Small-scale fisheries in delta region turn local fishermen into entrepreneurs

Small-scale fisheries become famous as a manageable business in the areas adjacent to the sea like Bogale. As the small-scale business requires small amount of capital to start, locals in delta regions are interested in setting up their own businesses, rather than being a worker at a fisheries company.

A small trawler needs only one or two fishermen. Some ordinary fishermen who afford to buy a motorized boat run the affordable fishing business with the help of three fishermen and above.

Everyone can start a fishery business with a small boat and fishing equipment like fishing rods, hooks and line. This is an innovative business, allowing fishermen to catch hundreds of fish for one time and to be an entrepreneur in the fisheries sector.

Now is the time when Myanmar sea fish are fetching good prices in the international markets. Sea fish and dried fish caught from small-scale fisheries bring in K 2000 to K 3000 a viss (one viss equals 1.6 kilograms or 3.6 pounds) in the domestic market.

According to fishermen in small-scale fisheries from Amar Sub-Township, they have been provided with money in advance by sea fish exporters and dried fish merchants. So, the small-scale fishing business is booming in seaside villages, Haingyi, Pyinsalu, Kaingthaung, Gayatgyi, Ashaephyar, Naukme, Phoneyithaung and Kalarhtaik.

Japan, US sign pact for quick access to suspect fingerprint data

TOKYO, 8 Feb — Japan and the United States on Friday concluded a pact to provide each other instant access to fingerprint data to check the identity of people suspected of involvement in serious crimes such as terrorism.

The Agreement on Preventing and Combating Serious Crime was signed by Parliamentary Senior Vice Foreign Minister Norio Mitsuya and US Ambassador to Japan Caroline Kennedy in Tokyo, according to Japanese officials. Japan plans to submit the pact to parliament following Cabinet approval later this month. But the pact is not expected to become operational for a few years.

Once coming into force, the accord will allow the two countries to seek fingerprint data when suspected terrorists try to enter either country or when authorities cannot identify foreigners under arrest for serious crimes such as murder. In Japan, the National Police Agency operates a database which contained the fingerprints of about 10.4 million people as of late last year. It also possesses about 460,000 fingerprints left at the scenes of unsolved crimes.

On the US side, fingerprint databases maintained by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Department of Homeland Security will be available to Japanese authorities.

The new arrangements will speed up the exchange of information which now must be routed through the International Criminal Police Organization, or Interpol. Under the pact, one country will be able to electronically send the fingerprints of a criminal suspect to the other, to see if they match any fingerprints in its database.

Snow falling across many parts of Japan

TOKYO, 8 Feb — Wide areas of Japan were hit by snowfall on Saturday, with a rapidly developing low-pressure front heading northeast along the south side of the Honshu main island, the Japan Meteorological Agency said.

Heavy snow is expected in the Kanto plain region that includes Tokyo, with central Tokyo and the nearby Yokohama covered with snow as of 8 am.

Through Sunday morning, as much as 50 centimeters of snow is expected in the Kanto-Koshin area and 40 cm in extended areas from western to eastern Japan, according to the agency. A number of domestic flights to and from Tokyo's Haneda Airport have been cancelled, while the Tokaido and Sanyo Shinkansen bullet trains operating in western Japan are expected to fall behind schedule, the operators said.

Some sections of expressways were also closed due to the snow.

Abe to meet with Putin in Sochi, aiming to speed up territorial talks

SOCHI, (Russia), 8 Feb — Prime Minister Shinzo Abe will meet with Russian President Vladimir Putin on Saturday in Sochi, where they attended the opening ceremony of the Winter Olympics the previous day, aiming to accelerate talks on a territorial dispute over islands off Hokkaido.

The summit will be their fifth in a year. Abe has said he wants to enhance mutual trust with Putin, which Tokyo hopes will help to resolve the long-standing dispute over the four Russian-administered islands that has prevented the two countries from signing a peace treaty since the end of World War II.

The leaders are also expected to discuss security and economic cooperation, including Japanese investment in the Russian Far East, where abundant oil and gas reserves have been confirmed.

During their meeting in Moscow last April, the leaders' first summit since Abe assumed office in December 2012, they agreed to cooperate in the areas of agriculture, medical services, urban development and energy. Abe and Putin have met three times since on the sidelines of international conferences, confirming their commitment to dialogue on necessary steps to address issues of bilateral concern.

Japanese and Russian officials have engaged in talks to resolve the dispute over the islands, known as the Southern Kurils in Russia and the Northern Territories in Japan.

Tokyo claims that Soviet forces continued an offensive against Japan after it surrendered in World War II, seizing control of all four islands from 28 August to 5 Sept, 1945.

In past bilateral talks, Japan has said if Russia acknowledges the four islands belong to Japan, Tokyo is prepared to respond flexibly to the timing and manner of their return, but Russia has shown no sign of recognizing Japanese ownership.

US President Barack Obama and many European leaders did not attend the opening ceremony in protest at antigay legislation enacted by Russia last year.

Japan is "closely watching the human rights situation in Russia," Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga said at a press conference in Tokyo on Friday. "But we don't think about it in connection with the Olympics," the top government spokesman added.

Turkish forces seize suspected hijacker on plane in Istanbul

ISTANBUL, 8 Feb — Turkish security forces on Friday seized a Ukrainian man who officials said made a bomb threat and tried to hijack a passenger plane, demanding to go to the Winter Olympics venue of Sochi just as the opening ceremony was taking place.

Turkey scrambled an F-16 fighter jet to accompany the Pegasus Airlines Boeing 737-800 plane as it landed at Sabiha Gokcen airport at 6.05 pm (1605 GMT), after a flight from the Ukrainian city of Kharkov with 110 passengers on board. The incident came at a time when security officials internationally are on high alert for possible militant attacks connected to the Games.

The suspect, a 45-year-old man, had a small bag containing electronic goods but no bomb, Istanbul Governor Huseyin Avni Mutlu told reporters after the operation to capture him.

"None of the passengers were harmed and a successful operation was carried out," Mutlu said.

He said some force had to be used to seize the suspect. "He was captured as a result of a struggle without the need to use any weapons. The hijacker was slightly wounded," he said.

and Prachuap, where polling stations were blocked by protesters on 2 February. However, the specific time for the new round of voting is yet to be announced.

Meanwhile, voting would not be held again at the polling stations where voting had taken place and were later disrupted by protesters, Somchai said, adding that the EC would count the ballots that were successfully cast.

The EC also asked the caretaker government to issue a new royal decree to set a new election date for the 28 constituencies in eight provinces where there were no registered candidates due to obstruction by protesters.

The latest figures by the EC showed that 46.79 percent of voters nationwide cast their ballots in 2 February general election.

The polling agency said as many as 20.1 million voters out of 43.024 million eligible Thai voters exercised their voting rights in 68 provinces where voting was not disrupted by protesters, with 71.38 percent of those ballots valid, 12.05 percent invalid and 16.57 percent "no-vote."

The National Institute of Development Administration on Friday released results of a survey conducted on 1,259 Thai residents nationwide on 5-6 February.

Obama aide Rice says recent troubles shouldn't derail US-India ties

US National Security Advisor Susan Rice looks up during a meeting between US President Barack Obama (R) and Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe at the G20 Summit in St Petersburg, Russia on 5 Sept, 2013.

REUTERS

WASHINGTON, 8 Feb — A top White House adviser attempted to smooth over troubled ties between the United States and India on Friday, saying the two countries should not allow the dispute over an Indian diplomat to “derail the future we are working diligently to build.”

The diplomat, Devyani Khobragade, was arrested on 12 December on charges of visa fraud and lying to US authorities about what she paid her housekeeper. She was stripped-searched while detained in a Manhattan federal courthouse, an incident that triggered a major rift between India and the United States. The controversy interrupted what had been a warming in US-Indian relations as part of a US pivot toward Asia.

President Barack Obama's national security adviser, Susan Rice, addressing the Aspen Institute US-India Dialogue, said recent events had drawn more attention to disagreements than cooperative efforts.

“But those difficulties should be minor compared to the breadth of our relationship and the magnitude of what we can accomplish together. We must also deal with our differences in a constructive manner, commensurate with a relationship of this importance,” she said. The two countries cooperate on a wide range of issues including counterterrorism, regional security and defence. India is also a major market for US weapons. “We cannot allow such challenges to derail the future we are working diligently to build — a future of greater prosperity, greater security, and consistent adherence to our shared values,” Rice said.

Rice also said the United States is confident that, whatever the outcome of India's upcoming national elections, the cooperation and strategic partnership between the two nations will continue to grow.

China to reform pension system

BEIJING, 8 Feb — China will reform its pension scheme by unifying the two separate systems for urban and rural residents to allow people better access to social benefits, according to an executive meeting of the State Council on Friday.

The move, part of the efforts to address pension payment gaps between urban and rural areas, was announced in a statement issued after the meeting presided over by Premier Li Keqiang.

The unified system will build stable expectations for improving livelihood and facilitate population movement, said the meeting statement, adding that it will also boost consumption and encourage more business start-ups.

The statement said pension funds will be pooled from individuals, employers and governments at various levels. The central government will provide more subsidies to people in less-developed central and western regions.

The pension system will serve as a safety net for millions of seniors, according to the statement.

China has the largest senior population in the world, with 194 million people at or above the age of 60 at the end of 2012, according to the China National Committee on Aging.

The age group is expected to grow to 243 million by 2020, and one-third of the population will be over the age of 60 by 2050.

Spanish princess testifies in corruption probe

PALMA DEMALLORCA, 8 Feb—Spain's Princess Cristina was questioned by a judge on Saturday in a corruption case that has deepened public anger over graft among the ruling class and discontent with the royal family.

It was the first time that a Spanish royal has been summoned in a criminal proceeding since the monarchy was restored in 1975 following the death of dictator Francisco Franco.

With Spain emerging slowly from a deep economic and financial crisis, judges are looking into hundreds of corruption cases left over from a property boom that ended abruptly in 2008.

Cristina, the younger daughter of King Juan Carlos and seventh in line to the throne, is answering preliminary charges of tax fraud and money laundering linked to her use of income from a shell company she co-owned with her husband Inaki Urdangarin. She was driven down a ramp to the courthouse in Palma de Mallorca, capital of the Balearic Islands, and walked the last few steps, smiling at the press and dressed soberly in a white shirt and black jacket.

Streets away, hundreds of protesters shouted slogans calling for a republic, equal justice for all and an end to institutional corruption.

Afghan civilian deaths up in 2013 as war intensifies - UN

KABUL, 8 Feb—War took an increasing toll on Afghanistan's civilians in 2013 as fighting intensified between the government and insurgents, the United Nations said in a report on Saturday, with total casualties rising 14 percent.

The gradual withdrawal of foreign troops has left Afghan government forces more vulnerable to attack by insurgents, and the resulting battles helped account for last year's rise in casualties, according to the report.

Last year was the worst for women and children since 2009, with the number killed or injured by the conflict increasing by more than one-third from 2012. About 27 percent of all 2013 casualties stemmed from fighting between the government and insurgents, and most of these could not be attributed to one side.—Reuters

Chinese, Afghan presidents agree to promote ties

SOCI, (Russia), 8 Feb — Chinese President Xi Jinping and his Afghan counterpart, Hamid Karzai, agreed here Friday to further advance the relations between their countries. The two leaders are in this Russian resort city for the opening ceremony of the 22nd Winter Olympic Games.

China, Xi said, attaches great importance to its relations with Afghanistan, and stands ready to maintain high-level exchanges and promote communication and cooperation between them, so as to push forward the development of bilateral ties. China is willing to offer continued assistance for Afghanistan's peaceful reconstruction, especially in personnel training, and encourage Chinese companies to invest in Afghanistan, he said, while urging Kabul to create a safe environment for bilateral cooperation.

China is ready to strengthen cooperation with Afghanistan in fighting the "three evil forces" of separatism, extremism and terrorism as well as transnational crime, Xi added.

China, he stressed, will unswervingly support Afghanistan's efforts in safeguarding national independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, and back an Afghan-led and Afghan-owned national reconciliation process.

Noting that 2014 is a critical year in Afghanistan's transition, he conveyed the hope that Afghanistan will

The fate of Afghanistan will be more closely linked with that of the region after 2014, and China supports Afghanistan's integration into regional economic

Venezuela says four more held over anti-Maduro protests

CARACAS, 8 Feb — Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro said on Friday four people had been held following another rowdy anti-government protest, the latest in a spate of sporadic street demonstrations being fanned by hardline opposition parties.

That brought to nearly a dozen the number of reported detentions since two opposition leaders, Maria Corina Machado and Leopoldo Lopez, last week urged Venezuelans to take to the streets in an effort to force a change of government.

Seven people were hurling objects and smashing security cameras.

"We have made four arrests ... there will be no mercy," Maduro said, denouncing them as "fascists."

The Venezuelan president, who narrowly won election last year to replace late socialist leader Hugo Chavez, said right-wing politicians were hoping to spark incidents to create outrage abroad.

"I have information they are looking for injuries and deaths. They want to project images to the world in order to disrupt our country," he said.

arrested last weekend on charges of violence after scores of protesters converged on a hotel housing a Cuban baseball team on Margarita Island.

Opposition activists say Maduro is a stooge of the Cuban government.

Students in the western state of Tachira have been demonstrating this week and officials said one group of masked assailants attacked the residence of the pro-government governor, Frustrated by the moderate line of two-time presidential runner-up Henrique Capriles and other prominent opposition figures, Machado and Lopez have urged Venezuelans to hit the streets to protest against economic hardships and other societal ills.

There have so far only been sporadic demonstrations, drawing relatively small numbers of protesters.

Philippine WWII survivor keeps shrapnel in leg as reminder of horrors

TACLOBAN CITY, (Philippines), 8 Feb — Many elderly people in the Philippines have made it their task in life to tell the younger generation of their ordeal during World War II in a bid to prevent war from ever

Alejandro Devaras, 80, talks to Kyodo News on 8 Jan, 2014 in Tacloban City on the central Philippine island of Leyte about his experiences during World War II.—KYODO NEWS happening again. One of those survivors is 80-year-old Alejandro Devaras who has kept an unusual piece of WWII "memorabilia" to underpin his story.

He has never had shrapnel in his leg removed — shrapnel that injured him at the height of fighting between American and Japanese forces 70 years ago in the central island province of Leyte. In a recent interview with Kyodo News, Devaras said the shrapnel in his right leg was discovered only 14 years ago during a medical checkup, and that he decided not to have it removed because of its "sentimental value."

"It proves that the things I say about the war-time here really happened. Anyway, it's just small and I'm already old," Devaras said of the shrapnel which he sustained when American forces began a strike against the Imperial Japanese Army in his hometown Dulag on 18 Oct, 1944.

A coastal town 37 kilometers south of Leyte's capital, Tacloban, and about 890 km south of the capital Manila, Dulag is said to be the first area in the Philippines to have been liberated by the American forces.

A hill in Dulag has been marked as the site where the Americans, on 20 Oct, 1944, raised their flag to mark victory over the Japanese.

It came two years after the Japanese on 9 April, 1942 lowered the US flag in Bataan Province on Luzon Island, marking the beginning of Japan's full control over the Philippines.

"The Greater East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere, that's what we were taught (by the Japanese). But it was not good for the Philippines because it only brought us hardship and trouble," Devaras said, referring to Japan's euphemism for its military conquest and economic exploitation of Asian nations during the 1930s and 1940s.

Devaras recalled he was only 9 years old when Japanese soldiers arrived in Dulag in 1942 and immediately declared the entire town to be "under the Imperial Japanese Government."

As time went by, Devaras said his fear subsided because the Japanese soldiers turned out to be friendly, and he also enjoyed studying the Japanese language and culture in school. "I learned how to speak Japanese, and how to write my name in (the Japanese scripts of) katakana and hiragana. We were also made to bow every time we met some Japanese to greet them," he said.

Senior official rejects US remarks on Iran's nuclear facilities

TEHRAN, 8 Feb — A close aide to Iranian Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei rejected US official's recent remarks about Iran's nuclear facilities as "interventionist and worthless," Press TV reported on Friday.

On Friday, a senior Iranian cleric called on Iran's Foreign Ministry to react decisively to what he called "US threats" and remarks against the Islamic republic over its nuclear programme, according to Press TV.

Court stops Australian firm from mining in Zambian national park

LUSAKA, 8 Feb — A court in Zambia has granted an injunction against an Australian mining firm from going ahead with its mining project in a national park in the southern African nation, environmental lobby groups that have been against the project said on Friday. Australia's Zambezi Resources has been stopped from going ahead with its mining project in Lower Zambezi National Park following an injunction filed by environmental lobby groups after the government overturned a decision by the country's environmental regulator, the Zambia Environmental Management Agency (ZEMA), to reject the company's mining project due to environmental concerns.

Judge Mubanga Kandolo granted the injunction against the Australian firm on Thursday pending an hearing of an appeal.

The court has since set 18 Feb, 2014 as the date for an interpret hearing.

Last Friday, a consortium of environmental lobby groups, the Community Based Natural Resource Management Forum, filed an injunction in a high court in Lusaka, the Zambian capital, to halt the Australian firm's decision to commence mining operations.

Salmon have “inherited magnetic map” for migration

WASHINGTON, 8 Feb — Baby salmon with no prior migratory experience are able to orient themselves according to the Earth’s magnetic field in the direction of the marine feeding grounds frequented by their ancestors, showed a new study published on Thursday that suggests the fish may inherit a kind of built-in GPS that always points them home.

Nathan Putman of Oregon State University and his colleagues tested the offspring of adult Chinook salmon from the Willamette River Basin in Oregon for evidence of orientation preferences that would indicating use of an inherited magnetic map.

The fish, which hatch in freshwater but migrate to sea and spend several years foraging in the ocean like other species of semelparous Pacific salmon, had not yet embarked on their seaward migration and were thus navigationally naive. The researchers used a magnetic coil system to expose young Chinook salmon to magnetic fields that exist near the latitudinal extremes of their typical oceanic range.

They found a magnetic field characteristic of the northern limits of the oceanic range led Chinook to orient southward while a far southern field encouraged the salmon to orient northward. “Our findings are certainly suggestive that before the fish even hit the ocean, they have information about how they should orient to reach, or remain in, favorable locations,” Putman said. “In essence, the fish act as though they have a map based on the magnetic field,” Putman added.

Further study showed that Chinook use the combination of magnetic intensity and inclination angle to assess their geographic location and guide themselves accordingly. Given that such navigational systems have also been reported in sea turtles, the researchers speculated that similar navigational systems also exist in other marine species with similar life-history patterns, such as tunas, eels, sharks, seals and whales. The findings were published in the US journal Current Biology. — Xinhua

Target vendor says hackers breached data link used for billing

WASHINGTON, 8 Feb — The Target Corp hackers managed to break into its payments network by first breaching a “data connection” between the US retailer and its heating and ventilation systems contractor, a representative for the contractor said on Thursday.

The data connection was used by the vendor, Fazio Mechanical Services, to bill Target and exchange contract and project management information with the retailer, according to Dick Roberts, a public relationships or to provide an update. “This is an active and ongoing investigation. I don’t have additional details to share at this time,” she said.

Last week, Target said the theft of a vendor’s credentials had helped cyber criminals pull off the massive data breach, which occurred during the holiday shopping season in late 2013.

Target, the third-largest US retailer, has said the hackers stole about 40 million credit and debit card records, as well as personal information, such as addresses and phone numbers, belonging to about 70 million customers.

Target spokeswoman Molly Snyder declined on

Google starts selling corporate videoconferencing product

SAN FRANCISCO, 8 Feb — Google Inc unveiled a videoconferencing system for businesses on Thursday, the Internet search company’s latest effort generate revenue from corporate customers. Google said it was partnering with Asus, Hewlett-Packard Co and Dell to offer a specialized version of its Chromebox PC that comes with videoconferencing gear, including a video camera and speakers.

The first Chromebox for meetings to be available is made by Asus and goes on sale in the US on Thursday for $999, Google said. Customers can also pay a $250 annual service and management fee, though the first year is included in the product’s sales price.

The product uses Google’s free Hangouts video chat technology to connect up to 15 separate video streams from users in different locations.

The product will put Google in competition against Cisco Systems Inc and Polycom Inc, which make the video conferencing systems used by many corporations. The world’s largest Internet search engine, Google makes the vast majority of its revenue from advertising. But Google also sells services to corporate customers, including special versions of its online apps such as email and word processing, as well as Chromebook laptops aimed at business users. — Reuters

Amazon asks customers to pick from TV pilots for show development

LOS ANGELES, 8 Feb — Amazon.com Inc released its second batch of TV pilots on Thursday and asked for customer feedback to help determine which of the 10 shows to develop into series for its video streaming service. The company is investing in original content to attract customers to its $79-a-year Amazon Prime service, which competes for online viewers with services such as Netflix and Hulu.com. Prime also includes free two-day shipping for Amazon products.

The new pilots include three comedies and two dramas for adults, plus five children’s shows. Amazon will make a decision on how many to put into development after customers have their say by leaving online comments and ratings. Malcolm McDowell stars in the comedy “Mozart in the Jungle,” a story about “sex, drugs — and classical music,” an Amazon statement said. A science-fiction show, “The After,” was written and directed by “The X-Files” creator Chris Carter. Amazon chose the pilots after looking at the genres that are popular with its customers, said Roy Price, director of Amazon Studios. “Customers have responded really well in the past to sci-fi,” Price said in an interview.

“We start with some areas that customers are responding to and try to develop shows that fit in there.” Other pilots include “Transparent,” a dark comedy about a dysfunctional family that stars Jeffrey Tambor and Judith Light, and “Bosch,” based on best-selling novels about a Los Angeles homicide detective.

The new pilots are available for a month in the United States on Amazon.com and through the Amazon Instant Video app, and in Britain through Amazon’s Lovefilm streaming service. Last year, Amazon released two comedy series, “Alpha House,” starring John Goodman as a senator, and “Betas,” about a tech start-up, after considering customer input on 14 pilots. Three children’s series also were selected during that process, which brought in thousands of customer reviews within a few days, Price said. — Reuters

Several forms of vitamin E protect against memory disorders

HELSINKI, 8 Feb — A joint research by Finnish and Swedish scientists has shown that the entire vitamin E family plays a role in prevention of age-related memory disorders.

The latest research by the University of Eastern Finland, Karolinska Institutet of Sweden and some other medical research institutes showed that various forms of vitamin E plays a role in memory processes, according to a report by the Finnish daily Helsingin Sanomat.

The new finding came as previous studies investigating the link between vitamin E and memory disorders usually focused only on a single form of vitamin E, namely alpha-tocopherol.

According to Dr Miia Kivipelto, director of the research from University of Eastern Finland, vitamin E exists in eight different natural forms (fat-soluble compounds) and the entire vitamin E family plays a role in protecting against memory disorders, not only alpha-tocopherol.

Kivipelto said vitamin E supplements available on the market usually contain only alpha-tocopherol, and the best sources of vitamin E are vegetable oils, nuts, green vegetables and whole grain cereals.

"A balanced diet is the best way to obtain all the eight vitamin E from food," said Kivipelto, adding that more varied diet and a healthier lifestyle could efficiently prevent memory disorders among the elderly.

Private business services log slowest expansion in 29 months

BEIJING, 8 Feb — China's service activity among private firms expanded at the slowest pace in 29 months in January, signaling weaker expansion of business and new orders at the start of 2014. The HSBC China Services Business Activity Index, a gauge of operating conditions in private service companies, ended at 50.7 last month, down from 50.9 in December, HSBC Holdings Plc and consulting firm Markit said today. A reading above 50 means expansion.

Comparatively, China's official non-manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Index, compiled by the China Federation of Logistics and Purchasing and slanted toward state-owned enterprises, also eased to a 23-month low of 53.4 in January from 54.6 a month earlier. Qu Hongbin, chief economist for China at HSBC, said the slower expansion of service activities reflected soft manufacturing growth and the impact of China's latest measure to curb official extravagance.

"As business sentiment remains stable, we expect service growth to bounce back a little in the coming months," Qu said. He added that a meaningful improvement relies on stronger growth of manufacturing and the implementation of reforms to boost services. China's slowing growth is largely due to the country's deepening reforms in economic restructuring, and it was good for China to address problems such as overcapacity and low investment efficiency, analysts have said.

Apple buys back $14 billion of its stock since Q1 results

LOS ANGELES / BANGALORE, 8 Feb — Apple Inc has repurchased $14 billion worth of its stock in the last two weeks after disappointing first-quarter results, the Wall Street Journal reported quoting Chief Executive Tim Cook. Cook told the paper in an interview that Apple was "surprised" by the 8 percent decline in its shares on January 28, the day after it reported quarterly results. Lower-than-expected holiday iPhone sales and a weak revenue forecast by Apple renewed fears about lower Chinese demand and a tepid global market.

billion of its shares over the past 12 months, which according to Cook was a record for any company over a similar span, the Journal said. "It means that we are betting on Apple. It means that we are really confident on what we are doing and what we plan to do. We are not just saying that. We are showing that with our actions," Cook told the Journal. The share buyback was part of Apple's previously disclosed plan to repurchase $60 billion of its own shares.

Apple had returned $7.7 billion to shareholders through dividends and buy backs in the December quarter, bringing the total under its capital return program to $43 billion, excluding latest purchases. Cook told the paper that Apple plans to disclose "updates" to its buyback programme in March or April. Apple could not immediately be reached for comment by Reuters outside of regular US business hours.

Flavour-pairing may teach kids to like vegetables

NEW YORK, 8 Feb — Parents have long poured on cheese sauce, peanut butter and the like to coax kids to eat their vegetables, but a new study suggests those tricks might also get children to look more favourably at the vegetables themselves.

Preschoolers introduced to Brussels sprouts alongside cream cheese to spread on the bitter vegetable more often said they liked the sprouts and ate more of them, even when later served plain.

The strategy of pairing something new with something a person already likes is known as associative conditioning and could be helpful in encouraging kids — and adults — to eat more fruits and vegetables, the authors say.

"This has the potential to change the eating habits of children, including eating more vegetables, and this in turn will affect childhood obesity," said Elizabeth Capaldi-Phillips, a psychologist at Arizona State University and lead author of the study.

The research was published in Journal of the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics.

In the study, parents of 29 children between the ages of three and five years old filled out a survey about the kids' views of 11 vegetables, including whether they liked or disliked the vegetable, or had never tried it. Cauliflower and Brussels sprouts were among the vegetables most children had not tried, and were selected as the ones used to gauge children's preferences in the study.

The children were given either cauliflower or Brussels sprouts once per day for seven days, and ate in a group of five or six children that was led by a researcher or teacher.

The vegetables were all boiled, then were either served plain, with unsweetened cream cheese or with sweetened cream cheese.

After this conditioning period, the kids were given the vegetables plain. The researchers found that children given Brussels sprouts with cream cheese during conditioning liked them significantly more than those given plain sprouts.

Less than one in five kids given plain sprouts said they liked the vegetable, whereas about two-thirds of kids who got sprouts with either type of cream cheese said they liked the vegetables.

The children liked milder, non-bitter cauliflower more overall, and about equally whether or not it was served with cream cheese. After the conditioning period, when children were given the plain vegetables, those who had previously said they "liked" Brussels sprouts ate more of them than kids who had expressed dislike.

Is it necessary to wear a mask in Yangon?

Air pollution is widely accepted as a root cause for the respiratory problems such as asthma among children and chronic bronchitis and heart diseases among adults in their sixties. If the level of particulate matter has exceeded the WHO's guideline level of 50 micrograms averaged over a 24-hour period, it will result in adverse health consequences. WHO's studies pointed out that worldwide deaths of about 3.2 million people in 2010 were due to air pollution.

During the recent years, most parts of Yangon, Myanmar's famed commercial hub, has seen influx of vehicles even on the streets of once-quiet wards. As modernity sweeps over the old city of high population density, change is picking up speed. With a dramatic increase in the number of vehicles on the roads, vehicular emission which is the main source of air pollution has become higher and higher.

Quality of air can contribute to better health for residents. Air pollution triggered by high volume of traffic shortens life expectancy. Although air pollution does not cause serious disease straight away as it requires prolonged exposure, health risks are real and chronic exposure to air pollution is not only bad for environmental health but also can increase the risk of developing heart and respiratory diseases.

There has been a growing concern over harmful emission from high volume of traffic among dwellers. We see some people wearing masks over their face more and more on the busy places in Yangon. We comfort ourselves with a thought that newly-imported vehicles of latest models only produce a small amount of exhaust fumes. But, no official data revealing that a layer of smog over the city has not reached its danger level is available to relieve our concerns.

Now is the time to inform Yangonites of the air quality of the traffic city. We need a high priority to monitor air pollution in downtown and industrial areas. More attention is also needed to heighten public awareness about the danger of air pollution and develop precautions to be adopted. We want to know whether it is necessary to wear a mask while going out in Yangon.

Wisconsin baby's aunt charged in kidnap of six-day-old nephew

DENVER, COLORADO, 8 Feb — A Colorado woman police believe faked a pregnancy was charged on Friday with the kidnapping in Wisconsin of her 6-day-old nephew, who was found a day later behind a gas station in Iowa, federal prosecutors said. Kristen Smith, 31, of Denver, was charged in a Wisconsin federal court after the infant, Kayden Powell, was found wrapped in blankets in a tote bag 200 miles away from his home, authorities said.

According to the criminal complaint, authorities believe Smith faked being pregnant after they found a prosthetic pregnancy belly in her car and Facebook postings in which she claimed to be with child. The parents, Brianna Marshall, 18, and Bruce Powell, 23, reported the baby boy missing from his bassinet early Thursday morning, sparking a massive search that rallied federal, state and local officials.

According to the complaint, Marshall told authorities that Smith was at her home until sometime early Thursday morning, when she planned to head back to Denver, where she lives. Authorities found Smith at a gas station in West Branch, Iowa, where they searched her car and found baby clothing, a car seat and a stroller, but no baby, the complaint said.

The complaint said authorities also found a prosthetic pregnancy belly in her vehicle. After Smith was arrested because of an outstanding warrant in Texas, authorities examined her cell phone, where they found emails and Facebook postings in which she said she gave birth on Wednesday. "Smith did not appear pregnant, had not appeared pregnant while in Wisconsin and was pregnancy tested and was not pregnant," the complaint said.

At 10 am on Friday morning, West Branch police found the baby in a tote bag outside another gas station, about 500 yards from where they apprehended Smith, the complaint said. "Despite frigid temperatures, Kayden was found alive and appears to be doing very well," Kopp told a news conference. "In the words of EMS officials, he is in excellent health." West Branch is in eastern Iowa about 185 miles from Beloit in southern Wisconsin, near the Illinois border.

China targets China-LatAm forum's establishment this year

BEIJING, 8 Feb — China on Friday expressed readiness to work with the Community of Latin American and Caribbean States (CELAC) for the establishment of a China-CELAC forum before the end of this year.

"China will maintain contacts with the CELAC on the mechanism and cooperative areas, and work for the formal establishment of the forum and the first ministerial meeting within this year," Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Hong Lei told a daily press briefing. The CELAC approved a special statement to extend support for the establishment of a China-CELAC forum at the organization's second summit in late January, seeking to hold the forum's first meeting within 2014.

"China and the CELAC are committed to building the forum, in order to set up an important platform for the development of a China-Latin America comprehensive cooperative partnership featuring equality, mutual benefit and common development," Hong said.

He noted that Chinese President Xi Jinping had already lauded the CELAC's approval of the special statement. It showed Latin American and Caribbean countries had common aspirations for deepening overall Latin America-China cooperation, according to the spokesman.

India to launch home-made nuke submarine, intercontinental ballistic missile by 2015

NEW DELHI, 8 Feb — India will launch indigenous nuclear submarine and the country's first intercontinental ballistic missile by 2015, a top defence official has said.

Philippines sends messages of thanks to Japan, other nations

TOKYO, 8 Feb — The Philippines sent messages of thanks on Saturday to Japan and other nations for their assistance to the Southeast Asian country after it suffered the brunt of super typhoon Haiyan last November. Under the initiative of the Philippine Department of Tourism, the disaster-hit country displayed thank you messages on electronic billboards in Tokyo as well as eight other cities including New York and Paris at the exact time the typhoon struck the country at 4:40 a.m. local time, according to the Tokyo-based Philippine tourism officials.

In the Japanese capital, messages thanking people for their support were displayed in Japanese on two tarp banners and on screens of the Qfront building just in front of the "scramble crossing" in the popular Shibuya shopping district.

"When our people were experiencing a devastation that we have never experienced before, a lot of people especially Japan, helped us," said Valentino Cabansag, tourism attache and representative to East Japan of the Philippine Department of Tourism in Tokyo. Japan, which shared the experience of receiving an outpouring of global support and aid in the wake of its March 2011 quake-tsunami disasters, was one of the countries that responded very quickly, he said.

In the aftermath of the typhoon, which has claimed the lives so far of more than 6,000 people, Japan has provided various forms of assistance including financial aid and the dispatch of medical teams as well as the largest international relief mission of its Self-Defence Forces. Cabansag said that his country, by delivering a message of gratitude to global donors, wants to show the world that it is entering a phase of rebuilding three months after the calamity and hopes boosting Philippine tourism will help reconstruction efforts and the broader economy.

The messages in Shibuya will be displayed for about two to three weeks. Similar messages were displayed elsewhere, including New York Times Square and Lafayette Mogador in Paris, the officials said.—Kyodo News

Philippine president names new army chief

MANILA, 8 Feb — Philippine President Benigno S Aquino III on Friday appointed Maj. Gen. Hernando Iriberry as the new chief of the 80,000-strong Philippine Army. Iriberry, commander of the 7th Infantry Division, succeeded Lt. Gen. Noel Coballes who retired from service after he turned 56 — the mandatory retirement age for soldiers.

"As the new head, I expect you to show exceptional strength, discipline and dedication in order to continue the transformation of the Philippine Army," Aquino said in his speech during the change of command ceremony.

Iriberry, a member of the Philippine Military Academy Class of 1983, also served as the senior military defence adviser of Defence Secretary Voltaire Gazmin. —Xinhua

Lovers set to pay more for Valentine's Day flowers

BEIJING, 8 Feb — Lovers who are ordering flowers for Valentine's Day will have to pay more this year due to heavy snow which caused a dramatic decrease in the yield production of roses in the southwest Yunnan Province.

The retail price of a single rose set a new record at 20 yuan (US$3.30), more than doubled the price of roses in the same period of last year.

However, flower shops said the higher prices wouldn't help them make a fortune because customers would pick fewer flowers or turn to other gifts for Valentine's Day which falls on next Friday.

"Most customers were very surprised at the hike in rose prices," said He Yuhong, owner of Jing'an Flower Shop. "They would pick other flowers such as carnation and lily to match with the roses or chose bunches with fewer roses but with good meanings."

Most customers order flower bunches with 11 roses or 33 roses this year, and the number of flowers means one loves another wholeheartedly and one loves another forever respectively, he said.

He said he would wait till next week to import roses according to the number of bookings in case expensive roses receive a cold reception among lovers.

Last year, he imported 12,000 roses before Valentine's Day and sold all of them.

Li Shusheng, manager of Huazhiyu Flower Shop, imported 1,000 roses for Valentine's Day, a tenth of the number he imported last year, but flower bookings are not cut.

Shanghai Morning Post said the yield production of roses in Yunnan, the country's flower supply base, was cut by two-thirds due to the low temperature brought by the snow in December. The roses froze to death while sprouting, the paper said.—Xinhua ULAN BATOR, 8 Feb — The Mongolian government ratified a cooperation agreement Friday with the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) in the areas of industry and agriculture.

Under the agreement, Mongolia will provide livestock husbandry support to the DPRK and, in return, the DPRK will develop light industry using raw materials and resources of Mongolia, such as sheep wool and coal.

The agreement was finalized during a visit by Battulga Khaltmaa, Mongolian minister of industry and agriculture, to the DPRK last October. Both countries hope the deal will expand reciprocal economic ties between the two countries.—Xinhua

Indonesia to repair roads after flood to help smooth food supply

JAKARTA, 8 Feb — The Indonesian government on Friday decided to introduce an emergency measure to repair damaged roads after widespread flooding and landslides across the country, a move aiming at paving transport of foods and other products to help cool inflation.

Indonesian President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono held a limited cabinet meeting on Friday and instructed his ministers and soldiers to help repair the catastrophes-affected roads which have disrupted distribution of the products in a country home to over 238 million people.

Some cities and territories at the vast archipelago country, Indonesia, have endured flooding and landslides since mid-December that partly pushed up consumer prices index to 1.07 percent in January after chalking up 0.55 percent in December, though on a yearly basis inflation is accelerating at a slower pace of 8.22 percent in January as against 8.37 percent in the previous month, according to the national statistic bureau.

"I decided that we will carry out an integrated emergency relief operation in all areas whose road damages are classified as severe," Yudhoyono told a Press conference at the State Palace.

Body of last missing miner found at S African mine

JOHANNESBURG, 8 Feb —The body of the ninth missing miner has been found at the Doornkop gold mine west of Johannesburg, mine owner Harmony gold announced on Friday.

“With sadness, Harmony Gold Mining Company Limited advises that rescue workers have located and are in the process of recovering the body of the mine-worker who was unaccounted for following Tuesday evening’s underground seismic event, rockfall and fire at the company’s Doornkop mine,” company spokesman Charmane Russell said.

This brings to nine the number of mineworkers who died at the mine, and now all missing miners are accounted for, Russel said.

The bodies of eight other miners were found on Wednesday in what was believed to be the worst mine tragedy since 2009 when nine miners were killed at the platinum mine.

Rescue workers saved eight other mineworkers from a refuge bay on 192 level, where the rockfall and fire occurred.

Harmony CEO Graham Briggs repeated his personal condolences, and those of the company’s board of directors and management to the family, friends and colleagues of those who died, Russel said.

“Families have been brought to the mine by the company, where they will be provided with the support they need at this time,” said Russel.

The company suffered from two more accidents on Thursday afternoon, one at Kusasaletu in the North West Province and another at Joel in the Free State. Two miners died from the accidents. That means that a total of 11 miners died at mines owned by the company in two days.

“The past two days have been tragic for Harmony, having lost our colleagues at three of our operations in three separate events. This is unacceptable,” Briggs said earlier.

Following the accidents, all operations across the group embarked on safety shifts with effect from the night shift Thursday night.

That will include the day and afternoon shifts on Friday, during which time no blasting will take place for 24 hours, the company said.

“During these safety shifts, general managers will lead their senior teams underground, re-enforcing safety messages and procedures, particularly in respect of critical safety areas. Unions will play an important role throughout this process in facilitating engagement and supporting leadership,” Briggs said.—Xinhua

US Customs’ drones back in air after crash investigation

WASHINGTON, 8 Feb — US Customs and Border Protection put its drones back in the air on Friday after an investigation into a crash that grounded its unmanned aircraft fleet, the agency said.

The nine drones were grounded when a mechanical problem forced operators to crash one of the pilotless aircraft on 28 January off the Southern California coast.

“Effective today, US Customs and Border Protection has lifted the temporary grounding of its Unmanned Aircraft Systems,” spokesman Michael Friel said in an email. Initial findings from an investigation of the crash showed that the $12 million drone’s generator failed and that the flight crew reacted properly, he said. “Appropriate mechanical steps” have been taken to address potential problems on the other aircraft, Friel said.

The California crash was the second by one of the agency’s drones since it began using the unmanned aerial surveillance technology in 2006. The Customs drones are Predator B models made by privately held General Atomics Aeronautical Systems. They are used to spot illegal border crossers and narcotics traffickers.

High Representative Inzko slams violence in BiH

SARAEVO, 8 Feb — Actions of setting fires on buildings and destroying property will not be tolerated, said Valentin Inzko, High Representative for Bosnian and Herzegovina (BiH), on Friday.

The Office of the High Representative (OHR) is an ad hoc international institution responsible for overseeing implementation of civilian aspects of the Peace Agreement ending the war in BiH.

Talking about the clashes between protesters and the police in Sarajevo, Inzko, the OHR head, noted the city looked like a war zone. “I did not see that for 20 years and it is shocking to see that vandalism and hooliganism today,” Inzko said during an interview with a local TV.

There is no quick solution for the current difficult situation in BiH, he said, adding that the only solution is patience and dialogue.

“Legal and regulated state is the solution, which of course requires a lot of effort of the entire society”, he said.

Protesters clashed with police in Sarajevo, setting the Presidential Building and government building of Sarajevo Canton on fire. Over 60 people were injured, including about 40 police officers.

There were similar clashes in Tuzla, Zencia, Mostar and other cities in BiH.—Xinhua

'Star Trek' star Leonard Nimoy 'doing OK' after lung disease diagnosis

LOS ANGELES, 8 Feb — Veteran actor Leonard Nimoy, best known as Spock in the 1960s television series "Star Trek" and a string of feature films that followed, said he was "doing OK" after being diagnosed with lung disease and urged fans on Thursday to quit smoking.

"Smokers, please understand. If you quit after you're diagnosed with lung damage it's too late. Grandpa says learn my lesson. Quit now," Nimoy tweeted to his 810,000 followers.

In Nimoy's case, the actor said, he was diagnosed despite having quit smoking 30 years ago.

The 82-year-old actor added he was "doing OK. Just can't walk distances," and he signed off with "LLAP," an abbreviation of his character's trademark phrase, "live long and prosper." Nimoy first revealed in a Twitter message posted last week that he has chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, or COPD, a severe lung ailment that the US surgeon general has concluded is linked to smoking.

Representatives for the actor did not immediately respond to Reuters' request for further comment.

Nimoy, a native of Boston, has become synonymous with his role as Spock, the fictional half-human, half-Vulcan first officer and later commander of the starship Enterprise, in the television and film versions of "Star Trek." He most recently appeared in JJ Abrams' "Star Trek Into Darkness" last year, and is a celebrated figure among the franchise's loyal and avid fan base.—Reuters 46-year-old said on February 6 at a radio station.

Madhuri also talked about the action and stunts she has done in the film.

Kim Kardashian to walk down the aisle in May

LOS ANGELES, 8 Feb — Socialite Kim Kardashian and her rapper-fiance Kanye West will reportedly get married in Paris in May.

The two, who have an eight-month-old daughter, North West, preponed the date to May instead of July because they are "so excited" to get married.

The 33-year-old reality TV star and the 36-year-old rapper also want their daughter to be heavily involved in the ceremony.

"North will have a large role in the wedding!" usmagazine.com quoted a source as saying. Another friend said that the couple's wedding plans are well underway and they will have "lots of events leading up to the big day" for their guests.

However, Kim, who was married twice before, is said to have been very reluctant to have a lavish ceremony. "Kim isn't totally pumped about a huge wedding. But she's going along with it," another source said.—PTI

Is Angelina Jolie "sick with worry" over Brad's crush on Lupita Nyong'o?

LOS ANGELES, 8 Feb—Hollywood star Angelina Jolie was spotted looking very skinny at a party, Airlie Beach, Queensland, alongwith her partner Brad Pitt, 50, for wrap party for her latest film Unbroken, some of the fans thought she seemed too bony, reported Daily Star.

The actress was reportedly worried as Pitt is believed to have a crush on his 12 Years A Slave co-star Lupita Nyong'o.

MUMBAI, 8 Feb — Parineeti Chopra and Alia Bhatt will soon be seen together on filmmaker Karan Johar's Koffee With Karan show and the former says that Serena out of Indian Wells after 'careful consideration'

LOS ANGELES, 8 Feb — Hopes that Serena Williams would end a 13-year boycott of the BNP Paribas Open at Indian Wells were dashed on Friday when the world number one said she would not be competing in the event "after careful consideration".

Williams and older sister Venus have never returned to the tournament in the California desert after being jeered by spectators in a controversial final in 2001 but Serena had hinted at last month's Australian Open she might lift the boycott. Serena had been listed among the entries for this year's edition but on Friday said in a statement: "After careful consideration, I will not return to the Indian Wells BNP Paribas Open this year. 'I send my best wishes to everyone involved with the tournament.' Tournament director Steve Simon said: "We wish her the very best of luck in the year ahead and hope that she will decide to play here next year."

Williams, who suffered a shock fourth round loss to Ana Ivanovic at the Australian Open, had raised the possibility of lifting her boycott of Indian Wells after being inspired by a movie about Nelson Mandela.

"It actually crossed my mind a couple days ago, or after I saw the movie," the 32-year-old American told reporters at Melbourne Park. "I thought about it (playing in Indian Wells)... Right now I don't know."

"I just have to focus on this tournament. But I think Mandela was a really amazing man. I felt really honoured to have a chance to meet him, get to know him a little bit, and get to know his story a little better."

Walker in early tie for lead at rain-hit Pebble Beach

NEW YORK, 8 Feb — American Jimmy Walker edged one step closer to a third victory on the 2013-14 PGA Tour when he moved into an early tie for the lead in Friday's rain-delayed second round of the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

FedExCup points leader Walker, who won the season-opening Frys.com Open in October and last month's Sony Open in Hawaii fired a three-under-par 69 at Spyglass Hill, one of three venues being used for this week's event.

Walker clearly relishes playing on the picturesque Monterey Peninsula, having recorded top-10 finishes in each of the last three years at the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

The 34-year-old collected three birdies in a bogey-free display in mainly overcast, breezy conditions to finish level with fellow American Jordan Spieth, who returned a six-birdie 67 at Monterey Peninsula.

who clinched his maiden title at the John Deere Classic in July, birdied his final hole, the par-three ninth, to join Walker at the top.

First-round leader Andrew Loupe, a PGA Tour rookie making only his seventh start on the US circuit, was a further two strokes back at seven under after carding a one-over 73 on the hosting Pebble Beach Golf Links.

Speed kings ready to deliver thrills

ROSA KHUTOR, 8 Feb — "Been there, done that" the veteran American Bode Miller said of the Olympics this week. But in the moments before he flings himself down the men's downhill course on Sunday, you can be sure the adrenaline will be pumping as strongly as ever.

Miller calls the race the "pinnacle" of his sport, and the showman will begin the Alpine programme at the Sochi Games in style if he becomes the oldest male skier to capture an Olympic gold. The 36-year-old, competing in what will almost certainly be his fifth and final Games, will have a fight to be king of the hill, with Norwegian giant Aksel Lund Svindal, Austrians Klaus Kroell and Matthias Mayer, and Swiss Didier Defago — a surprise winner four years ago - among those in the frame.

No Winter Olympics truly comes alive until the Alpine skiing events start, and the opening races should provide some compelling tales, whether it is victory for a resurgent Miller or Germany's Maria Hoefl-Riesch filling the void left by American Lindsey Vonn's absence in the women's downhill. With Vancouver champion Vonn missing following knee surgery, Hoefl-Riesch has been left as the woman to beat in the downhill, and she desperately wants to win after claiming two golds four years ago in slalom and super combined. She will come under pressure from Austrians Anna Fenninger and Elizabeth Goergl, experienced American Julia Mancuso, and Slovenian all-rounder Tina Maze. Liechtenstein's Tina Weirather could also be a dark horse for the title.

"Of course it's a big goal, but it is a difficult track where a mistake can happen virtually on every turn," Hoefl-Riesch told reporters after her second training run on the challenging Rosa Khutor course on Friday.

"The one who makes the least mistakes and keeps pace on the skis the best will win. 'I will try my very best, but it won't be easy.'"

Such is Hoefl-Riesch's strength across all the disciplines — she won slalom and super combined in Vancouver — that it would be no surprise if she matched Janica Kostelic's haul of four career Olympic golds over the next two weeks.

Son gives Leverkusen another win at Gladbach

MUNICH, 8 Feb — South Korean midfielder Son Heung-min's spectacular long-range strike gave Bayer Leverkusen a 1-0 win at neighbours Borussia Moenchengladbach on their favourite hunting-ground on Friday.

Second-placed Leverkusen have not lost at Gladbach for 25 years, their previous defeat coming in February 1989.

Son continued his excellent season for Leverkusen in the 62nd minute when he collected a pass around 30 metres from goal, made space for the shot and scored with a dipping effort into the far corner.

Gladbach stirred into life in the final 10 with Leverkusen goalkeeper Bernd Leno twice saving from Max Kruse and Juan Arango. Raffael shot over the top and Gladbach had a penalty appeal waved away in the dying seconds.

Early in the game Leverkusen substitute Philipp Wollscheid was booked for throwing a spare ball onto the pitch, halting a Gladbach attack after they had taken a quick throw.

The win kept Leverkusen (43 points) on the trail of leaders Bayern Munich although they are still 10 points behind the defending champions, who visit Nuremberg on Saturday (1430 GMT).

Gladbach's season is in danger of unravelling. They have lost their last three league games and are without a win in their last five. The Foals are fifth with 33 points, one behind Schalke 04 who play at home to Hanover 96 on Sunday, and in danger of falling behind in the race for Champions League spots.—Reuters

Ronaldinho influence sees Atletico settle player debts

SAO PAULO, 8 Feb — Atletico Mineiro have settled their outstanding debts with players after Ronaldinho stepped in to lobby on behalf of his team mates, Lance newspaper said on Friday.

Australia, NZ expand trial of criminal history information

CANBERRA, 8 Feb — Attorney-General of Australia George Brandis and New Zealand Minister of Justice Judith Collins announced on Saturday that Australia and New Zealand employers are to have greater access to respective national criminal history checks for employment vetting purposes. The announcement follows a successful trial of criminal history information sharing between New Zealand and Queensland. A Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) will now be developed to expand the trial to all Australian states and to all eligible Australian and New Zealand organizations.

The decision was made in Sydney as part of the Australia-New Zealand Joint Cabinet Meeting on Friday during New Zealand Prime Minister John Key's visit to Australia. "Often New Zealand employers need both Australian and New Zealand criminal history checks to make fully informed employment decisions," Collins said.

"This is particularly important for positions that involve working with children and vulnerable people to help protect our communities from people who may pose a risk."

Brandis said that at any one time there are approximately 600,000 New Zealanders in Australia.

"Facilitating access to criminal background checks will enhance community safety and security," said Brandis. "As the movement of workers between Australia and New Zealand has grown it makes sense that employers in both Australia and New Zealand have access to the type of background information that is available for local workers."

As part of the existing trial, participating employers were able to request criminal history checks on behalf of job candidates who had given consent.

The expanded service supports efforts to enhance the free movement of people across the Tasman and complements other trans-Tasman efforts underway to make communities safer.

Winter Games open with a glitch but romp on through Russian history

SOCHI, 8 Feb — Russia's Winter Games got off to a shaky start on Friday when one of the five Olympic rings failed to unfurl, but ballet dancers, stirring music and huge mechanical props tracing the host nation's history propelled the opening ceremony forward.

Only four of the five giant Olympic rings formed from snowflake-shaped structures suspended from the roof of the 40,000-capacity Fisht Stadium in Sochi, meaning the symbol could not be illuminated with fireworks as planned.

The showboat start to a Games that President Vladimir Putin hopes will burnish Russia's image on the world stage went on without further interruption, with cosmonaut Sergei Krikalev, who has spent more days in space than anyone, hoisting the Russian flag.

Putin officially opened the 7-23 February Games to a burst of fireworks that lit up the clear night sky outside the gleaming new stadium located on the shores of the Black Sea.

"I declare the 22nd Winter Olympic Games open," said Putin, launching an event he has personally championed.

Before the rings hiccup, a young girl in a white dress soared into the air, lifted by a harness, and sang as floating islands featuring folktale Russian landscapes drifted dreamlike across the stadium.

Cartoonish giant inflatable church domes and mascots were less well received, but the crowd saved some of its biggest cheers for the athletes as they emerged from beneath the stage.

In an innovative twist, huge satellite images of each nation taken from space were projected onto the floor as the teams entered.

The Russians, outfitted

in white fur-trimmed hats and coats, drew loud applause from the audience, and light boxes on seats in the stands created a dazzling visual backdrop.

Among the most eye-catching scenes was a graceful waltz led by stars of Russian ballet as towering columns rose from the floor to set a scene echoing Leo Tolstoy's masterpiece "War and Peace".

The twirling dancers were chased away by stark red lights, jarring music and a giant train embodying the upheaval of the 1917 Russian revolution and the importance of the avant-garde art movement at around that time.

Soviet symbols rendered in a socialist realist style — including a huge hammer and sickle — took the audience through decades portrayed as a time of industrial progress; the thaw of the 1950s to present day.

Roller skaters, their costumes glowing in a darkened arena, sped across the floor, and "constellations" in the shape of winter athletes twinkled in the cavernous space above. A lightning bolt shot from an ice hockey player's stick.

In one of the final scenes, the honour of lighting the Sochi Olympic flame went jointly to triple Olympic champions Vladislav Tretyak and Irina Rodnina.

Farmers cultivate Paletwe hybrid paddy which is currently popular among them for food sufficiency and exportation to foreign markets through good agriculture patterns to increase their income as it's per acre yield is over 150 baskets.

The market of Paletwe hybrid paddy is crucial for Myanmar's food security and it is high demand in China and European countries. Per ton of Paletwe rice is sold at US$ 485-490. I cultivate and produce paddy on 200 acres of farmland in Dagon Myothit Township of Yangon. I, myself, purchased over 1 million baskets of Paletwe paddy from Myat Eindray Co in Pyu Township and the farmers from Yangon and Bago Regions. I bought Paletwe paddy at price ranging from K 400,000 to K 420,000 for 100 baskets and milled the rice at the rice mills in Kyaukdaga and Thanlyan Townships and exported them to local, border and European markets.

Myanmar exported 10000 tons of Paletwe rice

Marketable Paletwe hybrid paddy high demand in international market to the People's Republic of China in 2012-13 FY. The Department of Agriculture and Food of the Philippines has proposed to import Myanmar's agricultural product 500,000 tons of Paletwe rice per year to fulfill its consumer markets. The income of Myanmar farmer will increase if they cultivate quality and marketable Paletwe hybrid paddy in commercial fields through public-private partnership (PPP) with the technical assistance of Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation
