03 am (1303 GMT) when United Airlines Flight 175 struck the South Tower.

The ceremony was held at the National September 11 Memorial plaza, where two reflecting pools mark the footprints of the original Twin Towers.

Further moments of silence will be observed at 9:37 am (1337 GMT), when American Airlines Flight 77 hit the Pentagon; at 9:59 am (1359 GMT) when the South Tower fell; at 10:03 am (1403 GMT) when United Flight 93 hit the ground near Shanksville, Pennsylvania; and at 10:28 am (1428 GMT), when the North Tower collapsed.

to the annual discharge of the River Volga, are in effect being used in vain.

In its report entitled "The Food Wastage Footprint", the UN Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) estimated that the carbon footprint of wasted food was equivalent to 3.3 billion tons of carbon dioxide per year.

If it were a country, it would be the world's third biggest emitter after China and the United States, suggesting that more efficient food use could contribute substantially to global efforts to cut greenhouse gases to limit global warming.

In the industrialized world, much of the waste comes from consumers buying too much and throwing away what they do not eat. In developing countries, it is mainly the result of inefficient farming and a lack of proper storage facilities.

"Food wastage reduction would not only avoid pressure on scarce natural resources but also decrease the need to raise food production by 60 percent in order to meet the 2050 population demand," the FAO said. It suggested improving communication between producers and consumers to manage the supply chain more efficiently, as well as investing more in harvesting, cooling and packaging methods.

It also said consumers in the developed world should be encouraged to serve smaller portions and make more use of leftovers. Businesses should give surplus food to charities, and develop alternatives to dumping organic waste in landfill. The FAO estimated the cost of the wasted food, excluding fish and seafood, at about $750 billion a year, based on producer prices.

Give a helping hand to census taking process

What is a census? Roughly speaking, census is the process of officially counting something, especially a country's population. So it can be seen that the term is used mostly in connection with national population and housing census but there are such other common censuses as agriculture, business, and traffic censuses, etc.

Now, Myanmar is on her way to democracy and pursuing national development. In the process, human resource development is a must in addition to possession of abundant natural resources. A government needs to know actual capacity of its population, so then, based on this capacity, it can decide a plan for the prosperity of its citizens.

To fulfill the needs of its citizens, a government must lay down plans and programmes. A result which will come out from the plan mainly rests on accuracy of facts and figures of the objective conditions. This means facts and figures to be collected are also important as it will serve the national interests and contribute to the work process.

National population and housing census is the basis for laying down plans for national development. Myanmar will see such kind of census in 2014. As the facts and figures on population are the basis for national-level management of various sectors, these facts and figures must be accurate. Every citizen in the country should keep in mind that only accurate figures can help produce a master plan. Only then would the projects for national development be implemented.

Myanmar's census taking process in 2014 will be carried out applying advanced technologies and equipments. In that regard, people need to give accurate facts and figures to officials. It is important to know the fact that census taking is carried out just in the interest of the people, and people's cooperation in the process will produce actual facts and figures thereby leading to national development.

A wrong data will produce a wrong result only. This will surely lead to undesirable consequences. So, let's give a helping hand to census taking process, by providing accurate data, and keeping in mind the motto that says "Those who are to suffer the consequence of producing wrong data are just the people", to avoid horrible mistakes.

Vietnam, Singapore to elevate bilateral ties to strategic partnership

HANOI, 12 Sept—Vietnam and Singapore announced to elevate the bilateral relations to strategic partnership during the visit to Vietnam by Singaporean Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong on Wednesday.

The announcement was made at a Press briefing after their talks in Hanoi. Addressing the Press briefing, Vietnamese Prime Minister Nguyen Tan Dung said that the bilateral relations had been continuously strengthened during the past years and the achievement gained would create a great momentum for a more effective cooperation in the coming years.

Dung expressed his belief that the strategic partnership will not only map out new strategies to bring bilateral ties to more intensive, effective and sustainable but also contribute to the building of the ASEAN Community by 2015 as well as for peace, cooperation and development in the Asia-Pacific and the world.

For his part, the Singaporean prime minister said that the strategic partner-

Beijing reveals annual vehicle emissions load

BEIJING, 12 Sept— Motor vehicles in Beijing consume more than 7 million tons of fuel annually, discharging about 900,000 tons of emissions every year, municipal environmental authorities said on Tuesday.

The capital currently has 5.35 million vehicles, which consume over 4 million tons of gasoline and more than 2 million tons of diesel annually, said Li Kunsheng, an official in charge of vehicle emission management with the Beijing Municipal Environmental Protection Bureau.

The annual vehicle emission load is about 900,000 tons and contains 77,000 tons of hydrocarbons and over 80,000 tons of nitrogen oxides, according to Li.

"Vehicle emissions have been proven to contain over 100 kinds of carcinogenic substances. Even worse, the emissions are discharged at low altitudes, which may affect people's health more directly," Li said. Cars in the city are considered major polluters in Beijing, with its number keeps growing.

A report by a research team from the Chinese Academy of Sciences revealed that vehicle exhaust has beaten industrial emission to become Beijing's top sources of air pollution, contributing to 22.2 percent of PM 2.5 particles.

PM 2.5 particles are airborne particles measuring less than 2.5 microns

Zimbabwe's Mugabe names cabinet

HARARE, 12 Sept— Zimbabwe's President Robert Mugabe on Tuesday unveiled the new cabinet for his new presidential term for the next five years.

The veteran leader, who has ruled Zimbabwe for 33 years since independence, named seasoned members of his Zanu-PF party to key cabinet posts.

Sydney Sekeramayi, former minister of state security, was appointed defence minister; Patrick Chinamasa, the former justice minister, was named to head the finance ministry, while Jonathan Moyo was re-appointed as the information minister.

President Mugabe won 61 percent of the vote, against 34 percent for his nearest challenger, former Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai, on 31 July presidential election.

Zanu-PF, meanwhile, garnered more than two thirds majority in parliament.—Xinhua

China Cultural Centre in Malta marks 10th anniversary

VALLETTA, 12 Sept— The China Cultural Centre in Malta hosted a reception on Tuesday to mark its 10th anniversary.

The event was attended by more than 300 guests, including Tourism Minister Karmenu Vella, Education Minister Evatrist Bartolo and former President Ugo

Bonnici.

The reception also featured song and dance performances of a troupe from China's northwestern Qinghai Province, which become sought after among Maltese as the artists have successfully given shows in the country in the last three days.

Gu Hongxing, director of China Cultural Centre in Malta, said the centre, the first of its kind in Europe when it was established, has already become an important platform for cultural exchanges between Malta and China.

Chinese ambassador Cai Jinbiao said the centre brought China and Malta together despite the distance and differences between the two countries.

Maltese Parliamentary Secretary for Culture Jose Herrera said the two countries will be shortly signing another agreement to enhance cultural cooperation, particularly in the context that Valletta will serve as the European Capital of Culture in 2018.

During the past decade, the China Cultural Centre has held more than 1,000 cultural events in Malta, some of which have become hallmark ones.

Natalie Portman excited about moving to Paris

LONDON, 12 Sept—Hollywood actress Natalie Portman is considering applying for French citizenship as she prepares to move to Paris with her husband and young son.

The Black Swan star's husband Benjamin Millepied has accepted a job with the Paris Opera Ballet and the family will move to the French capital next year, reported Contactmusic.

Portman reveals she is already house-hunting and is even considering becoming a French citizen to complete her move to Europe.

"We're looking for an apartment. Benjamin and I are moving in autumn 2014 when his job at the Paris Opera Ballet starts.

It's obviously a massive change to quit Los Angeles for Paris. I don't know what my life is going to be like, but I'm so excited. I don't have the French nationality, but I would belove to get it.

"But I don't know if it's possible because I already have an American and an Israeli passport... Perhaps I should add an 'h' to my name to make it sound more French - Nathalie," she said.

The couple met on the set of Portman's Oscar-winning film Black Swan. They married in August, 2012, three months after their son, Alef, was born.

Harrison Ford turned 71 this year wife Calista Flockhart.

The actor currently stars in Paranoia with British star Gary Oldman, comedy Anchorman 2 and cult science fiction drama Ender's Game besides a small role in Expendables 3 where he replaced Bruce Willis.

"I think retirement's for old people. I'm still in the business, thank you. I have a young child and I want to live as long as I can to see him grow up. I have three young grandchildren, I'm enjoying my life and I want to stick around for as long as I can," Ford told the Daily Mirror. Stage set for Ozil to launch his Arsenal career

Real Madrid's Mesut Ozil celebrates his goal during their Spanish First Division football match against Real Betis at Santiago Bernabeu stadium in Madrid on 20 April, 2013.
REUTERS

LONDON, 12 Sept—Arsenal fans waited a long time for a big summer signing and when the club smashed its transfer record on Mesut Ozil on deadline day the international break meant another delay before they could feast their eyes on him in club colours.

The Germany international, signed from Real Madrid for 42 million pounds, was a huge coup for manager Arsene Wenger and after scoring in a World Cup qualifier in the Faroe Islands in midweek Ozil is set for his debut at Sunderland on Saturday.

England's north east coast is a little more hospitable than windswept Torshavn but nevertheless Ozil will quickly learn about the physical demands of English football against a Sunderland side desperate to kickstart their season.

Ozil is not the only player anxious to make an instant impression for a new club as the domestic season swings back into action after World Cup distractions.

Marouane Fellaini will be eager to pull on a Manchester United shirt for the first time after his 27.5 million pounds deadline day move from Everton.

Like Arsenal, United were quiet in the transfer window but the introduction of Belgian midfielder Fellaini will give David Moyes' side some added venom as they host newcomers Crystal Palace at Old Trafford, having managed only one win from their opening three Premier League games.

Everton will have Gareth Barry (on loan from Manchester City) in their ranks as they take on Chelsea although striker Romelu Lukaku will not make his debut because of Premier League rules on loaned players playing against their mother club.—Reuters

Woods back in happy Chicago hunting ground

LAKE FOREST, 12 Sept—With his ailing back much improved after a one-week break from the PGA Tour, an upbeat Tiger Woods will tee off in Thursday's opening round of the BMW Championship in pursuit of his sixth win this season.

Though the American world number one will be competing for the first time on the par-71 layout at Conway Farms Golf Club, he boasts an impressive record in the Chicago area.

Not only has Woods twice clinched the PGA Championship at nearby Medinah, but he has also visited the winner's circle on five occasions at Cog Hill, twice in the BMW Championship and three times in its predecessor, the Western Open.

"Obviously it's very different compared to Cog Hill and Medinah, but it is a nice track," Woods said of Conway Farms after playing there in the pro-am competition on a muggy Wednesday.

"It's a little confined in the sense that it's going to be interesting to see how they're going to get the gallery around here, especially on the front nine, the bottle-necks over on (holes) five and six.

"All the times I've been in Chicago, it's a great sporting town. They come out and support their events. This will be a fun crowd."

Asked by a reporter what he considered as his single greatest moment in the Chicago area, Woods replied: "Probably Medinah, winning there twice."

Tiger Woods

When twice pressed to narrow that 'moment' down to just one, Woods grinned while replying each time: "Winning there twice."

Raikkonen to partner Alonso at Ferrari

LONDON, 12 Sept—Kimi Raikkonen will race for Ferrari next season in a two-year deal that takes the 2007 world champion back to the glamour team he left in 2009 and creates the strongest pairing in Formula One.

Ferrari said in a statement on Wednesday that the 33-year-old 'Iceman', currently with Lotus, will replace Brazilian Felipe Massa alongside Spain's double world champion Fernando Alonso.

"Scuderia Ferrari announces that it has reached an agreement with Kimi Raikkonen. The Finn will join Fernando Alonso in the driver line-up for the next two racing seasons," the statement said.

The famously taciturn Finn told the Ferrari website (www.ferrari.com) that he was happy to be returning to Maranello.

"I can't wait to be driving a Prancing Horse car again and to reacquire myself with so many people with whom I had such close links, as well as working with Fernando, whom I consider a great driver, in order to bring the team the success it deserves," he added.

Alonso, who has a contract to the end of 2016, had left little doubt that he would have been happy to continue with Massa and thanked the Brazilian for his support in their four years together.

"Come the end of the season, it will not be easy to say goodbye to a team mate like him," said the Spaniard. "He has always been truly professional and loyal to the team."—Reuters

McIlroy to tee off in Korea Open in October

LONDON, 12 Sept—Double major winner and world number four Rory McIlroy will hope to make it third time lucky when he tees off at OneAsia's Korea Open next month, organisers said on Thursday.

The 24-year-old Briton was joint third in his first appearance in 2009 and returned in 2011 to finish runner-up behind American Rickie Fowler with a final-round 64.

The course at the Woo Jeong Hills Country Club on the outskirts of Seoul has not proved too daunting for the former world number one on his previous visits but McIlroy was quick to highlight the dangers posed by the shorter holes. "I remember the course, but the thing I remember most is that the par threes are tough, especially on the back nine," McIlroy said in a statement from the organisers ahead of the 17-20 October event.

"All aspects of your game have to be in shape every week, but especially iron play considering the tough par threes we will have to play." China, Laos share poverty reduction experiences

NANNING, 12 Sept—A seminar to promote policy sharing on poverty reduction and development between China and Laos opened on Wednesday in Nanning, capital of south China's Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region.

"Laos and China can share their experiences of poverty reduction with each other," said Zhang Yan, a project manager at the United Nations Development Programme China.

During the five-day seminar, the Lao delegates will visit several cities to study industrial poverty alleviation projects, advanced rural construction and modern agriculture.

"I will bring the knowledge back to Laos and I believe this event marks a start for more exchange opportunities," said Kikeo Naovalat, head of the Laos delegation.

Eradicating extreme poverty and hunger is the first of eight Millennium Development Goals established in 2000. All UN member states have agreed to achieve these goals by 2015.

Syrians queue for passports despite reprieve from US strike

DAMASCUS, 12 Sept—The threat of US air strikes on their country may be receding for now, but Syrians queuing for passports in a central Damascus office were taking no chances.

Dozens stood in line for hours on Tuesday, many returning for a second day, seeking passports in case talks over Syria's chemical weapons unravel or the country's protracted civil war reaches once more into the heart of the capital.

Already two million people have fled to neighbouring countries, escaping bloodshed in which at least 100,000 people have died, according to the United Nations. Damascenes remain wary even though US military action in response to a chemical gas attack in Damascus, which Washington blames on President Bashar al-Assad's forces, has been deferred after Syria welcomed a Russian proposal to put its chemical weapons stocks under international supervision and destroy them.

"We just decided it was time we got passports for the whole family," said Raghad, a mother of three in her thirties. Her family has traveled to neighbouring Lebanon — where Syrians can stay without travel documents — every time "things got bad here", but are unable to go further without passports.

"Now with all this news, what if we went to Lebanon and couldn't return? We need passports in case we have no choice but to travel to a third country," she said. "For now, based on the latest news, we're staying until something changes."

Nadal ready to empty tank to help Spain stay in top tier

Rafael Nadal

NEW YORK, 12 Sept—A tired Rafa Nadal is ready to give his all for Spain in this weekend's Davis Cup playoff against Ukraine after a draining US Open brought him his 13th grand slam title.

With his country's elite World Group status in the balance, Nadal is ready to put his aching limbs on the line just days after beating world number one Novak Djokovic at Flushing Meadows to win his second major of the year.

"We change the surface in a short time and I have just made a big effort but I'm going to do whatever I can to help the team," Nadal told reporters on Wednesday ahead of the tie in Madrid.

"If it is on Friday it would be on Friday, if it is on Saturday, on Saturday, if it is on Sunday, on Sunday. I'm going to try to help with everything within my capabilities."

The Mallorcan's victory in New York capped a stunning year in which he returned from a seven-month injury absence to re-assert himself as a dominant force in the game.

Since re-emerging at a low-key claycourt tournament in Chile in February, the Spaniard has been virtually unstoppable.

Having won the French Open for a record eighth time, Nadal put a disappointing Wimbledon behind him to dominate on the hard courts and move to within four majors of Roger Federer's record haul of 17.

Any thoughts of a relaxing break have had to be put on the backburner, however, as duty calls him back to court to help keep his country in tennis's top tier.

After an under-strength Spain lost to Canada in the Davis Cup first round, they find themselves in unfamiliar territory having only competed in four playoffs in the last 17 years.

Nadal reacted tetchily to suggestions that he could be below par after his recent exertions.

"I've just said it. (I feel) well," he added. "I've got good feelings. What do you want me to say after having winning three tournaments in a row, my feelings couldn't be better."

With home advantage and Nadal's favourite red clay under foot, Spain, whose lineup also includes Tommy Robredo and Fernando Verdasco, should have the edge over a Ukraine team with only one player, Alexandr Dolgoplov, in the world's top 50.
