Hollande bids to deflect glare from private life to reforms

PARIS, 14 Jan — President Francois Hollande will aim at a news conference on Tuesday to set out plans to revive the weak French economy and deflect questions about his private life after allegations surfaced of a secret love affair with an actress.

His New Year's encounter with journalists in his Elysee Palace will be the French leader's first public appearance since a celebrity magazine on Friday published photos it said showed Hollande making a nocturnal visit to a lover.

His office complained of breach of privacy but did not issue a denial. The saga took a surprise new turn on Sunday when it emerged that his long-term partner, Valerie Trierweiler, had been admitted to hospital in a state of shock. "This major political event must remain a major political event," David Assouline, spokesman for Hollande's Socialist party, said of the 4:30 p.m. (10.30 a.m. ET) news conference, an annual set-piece which could go on as long as two hours. Hollande plans to use the event to detail a proposed "responsibility pact" with business in which firms will be offered tax cuts and less red tape in return for hiring commitments aimed at reducing 12 percent unemployment. But chances of the agenda being hijacked by the alleged affair are high. A similar event staged by predecessor Nicolas Sarkozy after his 2007 divorce was dominated by curiosity over his ties to singer Carla Bruni, whom he subsequently wed.

While a poll at the weekend showed four-fifths of French voters considered the matter a private affair for Hollande and his family, the news of former journalist Trierweiler's admission to hospital prompted critics to break their silence.

Thai protesters target ministries, threaten bourse

BANGKOK, 14 Jan — Protesters trying to topple Thailand's government said they would tighten the blockade around ministries on Tuesday and a hardline faction threatened to storm the stock exchange, while many major intersections in the capital Bangkok remained blocked.

The turmoil is the latest chapter in an eight-year conflict pitting the Bangkok-based middle class and royalist establishment against the mostly poorer, rural supporters of Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra and her brother, Thaksin Shinawatra, a former premier who was ousted by the military in 2006.

Many ministries and the central bank were forced to work from backup offices on Monday after protesters led by Suthep Thaugsuban stopped civil servants getting to work.

"We must surround government buildings, closing them in the morning and leaving in the afternoon,"

Suthep told supporters late on Monday, urging them to do that every day until Yingluck steps down.

A student group allied to Suthep's People's Democratic Reform Committee has threatened to attack the stock exchange, with faction leader Nitithorn Lam-lua telling supporters on Monday it represented "a wicked capitalist system that provided the path for Thaksin to become a billionaire".

Egyptians vote in constitutional referendum seen boosting Sisi

CAIRO, 14 Jan — Egyptians vote on Tuesday in a constitutional referendum, the first ballot since the military overthrew Islamist president Mohamed Mursi and an event likely to spawn a presidential bid by army chief General Abdel Fattah al-Sisi.

Few doubt that Egyptians, who staged mass protests against Mursi's rule before his ouster, will turn out in big numbers and vote "yes" in the two-day referendum, a milestone in the army-backed government's political road map.

Sisi deposed Mursi, Egypt's first freely elected head of state, in July. His foes see Sisi as the mastermind of a coup that kindled the worst internal strife in Egypt's modern history and brought back what critics call a police state.

But many Egyptians are weary of the political upheaval that has gripped Egypt and shattered its economy since they rose up to topple autocrat Hosni Mubarak in 2011, and they view Sisi as a decisive figure who can reinstate stability.

Analysts say the referendum is also turning out to be a vote on the popularity of a man whose image features on posters across Cairo.

If he runs for president, Sisi is widely expected to win.

"He's a man," said Om Sami, who lives in a Cairo slum, summing up a widespread view that bringing back powerful military officers to rule would be acceptable, even though it could undermine democratic gains made after Mubarak's fall.

"The situation does not please us, but we'll vote 'yes' and God willing it will get better." This will be the third time Egyptians have voted on constitutional arrangements since the historic uprising against Mubarak, a former air force chief, in January 2011, and overall the sixth time they have gone to the polls since his downfall.—Reuters

Japan rejects UN request to transport troops in S Sudan

TOKYO, 14 Jan — Japan has turned down a U.N. request to transport military personnel and weapons as part of its peacekeeping operations in crisis-hit South Sudan, Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga said on Tuesday.

The decision apparently reflects the government's concern that it will go against Japan's Constitution banning the exercise of collective self-defence.

"We decided to take a cautious approach to the request after examining various factors, including the handling by other governments and legal aspects," Suga, the government's top spokesman, said at a Press conference. Japan currently interprets the Constitution as banning the exercise of collective self-defence, or using military strength to defend an ally under armed attack, given that Article 9 of the pacifist charter forbids the use of force to settle international disputes. The government decided not to accept the UN request as it would take time to prepare the legal basis at home for allowing the SDF to engage in the mission and because the mission could be conducted by other countries, Japanese officials said.

Under Japan's PKO law, the SDF can be involved in the transportation of personnel and goods overseas, but it does not apply to foreign troops. The UN Security Council adopted a resolution in late December to nearly double the force level of the UN Mission in South Sudan. Aside from Japan, the body also asked the United States and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to help send additional personnel.

Japan announces $11.6 mil in aid for Ethiopia to help refugees

ADDIS ABABA, 14 Jan — Prime Minister Shinzo Abe announced on Monday that Japan will provide financial aid worth $11.6 million (1.2 billion yen) to Ethiopia to help refugees in neighbouring countries affected by civil war.

Abe, on the last leg of his Middle East and Africa trip, also agreed with Ethiopian Prime Minister Hailemariam Desalegn during their talks to bolster bilateral economic ties in a way that will encourage more Japanese companies to operate in the African country. Abe was quoted by Japanese officials as telling Hailemariam he supports the role of Ethiopia, chair of the African Union, as a mediator in South Sudan's peace process.

Hailemariam, for his part, welcomed the peace-keeping operations of Japan's Self-Defence Forces in South Sudan and antipiracy operations off Somalia, and praised Abe's government for trying to make Japan an active contributor to peace.

On the economic front, Abe told Hailemariam that Japanese companies are very interested in investing in Ethiopia and promised to continue aid in various fields such as agriculture, infrastructure building and education. Hailemariam vowed to improve customs procedures to pave the way for increased Japanese investment including from small and mid-sized coming, said in a television interview. Mitofsky in July had Quijano with 33 percent of voters' support and Sanchez with 32 percent.

El Salvador opposition party leads tight election race

SAN SALVADOR, 14 Jan — The presidential candidate from El Salvador's right-wing opposition Nationalist Republican Alliance (ARENA) party is extending his narrow lead in the race to win February's election, according to a poll released on Monday.

ARENA candidate Norman Quijano has 35.5

The Mitofsky poll shows different results to surveys by the Central American Jesuit University, which have consistently put Sanchez ahead. In December, the latter's poll showed World powers, Iran to implement interim Geneva deal on Teheran's nuclear programme

GENEVA, 14 Jan — An agreement was finalized between the P5+1 and Iran on ways to implement the first-step Geneva agreement on Teheran's nuclear programme, according to a statement from European Union foreign policy chief Catherine Ashton which was received by Xinhua here on Monday.

Ashton, who has presented the P5+1 group during the previous rounds of Iran nuclear talks, said in the statement that initial measures to implement the interim Geneva deal inked in November were finalized after the latest two-day meeting which was concluded on 10 January, with the presence of EEAS

Deputy Secretary General Helga Schmid on behalf of Ashton, and Iranian Deputy Foreign Minister Abbas Araqchi.

The technical and concrete measures were hammered out after three rounds of expert-level meetings between the P5+1 group, namely the United States, Britain, France, Russia, China plus Germany, and Iran, partly with the involvement of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). Ashton said that this agreement was subsequently endorsed by all capitals.

"Thanks to this agreement on the implementation modalities, the foundations for a coherent, robust and smooth implementation of the Joint Plan of Action over the six-month period have been laid," said Ashton. The senior official said that the P5+1 and Iran would start to implement the first step from January, 2014, and the IAEA will be asked to "undertake the necessary nuclear-related monitoring and verification activities".

In November 2013, the P5+1 group and Iran reached an interim deal in Geneva whereby Iran would freeze part of its nuclear programme in exchange for limited ease of sanctions which have taken a serious toll on Iran's economy. The latest agreement laid the ground to carry out the deal.

US Russia propose "localized" ceasefire in Syria ahead of peace talks

PARIS, 14 Jan — US Secretary of State John Kerry said on Monday he and Russian Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov discussed the possibility of a ceasefire in Syria ahead of peace talks in Switzerland later this month.

"We talked about the possibility of trying to encourage a ceasefire (in Syria), maybe a localized ceasefire beginning with Aleppo," the US top diplomat told a news conference after talks with Lavrov and UN-Arab League envoy on Syria Lakhdar Brahimi in Paris. Talking about whether Iran should attend the Syria peace talks to be held in Montreux of Switzerland on 22 January, Kerry said only if Tehran agrees to principles set out in the first Syria peace conference held in Geneva in June 2012, including the creation of a transitional government in the country.

"Iran has yet to state whether or not it supports implementing the Geneva 1 communique," he said. For his part, Lavrov reiterated Moscow's support for including Iran in the peace talks. "It's quite clear Iran and Saudi Arabia should participate in this conference," he said. —Xinhua

Mexico urges vigilantes to stand down in drug gang conflict

NUEVA ITALIA, (Mexico), 14 Jan — Mexico's government on Monday pledged to take control of a violent western state after days of fighting between masked vigilantes and members of one of the country's most powerful drug cartels.

Since late last year, vigilante groups in the state of Michoacan have moved deeper into territory controlled by the Knights Templar cartel and they now are converging on Apatzingan, considered one of gang's main strongholds.

The vigilantes' advance has raised the risk of a bloody urban battle in Apatzingan. Interior Minister Miguel Angel Osorio Chong on Monday urged the vigilante groups to withdraw from the battleground so federal forces could take control.

"Be certain that we will contain the violence in Michoacan," Osorio Chong said at an event in the state capital of Morelia.

President Enrique Pena Nieto, who just ended his first year in office, has sought to shift the public focus away from grinding violence and onto a series of economic reforms he has pushed through a divided Congress.

But a steady stream of killings that plagued his predecessor's term continues, and the deepening crisis in Michoacan is beginning to cast doubt on his ability to maintain order. Drug trafficking gangs have been waging battles over trafficking routes for the last decade.

Analysts warned that any siege on Apatzingan by the vigilante groups could spark a much larger and more unpredictable urban conflict. They also said the government may have waited too long to try to contain the growing vigilante movement.

"This is a war. This is no longer an issue of public safety, or normal law enforcement. This is a political-military conflict between a number of armed groups," said security analyst Alejandro Hope of the Mexican Competitiveness Institute think tank. "This could get out of control any time now."

Masked vigilantes took power in more than a dozen rural communities in 2013 across Michoacan, claiming authorities were failing to stop rising extortion, kidnapping and violence.

The government appeared to tolerate the so-called self-defence groups, apparently in the hope they could oust the Knights Templar and help restore order.

"Zip gun" prompts high school evacuation in Texas

HOUSTON, 14 Jan — A "potentially explosive device" was found Monday on a high school campus in the US state of Texas, prompting evacuation, and was later proved to be a zip gun, local media reported.

Officials with the Seven Lakes High School in Katy in southeastern Texas reported on Monday morning a suspicious backpack on the campus, local media KHOU reported.

All the 3,000-some students were evacuated, and police and a bomb squad were called to the scene.

Authorities found hours later that the suspicious device in the backpack was a zip gun, a device that can propel an object to cause harm. Devices like this are often made with a pipe and can fire nails, according to the report.

A male student suspect was then taken into custody. His motive of bringing the gun to the campus is unknown. Officials said charges are pending for him.

The Seven Lakes High School remained locked on Monday evening and reportedly will resume its normal schedule on Tuesday. —Xinhua

Colombia, FARC resume peace talks in Havana

HAVANA, 14 Jan — Colombian officials and leftist rebels resumed peace talks Monday in Havana, Cuba, with the insurgent group urging voters to use upcoming elections to reject right-wing candidates.

As the two delegations gathered for the latest round of talks following a three-week break, the head negotiator for the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) and the group's second in command, Ivan Marquez, read a statement to the Press saying that conservative candidates running for public posts will not uphold the peace talks. "None of the candidates from the right, much less those from the extreme right, are an option for achieving peace," said Marquez. Colombia, which is a little over a year into peace talks designed to put an end to five decades of fighting between armed leftist rebels and state forces, will hold parliamentary elections on 9 March and presidential elections on 25 May.

Colombian President Juan Manuel Santos is currently in favor with the electorate for his part in promoting peace negotiations with FARC, and seems poised to be re-elected.

The government delegation, as is customary, did not make any statements to the press as it arrived for the talks, which are expected to tackle FARC's dependence on the drug trade to finance its resistance movement.

Earlier negotiations, which began on 17 November, 2012, have led to accords on rural development and political participation for rebels once they have disarmed. —Xinhua

Sharon funeral highlights conflicting views of Israeli leader

SYCAMORE FARM, (Israel), 14 Jan — Israel buried former prime minister Ariel Sharon at his family farm on Monday, celebrating the military achievements of a man regarded as a war hero at home but as a war criminal by many in the Arab world.

Eulogized first in a ceremony in Jerusalem, and later in the green fields of his estate, speakers hailed a life entwined with that of Israel since its 1948 creation, gently alluding as well to the controversies that also defined his career.

US Vice President Joe Biden and former British Prime Minister Tony Blair laid wreaths at his grave, 10 km (6 miles) from the border of the Gaza Strip, with the army on high alert lest any rockets be fired out of the Palestinian territory.

Two missiles were launched into southern Israel soon after the funeral ended, the army said. It responded with air strikes on two militant camps in Gaza, Palestinian officials said. No injuries were reported in any of the attacks.

"We are accompanying to his final resting place today a soldier, an exceptional soldier, a commander who knew how to win," Israeli President Shimon Peres said in Jerusalem, Sharon's hefty coffin draped in Israel's blue and white flag.

Sharon, 85, died on Saturday after spending the last eight years of his life motionless in a hospital bed, pitched into a coma by a stroke and far from the public gaze.

The death of the former general reopened debate into his legacy. Opponents denounced his ruthless conduct in military operations while friends praised him as a strategic genius who as prime minister stunned the world in 2005 by pulling Israeli troops and settlers out of Gaza.

"The security of his people was always Arik's unwavering mission — a non-breakable commitment to the future of Jews, whether 30 years or 300 years from now," Biden said, using Sharon's nickname.

Ex-PM Hosokawa to run in Tokyo governor race with Koizumi's support

TOKYO, 14 Jan — Former Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa said on Tuesday he will run in the upcoming Tokyo gubernatorial election after securing the backing of former Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi at a meeting in Tokyo.

Hosokawa's camp considered it critical for his gubernatorial campaign to have the full support of Koizumi, a popular leader who has attracted publicity for renouncing his pro-nuclear power stance. "The nuclear issue is something that is worth working on as a governor," said Hosokawa after meeting with Koizumi at a Tokyo hotel. "I would give my all." Koizumi said the biggest reason for his supporting Hosokawa is the fact that they share common views on nuclear policy and added, "We can change the country for sure if we show that Tokyo can live without nuclear power."

Hosokawa's camp is already working to draw up campaign pledges including breaking with nuclear power, enhancing social security and promoting exchanges with overseas cities. It is also considering a plan to hold some of the 2020 Olympic Games in the northeastern Japan region of Tohoku which was devastated by the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami.

Hosokawa, 76, was Prime Minister between August 1993 and April 1994. He plans on running in the 9 February gubernatorial election as an individual without seeking official recommendations from political parties.

ive training. The findings, published on Monday in the Journal of the American Geriatrics Society, offer welcome news in the search for ways to keep the mind sharp as 76 million baby boomers in the United States advance into old age.

The federally sponsored trial of almost 3,000 older adults, called the Advanced Cognitive Training for Independent and Vital Elderly study, or ACTIVE, looked at how three brain training programs — focusing on processing speed, memory and reasoning ability — affected cognitively normal adults as they aged.

People in the study had an average age of 74 when they started the training, which involved 10 to 12 sessions lasting 60 to 75 minutes each. After five years, researchers found, those with the training performed better than their untrained counterparts in all three measures.

Although gains in memory seen at the study's five-year mark appeared to drop off over the next five years, gains in reasoning ability and processing speed persisted 10 years after the training.

"What we found was pretty astounding. Ten years after the training, there was evidence the effects were durable for the reasoning and the speed training," said George Rebok, an expert on aging and a professor at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, who led the study.

Google gains entry to home and prized team with $3.2 billion Nest deal

SAN FRANCISCO, 14 Jan — Google Inc took its biggest step to go deeper into consumers' homes, announcing a $3.2 billion deal to buy smart thermostat and smoke alarm-maker Nest Labs Inc, scooping up a promising line of products and a prized design team led by the "godfather" of the iPod.

Nest will continue to operate as its own distinct brand after the all-cash deal closes, Google said on Monday.

The deal is the second largest in Google's history after the $12.5 billion acquisition of mobile phone maker Motorola in 2012.

Like the Motorola deal, which marked Google's first major foray into hardware, the Nest acquisition gives Google a stepping stone into an important new market at a time when consumer appliances and Internet services are increasingly merging.

"Nest Labs appears to be focused on thermostats and smoke alarms, but it's not far-fetched to see Google expanding this technology into other devices over time," said Shyam Patil, an analyst at Wedbush.

"Home automation is one of the bigger opportunities when you talk about the Internet of everything and connecting everything. This acquisition furthers their strategy around that," he said.

Shares of Google were up 0.5 percent at $1,128.49 in extended trading on Monday.

device with a convex glass screen that displays temperature and changes hue to match the color of the wall it attaches to. It also tracks usage and employs that data to automatically set heating and cooling temperatures.

With the acquisition, Google gets Tony Fadell, a well-connected and well-respected Silicon Valley entrepreneur credited with creating Apple Inc's iconic iPod music player, along with co-founder Matt Rogers and a host of talented engineers and designers.

According to a search on professional network LinkedIn, roughly 100 of Nest's 300 employees have worked at Apple in the past.

Google, the world's largest online search engine, is increasingly expanding into new markets, with efforts ranging from a high-speed Internet access business to advanced research on self-driving cars and robotics.—Reuters

Caffeine can enhance people's memories

BEIJING, 14 Jan — Coffee can enhance people's memories at least 24 hours after it is consumed, according to a new study as quoted by media reports on Monday. Caffeine is known for long as the energy boost for staying awake.

Dr Michael Yassa, lead researcher and assistant professor of psychological and brain sciences at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore said, "caffeine's particular effects on strengthening memories and making them resistant to forgetting has never been examined in detail in humans until now."

In the study, more than 100 participants, who did not eat or drink caffeinated products often, were shown a series of images. Five minutes later, they were divided into two groups and received either a placebo or a 200-milligram caffeine tablet. The next day, they were shown some of the same images, plus similar ones and random new ones.

Both groups correctly identified pictures as being new or old, yet those on caffeine were better at spotting the similar images, hence proving caffeine can boost memory function up to 24 hours after it is consumed. "The next step for us is to figure out the brain mechanisms underlying this enhancement. Caffeine is associated with healthy longevity and may have some protective effects from cognitive decline like Alzheimer's disease. These are certainly important questions for the future," Yassa said.

Airbus realizes new records in orders, deliveries in 2013

PARIS, 14 Jan — European aircraft maker Airbus said on Monday it has reached a new record in 2013 with 626 commercial aircraft deliveries to 93 customers, of which 15 were new, and a new industry record of 1,619 gross orders.

The deliveries list included 493 A320 family aircraft, 108 A330, 25 A380, surpassing the 2012 record of 588 aircraft. Airbus Military delivered also 31 aircraft including seven A330 MRTT and two A400M for the French Air Force, the company said in a statement.

The 2013 new orders, worth a value of 240.5 billion US dollars, included 377 A320ceo, 876 A320neo, 77 A330, 239 A350 XWB, 50 A380. By the year end of 2013, "the backlog had climbed to an industry wide record of 5,559 aircraft, valued at 809 billion US dollars at list prices, or eight years production," the statement added.

According to the statement, the A320neo, launched in late 2010, surpassed 2,600 orders while strong sales of the A320ceo continued with more than 1,000 sold since the A320neo was launched. 2013 was also notable for the A350 XWB first flight. "Certification is targeted for Q3 and Entry Into Service for Q4 2014," the company confirmed. "To expand our leadership in single aisles and wide-bodies, 2014 will be significant with the first flight of the A320neo and the Entry Into Service of the A350 XWB," said Fabrice Bregier, Airbus President and CEO. New fossil reveals evolution of hind limbs

WASHINGTON, 14 Jan — An analysis of the well-preserved pelvis and a partial pelvic fin from Tiktaalik roseae, a 375 million-year-old transitional species between fish and the first legged animals, reveals that the evolution of hind legs actually began as enhanced hind fins, US researchers said on Monday. The discovery, published online in the US journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, challenged an existing theory that large, mobile hind appendages were developed only after vertebrates lived on land.

Neil Shubin, professor of the University of Chicago, and colleagues examined five specimens of Tiktaalik roseae remains recovered in 2004, 2006, 2008, and 2013 in northern Canada. The creature represents the best-known transitional species between fish and land-dwelling tetrapods. A lobe-finned fish with a broad flat head and sharp teeth, Tiktaalik looked like a cross between a fish and a crocodile, growing up to a length of 9 feet (about 2.7 metres) as it hunted in shallow freshwater environments.

It had gills, scales and fins, but also had tetrapod-like features such as a mobile neck, robust ribcage and primitive lungs. Its large forefins had shoulders, elbows and partial wrists, which allowed it to support itself on ground. The researchers studied the rear portion of Tiktaalik, which contained the pelvis as well as partial pelvic fin material. The fossils included a complete pelvis, making a direct comparison of the front and rear appendages of a single animal possible.

They found that the pelvis was comparable to those of some early tetrapods and that the pelvic girdle was nearly identical in size to its shoulder girdle, a tetrapod-like characteristic. "This is an amazing pelvis ... which is very different from anything that we knew of in the lineage leading up to limbed vertebrates," said co-author Edward Dae-schler, associate curator of Vertebrate Zoology at the Academy of Natural Sciences of Drexel University. "Tiktaalik was a combination of primitive and advanced features... They appear to have used the fin in a way that's more suggestive of the way a limb gets used."

Humans, primates expend fewer calories than other mammals

WASHINGTON, 14 Jan — Humans and other primates burn 50 percent fewer calories each day than other mammals, and these remarkably slow metabolisms may explain why they grow up so slowly and live such long lives, US researchers said on Monday.

The study, published in the US journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, also found that primates in zoos expend as much energy as those in the wild, suggesting that physical activity may have less of an impact on daily energy expenditure than is often thought. Researchers examined daily energy expenditure in 17 primate species, from gorillas to mouse lemurs, to test whether primates' slow pace of life results from a slow metabolism.

Using a safe and non-invasive technique known as "doubly labeled water", which tracks the body's production of carbon dioxide, the researchers measured the number of calories that primates burned over a 10-day period. Combining these measurements with similar data from other studies, the team compared daily energy expenditure among primates to that of other mammals.

New Acer CEO disappoints with lack of detail on future plans

TAIPEI, 14 Jan — Investors looking for specifics as to the future of Acer Inc, the world's No 4 PC vendor, came away disappointed when the new CEO spent more time delivering a history of the company's past mistakes than on where it was headed.

Jason Chen, the latest executive to step through the revolving door to the CEO's office, said during his first Press conference on Monday that the Taiwanese company's biggest mistake was investing too early in touch-panels and ultrabooks and not realizing the extent to which tablet computers like Apple Inc's iPad would disrupt the PC industry.

"We wanted to stimulate demand using new technology and we took the initiative more aggressively than anybody else, to the point where we got hurt," Chen said. "Hopefully we won't repeat the same mistake we made before."

Chen is the latest appointment in a series of top-level shake-ups at the struggling firm. In 2011, Italian-born Gianfranco Lanci resigned as CEO and in November, then-CEO J.T. Wang also resigned to be replaced by then-corporate president Jim Wong. Wong, however, stepped down only weeks later. Acer has been struggling with losses for several quarters, including a T$13.12 billion ($437.98 million) deficit in the third quarter of 2013. In a sign of turmoil shaking the industry, rival Dell made waves early last year when it announced it would go private in a buy-out led by founder Michael Dell.

Acer hasn't been able to successfully move into the higher-profit enterprise PC sector, a move that has started to pay off for Hewlett-Packard Co, which reported revenue that beat expectations in the third quarter. Lenovo Group Ltd, the world's No1 PC manufacturer, also saw rising profit as it adjusts strategy in the face of a shrinking consumer base.

Public unconvinced on climate engineering: New Zealand, Australia survey

WELLINGTON, 14 Jan — Members of the public in New Zealand and Australia are strongly opposed to scientific climate engineering to counter the effects of climate change, New Zealand researchers announced on Monday. A trans-Tasman survey by Massey University found "strong negative views" on climate engineering proposals for large-scale manipulation of the environment to combat the rise in atmospheric carbon dioxide (CO2).

Climate engineering could involve techniques that reduce the amount of CO2 in the atmosphere or approaches that slow temperature rise by reducing the amount of sunlight reaching the Earth's surface.

Lead author Professor Malcolm Wright said in a statement that the research consulted large representative samples in both Australia and New Zealand, with 30 in-depth interviews and an on-line survey of more than 2,000 participants.

"The results show that the public has strong negative views towards climate engineering," Wright said. "Where there are positive reactions, they favor approaches that reduce carbon dioxide over those that reflected sunlight." Interventions such as putting mirrors in space or fine particles into the stratosphere were not well received. "More natural processes of cloud brightening or enhanced weathering are less likely to raise objections," he said.

Giving the public a voice so early in technological development was unusual, but increasingly necessary, said Wright. "If these techniques are developed the public must be consulted."

With data vulnerable, retailers look for tougher security

BOSTON/NEW YORK, 14 Jan — A top retail trade group executive on Sunday called for tougher security standards that could mean more spending for the industry, its banks and business partners after a series of data breaches at major merchants.

Stores and card processing companies have reported a steady stream of security breaches for years without a major backlash from consumers, such as those disclosed by TJX Cos in 2007 and by Heartland Payment Systems Inc in 2009.

But the latest thefts — including attacks on Target Corp and Neiman Marcus — have involved a broad set of merchants and could mark a watershed moment for security standards as calls grow for changes in the protection of consumer information. One sign of the change is a new enthusiasm for payment cards that store customer information on computer chips and require users to type in personal identification numbers.

Mallory Duncan, general counsel of the National Retail Federation that represents Target, Wal-Mart and other big stores, said in an interview on Sunday that the trade group encouraged its members to upgrade to the higher-security cards even though they cost more than old systems that store data on magnetic stripes.

The breaches are "unfortunate but we're not entirely surprised," Duncan said at his organization's annual convention now being held in New York. "The technology that exists in cards out there is 20th-century technology and we've got 21st-century hackers," he said. Duncan said the trade group had only made its backing for the higher-security cards public since the Target breach. Banks have quietly begun to offer the cards but mainly for customers to use while traveling. Big US card networks led by Visa Inc will not require the higher security until next year at the earliest.

Establish good habits

According to a Buddhist teaching, doing good deeds can bring doers good things. We have to instill within ourselves good habits as no one is born a good citizen.

Making a good deed can lead to a good thing. Good things will come to those establishing good habits not only in the present but also in the future. But, doing good deeds can be difficult. Only those who can desist from living with greed, anger and delusion will have the benefit of doing good deeds.

Nurturing good habits — meditation, counting beads and cultivating optimism — among children can make them to be polite. Doing good deeds will be of benefit to doers.

If a person treats another person with respect, he or she will be treated the same way. If your focus is on the good of others, they will perform for your benefit. The sense of doing for the sake of others is a good deed that will benefit both.

Some people see good things without doing good deeds. It is due to their past deeds. The bubble-like wealth is likely to be less durable and it will burst at a time. It cannot reach a durable stage.

That's why, people have to establish good habits and do good deeds for ensuring durable benefits. Meditation, counting beads and cultivating optimism and maintaining five precepts in daily life are imperative.

LASHIO, 14 Jan—The additional tetanus vaccination will be given to the people in 22 townships of Shan State, according to the Health Department.

It will be implemented in townships in Nay Pyi Taw, Sagaing, Bago, Mandalay, Yangon, Ayeyawady Regions and 22 townships in Shan State. So, the Ministry of Health and respective governments will join hands in implementing the health campaign.

The vaccination was launched in 22 townships

Japanese lawmaker Inoki in N Korea to promote sports exchanges

PYONGYANG/BEIJING, 14 Jan — Japanese lawmaker Antonio Inoki on Monday arrived in North Korea to promote sports exchanges and learn about the future course of the country following the purge last month of leader Kim Jong Un's once-powerful uncle.

"I am hoping to have a discussion that will be a plus" for both Japan and North Korea, the former professional wrestling star told reporters at Beijing airport before leaving for Pyongyang.

Inoki plans to meet with Kim Yong Il, director of the International Department of the Workers' Party of Korea, and other senior officials to discuss arrangements for sports exchanges and a trip by a Japanese parliamentary delegation.

Inoki has said he will organize a major sports and peace event in Pyongyang this summer.

The 70-year-old House of Councillors member of the opposition Japan Restoration Party has close ties with North Korea. This is his 28th visit to the country.

He last visited North Korea in November, and during that trip he met with the uncle, Jang Song Thaek, who was purged and executed in December for treason charges.

"Seeing is worth a thousand words," Inoki, whose real first name is Kanji, replied when questioned at the airport. "Amid various media reports, I'd like to also check in which direction this country will move," Inoki said.

Jang, who had been considered the North's second-most-powerful figure, held numerous senior posts, including vice chairman of the powerful National Defence Commission and chairman of the State Physical Culture and Sports Guidance Commission.

During his previous visit, Inoki opened a Pyongyang office of his nonprofit organization, Sports Peace Community Association.

No parliamentary permission was required for his latest trip as the Diet is not in session. But the Japanese government, which has no diplomatic relations with North Korea, has asked citizens to refrain from visiting the country.

Japan has imposed sanctions on North Korea, both unilaterally and in line with the international community. The sanctions have been imposed due to lack of progress on the part of North Korea in addressing the issue of its past abductions of Japanese nationals and its nuclear and missile development programs.

South Korean President to visit India

NEW DELHI, 14 Jan — South Korean President Park Geun-Hye will arrive in India Wednesday on a four-day official tour of this country, sources said on Tuesday.

During her visit, the South Korean President is likely to explore the possibilities of building a nuclear power plant in India in wake of a civilian nuclear pact inked by the two countries in 2011, the sources said.

Though the agreement to set up South Korean nuclear reactors in the country was signed some three years back, nothing substantial has been achieved till date between the two Asian nations.

India has, in fact, clearly ruled out allocating any site for a South Korean nuclear power plant during President Park's visit.

Leftist rebels resume operations against military in C Philippines

MANILA, 14 Jan — The leftist rebel group Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) ordered its armed wing, New People's Army (NPA), to resume offensive operations against the Philippine military and other government security forces in central Philippines.

The CPP gave out the order after the ceasefire declared by the Executive Committee-Regional Committee in Eastern Visayas on 12 November ended on 12 January. The two-month truce was in effect in areas struck by typhoon Haiyan, locally known as Yolanda.

"All units of the New People's Army (NPA) in Eastern Visayas may now resume offensive military operations against the regular and paramilitary forces of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP)," the CPP said.

The CPP also commended the NPA for displaying a "high level of discipline" in observing the unilateral ceasefire despite "provocations" made by the government of Philippine President Benigno S Aquino III.

"Despite the continuing attacks and provocations of the United States-Aquino regime, the ceasefire was never lifted in deference to the sufferings of the people and in order to make sure that immediate relief would be delivered to them," the group said.

The CPP accused the AFP of continuing military operations against their group despite the government's unilateral declaration of a truce from 21 December to 15 January.

The leftist rebel group, with an estimated 4,000 fighters, has been waging war against the Philippine government for over four decades.

Gov't in no rush to decide new energy policy

TOKYO, 14 Jan — Industry Minister Toshimitsu Motegi said on Tuesday that he won't be rushed into deciding a new energy policy that supports the use of nuclear power.

"We hope to finalize things as early as possible, but we don't want to rush the process because it is a very important issue," Motegi, who also holds the energy portfolio, told a Press conference.

The government is in the final stage of deciding the so-called Basic Energy Plan, which will be the first of its kind after the 2011 Fukushima Daiichi nuclear complex disaster, having already solicited opinions from the public on a draft document.

But the draft plan has stirred controversy among some ruling Liberal Democratic Party lawmakers, who have called for the need to break away from nuclear power generation, and Motegi's comments suggest the policy will not be approved by the Cabinet this month, as initially planned.

Motegi said the Economy, Trade and Industry Ministry needs to comb through some 19,000 letters from the public that it has received and also take into account the views of the LDP before officially deciding the plan.

The minister also said he is considering revising the draft with expressions that highlight the government's proactive stance toward promoting renewable energy.

Military joins drive for vehicle efficiency

BEIJING, 14 Jan — The Chinese military issued a series of written instructions on Monday calling for increased efficiency in its operations and vowing to give priority to domestic brands when purchasing military and official vehicles.

The move follows a central government regulation on 25 November standardizing the management of government funds and banning extravagance on the part of Party and government bodies. The new military measures were published by the Headquarters of the General Staff, the General Political Department, the General Logistics Department and the General Armament Department, after approval by President Xi Jinping and the Central Military Commission.

The military is now required to buy its vehicles through a centralized purchasing system and choose Chinese brands that are made in the country. Yang Weidong, a professor at the Chinese Academy of Governance, said it is surprising that the military, which is usually thought to operate independently of the other State organs, has been able to issue such orders on efficiency so quickly after the central government's own regulations.

"It sends a significant signal. It will help deepen the public's understanding of the military and strengthen the public's supervision of the military," Yang said. The requirement to use Chinese vehicles will also help promote the development of Chinese companies, he said.

"The use of national budget funds to buy Chinese brands will encourage more ordinary civilians and even the rich to buy domestic-made vehicles," Yang said, adding that he hopes more government bodies will adopt similar policies.

The military is also to halt spending on commemorative activities and celebrations, apart from those arranged by the central government, the Central Military Commission and the military headquarters, according to the measures.—Xinhua

Michael Douglas joins Paul Rudd in Disney-Marvel's 'Ant-Man' film

LOS ANGELES, 14 Jan — Actor Michael Douglas will take on the role of scientist Hank Pym opposite Paul Rudd in the upcoming Disney-Marvel superhero film "Ant-Man," the movie studio said on Monday.

Douglas, 69, will play Pym, creator of the technology to shrink to the size of an insect and thus become Ant-Man. "Anchorman" star Rudd, 44, will play Scott Lang, the alter-ego of the diminutive Marvel superhero.

Pym's character first appeared in the 27th issue of Marvel Comics series "Tales to Astonish" in January 1962.

"We knew we needed an actor capable of bringing the weight and stature to the role that the character deserves," Kevin Feige, president of Marvel Studios, said in a statement posted on Marvel.com.

"We felt incredibly relieved when Michael Douglas agreed to step into the part with the charm and fortitude he brings to every character he inhabits, and couldn't be more excited to see what he will do to bring Hank Pym to life," Feige added.

Disney's foray in bringing Marvel's superhero universe to the big screen has proved to be a lucrative choice, with films such as "Avengers" and "Iron Man 3" crossing the $1 billion mark at the worldwide box office.

Douglas, who won a Best Actor Oscar in 1988 for Oliver Stone's financial drama "Wall Street" and picked up a Golden Globe award on Sunday for his turn as Liberace in HBO movie "Behind the Candelabra," is taking a rare step into the world of big-budget franchise action films.

The Carole King Musical' star wins critical praise

NEW YORK, 14 Jan — Jessie Mueller, the star of "Beautiful — The Carole King Musical," may not be a household name yet, but some critics predicted on Monday that she could be after her performance in the new Broadway musical.

The New York Post described the casting of Mueller, 31, in the lead role of the show that charts the rise of the songwriter from her early days penning hits with her first husband Gerry Goffin to a solo career and her 1971 multiple Grammy-winning album "Tapestry" as "inspired."

"Mueller's hardly a household name," the newspaper said after the show's opening night on Sunday. "But her engaging, moving performance here should make her one."

USA Today praised Mueller's voice, range and comic sensibility and described her as "one of our best young musical actresses."

The New York Times said Mueller, a Tony nominee for her role opposite Harry Connick Jr. in 2011's "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever," has been a Broadway star in the waiting for several years but with "Beautiful" she became one.

"Much of what makes Ms. Mueller's performance so touching is its projection of a lack of confidence," the newspaper said.

"There's humility to Ms. Mueller's Carole, part of whom wants only to be a good Jewish wife and mother, preferably in the suburbs," it added.

The Hollywood Reporter agreed.

"She conveys the burgeoning singer-songwriter's creative drive while wrestling quietly with her ingrained, old-fashioned sense of the expectations for a wife and mother," it said.

But while critics lauded Mueller's portrayal as the chart-topping legend, they were less enthusiastic about the production that included songs such as "So Far Away," "It's Too Late," "Up on the Roof" and "I Feel the Earth Move."

Like "Jersey Boys" and "Motown: The Musical," shows that have been drawing crowds on Broadway, "Beautiful" is about real people and the music they created.—Reuters Kanye West and Kim Kardashian have a daughter together.

Kanye West wants Kim Kardashian to take his name

LOS ANGELES, 14 Jan — Rapper Kanye West has reportedly told Kim Kardashian she must change her surname when they get married.

The 36-year-old Power rapper is adamant his bride-to-be takes his last name, causing a tense moment over Christmas when her mother, Kris Jenner, suggested Kim become Kardashian-West, reported Showbizspy.

"Everyone at the table gave a thumbs up, except for Kanye. He sat quiet and stern faced, then blurted forcefully, 'She will be known as Kim West. My wife will bear my name only'," a source said.

Kim, who has six-month-old daughter North with Kanye, is now facing the tough decision of trying to please both her notoriously hot-headed partner and her extremely persuasive mother.

"By the end of the night Kim was in tears because all the way home he kept ranting that he was furious about her even considering to keep the Kardashian name. When Kim fought back, saying her celebrity is based on her famous family's name, big-headed Kanye snapped that his name holds more weight and respect than hers ever will," the source added.

Del Potro wins in 'worst conditions' at Melbourne Park

Juan Martin Del Potro

MELBOURNE, 14 Jan — World number five Juan Martin del Potro advanced to the second round of the Australian Open with a 6-7, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 win over American qualifier Rhyne Williams in stifling heat on Tuesday. The towering Argentine, who won the 2009 US Open, is a dark horse to win his second grand slam title having enjoyed encouraging form in the leadup to Melbourne with victory in the Sydney International warmup event.

The 22-year-old Williams, ranked 130 in the world, had other ideas as he matched Del Potro's firepower in a tense first set and closed it out when the fifth seed stumbled in an error-strewn tiebreak. Del Potro steadied in the second set and cruised to victory in just over three hours to set up a clash with Spain's 62nd ranked Roberto Bautista Agut.

The extreme heat at Melbourne Park on Tuesday caused a ball-boy and men's player Frank Dancevic to collapse during his first round loss, and the Canadian later slammed organizers as 'inhumane' for not suspending play. "I tried to focus for the match in the worst conditions to play," Del Potro said in a courtside interview. "Really, really hot but the crowd kept me going."

"Hopefully the weather will be better on Thursday."

Del Potro is unlikely to get his wish, however, with the temperatures forecast to exceed 40 degrees Celsius (108 Fahrenheit) for the next three days until a cool change on the weekend.—Reuters

MELBOURNE, 14 Jan — Andy Murray marked his return to grand slam tennis with a dominant 6-1, 6-1, 6-3 win over Japan's Go Soeda to reach the second round of the Australian Open on Tuesday.

Slow start but Azarenka through to Australian Open 2nd round

MELBOURNE, 14 Jan — Victoria Azarenka's quest for her third successive Australian Open title took a little while to get going before she finally overcame a feisty Johanna Larsson 7-6, 6-2 in their first round match at Melbourne Park on Tuesday. The 24-year-old Belarusian looked out of sorts in the first set as the Swede ran her all around the court and scrambled effectively to put massive pressure on the world number two. Larsson had two opportunities to serve out the first set when leading 5-4 then 6-5 only for Azarenka to break back both times, which saw the Swede's resolve melt away as the two-times champion won the tie-break 7-2.

Azarenka, who is bidding to become the first woman to win three successive Melbourne Park titles since Martina Hingis (1997-99), broke in the third game of the second set to take control and pushed on to seal the match.

Rusty Djokovic in Melbourne

Novak Djokovic

MELBOURNE, 14 Jan — Novak Djokovic showed some early season rustiness but Serena Williams roared into the second round like a well-oiled machine as the tournament favourites took centre stage on the first evening of the Australian Open on Monday.

Djokovic's new co-coach Boris Becker will have raised an eyebrow with the 30 unforced errors the second seed served up as he opened his quest for a fourth straight title in Melbourne.

The Serbian always looked like cantering to victory in three sets, however, and 23 minutes after taking a tight second stanza by dominating the tiebreak, he was firing down his 10th ace for the win.

"I know that I didn't play my best, especially in the second set," said Djokovic, who has now won his last 22 matches at Melbourne Park and 25 contests in a row in all tournaments since his loss to Rafa Nadal in the US Open final.

"I was a little bit too passive in some stages of the match and was trying to find the proper setting and proper balance and footing in the court."

With temperatures forecast to soar well above 40 degrees Celsius from Tuesday onwards, there was good reason for the players to keep their time on court to a minimum and rest up for challenges to come.—Reuters

Arsenal survive late scare at Villa to go top

LONDON, 14 Jan — Arsenal survived a late scare to regain top spot in the Premier League with a 2-1 victory at Aston Villa on Monday, both their goals arriving in the space of a minute in the first half.

England midfielder Jack Wilshere opened the scoring after 34 minutes with an accurate left-foot finish and Villa self-destructed, conceding possession straight from the restart and allowing Olivier Giroud to double the visitors' lead.

Christian Benteke's stooping header raised hopes of an unlikely comeback and the Belgian striker came close to an equaliser but Arsenal hung on to continue their fine record at Villa where they have not lost since 1998.

Arsenal began the evening in third place after wins for title rivals Chelsea and Manchester City at the weekend but responded in style to move a point clear at the top.

Arsene Wenger's side have 48 points from 21 matches, City have 47 and Chelsea 46 with fourth-placed Liverpool further back on 42 after also winning at the weekend.

"It's a massive three points — especially because we dropped a bit in the second half. We have done that a few times, letting teams come on to us but we dealt well with it," Wilshere told Sky Sports.

Inter problems mount with Chievo draw

Inter Milan's Yuto Nagatomo (2nd R) shoots to score against Chievo during their Italian Serie A soccer match at San Siro stadium in Milan on 13 Jan, 2014.

REUTERS

MILAN, 14 Jan — Inter Milan's unhappy run continued when they were held to a 1-1 draw at home by lowly Chievo in Serie A on Monday and were jeered off the San Siro pitch by their own fans.

Inter, with only one win in their last seven league matches, were quickly in trouble when Alberto Paloschi fired the relegation-threatened Flying Donkeys ahead in the eighth minute.

Yuto Nagatomo levelled for Inter four minutes later, turning the ball in from close range after it was pulled back by Ricardo Alvarez, and the Japanese had a goal controversially disallowed for offside two minutes later.

Walter Mazzarri's team dominated possession for the rest of the game but struggled to create clear chances.

Inter are joint fifth, level with promoted Verona on 32 points from 19 games, 10 behind Napoli who are third in the Champions League playoff spot.

Three players were sent off as Sampdoria thumped Udinese 3-0 in Monday's other game.

Brazilian midfielder Allan was dismissed for Udinese in the 35th minute after two yellow cards in quick succession but the numbers were levelled up when Samp's Roberto Soriano was sent off just after the hour for a second bookable offence.

Udinese also had Allan's compatriot Gabriel Silva ordered off after he was booked for elbowing, his second yellow card.

Brazilian Eder gave Sampdoria a 16th-minute lead with a penalty and added another two minutes after halftime, although there was a suspicion of offside as he latched on to a flicked pass to score.

Daniele Gastaldello headed the third three minutes from time to leave Sampdoria 12th with 21 points and Udinese 15th with 20.

China boosts informatization for better livelihood

BEIJING, 14 Jan — The National Development and Reform Commission on Tuesday said it will boost informatization in eleven sectors to boost people's livelihood. The eleven sectors include education, employment, medical services, social security, pensions, food and drug safety, community services, domestic services and public security, said a statement on the commission's website.

China will work to build an efficient social service system through promoting social security cards that can integrate various services, according to the statement.

By 2015, about 800

million social security cards should be issued so that social security services and other allowances can be provided efficiently, according to the statement.

Quality education resources will be selected and made available to all schools in a bid to bridge education gaps between developed areas and less developed western and central regions, the statement said. Xu Hongcai, head of the Department of Information under the China Center for International Economic Exchanges, said informatization will help tackle problems in these sectors and provide quality services to the public.—Xinhua

Federer breezes past Aussie Duckworth at Australian Open

The Swiss, seeded sixth at Melbourne Park, used one hour and 46 minutes to seize a 6-4, 6-4 and 6-2 victory at Rod Laver Arena.

Emotional Ronaldo ends Messi run

ZURICH, 14 Jan—Cristiano Ronaldo was overcome with emotion after being voted the world's best player for 2013 on Monday, ending his great rival Lionel Messi's dominance of the award.

Although he failed to win any major titles with Real Madrid last season, Ronaldo was rewarded for his immense goal-scoring prowess as he swept aside Messi, winner for the last four years, and Frenchman Franck Ribery.

"Thank you to everyone, my team mates, the national team and my family, to everyone here," the Portugal and Real Madrid forward said, choking with emotion after accepting the trophy.

"I can't speak," added Ronaldo, runner-up for three of the last four years, before breaking down.

Jupp Heynckes, now retired, was named coach of the year for the first time after leading Bayern Munich to an unprecedented Bundesliga, Cup and Champions League treble, a fitting end to a 48-year career as player and coach.

The Afghanistan Football Federation and fiery Sweden striker Zlatan Ibrahimovic were among other award winners.
