US transfers Marine murder suspect to Philippine base

MANILA, 22 Oct — The United States has transferred a Marine suspected of the murder of a transgender Filipino to a Philippine military base under US guard, the head of the Philippine armed forces said, in line with a legal agreement between the two countries.

US Private First Class Joseph Scott Pemberton is accused of murdering Jeffrey Laude, who also goes by the name Jennifer, in Olongapo City, about 50 km north of Manila.

General Gregorio Catapang told reporters Pemberton was flown to Camp Aguinaldo, the main military base in Manila.

"He was confined in a 20-foot air-conditioned van inside an US military facility on our own base on Philippine soil," Catapang said. "He will be under 24hour guard by an American soldier but we also have two Filipino soldiers in the facility."

Colonel Brad Bartelt, spokesman for the US Marine Corps Forces, Pacific, said Pemberton would remain in US custody in line with the Visiting Forces Agreement (VFA) with the United States.

"The suspect will remain in the Philippines during the investigation and any potential judicial proceedings in accordance with the VFA," he said in a statement.

The Philippines has said it expects to get custody of Pemberton once he is formally charged in court and any trial begins.

President Benigno Aquino described the transfer as a "healthy development".

"He is not being treated with kid gloves," Aquino told reporters, adding that the government was complying with the VFA.

Pemberton was transferred to Aguinaldo from USS Peleliu, an amphibious assault vessel, which has since been given permission to leave the Philippines.-Reuters

APEC finance ministers discuss global economy

Beijing, 22 Oct — Asia-Pacific finance ministers on Wednesday discussed the status of the global economy and ways to secure sustainable growth in the region.

The ministerial meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum comes as signs of softening demand, with China, this year's host of the 21-member grouping, reporting a day ago that its growth waned to a fiveyear low 7.3 percent in the third quarter.

One of the major agenda items at the meeting chaired by Chinese Finance Minister Lou Jiwei is cooperation on infrastructure investment and financing, officials said.

The meeting aimed at setting the stage for the APEC summit in November will wrap up in the late afternoon with the release of a joint statement.

Not all members of the Asia-Pacific grouping, accounting for more than half of the world's growth, sent finance ministers to the meeting.

But, for the first time in four years, Japan sent its finance minister to the annual meeting, with the hope of easing political tensions with China.

Japanese Finance Minister Taro Aso, who is also deputy prime minister, is seeking to hold bilateral talks with senior Chinese officials on the margins of the APEC meeting.

Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe is hoping to hold first formal talks with Chinese President Xi Jinping when he travels for the 10-11 November summit in Beijing.

German gov't allowed to keep arms deals secret: top court

BERLIN, 22 Oct — The German government does not have to inform parliament about planned arms deals in their early stages, according to a ruling by Germany's highest court on Tuesday.

German Federal Constitutional Court said the government was under no obligation to disclose information to the Bundestag about preliminary negotiations with arms companies and that parliamentary oversight would only extend to completed deals. But the government would have to provide the Bundestag with details on request, once specific arms exports have been approved, said the Karlsruhe-based court.

The ruling stems from a Green Party appeal for greater disclosure. Parliamentarians of the German opposition party had sued over the lack of information on arms deals from the government and deprivation of supervision duty of the parliament. Causes were reports on the sale of 200 German Leopard battle tanks to Saudi Arabia in 2011.

According to Germany's constitution, the government has the right to make decisions on arms exports.

The Federal Security Council, which involves Chancellor Angela Merkel and key ministers, is the body that decides on sensitive cases in closed meetings.

The current ruling coalition government publishes statistics on weapons exports every six months.—Xinhua

Positive signs for Myanmar workers at home and abroad

By Myint Win Thein

The Union government is taking a more active part in the welfare of Myanmar workers at home and abroad as it has successfully solved the problem of shoe factory workers in Hlinethaya Industrial Zone and has been sending government officials to help Myanmar migrant workers who are in trouble in other countries. The shoe factory workers were compensated for their outstanding salaries by auctioning the machines left behind by the owner who fled Myanmar without paying workers' salaries and other benefits.

Myanmar migrant workers abroad have often been victims of various types of exploitation in their host countries including murder, human trafficking, sexualabuse, torture, extortion, discrimination, workplace bullying and so on. For example, a number of Myanmar migrant workers have been murdered this year in a host country whose authorities have not come up with any murderers, according to labour activists.

Now, with the active involvement of the union government in the labour affairs, Myanmar workers working legally or illegaly in other countries are beginning to see the ray of hope for their lives. The plight of Myanmar migrant workers abroad has also attracted the attention of the international community recently.

On the other hand, the government is implementing special economic zones to create job opportunities for Myanmar migrant workers who have to work abroad to earn a living, leaving their families behind. They will be able to work in safety at home in the foreseeable future.

All these trends imply positive signs for Myanmar workers at home and abroad.

Myanglish....Singlish....Hinglish etc.,

By : Tommy Pauk

t is obvious to see that Myanmar Youngsters those who are students from secondary levels to tertiary levels are in the habit of using Myanglish in text. messaging and chatting in mobile phones. Myanglish is a style of writing in making Myanmar phrases or sentences or fragment of sentence by using English letter of alphabet. Sometimes, pure English words are combined in such expressions. The users of Myanglish aim to have clearer and more communicative in corresponding their messages. It makes the users amused, intimate and friendly while corresponding each other. In other words, Myanmar speech sounds are exchanged with English letter of alphabet. For example; 'Nay kaung lar?'(How are you?) 'Tha-ding-sar nay tine phat tha lar? ' (Do you read newspaper every day?) 'Eain-sar lote pee pe lar? (Have you done your homework?)? Kha-yee thwar mhar lar?'(Will you travel to somewhere?) 'Thu ko Phone satt lite oun!' (Give him/ her a ring!) 'Nya-nay yout yinn ngar doe cinema ko thwar kya mal!'(We will go to the cinema in the evening), 'Min bal ko yout nay tha lal? (Where are you right now?), 'Exam ko ngar aung pe kwa!'(I have passed the examination!) 'Ngar pain aung lote nay tal. (I am on diet)'

Instead of using Myanmar script, they use English script for Myanmar utterances. At a glance, the expressions seem like English phrases or sentences. Even Myanmar fonts are installed and available in computer or hand- held phones or mobile phones. Why? The answer is simple; because the sender of message and receiver of message prefer to enjoy fun of creating Myanglish language rather than using of standard English. The borrowed words from English are also embedded in Myanglish. Eg. Platform, radio, guitar, municipal, phone, foreman, council, motor car, bicycle, bioscope,etc. It becomes fashionable language among the young people in Myanmar. Another thing is that they might want to choose the easy way to communicate among themselves no matter they know standard English or not. It is so natural that common people like to use the easy way to communicate each other. As for academic or official or formal writing in English, Myanglish writing is not accepted. Myanglish way of writing can give negative impact on the practice of standard English because the Myanglish users are addicted to use Myanglish expressions and they encounter difficulties and confusions in using standard English. The Accepted English is widely used in Education, Sciences. Computer Studies, Diplomatic Relations etc. It is advisable to say that the users should not get mixed up with Standard English and Myanglish.

Hinglish in India and in Singlish in Singapore can be heard or seen in their daily life communications. Hindi is the common language in India and a blend of Hindi words and English words is called Hinglish. To be more precise; 'Hinglish is a blend of Hindi and English, in particular a variety of English used by speakers of Hindi, characterized by frequent use of Hindi vocabulary or constructions.' So let's listen to Hinglish pronunciation for some English words: eg. 'istick' for stick, 'istar' for star, 'ispade' for spade,'iskool' for school, 'iskander' for Alexander,'juoloji' for zoology, 'pphunny; for funny,'pphor' for four and 'joo' for zoo etc.

Example sentences of Hinglish ; Time kya hua hai? means' What time is it right now?' I have hazaar things to do: means I have thousand of things to do.etc.

Some Hinglish vocabulary words : Pyjama, avator, bunglow, shampoo,bollywood, jungli (wild in behavior), badmashes (hooligan) changa (great), machi chips (fish and chips) yaar (friend), Kutta (dog), Kutti (the word for 'bitch'),filmi(characteristic of Bollywood movies),deshi or desi (authentic, relating to the idea of national or local as opposed to foreign e.g, desi food; refers to chapati), freshie (a new immigrant to the UK from the Indian subcontinent), gora (white person),Angrez (English person), etc.

Hinglish (a mixture of Hindi and English) is widely spoken in India and by British Asians in the UK.

Singlish is a unique blend of English, Chinese, Malay, Tamil and local dialects. The Singaporeans speak Singlish which is known as Singapore Colloquial English. Singlish uses particles mostly borrowed from Hokkein or Cantonese, to indicate attitude to what is being said. They work rather like 'you know' and 'you see', e.g. "ah" (usually expect agreement)," lah" (strong assertion), and "what" (usually corrects something)

Examples: There's something here for everyone lah.

Otherwise, how can be considered Singaporean ah?

No parking lots here, what.

OK lah, bye bye.

And then how many rooms ah?

You see my husband is not at home lah. That's the problem, ah.

Her price is too high for me lah.

Here we notice that it does not use English grammar.

Examples; Why you so stupid? (omitted 'Verb to be')

Why she never come here? (omitted 'verb to do') You do that, I hit you. (For this sentence, it must be a conditional sentence with subordinating conjunction : 'If you do that, I will hit you' is the standard English).

You want to swim, then swim here. (For this sentence, the standard English pattern is; 'If you want to swim, you can swim here'.)

"-ed " allows any word to be made into verb in Singlish.e.g. "the cat dieded when hit by car."

" can" asking whether one is able to do something e.g. "yah, I fix by tomorrow, can, can!"

" got " used as a questionable demand. e.g " I ask you to get me the staff, got or not lah?"

"izzit" from is it, but slurred

" dis dic, play well izzit?"

"Why you got chewing gum! chewing gum ban in Singapore!"

" 50% off? Where got!!!?

Since the Singlish is like broken English, the Singaporean government has created an annual Speak Good English Movement to emphasize the point. Singlish is also heavily discouraged in the mass media and in schools. The Singaporean government does favor Standard English.

In conclusion, Myanglish, Singlish and Hinglish are not permissible to use in academic institutions, offices, and diplomatic relations etc. As for Hinglish, we find that some vocabulary words and expressions are accepted in English language as borrowed words. This article is a sort of sharing Knowledge about English, a living language and the reflection its environment. Hoping that this tiny selection of colloquialism may be helpful to English learners in Myanmar.

overgeneralization,

Overgeneralization: a Silent Killer in the Path of Friendship and Social Dealing

t is out of question that we Myanmar are Hap-.py-go-lucky people. We love to lead a carefree life. We hate worry, burden and hard work that may deter us from being jolly. It is our typical lifestyle especially when seen from its bright side. What about the other way round? In practicality, we cannot avoid worry, burden, effort and hardship in our everyday life. We have to try to overcome them. As we hate hardship, we happen to take it easy. That means, for example, when we hear something, without considering much, we are in the habit of taking it for true fact. It is where we start to go wrong and where the habit of overgeneralization originates. Overgeneralization stems from lack of rational thinking which can again be obtained by the application of knowledge and experience. All of these need labor. When we hate labor or hard work, it implies that we give way to overgeneralization. On account of overgeneralization, I had once lost one of my dear friends.

His name is Aung Myat but we his friends used to call him "Law She" (a gangly boy) as he was comparatively gangling among us. He and I had much in common; the same hobby, the same school, the same ward, and even the same birthday. In addition, there was a general agreement drawn among us that we should act manly to one another without keeping anything secret. As for our studies, we grouped together and read helping one another whenever there was a problem. My memory is still fresh that it was the first day of July 1994 that we were selected to compete in essay competition at the district level. As all of us were outstanding, we all had to participate in that competition. We had two weeks for preparation and our teacher had been guiding us. As my hobby is book-keeping, I had my home library where so many books of prize-winning essays were kept for reference. I invited all of my friends there and permitted them to use any book they liked. But it was Aung Myat who paid the most frequent visit to me during those days. I had also prepared myself with notes from various sources available. I had been compiling those notes since long. I had also kept the notes on one shelf of my library. I found Aung Myat perusing them so often. On the last day of the first week, I was taken seriously ill and he visited me. Shortly after he had gone, I asked my sister to bring my prepared notes to me. But they were gone. One of my nieces confirmed that she had just seen my friend leaving with those notes kept at the armpit. I went wild with anger and sent for him. He did not show up but flatly denied and even swore he had never seen them before. My sister said so. As a result, I got only the consolation prize but he stood first. The remaining friends had excommunicated him since they heard of the missing notes On the last day of the

On the last day of the school year, I received a parcel presented by Aung Myat. He had moved to another town soon after the event. When unfolded, I found the trophy of the first prize and a copy of his prize winning essay. I studied it very carefully over and over again. But I found no hints of my notes. Instead, it was really his authenticity I had to admit. For, I had been often told of how he would organize and write his essay. But I had no idea how things went wrong between us. Surely, I was wrong to have jumped so fast to conclude that he stole my notes. Whenever I read an essay, I remember him. But we cannot reconcile again as he had died of lungs cancer two years ago.

In the above case, my sister was still very young and she might be wrong. I foolishly skipped that fact. Instead, I mistook my friend for the one who stole my notes. It was my sheer irrationality that I did not bother to think twice before making up my mind that he must be the one. I was ready to entertain my own presupposition, one of the multi-facets of overgeneralization.

Just take a look around, undeniably you will witness that many fall prey to that bad habit. In general, we think that foreigners are smart (you may often see a foreigner or two surrounded by our local people), that Karen and Chin people are good at English, that Shan and people from Yaw or Saw can spell a curse upon us when they are not in good mood with us, that some of our national races are ego-centric, that we Myanmar are lazy and ill-disciplined and there will be so many "that". Surely, a major problem or conflict arises when these "in-general" become "in-particular". Indeed, we will come to know only after a few minutes of consideration and rational thinking that not every foreigner can be smart simply because they are human beings as we are, that everybody can be good at any language after sufficient exposure, that people from Yaw and Saw are very simple and black magic is foreign to them, and that nobody can always be good or bad.

Sweden gets two new sightings, as hunt for undersea intruder goes on STOCKHOLM, 22 Oct Sweden's military is working on two new observations that could be evidence of suspected "foreign underwater activity" near the country's capital, a senior naval officer said on Tuesday.

Swedish forces have been scouring the sea off Stockholm since Friday, after what the military called three credible reports of activity by foreign submarines or divers using an underwater vehicle.

The vessels were unidentified, but during the 1980s the Swedish navy from time to time hunted foreign submarines in its waters.

"Today, I can also report that there have been two further observations which were made by members of the public that are interesting enough to require further follow-up work," Admiral Anders Grenstad told reporters.

He would not give further details about what kind of new sightings had been made, but said they were being assessed and were not yet considered as credible as the three made earlier.

Grenstad said the operation was aimed at gathering intelligence, not military action, and could continue for some time.

"I want to stress again that this is not a U-boat hunting operation which has the aim of bringing down an opponent with military might," he said.

He also said Sweden had no information as to which country might be behind the suspected intrusion into Swedish waters. But during the 1980s and early '90s, Sweden's defence forces regularly played cat and mouse with suspected foreign submarines in its territorial waters.

Some of the incidents were later reclassified as likely to have been false alarms. In recent months, Swedish jets have been scrambled to meet foreign planes crossing into the country's air space, a pattern repeated in the Baltics where

Another Japanese man planned to join Islamic State group in Syria

Токуо, 22 Oct- Another Japanese man planned to go abroad to join the Islamic State militant group with a 26-year-old student already investigated by police, investigative sources said on Wednesday.

The unidentified man is suspected of having planned to leave for Syria on 7 October along with the Hokkaido University student and journalist Kosuke Tsuneoka, 45, the sources said.

Police investigators are questioning the man about details of the plan. Tsuneoka planned to file stories on the men.

Just like the student, the man planned to go to Syria after looking at a recruiting poster at a second-hand bookstore in Tokyo's Akihabara district, the sources said. A man in his 30s who had a link with the bookstore and lived with the student put up the poster, they said. Tsuneoka said the man joined him and the student in Tokyo on 4 October to discuss their plan to go to Syria.

The man, who claimed to be a photographer and an Islamist, told Tsuneoka at that time that he wished to visit Syria as a photojournalist, Tsuneoka said.

Several others made inquiries about the offer to join the militant group, but none of them actually left Japan for Syria, the sources said.—Kyodo News

Noble prize winner Malala Yousafzai renews call for education for all

Malala Yousafzai, the youngest person to receive the Nobel Peace Prize, renewed her call for world peace and universal education on Tuesday at a ceremony in which she was awarded the Liberty Medal.

"No girl, no child, anywhere, anywhere in this world should be deprived of education," said Yousafzai, who is 17.

The Liberty Medal honours people who "strive to secure the blessings of liberty," according to the website of the National Constitution Centre, which presents the award each year in Philadelphia.

The medal comes with a $100,000 cash prize, which Yousafzai said she would donate to education and humanitarian relief efforts in her native Pakistan.

The award comes two weeks after Yousafzai became the youngest person to be awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. She rose to promi-

BAGHDAD, 22 Oct —Iraqi army tanks and armored vehicles on Wednesday fought off an advance by Islamic State militants on the town of Amiriya Fallujah, west of the Iraqi capital Baghdad, army sources said, part of a multinational effort to check the group's progress.

The sources added that around 400 fighters amassed in the nearby towns of Fallujah and Karma the day before, piling pressure on the capital's western flank.

Another battle between the two sides raged in the area around Hit fought back Islamic State town, also in western Anbar Province, but the outcome remained unclear.

Hit is a walled market town located some 130 km (80 miles) west of the Iraqi capital Baghdad seized by Islamic State militants at the beginning of October.

Anbar's largest airbase Ain al-Asad, the Haditha Dam — a critical piece of infrastructure — and surrounding towns are encircled by Islamic State to the west from the Syrian border and to the east from militant-controlled sections of Ramadi.

The Province fell into the militants' hands after the Shi'ite Muslim-led government and the Sunni majority population, which seeks greater autonomy.

Retaking the lost towns and encouraging Anbar's Sunni tribes to take up the fight against Islamic State will be vital to reviving the shattered Iraqi state's control over its territory. The tribespeople did not take part in the fighting near Amiriya Fallujah.

The United States and other Western countries have repeatedly bombed the Sunni jihadist group's positions in Iraq - including in the Fallujah area on Wednesday - and Gulf monarchies have also taken part in air strikes against it in Syria which began last month.

Declaring a caliphate, or Muslim theocracy, Islamic State took advantage of sectarian warfare and weak state control to grab swathes of Syria and Iraq earlier this year.

Islamic State fighters have also laid siege for a month to Kobani, hundreds of kilometers to the northwest on the Turkish-Syrian frontier, and only intense bombardments by US-led coalition warplanes have halted their advance.

French experts to decode pilot conversations of crashed Falcon jet in Moscow Moscow, 22 Oct -France's specialists will help decipher the recorded French-language conversations in the cabin of the crashed Falcon 50 business jet in Moscow's Vnukovo-3 airport, a spokesman for the French Air Accident Bureau (BEA) said on Wednesday.

"We may help decode the data recorders to understand, for example, the conversations of the pilots, as they spoke French. We are also ready to provide any technical information on the plane, and a technical consultant has arrived with us," Francois Ochard said in an interview with Channel One.

three or five days to provide assistance to the Russian official civil aviation authority, the Interstate Aviation Committee (IAC), which leads the investigation.

On Tuesday, three investigators from France's BEA and two technical experts of Unijet, which owns the plane, arrived in Russia

They are accompanied by a representative of the French aircraft manufacturer, Dassault Aviation.

The Falcon jet bound for Paris crashed at the moment of takeoff at Vnukovo-3 business aviation hub around midnight Moscow time on Monday (7.57 pm GMT) when it collided with a snowplow that happened to be on the runway. The jet caught fire and fell onto the runway. Three crewmembers, all of them French citizens, and the only passenger, France's oil giant Total CEO Christophe de Margerie, died in the crash.

Russian investigators on Tuesday accused senior airport officials of criminal negligence over a plane crash. They also confirmed that the snowplow operator was drunk.-Itar-Tass

Philippine president welcomes efforts of leftist rebels to resume peace talks

MANILA, 22 Oct - Philippine President Benigno Aquino III on Wednesday welcomed the efforts of leftist rebel group National Democratic Front of the Philippines (NDFP) to resume the stalled peace negotiations with the government.

Aquino said that his government would rather talk with the NDFP, the negotiating arm of the Communist of Party of the Philippines (CPP), than fight with the leftist rebels.

"Now they (leftist rebels) are ready to talk, we welcome that. We would rather talk than fight," he said.

Aquino warned, however, that the Philippine government may not go back to the negotiating table if the New People's Army- armed wing of the CPP - will continue committing atrocities.

NDFP negotiating panel chairman Luis Jalandoni said that his group and some high-ranking Philippine officials have agreed to meet in Utrecht, Netherlands in the next few days to discuss the possible resumption of peace negotiations. Peace talks between the Philippine government and the NDFP collapsed in February 2013.

Leftist rebels have been waging war against the Philippine government since 1969.

Japan, Chinese vice premiers make contact amid soured ties sent finance ministers to BEIJING, 22 Oct —Japanese Deputy Prime Minister Taro Aso on Wednesday had a chat with Chinese Vice Premier Zhang Gaoli as the two countries are trying to mend relations badly strained by territorial and wartime historical issues, sources familiar with the matter said.

The informal contact, lasting about 15 minutes, took place on the sidelines of a finance ministers' meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum in Beijing, the sources said. Zhang is one of the seven members of Communist Party's Politburo Standing Committee, China's apex of power.

The trip by Aso, who doubles as finance minister, comes fewer than three weeks before China hosts the APEC summit during which Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe is hoping to hold one-to-one official talks for the first time with Chinese President Xi Jinping.

Last Friday, Abe, for the first time since taking office in December 2012, directly exchanged greetings with Chinese Premier Li Keqiang, while both were in Milan for a meeting of Asian and European leaders.

Not all members of the 21 Asia-Pacific grouping, accounting for more than half of the world's growth, the meeting.

But, for the first time in four years, Japan sent its finance minister to the annual meeting, with the hope of easing political tensions with China.

While China keeps denouncing Abe for what it sees as his unrepentant attitude toward Japan's wartime atrocities, it has been sending clearer signals since about half a year ago that exchanges between citizens and companies of the two countries, regardless of circumstances, should be promoted.

But it remains uncertain if China is ready to accept Abe's request for a meeting with Xi on the margins of the APEC summit set for 10-11 November in Beijing without any preconditions.

Due to disagreements over Japan's past aggression and the sovereignty of the Senkaku Islands, which China claims and calls Diaoyu, relations between the two countries have been icy for several years.

Senior Chinese officials have repeatedly said the Xi-Abe meeting can only take place if Japan acknowledges that a territorial dispute exists over the uninhabited islands and Abe promises not to visit again the war-related Yasukuni Shrine in Tokyo.

Ванскок, 22 Oct — Thai police found severed body parts in a canal on Wednesday after a Thai man being held by police said he abandoned the body of a 79-year-old Japanese man who had been missing in Bangkok.

The police found the body parts including the head and legs in several plastic bags after searching a canal in Samut Prakan, adjacent to the Thai capital. A DNA test will be conducted to confirm if the body parts are those of Yoshinori Shimato, a Japanese-language teacher.

According to the police, the man told investigators that Shimato lost consciousness after going to a hospital with the man's

The man said he acted alone, according to the police. The police said on Tuesday that he denied killing Shimato.

The man's wife was arrested earlier this month on a theft charge for withdrawing 700,000 baht (about $21,700) using an ATM card belonging to Shimato. She was later released but detained again along with her husband for further questioning.

Foreign passenger arrivals in Japan top 10 million in October estimated number of foreign visitors to Japan is believed to have exceeded 10 million this month as the figure in the January-September period soared 26.0 percent from a year before to a record 9,737,300 amid a weak yen and relaxed visa requirements, government data showed on Wednesday.

At this pace, the number of foreign visitors for the whole of 2014 is almost certain to surpass the previous-high of 10.36 million logged last year, the Japan National Tourism Agency said.

The increase in foreign visitors to Japan was also attributable to the expansion of international flights at Tokyo's Haneda airport, the government body said.

Among countries and regions, China accounted for the largest number of visitors to Japan in September, up 57.6 percent from a year earlier to 246,100.

Chinese Taipei ranked second, with the number of travelers from there rising 6.7 percent to 220,800, and South Korea came third with 217,700, up 32.3 percent.

Animal rights group honours 'Noah' director avoiding animal use in film

Los Angeles, 22 Oct Director Darren Aronofsky will be honoured by the Humane Society of the United States for using computer-generated images instead of animals in this year's biblical flood epic "Noah," the animal-protection organization said on Tuesday.

Known for his psychological films like ballet drama "Black Swan," Aronofsky said the easiest and most humane way to show the biblical animal kingdom he envisioned was through visual effects.

"It was quickly apparent that working with live animals would be dangerous for them," Aronofsky said in a statement. "It was also morally ambiguous considering were we making a film about the first naturalist, Noah, who saved and cared for all the varied species on the planet." Aronofsky, 45, will receive the Humane Society's inaugural Humane Filmmaker award at a benefit gala in New York next month. The big-budget "Noah," which earned mixed reviews from critics, has taken in $359.2 million at the global box office since its release in March. The organization said the film shows that animals can be a large part of entertainment production without risking their welfare. As executive editor from 1968 until 1991, Bradlee became one of the most important figures in Washington, as well as part of journalism history, while transforming the Post from a staid morning daily into one of the most dynamic and the Post, which reported late respected publications in the United States.

Bradlee's work guiding young reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein as they traced a 1972 burglary at Democratic Party headquarters at the Watergate office and apartment complex back to the Nixon White House has been celebrated from journalism schools to Hollywood.

The Post won a Pulitzer

Bradlee gave Woodward and Bernstein license to pursue the scandal and its movie about it, "All the President's Men" — inspired a generation of investigative reporters.

"I think the great lesson of Watergate was probably the stick-tuitiveness of the Post," Bradlee once told the American Journalism Review. "The fact that we hunkered down and backed the right horse. I think that was a wonderful lesson for publishers, too."

Upsetting presidents was a Bradlee stock-in-trade. In 1972 the Post joined the New York Times in publishing stories based on the Pentagon Papers, a secret government account of Vietnam War decisions, despite heavy legal pressure. The Post also uncovered details of the Iran-Contra scandal that rocked Ronald Reagan's White House.

"I think this shows the (adversarial free-press) system works," Bradlee said. "It's a wonderful control on governments that are not all that careful on policing themselves."-Reuters

JLOBAL NEW LIGHTOF MYANMAR

BARCELONA, 22 Oct a goal back late on. Neymar and Lionel Messi maintained their lethal partnership with a goal apiece in a devastating first-half as Barcelona swept aside Ajax 3-1 in Champions League Group F on Tuesday.

The Argentine was the provider, slipping the ball through for Neymar to hit the opener with a clinical finish into the corner after seven minutes, then he struck midway through the half to put the hosts in control. Andres Iniesta threaded the ball through to the Argentine and his shot from the centre of the penalty area squirmed under keeper Jasper Cillessen.

Messi now has 69 Champions League goals, as does Real Madrid's Cristiano Ronaldo with the duo two off all-time leading scorer Raul.

Barca coach Luis Enrique took off Neymar and Messi, who now have 17 goals between them, with one eye on the El Clasico with Real at the weekend and as the team started to relax, allowing Ajax to pull Anwar El Ghazi knocked home a loose ball inside the area to raise Dutch hopes and unsettle the Camp Nou crowd.

However, in injury time substitute Sandro Ramirez wrapped the game up with a fine strike into the bottom corner.

Barcelona are second in the group behind leaders Paris St Germain.

"We were very good in the first half and then we dropped off but this is logical because you can't play at that level for 90 minutes in every game," Luis Enrique told a news conference.

"The players are not robots, the idea is to reduce the number of errors and be as consistent as possible."

He also did not feel he made a mistake by bringing off Neymar and Messi.

"I would do the same again," said Luis Enrique. "I am happy with my decision to take the players off, it was my decision.

"We controlled the to enjoy this win, rest and then prepare for the important game so that we can win it." Ajax coach Frank de Boer, a former Barcelona player, felt his players let themselves down in the first half.

"I was very angry at halftime because we can play a lot better and we did do a lot better afterwards," he said.

"We are a young team with quality but we have to show that. They did take three players off looking ahead to El Clasico but we got a goal and after that anything can happen.

"It was just a shame that straight after that they scored again." Rakitic returned for Xavi after being rested for Barca's weekend win over Eibar and with Sergio Busquets injured Javier Mascherano again played in central midfield.

Barca scored with their first dangerous attack with the Ajax defence having no answer to the home side's speed and movement as Neymar slotted the ball in.

Immediately after it was Messi's turn and he fired over but he was not to be denied with his second chance after 24 minutes following more good work from Iniesta who was moving the ball around with finesse in midfield.

As Barca continued to press, Messi found Pedro who was unlucky to see his shot come back off the post. Messi hit the side netting while after the break but the hosts were content to take the steam out of the game, saving themselves for the weekend, before the late flourish.—Reuters

The loss halted the double defending champion's winning streak at the season-ending event at 16 matches and leaves her needing to beat Eugenie Bouchard, who plays Ana Ivanovic later on Wednesday, to make it through to SINGAPORE, 22 Oct— the joint heaviest defeat of the world number one 6-0, the last four from the Red Group. "It was actually embarrassing I think describes the way I played. Yeah, very embarrassing," Wilheaping praise on Halep.

"I've seen her play a lot. Like I said, she's never played like this before."

Williams gave no indication of the struggles that awaited her as she boomed down an ace to start the match between the two players who were impressive in claiming straight set victories in their opening Red Group matches.

That ace would be one of only nine points the 18-times grand slam champion would win in the opening set as her game fell apart to give Maria Sharapova confidence as Williams hope of overhauling her to offered little hope of a refinish the season as world number one. Halep, serving supremely, needed only 12 minutes to race 4-0 ahead with Williams looking almost in shock and her routine failure to send simple groundstrokes over the net.

The American, looking for a fifth WTA Finals title, also tossed in six double faults with the few second serves that did make it over getting rough treatment from Halep.

The Romanian, runner-up at the French Open earlier this year, grew in covery. Halep, who beat Bouchard in her opener on Monday, smashing an ace to take the set 6-0 at the third opportunity.

The last time Williams lost a set 6-0 was in Madrid last year at the hands of Anabel Medina Garrigues, but she bounced back to win the match and the tournament. That scenario never looked like repeating itself on Wednesday.-Reuters
