Thai forces descend on central Bangkok to stifle coup protests

BANGKOK, 1 June — Thailand's military government has readied thousands of troops and police to stop any protests on Sunday against its seizure of power, with shopping malls and some train stations closing in central Bangkok areas where protesters may congregate.

The military took over on 22 May after months of protests that had undermined the government of Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra, forcing ministries to close for weeks on end, hurting business confidence and causing the economy to shrink.

Protests against the coup have taken place in Bangkok most days since then although they have been small and brief.

On Sunday the authorities are anticipating that protesters will gather at several spots in the capital including an area in the center where big malls are located. The military has banned political gatherings of five people or more.

Deputy police chief Somyot Poompanmoung told Reuters that 5,700 police and soldiers were being sent to these areas and rapid deployment units were ready to stop protests that spring up elsewhere.

Some top-end malls around the Ratchaprasong area have chosen to close or have reduced opening hours, and the operator of the Skytrain overhead rail network has shut several stations in the central area.

"It's a business center and we need to protectively avoid any damage if authorities need to break up a gathering," Somyot said, adding mall owners could also find themselves in trouble with the authorities if protests took place on their premises.

On Saturday, as on the two previous days, the authorities effectively closed down the normally busy roads around Victory Monument, which was becoming a focal point for opposition to the coup. The area was flooded with police and troops but no protesters turned up.

"RECONCILIA-TION"

In a televised address late on Friday, army chief and coup leader General Prayuth Chan-ocha said the military would need time to reconcile Thailand's antagonistic political forces and push through reforms. He outlined a process beginning with three months of "reconciliation". A temporary constitution would be drawn up and an interim prime minister and cabinet chosen in a second phase, taking about a year, he said. An election would come at an unspecified time after that.

The United States, European Union countries

and others have called for rapid restoration of democracy.

At a conference in Singapore on Saturday, US Defence Secretary Chuck Hagel urged the Thai armed forces to release detainees, end censorship and "move immediately to restore power to the people of Thailand, through free and fair elections".

Australia scaled back relations with the Thai military on Saturday and banned coup leaders from traveling there.

At the heart of nearly a decade of political turmoil in Southeast Asia's second-biggest economy is conflict between the Bangkok-based royalist establishment dominated by the military, old-money families and the bureaucracy, and supporters of former telecommunications mogul Thaksin Shinawatra, who is adored by the poor in the north and northeast.

Thaksin, who was ousted as premier in a 2006 coup, is the brother of Yingluck and was considered the real power behind her government.

He has chosen to live in exile since fleeing a 2008 conviction for abuse of power.

Chinese military ready to make further contribution to peace, development: army general

SINGAPORE, 1 June — The People's Liberation Army (PLA) of China is ready to work with other militaries to make further contribution to regional and global peace and development, Wang Guanzhong, a senior PLA officer, said on Sunday.

"We will continue to work with regional countries to carry out in-depth bilateral and multilateral security dialogues and exchanges," Wang, deputy chief of the general staff of the PLA, said in a speech at the 13th Shangri-La Dialogue.

Wang said that China will continue to step up dialogue, communication and coordination with countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASE-AN) in the defence and security areas and support the development of the ASEAN Community. Wang said in his speech that China has proposed to work with regional countries to build a Silk Road Economic Belt and a 21st Century Maritime Silk Road. The two major cooperation initiatives offer new opportunities for China and regional countries to achieve common development.

The senior PLA officer said that the building of the two major cooperation initiatives has to be driven by two wheels — the development and the security.

"The PLA is ready to work with regional countries to strengthen practical cooperation in counter-terrorism, disaster relief, protection of sea lines of communication and other fields, thus ensuring common prosperity of countries along the Economic Belt and the new Silk Road," Wang noted. Over the issue of promoting disaster relief cooperation, he said that this plays an important role in jointly tackle challenges in this region.

"The Asia-Pacific is prone to various disasters. The importance of regional disaster relief cooperation is further highlighted by the recent search and rescue operations for the missing Malaysian Airliner MH370," Wang said.

He noted that in order to improve regional capacity building, China this year has arranged five bilateral and multilateral joint disaster relief exercises and drill of all services with regional countries. Moreover, China and Malaysia will co-host the 4th ASEAN Regional Forum Disaster Relief Exercises, Wang added.

According to him, it is the shared responsibility of all to strengthen maritime cooperation and maintain maritime security because the ocean serves the common interests of all Asia-Pacific countries.

Wang also mentioned in his speech that in order to maintain regional security and stability, it is crucial to properly manage differences, ensure timely communication, and dispel misperceptions and miscalculations. "China has established defence telephone links with Russia and the United States and we are exploring the possibility of establishing similar telephone links with ASEAN countries," he added. ## US and China square off at Asia security forum

SINGAPORE, 1 June The United States and China squared off at an Asian security forum on Saturday, with the US defence secretary accusing Beijing of destabilizing the region and a top Chinese general retorting that his comments were "threat and intimidation". Using unusually strong language, US Defence Secretary Chuck Hagel took aim at Beijing's handling of territorial disputes with its Asian neighbours.

"In recent months, China has undertaken destabilizing, unilateral actions asserting its claims in the South China Sea," Hagel said. He warned Beijing that the United States was committed to its geopolitical rebalance to the Asia-Pacific region and "will not look the other way when fundamental principles of the international order are being challenged".

Hagel said the United States took no position on the merits of rival territorial claims in the region, but added: "We firmly oppose any nation's use of intimidation, coercion, or the threat of force to assert these claims."

His speech at Singapore's Shangri-La Dialogue, Asia biggest security forum, provoked an angry reaction from the deputy chief of staff of the Chinese Army, Lieutenant-General Wang Guanzhong.

"I felt that Secretary expressed his surprise at Hagel's speech is full of the US defence secretary's hegemonism, threat and intimidation," he told reporters just after the speech.

Wang said the speech was aimed at causing trouble in the Asia-Pacific.

Hagel's comments followed the keynote address by Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe at the same forum on Friday evening, who pledged "utmost support" to Southeast Asian countries, several of which are locked in maritime disputes with China.

"I felt that they were just trying to echo each other," Wang said. Hagel later held a bilateral meeting with Wang, where the Chinese military leader expressed his surprise at the US defence secretary's speech.

"You were very candid this morning, and to be frank, more than our expectations," he said. "Although I do think those criticisms are groundless, I do appreciate your candor ... likewise we will also share our candor." A senior US defence official said that, despite Wang's opening remarks, the tone of the meeting had been "businesslike and fairly amicable".

While Hagel went over ground he covered in his speech, Wang spent most of the meeting talking about US-China military-to-military contacts, including Chinese participation in forthcoming military exercises, the official said. The US official said Hagel's speech had been well received by other Asian delegations with the exception of China.

In Beijing, President Xi Jinping said China would not initiate aggressive action in the South China Sea but would respond if others did, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

"We will never stir up trouble, but will react in the necessary way to the provocations of countries involved," Xinhua quoted Xi as saying in a meeting on Friday with Prime Minister Najib Razak of Malaysia.

China claims almost the entire oil-and gas-rich South China Seas, and dismisses competing claims from Taiwan, Brunei, Vietnam, the Philippines and Malaysia. Japan also has a territorial row with China over islands in the East China Sea. Tensions have surged in recent weeks after China placed an oil rig in waters claimed by Vietnam, and the Philippines said Beijing could be building an airstrip on a disputed island. Japan's defence ministry said Chinese SU-27 fighters came as close as 50 meters (170 ft) to a Japanese OP-3C surveillance plane near disputed islets last week and within 30 metres of a YS-11EB electronic intelligence aircraft. Japanese Defence Minister Itsunori Onodera said Tokyo perceived an "increasingly severe regional security environment".

"It is unfortunate that there are security concerns in the East and South China Seas," he said. "Japan as well as all concerned parties must uphold the rule of law and never attempt to unilaterally change the status quo by force."

On Friday, Prime Minister Shinzo Abe pitched his plan for Japan to take on a bigger international security role and told the Singapore forum that Tokyo would offer its "utmost support" to Southeast Asian countries in their efforts to protect their seas and airspace.

In a pointed dig at China, he said Japan would provide coastguard patrol boats to the Philippines and

Vietnam.

Wang, China's deputy chief of staff, also snubbed an offer for talks with Japan made by Defence Minister Onodera, the semi-official China News Service said.

'This will hinge on whether the Japanese side is willing to amend the erroneous policy towards China and improve relations between China and Japan," he said. "Japan should correct its mistakes as soon as possible to improve China-Japan ties." The strong comments at the Shangri-La Dialogue come as Abe pursues a controversial push to ease restrictions of the postwar, pacifist constitution that has kept Japan's military from fighting overseas since World War Two.

Despite memories of Japan's harsh wartime occupation of much of Southeast Asia, several countries in the region may view Abe's message favorably because of China's increasing assertiveness.

Hagel repeatedly stressed Obama's commitment to the Asia-Pacific rebalance and said the strong US military presence in the region would endure.

"To ensure that the rebalance is fully implemented, both President Obama and I remain committed to ensuring that any reductions in US defense spending do not come at the expense of America's commitments in the Asia-Pacific," he said.

Six Ukrainian separatists killed around Donetsk airport

DONETSK, 1 June — Ukrainian separatist leader Denis Pushilin said on Saturday six rebels had been killed while trying to collect the bodies of comrades who had died under Ukrainian army fire earlier this week close to Donetsk airport. Ukrainian forces regained control of the airport in the east of the country on Monday, killing at least 50 separatists, after a Sunday presidential election which gave billionaire Petro Poroshenko an overwhelming victory. It was the first time the Ukrainian side had unleashed its full force on the pro-Russian two-month rebellion, caused partly by the ouster of a Moscow-friendly president and the annexation of the Crimean peninsula by Russian troops. "They died trying to take back the Ukrainian airport, and our boys were trying to get their bodies out," Pushilin said over the telephone, without giving further details of the violence. He said the six had died during the day on Friday. Though fighting has died down for now in Donetsk, the stand-off over the city airport remained unresolved on Saturday with amateur video footage showing a cargo plane taking off and releasing decoy flares as it was fired at from the ground. Regional newsagency Interfax cited the prime minister of the self-styled Donetsk People's Republic as saying the separatists will ask the International Red Cross to remove corpses by the aiport. It was unclear how many remained. A spokesman for the Kiev-led "Anti-terrorist operation" or ATO said earlier in the day two new attacks on the airport had been repelled by Ukrainian forces with no injuries to their side, Interfax reported. It was not clear whether the attacks were in fact attempts by separatists to clear bodies.

In Donetsk itself, 2,000 people gathered in the city's central Lenin Square on Saturday, waving Russian flags and chanting "Russia! Russia!" in support of the self-proclaimed republic, which has sought help from Moscow. "I have no other objective but to make Donbass a part of Russia," said Alexander Boroday, the self-styled prime minister of the republic, referring to a wider eastern Ukrainian region containing heavy industry, coalmining and steel works.—Reuters

Japan, Britain agree to step up joint development of defence equipment

SINGAPORE, 1 June — Japan and Britain will accelerate working-level talks on expanding joint development of defence equipment, their defence chiefs agreed on Saturday.

Japanese Defence Minister Itsunori Onodera and British Defence Secretary Philip Hammond reached the agreement during talks on the sidelines of the Asia Security Summit in Singapore.

The two countries have already agreed to jointly develop protective suits against chemicals.

Onodera and Hammond also confirmed that Japan and Britain will work to soon sign an acquisition and cross-servicing agreement, allowing Japan's Self-Defence Forces and the British military to share supplies and transportation services.

Earlier this month, Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and his British counterpart David Cameron agreed in London to boost bilateral security cooperation.

In Singapore, Onodera also held one-on-one meetings with Australian Defence Minister David Johnston, Singaporean Defence Minister Ng Eng Hen and Lord Tuivakano, Tonga's prime minister and defence minister.

In Europe, Obama gets second chance to explain his Russia policy

WASHINGTON, 1 June - President Barack Obama heads to Warsaw, Brussels, Paris and Normandy this week where he is expected to elaborate on the US commitment to counter Russian moves against Ukraine and reassure nervous allies the United States has their backs.

In Poland, Ukraine's western neighbour, Obama meets with Eastern European leaders — including Ukraine's president-elect, Petro Poroshenko, on Wednesday — and is expected to address criticism he has not done enough to push back against Moscow after it annexed Crimea in March. The president's trip follows a speech at the US Military Academy last week in which he argued that American leadership in the world should be exercised mainly by diplomacy, multilateral action and economic pressure, as in Ukraine, rather than through military might.

"Our ability to shape world opinion helped isolate Russia right away. Because of American leadership, the world immediately condemned Russian actions," Obama said.

But when Obama meets in Warsaw with leaders from 10 nations from Central and Eastern Europe, analysts say he will be urged to articulate a clearer plan to help prevent more instability in the region.

"There's a concern that we will disappear, we will fade, when the next crisis hits us," said Heather Conley of the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington.

Obama has long faced calls from Eastern European statesmen to be more forceful, including from Lech Walesa, who led Poland's Solidarity trade union movement that played a critical role in the overthrow of communism in the 1980s

Walesa, a former Polish president, said in an interview on Poland's TVN24 television network last week that he was disappointed in what he considered Obama's insufficiently robust approach to the Ukraine crisis.

"The superpower has not been up to the job, and therefore the world is at a dangerous point and maybe it really is the case that lots of bad things are happening in the world because there is no leadership," Walesa said.

SYMBOLISM

Americans supported pro-democracy activists during martial law that was imposed in Poland in 1981, and backed their struggle for the first free elections 25 years ago, recalled Ryszard Schnepf, who was part of the Solidarity movement. Obama's visit is "kind of a sentimental treat to Poland" on the "Freedom Day" anniversary of those elections, Schnepf, now Poland's ambassador to the United States, said in an interview.

Poland is grateful for US support in the current crisis, but leaders want more, he said. "We are supporting the idea of more engagement of the United States in the region," he said. Obama is slated to give an address on US-European relations on Wednesday at the "Freedom Day" celebration.

The White House is considering ideas for more military "rotational deployments" or additional personnel in the region, Ben Rhodes, Obama's deputy national security adviser, told reporters.

But Obama is not expected to make major announcements on the trip. Rather, his mission is one of reassurance.

"What you've got with each stop is a lot of symbolism," said James Goldgeier of American University's School of International Service.

Russia has since taken steps to pull back troops it deployed at the border earlier this year and Ukraine's presidential election went ahead without major problems, so it appeared unlikely the G7 would push for further economic sanctions against Moscow.

"At present, all partners are agreed that the goal is to move toward a de-escalation and no new sanctions are envisaged at this time," an official in French President Francois Hollande's office told Reuters."The idea is more to do all that we can to restore dialogue," the official said.

Obama then heads to France on Friday to mark the 70th anniversary of D-Day, when Allied troops stormed the Normandy beaches in the invasion that led to the defeat of Nazi Germany in World War Two.

President Russian Vladimir Putin, who will attend the ceremonies, is due to meet with Hollande in Paris on Thursday. Obama is also slated to dine with Hollande that evening, but the White House said Obama and Putin had no formal meetings scheduled. Reuters

China raps Japan, US for jointly staging "provocative actions"

SINGAPORE, 1 June -China accused Japan and the United States on Sunday of jointly engaging in "provocative actions" against it at a regional security summit after Tokyo and Beijing earlier traded barbs.

Lt Gen Wang Guanzhong, deputy chief of staff of China's People's Liberation Army, said that earlier speeches by Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and US Defence Secretary Chuck Hagel were not "constructive" but instead "assertive."

"They coordinated with each other. They supported each other.

They encouraged each other," Wang told a plenary session of the three-day Shangri-La Dialogue ending the same day in Singapore.

"They took the advantage of speaking first at the Shangri-La Dialogue and staged provocative actions and challenges against China," Wang said.

He also took issue with Abe for what was perceived as thinly veiled criticism of China, saying, "It is better to be more direct."

Turkish police fire teargas at protesters on anniversary of unrest

ISTANBUL, 1 June— Turkish police fired teargas and water cannon on Saturday to disperse protesters in central Istanbul who sought to mark the one-year anniversary of the country's anti-government biggest demonstrations in decades. Authorities closed roads and stopped public transport to denv access to Taksim Square and the adjoining Gezi Park where government plans to raze the green space and build a shopping mall sparked last year's unrest.

Police lines kept back activists who had hoped to read a statement at Taksim Square and lay flowers at the park to commemorate the deaths of at least six people in the protests against Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan's rule.

Another half-dozen people died in sporadic unrest in the ensuing months as anger at Erdogan and his AK Party simmered.

Street protests could be a recurring feature in the run-up to an August presidential election in which Erdogan is expected to stand, but few expect this to cause the three-time premier serious political damage.

A senior AK Party official said on Saturday that Erdogan would run for the presidency and rule Turkey until 2023.

Near Taksim, hundreds of people chanted "Resign, murderer AKP" and "Everywhere is Taksim, everywhere is resistance" before police fired tained and 13 were injured in clashes with police, Turkey's Human Rights Association said, but no official figures were immediately available. Police helicopters circled overhead.

Tourists lugging suitcases were forced to turn back to escape the stinging gas. A few hundred protesters carrying political banners ran away from police down a hill towards the Bosphorus Strait, the waterway bisecting Istanbul, Europe's biggest city with about 14 million residents.

Police also broke up protests in the capital Ankara and the southern city of Adana, CNN Turk reported. In neighbourhoods across Istanbul, residents opened their windows and banged pots and pans, a traditional form of dissent that was employed throughout the Gezi protest. - Reuters

Dengue fever is too often a fatal disease in Myanmar

By Aung Khin engue fever is endemic in many tropical and subtropical areas of Africa, Central and South America, the Caribbean, the Eastern Mediterranean, South and Southeast Asia, and Oceania.

The mosquito-borne viral infection is a life-threatening disease for children from rural, urban and suburban areas of Myanmar where the hospitals lack medical equipment and experienced staff to respond effectively to this disease.

Severe dengue, known as Dengue Haemorrhagic Fever, was first recognized in the 1950s during dengue epidemics in the Philippines and Thailand.

Severe dengue epidemics reportedly occurred in only nine countries across the world before 1970. The disease has now spread to more than 100 countries affected by rainy seasons. Among them, the American, Southeast Asia and the Western Pacific regions have the most serious impacts, and dengue has become a leading cause of hospitalization and death among children.

Malaysia and Singapore have already reported more dengue fever cases in 2014 than last year. The incidence has grown dramatically around the world in recent decades.

The UN World Health Organization (WHO) has estimated there may be 50 to100 million dengue infections worldwide every year, and more than 2.5 billion people, over 40 per cent of the world's population, are now at risk from dengue.

As rainy season has started in Myanmar, the cases of dengue fever are now happening in the country.

While some state-owned hospitals in suburban areas cannot fully take action against this too-often fatal disease, local and international NGOs are responsible for carrying out preventive measures for this seasonal infection to save the lives of children.

Language, Literature, development of reading habit among youths and Appreciation of Literary Works

Kin Mg Oo

ulture, customs and traditions, art, music, language and literature are a country's own characteristics. These can be categorized into one group collectively under the name, "Culture". Some were our own creations and some were adopted or adapted from alien ones. Socially unacceptable ideas used to and disappear from our memories and enduring cultures became deep-rooted in us, and these distinguish one nation from another. These cultures give us a variety of pleasures and enjoyments. Like and appreciate differ. I like some music but I cannot appreciate it. Some 10 years ago, I visited my native town, TadaU. There one day, accompanied by my friend, I visited my brother-in-law living at Inwa. They both are teachers and they love music. While talking of one thing and another, they happened to sing, playing the mandolin. Much as I like music, musical instruments had never been touched with my fingers throughout my life. So I had no alternative but to listen to their singing. After enjoying ourselves at the music for a few hours, I had a chance to ask about classical old songs. During our conversation, I came to know the full meanings of some yester-songs I like best, whereupon I felt that the classical music became more familiar with and attracted to me. There was one thing I became aware of, on their faces. As small town-dwellers, most of them lead their peaceful lives. What is more, music seemed to have soothed the two. Their manners and speech were calm, relaxed and cheerful.

Here we need to know a slight difference between the two words-love and appreciation. In dictionaries, love is defined as the strong feelings of enjoyment that something gives you, and appreciation as pleasure that you have when you recognize and enjoy the good qualities of someone or something. Since my childhood days, habits of reading books and listening to songs conceived in me. To put it simply, my father did not encourage us to listen to songs. Instead, he always let our reading habits grow bigger. From then on, I loved reading novels and poems. But my dad never allowed us to read novels. He seldom failed to put various kinds of cartons and newspapers on the book-shelf. The then newspapers included stories written by the famous writers such as Duwon and U Yan Aung, etc. Thus, these stories planted the seeds of reading habits in us, before we recognized it. Being unable to be satisfied with perusing them only, we managed to buy novels with our own pocket money from our piggy banks, without the knowledge of our father. And I became very fond of committing poems to memory. Simultaneously, an aspiration to know English occurred to me as I wished to be able to read books written in English. Ridiculously enough, sometimes I recall my younger days when the books I borrowed from the school library returned to their original shelves, with pages unturned. Whatever it is, I was well convinced that reading could give us much pleasure and knowledge we need. There seems to be an element of hyperbole in such a claim that nothing I have ever done has given me half the pleasure I have found from reading books I wanted to read. In fact, the message I want to convey to our readers is that we need to make our younger minds develop reading habits in them. I want them to get pleasure from reading.

Perhaps someone will find it difficult to decide to make reading habits at first. The most important thing is to create a daily private hour for reading, and then to accomplish your plan through sheer determination. Once a habit develops in us for a month or so, I think we cannot get around the way we do now. Today's youths are blessed to have an access to the knowledge bank and literary treasures into which we want to delve by using the Net. Much information is available in a few minutes, and we can search for reading materials from the digital library. One may ask which kinds of books we should choose. My stock reply will be like this, "All kinds are OK". All these literary writings are literature. In dictionaries, pieces of writing that are valued as works of art, especially novels, plays, and poems are defined as literature. And, it is also defined that pieces of writing and printed information on a particular subject is literature. The former gives us pleasure and enjoyment while the latter gives knowledge to the reader. Literature is, in reality, born out of a language. A language is the system of communication in speech or writing that is used by people of a particular country or area. At the advent of the emergence of a writing system, men might record only their findings and experiences in writing. With developing civilizations, they might try to create literature to express and share their feelings and desires. All these literary works are powerful weapons, which not only can give us moral lessons, strength, sense of humor, righteous ethics and many others, but also can bring us to a ruined state, simultaneously. That is to say, poisonous literary works are surrounding us, either. But we only need to guide them not to choose these indecent writings. Some people say that anyone, as a beginner, can read anything available nearby, and later they will be able to know which one is suitable or not, by themselves. It is heartening for us to see frequent literary talks with the literati in the readers' channel of the MRTV-4 Channel 7. They all urge youths to cultivate reading habits, to read all kinds of books and especially not to neglect Myanmar literature. Because in these days when most are eager to learn

English and other languages like Chinese, Japanese and Korean languages as top priorities, our mother tongue is desperately being set aside.

The other week, a girl student came to ask me a few questions. They are as follows:

1/ Is it appropriate to put excessive use of euphemistic language and idiomatic styles in writing?

2/ Can a language change into a new form? And, if so, will its literature in use today disappear and become an abstruse one?

First of all, I explained to her about histories of languages—English and our mother tongue, Myanmar, as far as I know from a layman's perspective, admitting that I had a scanty knowledge about them. As known by all, English is said to have originated from Proto-Indo-European. According to the researches made by many linguists, it took ages to reach the modern English, the present day's English we are using. To put it simply, I had never studied the English literature under the excellent guidance of learned teachers at the university. I had to give much time to study the story of English language as an extramural learning to satisfy my burning desire. I ever heard that even our savants sometimes found it difficult to render into our own language. Undeniably, all living languages will be changing with passing time. Due to increased literacy, travel and communication among nations, people will adopt foreign words and invent new words, hence the developing language and the increasing vocabularies in their language evolutionarily. We cannot stop this process. Unless we corrupt a language deliberately or otherwise, its longevity will last for ages, and then its literature will remain in the culturally dignified status. We are responsible to take necessary arrangements for our Myanmar language so as not to deteriorate. We acknowledge that there are well-read youths around us. At the same time, we see many facebook users writing our Myanmarsar by using newly invented nonsensical words. The avantgarde is acceptable, but we should not misuse a poetic license. In other words, we should not besmirch the reputation of our national heritage. Our language's writing system itself is said to have originated from Brahmi, which flourished in India from about 500 B. C. to over 300 A.D. It is said that the earliest Myanmar writing is from the Bagan period of the 11th and 12th centuries. As for the younger generation with great potential, they should make our well-developed language and literature our forefathers cared for ages, develop more and more. Now is the time for us to launch a campaign to promote our language, literature and reading habits. Sometimes we have ironies. At the time when nationwide literary talks are being held and many talk shows are being broadcasted over televisions, regretfully, we found

It will take me a few lines to answer another question asked by my student. Once, during my student life, there was an English language teacher I admired and emulated. The whole town acknowledged him to be well-versed in the language. He devoted his life to teaching English and reading books, helping us to improve our language skills. Knowingly that it was impossible for me to know English and to appreciate English literature like my beloved teacher, I had ever attempted to do so. However my attempt, such as it was, was nothing compared to my teacher's. Whatever it was, I only had a smattering of English and the literature. There were, at our childhood Alma Mater, sporadically issued school wall-chart bulletins, of which large portions were occupied by my ide-al's bilingual writings. These still impressed themselves on my poor memory. Would that the teacher lived to educate and share his lingual knowledge with me. Let me introduce you to several lines of my teacher's writings, which were exemplary sentences for a middle school student.

1/ His name had been written in white ink in the exam result.

2/ I felt as if all the eyes in the world were watching me.

3/ Teacher has been looking at us over his glasses, like throwing the fishing net over a school of fish.

There can be simple and correct sentences like these found in his essays. At my request, the teacher explained the sentences' meanings to me at length. When I started reading novels, I learnt to notice and love sentences written by using literary techniques/devices. As to journalism, it is said that the most important thing a reporter needs to know about euphemisms is that they don't belong in news stories. As for me, a dilettante of the language and literature, I am fond of all kinds of writing styles. In our Myanmar literature as well, all these kinds of literary devices have been being used, as in English literature. Just the thought of the fact reminds me of our greatest poets, U Ponnya, Ah Chote Tan Sayar Pe, Ledi Sayadaw, Sayargyi Thakin Kodaw Hmine and many others. Our country abounds with able English-educated scholars who are capable of rendering invaluable works. the When I was a boy, a foolish wish occurred to me, to translate the great poem, "An appealing letter for sympathy from bovine to carnivorous beings" by Ledi Sayadaw. It would be like an idiot trying to swim across the sea. More and more bi-lingual literati such as Sayargyi U Mya Zin, Sayar U Tha Noe, Saya Moe Hein (Thar Journal Kyaw) and Sayarmagyi Daw Khin Myo Chit are still coming into this field. With their help and other scholars' effort, we will be able to have our good works put on the international literary stage.

May our language and literature develop and live long forever!

UAE to continue aid to Egypt, sees more stability after Sisi win

ABUDHABI, 1 June — The United Arab Emirates foresees greater stability in Egypt after former army chief Abdel Fattah al-Sisi won a presidential election last week and will continue to back it financially, the UAE foreign minister said on Saturday.

Since the army ousted Egypt's first freely elected president, the Islamist Mohamed Mursi amid mass protests against his rule last July, the UAE has become a major donor for Egypt, taking a hands-on approach in its support for Cairo. The Gulf Arab countries were opposed to Mursi and his Muslim Brotherhood, which they regard as a security threat. In total Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and the UAE have pledged over $12 billion in loans and donations since July.

Sheikh Abdullah bin Zayed also told reporters the UAE wanted international partner to join in their efforts to repair Egypt's shattered economy.

"We want to have partners from around the world involved, whether it be partners like Germany ... or institutions like the World Bank and the IMF," Sheikh Abdullah said at a news conference in Abu Dhabi on the occasion of a visit by his German counterpart.

The minister said the UAE had a plan to revive Egypt's economy and put it back on track.

"The next period will be different.

The previous one was a transitional period and now there will be more stability," he said.

The International Monetary Fund and Egypt have discussed a possible loan worth up to $4.8 billion to help the economy, embattled since a 2011 uprising that toppled president Hosni Mubarak and drove away tourists and foreign investors, two main sources of foreign currency.

These talks took a backseat when financial aid began flowing from Gulf Arab states following Mursi's ouster last year.

Syria bomber was Florida-born, raised in middle-class family

SEBASTIAN, (FLA), 1 June — The man believed to be the first American suicide bomber in Syria was born in Florida and loved to play basketball. He was an average student who grew up in a well-kept middle-class neighbourhood about 90 minutes south of Orlando.

The family of Moner Mohammad Abu-Salha, 22, on Saturday declined to comment or to open their door as a small group of reporters gathered outside their home in a gated community in Sebastian, on Florida's east coast.

Neighbour Mark Hill, 46, said he knew little about the family across the street, who moved in around 2006 at the same time he did, but they seemed to be "very nice people, always pleasant."

Hill described

Abu-Salha as a "normal boy" who wore T-shirts and walked around the neighbourhood with a basketball looking for someone to join him in a game.

He said the father wore a long white tunic, but no beard, and the mother wore a headscarf, showing only her face.

The family, who have owned a string of local Middle Eastern grocery stores, were a visible presence in the community and often left the garage doors open, Hill added.

The family are of Jordanian-Palestinian origin, according to people familiar with their grocery business.

A nice, bright smile: Scientists use lasers to regrow teeth

WASHINGTON, 1 June— Scientists have come up with a bright idea - literally — to repair teeth.

And they say their concept — using laser light to entice the body's own stem cells into actionmay offer enormous promise beyond just dentistry in the field of regenerative medicine.

The researchers used a low-power laser to coax dental stem cells to form dentin, the hard tissue similar to bone that makes up most of a tooth, demonstrating the process in studies involving rats and mice and using human cells in a laboratory.

They did not regenerate an entire tooth in part because the enamel part was too tricky. But merely getting dentin to grow could help alleviate the need for root canal treatment, the painful procedure to remove dead or dying nerve tissue and bacteria from inside a tooth, they said. "I'm a dentist by training. So I think it has potential for great impact thing new to the body, and from the body, manipulasers are routinely used in medicine and dentistry, so the barriers to clinical translation are low," added Harvard University bioengineering professor David Mooney. "It would be a substantial advance in the field if we can regenerate teeth rather than replace them." Using existing regeneration methods, scientists must take stem cells late them in a lab and put them back into the body. This new technique more simply stimulates action in stem cells that are already in place.

Scientists had long noticed that low-level laser therapy can stimulate biological processes like rejuvenating skin and stimulating hair growth but were not sure of the mechanisms. Arany noted the importance of finding the right laser dose, saying: "Too low doesn't work and too high causes damage." High-powered lasers are used for cutting and cauterizing.—Reuters

BBM 2.2 for Android and iOS brings easier sign-up, friending, and more

NEW DELHI, 1 June It was late last year that Canadian smartphone manufacturer BlackBerry released its BlackBerry Messenger (BBM) on Android and iOS platforms for free. Now the latest version of BBM (version 2.2) is available for download on Google Play, with the iOS version all set to hit the App Store in the coming days

On the official Black-Berry blog, Inside Black-Berry, Jeff Gadway, head of product and brand marketing writes about the new version which has hit the Google Play store on Wednesday, "This next release (v.2.2) is focused on streamlining key aspects of the BBM experience. Our goal was to make it simpler for new users to join the BBM community and to make it faster and easier to add new BBM contacts."

The new features on BBM v2.2 for Android include an easier way to add contacts via email, wherein a user who receives a BBM invite by email can just become a contact by clicking on the link provided, rather than sending a PIN invite back, as is the current method. Even signing up for BBM is easier. All that new users require are an email ID, name and password, and they can start using it.

On the cosmetic side there are 16 new emoticons that will be added to the new version. These include a hotdog, hacker, a pair of hot lips amongst others. The 'Updates' tab has been renamed to 'Feeds', to represent a user better. It will include latest statuses and profile photos from BBM contacts and newer posts from the BBM channels that users follow. The latest version also brings a range of bug fixes and performance improvements.

US soldier freed in Afghanistan, five Taleban prisoners leave Guantanamo

WASHINGTON, 1 June - The last US prisoner of war held in Afghanistan was handed over to US Special Operations forces on Saturday, in a dramatic swap for five Taleban detainees who were released from Guantanamo Bay prison and flown to Qatar.

Army Sergeant Bowe Bergdahl had been held for nearly five years by Afghan militants and his release, following years of on-and-off negotiations, suddenly became possible after harder-line factions of the Afghan Taleban apparently shifted course and agreed to back it, according to USofficials.

Bergdahl, 28, was handed over about 6 pm local time on Saturday, a senior official said. The US forces, who had flown in by helicopter, were on the ground very briefly, said the officials, who would not specify the precise location of the handover.

A US defence official said Bergdahl was able to walk and became emotional on his way to freedom. "Once he was on the helicopter, he wrote on a paper plate, 'SF?'" the official

And at this point, San Antonio, Texas. Sergeant Bergdahl broke down." President Barack Obama hailed the release in a brief appearance with Bergdahl's parents, Bob and Jani, in the White House Rose Garden, saying that "while Bowe was gone, he was never forgotten". #### China detains ex-key aide to former leader Zhao

HONG KONG, 1 June — Chinese authorities have detained a former key aide to the late Chinese leader Zhao Ziyang who was ousted from power over the handling of pro-democracy protests that led to the bloody crackdown on activists at Beijing's Tiananmen Square in June 1989, Hong Kong media reported on Sunday.

Bao Tong, 81, who lives in Beijing, was picked up by public security personnel on Friday, five days before the 25th anniversary of the military crackdown at Tiananmen.

Bao's family said authorities have not told them where Bao has been detained.

Bao's associates said they believe Bao was taken from his home so that the foreign media would not be able to speak to him prior to the Tiananmen anniversary. Zhao, who died in 2005, was ousted from his post as general secretary of the Chinese Communist Party following a power struggle with party hard-liners over the protests at Tiananmen. Kyodo News

S Korea urges release of its missionary sentenced to life in N Korea

SEOUL, 1 June- The South Korean government urged North Korea on Sunday to release a South Korean missionary, Kim Jong Uk, who was sentenced to life with hard labour by a North Korean court on Friday.

"It is regrettable that North Korea went ahead with perfunctory trial procedures in a unilateral manner and gave our citizen severe punishment. We strongly urge North Korea to release and repatriate our citizen to South Korea as soon as possible," South Korea's Unification Ministry said in a statement.

North Korea sentenced Kim to life with hard labour on Friday after convicting him of espionage and setting up an underground church. North Korea's official KCNA news agency reported that the missionary had admitted his guilt at the court.

Eyeing Pakistan and China, Modi bolsters security team

Prime Minister Narendra Modi

New DELHI, 1 June, — Prime Minister Narendra Modi has chosen a daring former spy with years of experience in dealing with Pakistan as his national security adviser, a move officials say signals a more muscular approach to New Delhi's traditional enemy.

The choice of Ajit Doval, alongside former army chief General VK Singh as a federal minister for the northeast region, underscores plans to revamp national security that Modi says became weak under the outgoing government.

The two top-level appointments, reporting directly to Modi, point to a desire to address what are arguably India's two most pressing external security concerns — Pakistan and China, both of which, like India, have nuclear arms.

Doval, a highly decorated officer renowned for his role in dangerous counter-insurgency missions, has long advocated tough action against militant groups, although operations he has been involved in suggest a level of pragmatism.

In the 1980s, he smuggled himself into the Golden Temple in the city of Amritsar from where Sikh militants were later flushed out, and he infiltrated a powerful guerrilla group fighting for independence from India in the northeastern state of Mizoram. The group ultimately signed a peace accord. Doval was also on the ground in Kandahar, Afghanistan, when an Indian Airlines plane from Kathmandu was hijacked by Pakistan-based militants on Christmas Eve, 1999. The crisis was resolved when top militants were freed in exchange for hostages. "Doval is an outof-the-box thinker," said an Intelligence Bureau officer with long years of service in Kashmir and other Indian hotspots. "Expect him to shake things up."

The official, who did not want to be named, said he expected the new security team to push for a rapid expansion of border infrastructure and a streamlining of intelligence services, which still function in isolation and often impede one other.

Singh has declared his priority is to develop the northeast in order to narrow the gap with Chinese investment in roads and railways on its side of the frontier.

India is also creating a new mountain corps and beefing up border defences, although that initiative has stalled.

A secure India is a long-standing goal of Modi's Hindu nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), and the new prime minister himself wants strong borders so the country can focus fully on giving economic growth a much-needed boost.

He won the election in May in a landslide victory largely on economic pledges that India's 1.2 billion people hope will secure jobs and raise living standards.

But with most foreign troops withdrawing from Afghanistan by the end of this year, India is concerned that Islamist militants fighting there will turn their sights towards the disputed region of Kashmir, which is also claimed by Pakistan. India and Pakistan have fought two of three wars since independence over the Himalayan territory, and their armed forces are separated there by a rugged, mountainous Line of Control which militants have the capability to cross.

Doval, 69, formerly head of the Intelligence Bureau domestic spy agency, will be National Security Adviser, only the second officer from the intelligence community to hold the post.

By contrast, predecessor Shiv Shankar Menon is a member of the elite Indian Foreign Service — an expert on China and nuclear security known for his formidable intellect.

Vienna rides Conchita wave with AIDS charity ball

VIENNA, 1 June — Eurovision winner Conchita Wurst topped the bill at Vienna's Life Ball on Saturday night, outshining guests such as former US President Bill Clinton, actress Lindsay Lohan and designer Vivienne Westwood at Europe's biggest AIDS charity event.

This year's Life Ball took place as the Austrian capital basked in the victory of the bearded drag queen Wurst earlier this month, which has at least temporarily given it a self-image as a hotbed of tolerance. A partygoer who identified himself as Aaron, covered in glitter and topless but for a pair of nipple pasties, due to perform her winning power ballad "Rise Like A Phoenix" later in the night - had changed the atmosphere. "I've been here four times before, but this one is by far the best. Usually we hide ourselves before coming to the ball, but this year we can walk openly," he said. Skimpy costumes were de rigeur, and guests wearing outfits the organizers' "style police" judged to be exceptional could win halfprice admission to the Vienna ball. Tickets are normally distributed by a lottery and cost 160 euros ($220). "I feel so poorly dressed," joked Clinton, sporting conventional evening wear, in opening remarks.

The Life Ball raised

about 2.4 million euros ($3.3 million) last year, much of it donated to the Clinton Health Access Initiative to treat and reduce HIV infections in children. The event this year is inspired by the 15th-century Hieronymus Bosch triptych "The Garden of Earthly Delights", which depicts hedonistic revellers in its centre panel and the Garden of Eden and hell on either side.

The ball has drawn criticism for using Boschlike posters featuring a nude transgender model, Carmen Carrera. Photographer David LaChapelle designed two versions, showing Carrera with either male or female genitalia, along with the slogan: "I am Adam — I am Eve - I am me." In response, a vigilante granny has attracted media attention by going around defacing the exposed parts.

Sonakshi Sinha gears up for womenoriented film

MUMBAI, 1 June — Actress Sonakshi Sinha who garnered positive reviews for her performance in Lootera and is now gearing up for the release of Holiday: A Soldier Is Never Off Duty, says she has recently signed a new project, which is women-oriented.

"I have now signed a new film which has a women-oriented subject. I am quite excited about that project, but I'm not allowed to talk about it till the producers make an official announcement," Sonakshi told IANS.

Actress Sonakshi Sinha

Asked if the movie is a remake of a southern film, she said, "Wait till the announcement." The actress says she received varied offers after her strong performance in Lootera. "I was approached for many films post Lootera, but I didn't feel strongly about them. Lootera was written for me, but the other offers that I got post Lootera were not convincing," she said.

Her new movie Holiday, directed by A R Murugadoss, features Akshay Kumar as the male lead. PTI

Indonesia's volcano may impair flight

JAKARTA, 1 June Rumbling Sangean volcano in central Indonesia has kept rising its seismic activity since Friday's eruption with volcanic ash spread toward east, drawing concern it may halt flights in the areas.

Powerful burst of hot ashes erupted by up to 3.000 meters high from the volcano located in a small island of West Nusatenggara Province on Friday, according to Head of National Volcanology Agency Muhammad Hendrasto.

"By up to 10.42 am local time, the seismic activity has kept rising. The ashes also spread toward Sumba Timur of East Nusa Tenggara Province (east of the volcano)," Sutopo Purwo Nugroho, spokesman of national disaster agency told Xinhua via phone on Sunday.

Sutopo said the eruption forced more than 7,000 people to flee home and incurred the closure of two local airports. of number "The

Australian airlines resume flights as ash cloud dissipates (3.1 miles) above sea level,

PERTH, 1 June Australian airlines forced to cancel flights due to a volcanic ash cloud from Indonesia's Sangeang Api volcano resumed flying on Sunday as the plume cleared.

With the threat to Australian airspace now abating, the continuing low-level eruption of the volcano in the Sunda Islands in southern Indonesia may pose a threat to the airspace around Bali in the coming days, the agency tasked with monitoring ash in that airspace told Reuters.

"With the volcano continuing to erupt, we can still see a significant amount of ash around the volcano at the moment," Emile Jansons, manager of the Darwin Volcanic Ash Advisory Centre told Reuters.

"Our biggest concern at the moment is that the boundary of the ash cloud is not very far away from Bali and if there is another larger eruption then the ash could move and affect that airspace."

A large eruption of Sangeang Api on Friday sent an ash cloud high into the atmosphere that moved across northern Australia, causing the cancellation of some flights between Australia and southeast Asia and all domestic flights operating out of Darwin airport on Saturday.

Murray and Kohlschreiber battle suspended due to bad light

PARIS, 1 June — Wimbledon champion Andy Murray was locked in a fifth-set fight to the finish against Philipp Kohlschreiber of Germany in the third round of the French Open of France, the 12th seed, or 24th seed Fernando Verdasco of Spain. Their match was also suspended late on Saturday with Verdasco having won the first two sets.

The match will be finished on Sunday on the same Suzanne Lenglen court. After losing the first set, the British seventh seed appeared to be cruising to victory in the fourth when he led 4-2. But suddenly Murray's touch deserted him and the German took full advantage to force the match into a pulsating fifth set. The winner will play either Richard Gasquet

Bubba Watson powers to third-round Memorial lead

DUBLIN, (Ohio), 1 June — American the final hole. Bubba Watson surged to the lead as Englishman Paul Casey plunged four strokes behind after the third round of the Memorial tournament in Dublin, Ohio on Saturday. Masters champion Watson used his astonishing power to compile five early birdies on his way to a three-under-par 69 in ideal conditions at Muirfield Village.

He posted a 12-under 204 total, one stroke ahead of compatriot Scott Langley (67) with one round left.

Young Japanese player Hideki Matsuyama (69) was two strokes behind, while world number one Adam Scott of Australia (68) trailed by three despite a bogey at away," he told CBS television.

Casey, who started the day with a three-shot lead, had a nightmare round, struggling with almost every facet of his game in a 76.

The former world number three has recently shown glimpses of his old brilliance as he seeks to regain his full playing status on the PGA Tour, but has been unable to string together four good rounds.

Watson, aiming to become the first left-hander to win this prestigious Jack Nicklaus-hosted event, played far more adventurously than his words suggested. "I just kept my head down, grinding the cranium, it would be all over and it was.

"It must be the best punch I have ever thrown and landed in my life. It is not going to get any better than this."

Froch's 24th knockout victory came out of the blue after an often cagey fight that occasionally burst into life before a British record crowd for a boxing match accoding to local media. "I think I was ahead on the scorecards until that," said Groves, who was controversially stopped in the ninth round when he met Froch for the first time in November.

"I'll be pushing hard to get my world title shot and maybe, if he's still boxing, that might be against Carl again. Back to the drawing board."

Unstoppable Nadal marches on in Paris

PARIS, 1 June — Rafa Nadal once again showed he is the man to beat at the French Open after putting down a brief rebellion from Argentine Leonardo Mayer to win 6-2, 7-5, 6-2 and reach the fourth round despite a sore back on Saturday.

Mayer went for his shots in a tense second set and broke the world No1 back for 4-4, only for the Spaniard to regain control in commanding fashion.

"It is for me very emotional thing when I am on (court Philippe) Chatrier, a lot of memories come to my mind," said Nadal, who made only 10 unforced errors with just two coming in a masterful opening set.

One moment that may live long in the memory occurred in the second set when the defending champion recovered after being wrongfooted by Mayer to pull off a perfect backhand lob to break decisively for a 6-5 lead. He followed up with a game to love, sealing the set with a jaw-dropping forehand passing shot before steaming through the third and ending the contest with a service winner.

In the aftermath, Nadal revealed he was suffering with back pains, but would not be drawn on the details.

"Well. I'd rather not talk about my back. I'll play as best as I can. I'll put up a good fight to try and win," he said.
