IMF welcomes first ever Myanmar participant to Journalism Fellowship Programme

WASHINGTON D.C, 8 April — This year's International Monetary Fund Journalism Fellowship Programme has admitted 34 participants from across the world, with a journalist from the New Light of Myanmar representing Myanmar for the first time.

37-year old Ye Myint will cover the IMF 2014 Spring Meeting from 11-13 April and participate in a number of workshops. The programme is aimed at journalists from countries that do not routinely attend the Spring and Annual Meetings of the IMF in order for them to be able to cover the meetings for their respective countries.

On Monday, 8 journalists from Africa, 6 from Asia Pacific, 6 from Europe, 8 from Middle East and Central Asia, 6 from Western Hemisphere countries gathered at the IMF Headquarters 2 in Washington DC to attend the welcome ceremony where they were given an introduction by Conny Lotze, head of Media Relations, and Press Officer Raphael Anspach.

Union Government to fully protect aid groups in Rakhine State

NAY PYI TAW, 8 April— The Union Government has announced that it will provide aid groups from the UN and other international organizations with full security services and will cooperate with them on all levels.

In a press release from the Union Government on Tuesday regarding the investigation commission for the March 26-27 riots in Sittway, Rakhine State, the Union Government also pledged that it will form a support group for emergency situations as part of efforts to support local authorities and security forces as the response to the March 26-27 riots in Sittway, Rakhine State was now adequate, officials said.

The Union Government will expose the ringleaders and others involved in the riots which targeted the facilities of aid groups, with officials saying that serious action will be taken. According to the report of the investigation commission, instigators used the fact that Ms Yvonne Dunton from the Malteser International organization took down a Buddhist flag outside her rented house as an excuse to start the violence, further straining the relations between local people and international aid groups.

The residences and facilities of the aid groups were destroyed during the riots due to a sluggish response from authorities, the report said. During the riots, 14 offices of 18 aid groups, 16 homes, 15 warehouses, 14 vehicles, 2 watercraft, 29 motorcycles and office equipment, valued at K 430 million and USD 430,000 were damaged.— NLM

Israel, Palestinians press on with peace talks rescue bid

Palestinian chief negotiator Saeb Erekat (L) helps Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas as he signs international conventions during a meeting with Palestinian leadership in the West Bank City of Ramallah on 1 April, 2014.—REUTERS

JERUSALEM, 8 April — Israeli and Palestinian negotiators on Tuesday ended another US-mediated session with no sign of a breakthrough in efforts to save peace talks from collapse but an Israeli official said they agreed to meet again.

In a statement about the latest discussions, US

State Department spokeswoman Jen Psaki said: “Gaps remain but both sides are committed to narrow the gaps.”

The US-brokered negotiations, which began in July, plunged into crisis last week after Israel, demanding a Palestinian commitment to continue talking beyond an 29 April deadline for a peace deal, failed to carry out a promised release of about two dozen Palestinian prisoners.

Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas responded by signing 15 global treaties, including the Geneva Conventions on the conduct of war and occupations, on behalf of the State of Palestine, a defiant move that surprised Washington and angered Israel.

Israeli Foreign Minister Avidgor Lieberman, speaking on Israel Radio on Tuesday, said Abbas would have to reverse that step in order for the prisoner release to be re-addressed. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has threatened unspecified retaliation in response to the signings.

As part of the US-led bid to salvage the talks, Israeli chief negotiator Tzipi Livni and Palestinian counterpart Saeb Erekat, along with US mediator Martin Indyk, reconvened late on Monday after what the United States had described as a “serious and constructive” meeting on Sunday.—Reuters

Afghan presidential election provokes more than 3,000 complaints

KABUL, 8 April — Afghan authorities have received more than 3,000 reports of violations from last weekend’s presidential election, exceeding the tally following a 2009 vote that was marred by widespread fraud. But just half the 3,103 complaints registered so far will be investigated, a complaints commission spokesman said, since the rest were reported by telephone and lacked the required supporting evidence.

The three frontrunners have all complained of fraud in the 5 April vote meant to usher in Afghanistan’s first democratic transfer of power, as incumbent Hamid Karzai prepares to step down after more than 12 years as head of state.

Midnight on Monday was the deadline for reporting fraud and any irregularities, but the final figure is expected to rise as reports flow into Kabul along with ballot boxes from around the country.

A final tally could take days to become available, since observers, voters and other parties all had means to lodge complaints at polling stations. “As soon as we get them, it is clear the final number is going to increase,” said Nader Mohseni, spokesman for the Independent Election Complaints Commission.

“We cannot ignore the fact that during the elections, there were instances of fraud and electoral violations.” More than 2,000 complaints were investigated during the 2009 elections, which were tarnished by fraud that led to more than a million votes being scrapped.—Reuters

Indonesia deploys police, troops to safeguard upcoming elections

JAKARTA, 8 April — Indonesia, due to hold parliamentary election on Wednesday, has deployed hundreds thousands of police and tens thousands of troops to guard against possible public disorder in the country’s upcoming elections.

The country had also installed special procedures to assure security during the elections, with police taking the leading role.

A senior Indonesian police officer said that some 18,000 police would be deployed to assure the security in about 40,000 ballot stations in capital city and outskirts areas (Jabodetabek).

“Firearms were not necessary to secure the situation in Jakarta and outskirts areas. Police manned in ballot stations would use baton. They already have martial art skills,” Jakarta Police Chief Inspector General Dwi Priyatno said on the sidelines of election security preparation drill held here on Monday.

Dwi added firearm usage would only be allowed in areas considered prone to security incidents, or in situation that demands police to take excessive measures, such as unrests or anarchy.

“We have prepared firearms and other necessities required to secure the election commensurate with the level of security disturbances,” Dwi added.

Police’s tasks include securing the ballot stations, distribution of ballot papers, vote counting in ballot stations and ushering the voted ballots to the regional general elections commission (KPU) offices.

Overall, Indonesia allocated some 250,000 police personnel to secure the elections. Indonesia has allocated some 1.6 trillion rupiah (about 141 million US dollars) to finance the police’s efforts to secure the election.

UN Security Council condemns killing of two UN personnel in Somalia

UNITED NATIONS, 8 April — The UN Security Council on Monday condemned the killing of two UN consultants in Somalia earlier in the day, and called on the Somali authorities to bring the perpetrators to justice.

“The members of the Security Council are outraged by the killing today of two UN personnel in Galkayo, Somalia,” said a statement issued here by the 15-nation Security Council. “The members of the Security Council condemned the killings in the strongest terms.”

The two UN staffers, one British and a French working with the UN anti-drug agency in Somalia, had reportedly flown into Galkayo to meet with Somali officials on the issue of regulating the money transfer services that replace a formal banking system in Somalia.

Sources from the airport said the two had been shot and killed close to the immigration office and the killing seemed to be a targeted assassination carried out by two assailants, reports said.—Xinhua

Six killed, 28 wounded in insurgent attacks in Iraq

BAGHDAD, 8 April — Six people were killed and 28 others wounded in separate violent attacks across Iraq on Monday, police and medical sources said.

In Anbar Province, a suicide car bomber rammed his explosive-laden car into a checkpoint manned by members of a government-backed Sahwa paramilitary group and blew it up in al-Soufiyah district in the eastern part of the provincial capital city of Ramadi, some 110 km west of the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, a provincial police source said. The blast killed two Sahwa members and wounded seven others, the source said.

Iraqi army helicopter gunships attacked al-Askari neighbourhood in the eastern part of the city of Fallujah, some 50 km west of Baghdad, and killed a militant, believed to be a leader of the Islamic State of Iraq and Levant (ISIL). Separately, artillery and mortar shelling on several neighbourhoods in the besieged city of Fallujah left a civilian killed and nine others wounded, a medical source from the city hospital said.

Meanwhile, several mortar rounds landed on the town of Garma near Fallujah, damaging several houses and wounding four civilians, including a child, a local police source said.

Anbar Province has been the scene of fierce clashes that flared up after Iraqi police dismantled an anti-government protest site outside Ramadi in late December last year.

Meanwhile, near Baghdad, a soldier was killed and three others were wounded when gunmen attacked an army patrol in Abu Ghraib area, some 25 km west of Baghdad, a local police source said. In northern Iraq, soldiers in eastern Mosul, some 400 km north of Baghdad, shot dead a gunman and blew up his car while he was approaching their checkpoint, a local police source said.

Also in Mosul, five people were wounded when a roadside bomb explosion missed an army patrol in the southern city and hit civilian cars instead, the source added.

Iraq is witnessing its worst violence in recent years. According to the UN Assistance Mission for Iraq, a total of 8,868 Iraqis, including 7,818 civilians and civilian police personnel, were killed in 2013, the highest annual death toll in years.—Xinhua

G20 final document unlikely to address Ukraine crisis

MOSCOW, 8 April — The world's financial leaders are likely to discuss possible risks to Europe's economy from the crisis in Ukraine, but there are no plans to mention it in the final document from their Washington meeting, two G20 officials said.

Finance ministers and central bankers from the Group of 20 developed and emerging economies will treat Ukraine at their two-day meeting later this week the same way as they have talked about past crises, a Russian G20 official said.

"There is no mention of the situation in Ukraine (planned for the G20 communiqué)," the official said.

"One way or another, the issue will be brought up during discussions but it will be approached from the point of view of risks the crisis in Ukraine can create for the region as a whole. This is a traditional approach."

The G20 is also likely to talk about the planned International Monetary Fund program for Ukraine and about the crisis as a general geopolitical risk

Pro-Russian protesters gather at a barricade outside the offices of the SBU state security service in Luhansk, in eastern Ukraine on 7 April, 2014.—REUTERS that would have negative effects on the European economy only if it escalates, another official involved in the preparations for the meeting said.

"It will appear in the discussion as geopolitical risk, but also because the Russians are there I don't expect that will be high in the discussions of the G20," the second official, a non-Russian, said.

Last month Ukraine won a $14 billion-$18 billion standby credit from the IMF. The country's economy was thrown in chaos after popular protests in Kiev ousted pro-Russian president Viktor Yanukovich in February and Russia seized Ukraine's Crimea and annexed it, causing the worst standoff between Moscow and the West since the Cold War. "Of course there is concern, the tension escalated, but markets have more or less made the assumption that there will be a diplomatic solution so they can shrug it off," the second official said.—Reuters

Australian ship seeks signals from missing jet

SYDNEY, 8 April — An Australian ship which picked up possible "pings" from the black box recorders of a missing Malaysia Airlines jetliner has been unable to detect any further signals and time is running out to narrow the massive search, officials said on Tuesday.

Angus Houston, head of the Australian agency coordinating the search for Malaysia Airlines Flight MH370, said the month-long hunt in the Indian Ocean was at a critical stage given the batteries in the black box beacons had already reached the end of their 30-day expected life.

A US Navy "towed pinger locator" onboard

Australia's Ocean Shield picked up two signals consistent with black box locator beacons over the weekend - the first for more than two hours and the second for about 13 minutes.

Houston said the signals represented the best lead in the search yet, but efforts to pick up the pings again had so far been unsuccessful.

"If we don't get any further transmissions, we have a reasonably large search area of the bottom of the ocean to prosecute and that will take a long, long time. It's very slow, painstaking work," said Houston.

The black boxes record cockpit data and may provide answers about what happened to the plane, which was carrying 227 passengers and 12 crew when it vanished on March 8 and flew thousands of kilometers off its Kuala Lumpur-to-Beijing route.

Authorities say evidence, including the loss of communications, suggests the plane was deliberately diverted by someone familiar with the aircraft, but have not ruled out mechanical problems.

Analysis of satellite data led investigators to conclude the Boeing 777 came down in an area some 1,680 km (1,040 miles) northwest of Perth, near where possible pings were picked up and the search is now focused.—Reuters

IATA urges Gulf carriers to expand regional, global cooperation

DUBAI, 8 April — The International Air Transport Association (IATA) on Monday called for regional cooperation and global standards to support the continued success of aviation in the Gulf area.

Speaking at the ongoing Aerospace Summit in Abu Dhabi, IATA director general and chief executive Tony Tyler said the fast-growing Gulf area is at the center of the success of Middle East aviation.

For the last 12 months, Middle Eastern aviation has outperformed all other regions in passenger transport growth.

But Tyler said effective management needs regional and international teamwork. "The players in the region urgently need to buy in to a vision for seamless airspace management in the region and then work together in a team effort to make it happen."

Syrian warring parties, supporters must "do everything" to protect civilians: UN chief

UNITED NATIONS, 8 April — UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon on Monday urged the warring parties in Syria and their supporters to "do everything" to protect civilians in the Middle East country, where armed conflicts entered its fourth year in March.

"In the face of troubling new reports of atrocities in the brutal conflict driving Syria to its destruction, the secretary-general demands that warring parties and their supporters ensure that civilians are protected, regardless of their religion, community or ethnic affiliation," said a statement issued here Monday night by Ban's spokesman.

"Both the Syrian government and armed groups have the legal obligation and moral responsibility to do so," the statement said. "They must do everything to avoid and prevent violence against civilians, including indiscriminate shelling and air attacks on civilian areas."

Ban's statement was prompted by the killing of an elderly priest in Homs, a city in western Syria and located some 162 km north of the capital Damascus, and what the secretary-general called "the gruesome images" purporting executions in the Syrian town of Kassab.

Beleaguered Thai PM pleads for justice, fair treatment

BANGKOK, 8 April — With legal cases against her mounting, embattled Thai Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra pleaded on Tuesday for fair and proper treatment from the national anti-corruption commission and Thailand's Constitutional Court.

Thailand's political crisis looks set to enter a new, potentially turbulent phase as Yingluck faces at least two legal cases that could see her removed from office in coming weeks, a move that is likely to jolt her supporters in to action and bring the country closer, some fear, to civil strife.

"I ask that the Constitutional Court and National Anti-Corruption Commission use fair treatment when they deliberate the cases against me. I ask for the same treatment that past political office holders have received," Yingluck told reporters in Bangkok on Tuesday.

Her supporters have accused the Constitutional Court of bias in frequently ruling against the government. They also question the speed with which the National Anti-Corruption Commission (NACC) has pursued her over a failed government rice subsidy scheme. The scheme has run up huge losses and left hundreds of thousands of farmers unpaid.

Yingluck has been charged with dereliction of duty in overseeing the cash-draining scheme that helped bring her to power in 2011 on a wave of support from rural voters.

Drought threatens population in the northwest of Haiti

PORT-DE-PAIX, (Haiti), 8 April — Only cactus grows along the dirt road fringing arid fields on the way to the isolated village of Bas des Moustiques, on the outskirts of the northwestern city of Port-de-Paix in Haiti.

A lack of rain in recent months has killed crops in Haiti's poorest region, and left people struggling to survive. Julia Sodieta, 41, has lost hope as she fights a losing battle to provide for her large family. "When I want to buy some food, people refuse and insult me because I have not been able to pay my debts," said Sodieta, the mother of 11.

"I can't pay school fees anymore for my children," she added. "Even buying clothes and shoes is impossible for me. What I am going to say is horrible, but I would rather not have my children." The drought follows two years of poor harvests in the region.

"I had a donkey that I used to transport coal, but it died because I could not buy food," said Charitable Yvner, 30. "So I can no longer work and the little money I saved has run out. My four children are weak and cannot concentrate in school." Historically, food has been sparse in northwestern Haiti, where chronic malnutrition is common among the young, stunting their physical and intellectual growth.

Now the drought is directly affecting an additional 143,000 people, say international relief experts, prompting a major emergency operation by the UN's World Food Programme. "They are now in a terrible situation," said Georg-Friedrich Heymell, the Programme's director in Haiti. "They cannot survive without support. The food we give them will help them for the next six weeks."

With a population of 11 million, Haiti ranked

161 among 187 countries in the United Nations Human Development Index in 2012. "Three-quarters of Haitians live on less than $2 per day and half of the population earns less than $1 per day," the WFP says. "In rural areas, almost 90 percent live below the poverty level and basic social services are practically nonexistent."

Haiti has faced a food crisis for decades and international organizations have been financing humanitarian help for years, but even so the WFP forecasts are alarming. "It's April, and the emergency stock we compose each year, thanks to the funding of Canada, the United Kingdom, the United States, France and Switzerland, is already exhausted," Heymell said.

"We need $5 million just to replenish the emergency stock before hurricane season (in June). Here we have an emergency today, but unfortunately I know it will not be the last crisis for 2014 in Haiti," he added. With the international community focused on Central Africa and Syria, getting extra funding for humanitarian needs in Haiti is a big challenge, he said.

Valls seeks reform boost with French confidence vote

PARIS, 8 April — New Prime Minister Manuel Valls will test France's political will to reform on Tuesday in a confidence vote that will determine whether the government can push ahead with a competitiveness drive. Valls, appointed by President Francois Hollande last week after the ruling Socialists suffered an election rout, is to launch plans to phase out 30 billion euros ($41 billion) in payroll tax on companies in exchange for hiring.

Valls, one of France's most popular politicians, is to outline his priorities in his first major policy speech at 15:00 (1300 GMT), before the confidence vote. Hollande's newly reshuffled government is facing growing resistance from erstwhile coalition partners the Greens and from the

Their backing is vital for what Hollande has dubbed his "responsibility pact", which includes plans to wring 50 billion euros in savings from the budget over three years.

"The French want action. We have to create the conditions for supporting growth," Valls said on Monday on i>Tele television, promising concrete plans. His Finance Minister Michel Sapin said Valls would offer details about where the budget savings will come from. A government source said central state spending would account for nearly 20 billion euros, spending by local authorities 10 billion and another 20 billion would be from the welfare system.

Brawl in Ukraine parliament as communist supports pro-Russia protesters

KIEV, 8 April — Deputies in the Ukrainian parliament brawled in the chamber on Tuesday after a communist leader accused nationalists of playing into the hands of Russia by adopting extreme tactics early in the Ukrainian crisis.

Two deputies from the Svoboda far-right nationalist party took exception to the charges by communist Petro Symonenko and seized him while he was talking from the rostrum.

His party supporters rallied to his defense and a brawl broke out with deputies from other parties joining in and trading punches.

Symonenko stirred nationalist anger when, referring to pro-Russian protesters who seized buildings in eastern Ukraine, he said nationalists had set a precedent earlier this year by seizing public buildings in protest at the rule of ousted President Viktor Yanukovich.—Reuters

Moscow blames NATO for trumping up "Russian threat"

MOSCOW, 8 April — The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) has been desperately seeking to find a new geopolitical opponent in order to cement the alliance, and the Ukrainian situation was their perfect chance to move in that direction, a high-ranking Russian diplomat said on Monday.

"No one threatens the alliance from the East," Russian permanent envoy to NATO Alexander Grushko said in an interview published on the Foreign Ministry's website.

"The unprecedented campaign around 'Russian threat' has the only goal to persuade public opinion that NATO's return to containment of the threat from East, to collective security, is a move to the right direction," he said.

He described restoration of NATO's containment strategy "a highly dangerous trend" which destabilizes military situation and stirs up Cold War instincts.

"It will be difficult to come out of that spinning dive," he warned.

The diplomat also cautioned against beefing-up of the Western military presence in eastern European countries, as such step would "completely destroy the system of mutual obligations between Russia and NATO."

Seven killed in Palestinian refugee camp clashes in Lebanon

BEIRUT, 8 April — Seven people were killed and at least ten others wounded during clashes that broke out Monday at the Palestinian refugee camp of Mieh-Mieh in Lebanon's southern port city of Sidon.

A security source confirmed to Xinhua the death toll, pointing out that the clashes started as an individual dispute ten days ago.

The source said that the armed clashes erupted between supporters of "AnsarUllah" group and others of Fatah movement.

But according to the National News Agency, Munir al-Maqdah, Fatah military commander of Ain El-Heloue, the largest Palestinian refugee camp in Lebanon, said that various factions at the camp tried to ease the tensions caused by the individual dispute, but they failed.

He added that the Palestinian factions, in coordination with the army, are working on resolving the dispute. The clash saw the use of medium and heavy machine-guns and rocket-propelled grenades.

The army has since taken strict security measures around the camp in order to prevent escalation.

The Art of Speech

By Aung Khin

Although human beings are supposedly highly intelligent, only few people are eloquent. Speech is an art. Capability to speak precisely and accurately is an art. Good speech is a tool and can lead to prosperity and success for individual's life.

A speech can bring certain people success and affluence, and suffering and misery to others. Saying the truth is another vital aspect.

Greedy people speak superciliously. They speak arrogantly, regardless whether it is 'fair or unfair'. They tell a barefaced lie without feeling guilty.

Irritable persons speak in brusque tone. It is not good to speak curtly with anger. Such behavior could tarnish relations to others. An ignorant person says the same things over and over again. It is tedious and boring to listen to such a person.

Arrogant people act in a snobbish way and often use vulgar words. People loathe such kind of persons.

Nyaung Pinthar U Ponnya (ME. 1190-1261) wrote a sermon that said 'Don't walk over a fragile bridge when there is no light, as well as don't speak too conceitedly; Walking over a fragile bridge when there is no light might lead to collapse, and speaking too conceitedly might result in falling into decline.'

It is true. Some people speak so superciliously that they eventually have to live alone and feel lonely. Dealing with each other harmoniously is the best way. Without greed, hatred and ignorance, speaking precisely and honestly is the best practice. However, such people are extremely rare. Most of the people speak arrogantly out of greed.

Some make one-sided conversation without considering the feelings of others. It is the worst kind of communication. Ridiculous expression with over confidence, regardless of acceptance speech, could tarnish relations. Therefore, there is a need for persuasive conservation. Any kind of speech should be precise in a honest way. Everyone should avoid vulgar speech.

It will lead to personal improvement if someone can apply the art of speech properly.

LatAm countries to jointly fight hunger, poverty

MANAGUA, 8 April—Member countries of the Venezuela-led Bolivarian Alliance for the Americas (ALBA) has taken a joint step to stamp out hunger and poverty, a top Nicaraguan official said Monday.

ALBA and Petrocaribe, a regional mechanism to supply poor Caribbean nations with oil through soft credit and other preferential deals, hammered out at a meeting last week a plan of action to eradicate extreme hunger and poverty, said Deputy Foreign Minister Valdrack Jaentschke.

The forum served to establish the mechanisms needed to improve productivity, promote food self-sufficiency and lift the community out of extreme poverty, Jaentschke said in a broadcast aired by the state-owned Channel 4.

He noted that the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) agreed to back the efforts of ALBA nations to eradicate hunger and poverty with technical support.

The plan could help turn Latin America into an area that would be “free of hunger” over the next decade, said FAO representative to the ALBA-Petrocaribe meeting Raul Benitez.

Petrocaribe, with 17 members plus Venezuela, agreed to fund the plan with more than 60 million US dollars in the next five years. Founded by Venezuela and Cuba in 2004, ALBA has been aimed at promoting social, political and economic integration of the countries of Latin America and the Caribbean. ## Decades after genocide, Congo struggles to dislodge Rwanda rebels

TONGO, 8 April—Twenty years after the genocide in Rwanda, a rebel group founded by ethnic extremists who took part in that slaughter still prowls the lush hills of neighboring eastern Congo, defying a renewed threat by the army and UN peacekeepers to dislodge it.

The Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Rwanda (FDLR) sits at the heart of two decades of war and instability in Democratic Republic of Congo, in which millions of people have died from violence, hunger and disease.

Founded by members of the Interahamwe Hutu militia that organized the slaughter of 800,000 Tutsis and moderate Hutus in Rwanda in 1994, the FDLR's ranks have dwindled over the last decade to less than 2,000 rag-tag fighters.

But its presence in eastern Congo remains an irritant to Rwanda's Tutsi leadership, which has held power since the genocide, and has prompted years of meddling by Kigali in its larger neighbour, fuelling instability and bloodshed. Experts say removing the FDLR is essential for peace in the Great Lakes region.

Now Congo's army, supported by a tough new UN Intervention Brigade and emboldened by its defeat of a rival Tutsi-led rebellion, has pledged to finally eradicate the Hutu group.

Backed by artillery from the UN brigade, the army in February started pounding positions held by the FDLR on the roads climbing into the steep hills of Congo's North Kivu province, driving the militia from roadblocks used to extort money from locals.

When the guns fell silent, it became clear the rebels had not gone far from the main town of Tongo, retreating less than five km (three miles) from army lines. Unconcerned by the army's efforts, FDLR troops in camouflage uniforms lounged near clearings where their wives tended plots of coffee and beans.

“There's nothing to fear here,” said Bosco, commander of the group of fighters, using the Kinyarwanda language of Rwanda. One of his fighters, too young to have held a gun when the 1994 genocide took place, agreed: “Whatever happens, we will stay.”

Inspectors find no contamination in 2nd trip into US nuke dump

HOUSTON, 8 April—Inspectors have found no contamination in their second trip into an underground nuclear waste repository in the US state of New Mexico nearly two months after being shut down due to a radiation leak, local media reported on Monday.

A crew of inspectors made the trip last Friday farther into the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant (WIPP), located near Carlsbad in southeastern New Mexico, and detected no radiation release, local TV KOB quoted officials with the US Department of Energy as saying.

Two days before, two teams of inspectors didn't find any contamination in their first trip to the underground dump.

The WIPP, the country's first deep underground nuclear repository, was shut down on 14 Feb after an air sensor detected unusually high levels of radioactive particles on its underground levels.

Officials said the latest trip allowed crews to establish a base where they can safely remove and store their clothing and equipment if it becomes contaminated. The crews also set up more air monitors and tested communication equipment.

The inspectors will make a third trip into the dump this week to investigate the cause of the leak and decide the extent of the damage, according to officials.—Xinhua

Sea creature fossil found with oldest-known cardiovascular system

WASHINGTON, 8 April — You've heard of having a heart of stone, but this old guy takes it literally.

Scientists said on Monday they have found a fossil of a shrimp-like creature that lived 520 million years ago with an exquisitely preserved heart and blood vessels that represent the oldest-known cardiovascular system.

Named Fuxianhuia protensa, the creature was a primitive arthropod, a group of invertebrates with external skeletons that includes crustaceans like crabs, lobsters and shrimp as well as insects, spiders and millipedes.

The remarkable fossil, unearthed in Yunnan Province in southwestern China, dates from the "Cambrian Explosion," a pivotal juncture in the history of life on Earth when many major animal groups first appeared more than half a billion years ago.

"It is an extremely rare and unusual case that such a delicate organ system can be preserved in one of the oldest fossils and in exquisite detail," said paleontologist Xiaoya Ma of the

Natural History Museum in London, one of the researchers in the study published in the journal Nature Communications.

The soft parts of an animal's body tend to decay after death, meaning that fossils typically preserve only the hard parts like bones, teeth and shells. "However, under very exceptional circumstances, soft tissue and anatomical organ systems can also be preserved in fossils," Ma said. In the case of Fuxianhuia protensa, the fossil showed a tubular heart in the middle of the body with a rich and elaborate system of blood vessels leading to the creature's eyes, antennae, brain and legs.

The cardiovascular system, including the heart and blood vessels, is an important organ system that permits blood to circulate around the body and to deliver oxygen and nutrients. Most animals have such a system, although those without a real body cavity like jellyfish and flatworms do not.

This fossil sheds new light on the evolution of animal body organization and shows that even some of the earliest creatures resembled their relatives alive today, the researchers said.

"It shows that already 520 million years ago, such a system had evolved considerable complexity, particularly with respect to the rich vascularization in the head. This suggests that the brain of this species required a good supply of oxygen for its performance," said University of Arizona neuroscientist Nicholas Strausfeld, another of the researchers.

Fuxianhuia protensa measured up to about 4-1/2 inches long, was covered in an exoskeleton, possessed numerous pairs of legs, had a "head shield" similar to those seen in shrimp. It had pairs of antennae and stalked eyes that could be rotated to enable it to see in different directions, the scientists said.

Flourishing in shallow seas, it probably both swam and walked along seabed, they said. It is not clear whether it was an active predator or a scavenger.

The beautifully preserved internal structures in the creature likely resulted from a calamity that claimed its life.

"These fossils are likely to be a consequence of sudden entombment - a sort of Pompeii event, though not of lava but an underwater mudslide or massive and sudden dust fall-out,"

Strausfeld said.

Fossils of Fuxianhuia protensa have proven to be relatively common in the area where it was found. In fact, another fossilized specimen of this animal that was previously described by scientists showed the oldest-known brain. "Its gut, nervous system and vascular system are indeed unmistakably similar to that of some shrimp-like crustaceans alive today," Strausfeld said.

Many innovations related to animal anatomy occurred during the Cambrian period, although it is unclear when key structures like the heart and brain first appeared.

The researchers said that creatures with cardiovascular systems presumably lived earlier than this creature, but evidence is simply lacking in the fossil record.

This creature's genus name, Fuxianhuia, comes from a lake in the region where it was unearthed. Its species name, protensa, means "elongated," referring to its body's trunk region.

Qualcomm talks up future top-tier smartphone chip

Visitors walk past the Qualcomm stand at the Mobile World Congress in Barcelona, on 24 Feb, 2014.—REUTERS

SAN FRANCISCO, 8 April — Qualcomm gave details on Monday about a future high-end smartphone chip, including faster download speeds as well as 64-bit technology, which is quickly becoming standard.

Due to appear in smartphones in 2015, the Snapdragon 810 is Qualcomm's latest bid to use its edge in wireless technology to maintain its marketshare lead in semiconductors for mobile devices.

The 810 chip includes new, faster WiFi features as well as a 4G modem that Qualcomm says downloads data at twice the speed of chips made with its previous technology.

The chip also allows for video recording and playback at "4K" ultra-high resolution.

Following Apple's launch last year of its first iPhone made with a 64-bit processor, Qualcomm and other chipmakers have been rushing to roll out their own 64-bit technology, which reduces the gap between low-power mobile processors and punchier chips used in laptops, desktop PCs and servers. Qualcomm is announcing its newest chip before the preceding chip in its high-end lineup, the 805, has even begun to appear in smartphones. The 805 is due to appear in smartphones around mid-2014.

Current smartphones, including Apple's, do not have enough memory to give 64-bit processors an advantage over more widely used 32-bit chips, but future phones will be made with enough memory to give the 64-bit processors a performance boost.

Before 64-bit features can be taken advantage of in phones, the software and operating systems they rely on will also have to be overhauled, a major undertaking for the industry.

Qualcomm in December announced its first 64-bit chip, part of its low-end lineup and aimed for use this year in inexpensive smartphones in the fast-growing Chinese market.

"We're basically saying it's difficult to call exactly when 64-bit operating systems and applications will become mainstream, but by integrating them now we're future-proofing all of our platforms going forward for the benefit of our (customers)," Executive Vice President Murthy Renduchintala told Reuters.

Qualcomm dominates the market for advanced 4G wireless technology and its Snapdragon chips are widely used in smartphones made by Samsung Electronics, Motorola, HTC and other manufacturers.

But the San Diego, California chipmaker faces a smartphone market that is beginning to grow less quickly.

Samsung's lower first-quarter estimate highlights smartphone challenges

SEOUL, 8 April — Samsung Electronics Co Ltd on Tuesday said it is on track to post its second straight quarter of profit decline, as slowing smartphone sales growth continued to weigh on earnings.

The South Korean tech giant estimated that its January-March operating profit fell by 4.3 percent to 8.4 trillion won ($7.96 billion), slightly below an average forecast of 8.5 trillion won by 40 analysts polled by Thomson Reuters I/B/E/S.

The world's biggest smartphone maker is counting on the fifth version of its flagship Galaxy S smartphone, which goes on sale globally from Friday, to right the ship and prove the firm's staying power as a mobile innovator.

But the Galaxy S5 has already got off to a weak start at home, with its South Korean debut marred by a temporary ban on mobile carriers selling handsets and criticism that it lacks eye-catching new features.

Underscoring the challenges, Samsung priced the S5 about 10 percent cheaper than the S4 even though main rival Apple Inc is not widely expected to update its line-up until September. It also dialed back on marketing glitz to keep margins stable.—Reuters

Cambodian PM urges for tourism, agriculture cooperation with Maldives

PHNOM PENH, 8 April — Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen said on Tuesday that the country wanted to see cooperation with Maldives in tourism and agriculture for the interests of the two countries and peoples.

The premier made the remarks during a meeting with Maldives ex-President Mohamed Waheed Hassan at the Peace Palace in Phnom Penh, the capital of Cambodia.

He said currently, the relations between the two countries are still relatively small in all fields, so it is essential to seek possibilities for bilateral cooperation, particularly in tourism and agriculture.

He said Cambodian tourism and agriculture are among the four pillars supporting the economy. The country received 4.2 million inbound tourists last year, up 17 percent year-on-year. In agriculture, he said Cambodia has more than 3 million tons of milled rice left over for annual exports.

The premier said he would arrange a proper time to visit Maldives in the future. For his part, Mohamed Waheed Hassan said tourism is the engine of growth for Maldives, so he expressed his confidence that the two countries would have plenty of opportunities for cooperation.

He said it was his first visit to Cambodia and he was pleased to witness the rapid development in Cambodia. Maldives is the smallest Asian country in both population and land area. The country's economy is heavily dependent on tourism, accounting for an estimated 80 percent of its 2.3 billion US dollars GDP last year.

UN rights expert urges debt relief for Philippines

MANILA, 8 April — A United Nations human rights expert on Tuesday urged international creditors to cancel the Philippines' debt and give it unconditional grant aid instead of new loans to fund massive post-typhoon reconstruction.

The Southeast Asian country, hit hard five months ago by Typhoon Haiyan — one of the strongest storms — estimated the total cost of a four-year reconstruction effort could surpass the current estimate of 361 billion pesos (5 billion pounds).

The Philippines' outstanding external debt was $58.5 billion at the end of 2013, according to the central bank.

"I welcome the international support provided to the Philippines in the aftermath of the cyclone, but am concerned that more than $22 million leaves the country everyday, paying off overseas debts," Cephas Lumina said.

Lumina is an independent expert charged by the UN Human Rights Council to monitor the effects of foreign debt on the enjoyment of all human rights, particularly economic, social and cultural rights.

Haiyan, which swept ashore in the central Philippines on 8 November, displaced around 4 million people from their homes, and destroyed 500,000 houses, the United Nations estimates. Damages to infrastructure, hospitals, schools and public services were estimated at $12 billion.

"While around $3 billion has left the country to serve its debt since the typhoon struck, the country has received so far only $417 million for its strategic response plan by international and private donors, about half of the total relief requested," Lumina said in a statement.

The Philippines, excluded as a lower middle-income country from international debt relief initiatives, is expected to pay $8.8 billion to service debt this year alone, the United Nations said.

"By definition, loans for reconstruction cannot generate returns to enable the debt to be paid," Lumina said. "International lenders should rather consider cancelling debt, to ensure that the country can recover."

Heavy turnouts seen in voting in day 1 of India general election

NEW DELHI, 8 April — Heavy turnouts were seen in the voting in the first phase of India's general election on Monday as over 80 percent of the electorate in the small northeast state of Tripura cast their votes for one seat in the Lok Sabha or Lower House of parliament, while 72 percent of voters in the major north-east state of Assam voted for five seats.

The general election is generally seen as a chance for India to start a new beginning in its development after a decade-long rule by the Congress and its allies.

The vote was the first of nine phase Lok Sabha elections which began peacefully Monday from the northeast, a region considered by many as marginalized and neglected.

As the opposition Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) Monday presented its manifesto for the election by focusing on development, inflation and corruption, the incumbent Congress President Sonia Gandhi warned against BJP's "communal agenda" which she said was a "grave threat" to the country's unity and integrity.

"Our opponent's communal agenda is a grave threat to our country's unity and integrity and Congress is the only party that can ensure that the country remains united," said Gandhi at a election meeting.

"What only matters to us is that we are all Indians. The different religions, castes, languages and colors of the skin do not matter," she told a meeting in the southern state of Kerala.

Local observers say there is not much of a difference between the economic agendas of the Congress and the BJP in the fierce electoral battle to form the next central government of India.

Search for MH370 to be most expensive in aviation history

SYDNEY, 8 April — The hunt for missing Malaysian Airlines Flight MH370 is on track to cost hundreds of millions of dollars, becoming the most expensive search in aviation history with 26 countries contributing planes, ships, submarines and satellites to the international effort.

A month into the search for the jet, estimates compiled by Reuters show that at least $44 million has already been spent on the deployment of military ships and aircraft in the Indian Ocean and South China Sea by Australia, China, the United States and Vietnam. The figure is based on defence force statistics on available hourly costs of various assets, estimates by defence analysts and costs reported by the Pentagon.

The figure for the first month of the search is already about equal to the official 32 million euros ($44 million) spent in searches lasting several months spread over a two-year time frame for Air France's Flight AF447, which crashed into the Mid-Atlantic in 2009.

Just as salvage experts said the actual costs for the Air France operation could have been three or four times higher than the official figure, the bill for the current search is expected to run into hundreds of millions of dollars.

Don Draper at odds with changing world of 1968 as ‘Mad Men’ returns

Cast member Jon Hamm poses with co-stars (from L-R) Kiernan Shipka, Jessica Pare, Elisabeth Moss, January Jones and Christina Hendricks at the premiere for the seventh season of the television series "Mad Men" in Los Angeles, California on 2 April, 2014.—REUTERS

LOS ANGELES, 8 April — The dresses are shorter, the women are bolder and the weather is sunnier, but Don Draper has never been more at odds with the changing world around him, as AMC's advertising drama "Mad Men" enters its final season.

In Sunday's seventh season premiere entitled "The Beginning," the show's leading man Don, played by Jon Hamm, finds himself in unfamiliar territory as the vibrant, funky atmosphere and social upheaval of 1968 surrounds him.

At the end of season six, Don's internal struggle with his real identity as the orphaned Dick Whitman — an identity he has kept hidden — starts to rear its head. As his Madison Avenue advertising company SC&P plans to expand to sunny Los Angeles, Don is suspended from work by his partners, and takes his young children to Pennsylvania to see the destitute house he grew up in. Don is "pretty dismal," in Hamm's words. "His marriage is falling apart again, his relationship with his children has really never been worse.

And the one place where he always had safe haven was work, that's been blown up as well, by his own actions. And it's very tricky. It's a very dark place for Don," Hamm said at the show's Los Angeles premiere.

It won't be a quick conclusion to the critical hit from cable channel AMC, which garnered an average of 3.8 million viewers per episode during its sixth season. The finale is split into two, with the final seven episodes to air in spring 2015.

Don enters season seven shaving in the bathroom of an airplane, a seeming metaphor for his life being up in the air as he heads to Los Angeles to see actress wife Megan. Upon his arrival, she shuns his offer to drive her convertible, and he gets into the passenger seat, a change for the man usually in the driver's seat for all aspects of his life.

"The audience has always had this assertion that Don is slowly growing out of touch with the world. It became obvious to me that Don, who is an impulsive person ... that that's what 1968 felt like," "Mad Men" creator Matt Weiner said.

Lufthansa, Austrian halt Libya flights; airport road blocked

TRIPOLI, 8 April — The situation would be reviewed. A Lufthansa spokesman said: “We’ve decided to suspend flights to Tripoli indefinitely due to security and operational reasons.” Libyan carriers are banned from flying to the European Union for security reasons. They have to rent a plane and crew from an airline allowed to fly into the region, so the resumption of regular European flights is of vital economic importance. KUALA LUMPUR, 8 April — Malaysia’s world number one badminton player Lee Chong Wei has ruled out retirement and decided to carry on for two more years until the 2016 Olympic Games in Rio de Janeiro.
The 31-year-old had hinted at retirement earlier this year after winning his 10th Malaysia Open title in Kuala Lumpur, saying it would be his last national championships.
Lee said he arrived at the decision to play on after a chat with the country’s sports minister in the wake of his third Superseries triumph of the year at the Indian Open.
“Our Sports Minister is very supportive of me and has asked me to persevere until the 2016 Olympic Games. I digested what he said and I gave him my word to keep on playing,” Lee was quoted as saying by the Malaysian Star newspaper.
“This year, I will focus on the majors (Thomas Cup, Commonwealth Games, World Championships and Asian Games).
“I will try my best to maintain my form and hang on for another two years.”
Lee won his second Olympic silver medal at the London Games in 2012 after another titanic battle with his nemesis, Lin Dan of China. On Sunday, he beat another Chinese, world number two Chen Long, 21-13, 21-17 in the final at the Indian Open.
“I am taking the whole atmosphere differently now. I am enjoying myself more,” Lee added. “In India, I read Chen Long’s game easily and played quite well to counter his movements. It has given me confidence.”—Reuters

Regulator says safety culture essential for nuclear use in Japan

TOKYO, 8 April — Japan’s Nuclear Regulation Authority Chairman Shunichi Tanaka said on Tuesday that establishing a climate that values safety culture is essential before the nation returns to nuclear power following the 2011 Fukushima Daiichi nuclear complex disaster.
“It is said that there has been a problem in the mindset of people involved in nuclear power. The biggest prerequisite for our country to use nuclear power is to dispel the trend of downplaying safety culture,” Tanaka told an international conference on nuclear safety marking the 50th anniversary of Japan’s entry to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

Noting that safety culture is about “doubting, questioning and learning from lessons,” the chairman called on participants to take note that nuclear safety cannot be ensured unless continuing efforts are made to improve safety culture.
“I hope (this conference will lead) to affirm internationally that satisfying regulations is the minimum condition to ensure safety,” he added.
The remarks were made as the NRA is moving closer to finishing the safety assessment process of a nuclear power plant in Kagoshima Prefecture that will likely become the first to clear the country’s new nuclear regulations introduced in the wake of the Fukushima crisis.
The government has said it will push for the resumption of reactors that have cleared the new requirements, indicating that Japan will sooner or later see an end to the current situation in which all of the country’s 48 commercial reactors are offline.
Luis Echavarri, the director general of the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency who also delivered a speech at the conference, said the organization thinks nuclear energy has played a significant role in the development of Japan in the past and that it will “some-day come back” to provide economical and social support.
But he also acknowledged that “safety comes first before any of that consideration.”
The one-day conference was organized by the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency in cooperation with Japan’s NRA. Officials of nuclear regulatory authorities such as those from the United States, France and South Korea were invited to speak about safety issues.

Manchester United's cause not so hopeless after all

LONDON, 8 April—Bayern Munich's longest winless run for three years and poor recent home record against English opposition have suddenly made Manchester United's task on Wednesday look a lot less daunting than it was when the draw was made. Bayern will also be without three key midfielders, including Bastian Schweinsteiger, for Wednesday's Champions League quarter-final second leg, evenly poised after last week's 1-1 draw.

The Bavarians have lost their air of invincibility since clinching the Bundesliga title against Hertha Berlin on 25 March and have not won since with two draws and a defeat in all competitions in their last three games.

It is the first time since March 2011 that Bayern have endured a three-match winless run and, even though they have already sewn up the Bundesliga, it is a disconcerting statistic for a side which has become used to chalking up wins with monotonous regularity.

Another worry for Bayern is their failure to win any of their last four matches against English opposition at the Allianz Arena.

The run started with the 2012 Champions League final against Chelsea, who won on penalties after a 1-1 draw that was followed by defeats to Arsenal at Manchester and, most recently, a draw against Arsenal in the previous Champions League final last month.

That game showed that Bayern can beitters when under pressure. Arsenal coach Arsene Wenger commented at the time:

"Bayern are a good side, they were more vulnerable this season than last year. After a 3-1 home defeat, they were vulnerable. We thought that I felt there were situations which we could have made more of."

Masters thumbs up for Australian Jason Day after injury layoff

AUGUSTA, 8 April—Jason Day heads into this weeks Masters having not played competitive golf since late February due to a thumb injury but he is relieved to be back to full fitness as he seeks his first major title.

The Australian world number four had been in sparkling form earlier this year before his unexpected time on the sidelines, right after he had clinched his second PGA Tour victory at the WGC-Accenture Match Play Championship.

Though he is still icing his left thumb and keeping it taped up as a precaution, his main concern going into the first of the season's four majors is whether he can regain his precision off the tee after a lengthy layoff.

"I just need to tighten up a few things, get a little sharper with my tee shots," Day told reporters at a wet Augusta National on Monday after only two hours of practice was possible due to the threat of lightning.

"I think I'll be good. I took six, seven weeks off after coming back from Australia last year and my first event of the (PGA Tour) year, which was Torrey, I finished second there.

"To me, personally, I think it's the amount of work that I put into my game before the actual week starts, so the preparation is very huge for me."

Day tied for second in the Farmers Insurance Open at Torrey Pines in late January before winning the biggest title of his career at the Match Play Championship in Arizona a month later.

Two weeks after that, he pulled out of the WGC-Cadillac Championship in Miami on the advice of his doctor and focused on getting his troublesome thumb ready for the Masters.

"It's fine now," said Day, who has triumphed twice on the PGA Tour but has made a habit of playing some of his best golf in the biggest events.

"I've had about six weeks off, I had a cortisone injection into it on Monday of last week.

"Had about a week off after the injection and everything's been progressing nicely.

There's no pain. I'm taping it just as a precaution ... and I've been icing it a lot.
