NAY PYI TAW, 3 Feb—President U Thein Sein delivered address at the 4th Green Economy, Green Growth Forum, which focuses on ‘expanding cooperation and deepening integration for sustainable resources and social and economic development’.

Coexistence with cooperative and collaborative minds has power for development, with the president citing that a strong and healthy forest is home to diverse species of flora and fauna, whose coexistence can stave off natural disasters, tree diseases and insects.

“Similarly, a stronger society has diverse technocrats with integrated minds and they can overcome different social, economic and environmental challenges of today,” he said, pointing out the ‘higher than ever’ frequency of environmental challenges and man-made disasters in recent years in today’s world.

A society contains a diversity of ethnic groups with different beliefs, customs and backgrounds as well as with varying degrees of knowledge and expertise, he said, adding that their joint cooperation and deeper integration can meet challenges of now and then.

He described broad-mindedness and closer cooperation as essential to the sustainability of natural resources and the enhancement of socio-economic growth.

Myanmar has formed a non-profit organization, Green Economy and Green Growth (Myanmar), to undertake green projects in partnership with civil society organizations and international organizations.

GEGG (Myanmar), at the 25th ASEAN Summit held in Nay Pyi Taw in November 2014, established ASEAN Institute for Green Economy (AIGE), with a view to spurring collaboration in sustainable development and greening the regional economy in line with the ASEAN’s theme “Moving Forward in Unity to a Peaceful and Prosperous Community”.

AIGE is reported to serve as a centre of excellence on green economy and green growth by dealing with environmental, climatic and economic issues in the region while providing technical assistance for capacity building and research projects.

President U Thein Sein pledged new levels of cooperation in making policies and strategies on sustainable development and human resources in the arenas of science, technology and management.

He called sustainable development the ‘common goal of our world’, warning that excessive harvest would terminate natural resources, which he said are vital to ‘our survival’.

He also spoke of two Earth Summits held in Brazil in 1992 and 2012 as well as Rio+20, which put in sharp focus ‘the green economy and green growth in the context of sustainable development and poverty eradication’.

In line with the guidelines adopted at Rio+20, Myanmar is making efforts to ensure that industries are YANGON, 3 Feb—Nineteen Japanese farm equipment makers are exploring the possibility of networking business partners to sell their farm equipment in Myanmar through an agriculture business seminar.

The seminar held in Yangon on Tuesday focused on agriculture machinery presentations of Japanese firms which are seeking business ties with potential candidates for sales of their products in Myanmar, an agriculture-rich country in Southeast Asia. It also featured a business matching, bringing together around 40 local farm equipment distributors to match with Japanese suppliers.

It was organized by the Japan External Trade Organization (JETRO) in cooperation with the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry (UMFCCI) to build a foundation for market opportunities for manufacturers and distributors from agricultural machinery and materials sector.

“I got into conversation with a Japanese counterpart on a matter to import used tractors from Japan, sharing information with each other on which horsepower of tractors can work well for mechanization of the fields here”, said Nay Myo Lwin of Smart Mission International Co., Ltd that specializes in tractors, spare parts and agricultural equipment.

Despite higher prices that make less affordable Japanese farm equipment to be purchased by Myanmar farmers, product quality may boost sales, he said as the market potential for Japanese tractors in the country. But, it is essential to have easy access to spare parts for users to maintain the used tractors they bought, he added.

Keiji Sorimachi, acting manager of Toto Kogyo Co., Ltd which makes greenhouse accessories called on Myanmar farmers who need better machines to take into account the durability of a product into consideration before buying a product.

U Kyaw Win, managing director of Seinn Yaung So Manufacturing Co., Ltd, told The Global New Light of Myanmar there is a huge market opportunity for farm equipment sales in Myanmar with immense potential for sustained growth in the farming sector, particularly in light of the shrinking agricultural labour force.

He welcomed the Japanese mission looking to create business opportunities in the country's agriculture machinery market, but pointed out that Japanese products have prices higher than Chinese machinery and may be beyond Myanmar farmers' means.

Saying what he expected to get from the business mission to Myanmar, Hideaki Osakada who is seeking partnership in the fields of agriculture infrastructure and Myanmar agricultural produce for export, expressed his belief that the business matching would enable participants to take their business to the next level.

Despite having good quality and reliable durability, farmers are not likely to use Japanese brands if it is hard to get spare parts cheaper, said one of attendees at the seminar.

In Myanmar where the agriculture sector represents between 35 and 40 per cent of GDP, farmers use cheap farm equipment imported from China and Chinese brands occupy a big part of the farm machinery market in the country.—GNLM

Sri Lanka says judiciary must be strong to avoid international war crimes probe

COLOMBO, 3 Feb — Sri Lanka's new government said on Tuesday that the country's judiciary must be strong in order to convince the international community that Sri Lanka is capable of dealing with human rights concerns on its own through domestic mechanisms.

Foreign Minister Mangala Samaraweera said that the government needed to convince the world that the island's judiciary is competent, independent and impartial which can rank among the best anywhere in the world. "An international inquiry, initiated last year, is now currently nearing completion. The results of this inquiry could lead to Sri Lankan armed forces and other civilians appearing before an international tribunal, unless tangible steps are swiftly taken to restore judicial credibility," Minister Samaraweera said in a statement. "It is the previous administration's failure to set-up credible domestic mechanisms that has led to our current difficulties. It is the current government's position that the most effective way of beginning the process of healing between communities and preventing international prosecution, which many feel would be a violation of sovereignty, would be to institute a credible domestic mechanism as soon as possible," he said. The minister further said the challenge today is to ensure that Sri Lanka is able to effectively enjoy the rights, privileges and benefits of re-entering the community of civilized nations and ensure that Sri Lanka, as a country, does not suffer economic sanctions, ill-dignity and a tarnished reputation. The foreign minister also defended the removal of the country's controversial Chief Justice Mohan Peiris saying Peiris had acted in complete violation of the international standards of judicial conduct and therefore could not be expected to command the respect and confidence of the international community.—Xinhua

Blast rocks public market in S Philippines, wounding three

MANILA, 3 Feb — Three people were wounded in a bomb explosion on Tuesday inside a public market in southern Philippine province of Sultan Kudarat, the military said.

Jo-ann Petinglay, public affairs officer of the Army's 6th Infantry Division, said the explosion was caused by a hand grenade that was hurled at the wet market section of Isulan Town's public market around 11:10 am.

"Initial report states that three unidentified persons were wounded and immediately brought to the nearest hospital for medication," said Petinglay. He said "The motive is possibly rido (clan war)". The officer did not elaborate.

A police report named the wounded as Maylene Vargas, Abraham Bandal and Raheb Pangalaton Dimaluloy. The report described Dimaluloy as a "suspect."—Xinhua

BANGKOK, 3 Feb — Two small bombs outside a Bangkok shopping mall over the weekend will have a minimal impact on Thailand's vital tourism industry, the prime minister said on Tuesday, while promising better security to avoid any more such incidents. Two people were slightly injured in the twin explosions on Sunday outside the Siam Paragon mall in a busy shopping district, the first blasts in Bangkok since the military seized power on 22 May to end months of sometimes deadly street protests.

"The tourism ministry told the cabinet that the explosion will have a minimal impact on tourism," Prime Minister Prayuth Chan-ocha told reporters.

"However, we must look after the security situation better to ensure this does not happen again."

Thailand's tourist sector accounts for about 10 percent of the economy. It was hit last year by a drawn-out political crisis, including protests in which nearly 30 people were killed, that culminated in the coup.

The military-led government has struggled to revive growth in Southeast Asia's second-largest economy as exports are sluggish and consumer demand remains subdued.

The explosions come at a politically sensitive time, just over a week after a junta-appointed assembly banned ousted Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra from politics for five years, something that has left many of her supporters fuming.

The country remains under martial and military leaders say they have no plans to lift it.

There was no claim of responsibility and the military said the blasts appeared to have been aimed at creating panic.

Police said they were trying to identify two suspicious-looking people caught on CCTV footage.

Prayuth dismissed talk that the army was behind the blasts as a way to justify martial law.

Malaysia says UN must make conflict zone air risk reporting mandatory

MONTREAL, 3 Feb — Malaysia, which suffered two commercial air disasters last year after one jet disappeared and another was shot down over Ukraine, said on Monday the United Nations must make reporting of risks to airlines over conflict zones mandatory. The International Civil Aviation Organization, the UN's aviation agency, been under pressure to come up with new systems to protect aircraft from risks in conflict zones after Malaysia Airlines flight MH17, traveling from Amsterdam to Kuala Lumpur, was shot down in eastern Ukraine last July, killing all 298 people on board.

ICAO has proposed testing a central website where states and agencies could publish public warnings about conflict zones. But crucially, the proposal does not require ICAO member states to provide information. "We cannot delay implementing changes in the way global commercial aviation operates," Azharuddin Abdul Rahman, director general of Malaysia's Department of Civil Aviation, told an ICAO assembly at a high-level safety meeting in Montreal. He said reporting should be "mandatory and timely." The MH17 incident occurred during fighting between Ukraine and pro-Russian separatist rebels in eastern Ukraine. The United States said the plane was hit with a ground-to-air missile by rebels, but Russia has said that a Ukrainian military aircraft downed the jet. Last month, Reuters reported that the United States would back the ICAO proposal on flight safety over conflict zones. The Netherlands, which lost 196 citizens aboard flight MH17, said on Monday the ICAO plan was an important first step and called on all ICAO member states to back it.

"Flying should be associated with freedom and safety not with luck, and airline tickets should not be a lottery ticket," said Netherlands secretary of state Wilma Mansveld, adding quick action was needed on conflict zone risks.

Seven killed in Bangladesh after petrol bombs thrown at bus

DHAKA, 3 Feb — Opposition activists in Bangladesh trying to enforce a transport boycott threw petrol bombs at a bus early on Tuesday setting off a fire that engulfed the vehicle killing seven people, a fire department officer said.

The opposition rejected a general election just over a year ago and stepped up its protests last month in a bid to force Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina to step down and hold a new election.

At least 51 people have been killed in political violence over the past month including the seven on the night-bus to Dhaka.

"Seven died on the spot after opposition activists hurled petrol bombs," fire department official Monir Hossain told reporters in the southeastern district of Comilla.

Sixteen people were injured, several of them critically, he said.

Spokesmen for the opposition Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP) were not available for comment.

They routinely reject accusations that their activists are responsible for violence. Bangladeshi politics has been mired for years in bitter rivalry between Hasina and BNP leader Begum Khaleda Zia.

Both women are related to former national leaders and they have alternated as prime minister for most of the past two decades.

Analysts say the renewed political turmoil could threaten the country's $24-billion garment export industry, already under pressure after a string of fatal accidents.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga said on Tuesday, calling for stepped-up antiterrorism measures both at home and abroad.

“The threat of terrorism has become more realistic for our country,” Suga said at a vice ministerial meeting aimed at finding ways to better protect Japanese citizens from international crimes and terrorism.

Two days after the militant group released an online video purporting to show journalist Kenji Goto beheaded with a warning to Tokyo of “carnage wherever your people are found,” Suga, who chaired the meeting, said, “I ask all of you to work together to strengthen antiterrorism measures.”

The video with the Islamic State logo said, “Let the nightmare for Japan begin.” The militant group also killed Haruna Yukawa, another Japanese hostage, according to an online video released earlier.

Speaking to the House of Councillors budget committee, Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said it is important to strengthen information-gathering capabilities at the country’s diplomatic missions abroad, including those of defence officers being stationed there.

Critics have questioned the government’s handling of the hostage crisis without strong intelligence.

As for domestic measures, Abe’s fellow Liberal Democratic Party lawmakers have called for accelerated antiterrorism efforts toward the 2020 Olympics in Tokyo.

The meeting’s participants from the Foreign Ministry, the Defence Ministry and other government units have vowed to consider fresh antiterrorism steps if existing measures are not working.

Tokyo is stepping up security at US facilities in Japan as the United States leads the international fight against terrorism, as well as ports, airports, railway and other transportation centres.

To prevent the funding of terrorism, Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister Taro Aso said he has called on domestic financial institutions to strengthen their surveillance of banking transactions.

Aso, concurrently serving as financial services minister, also indicated at a press conference that Group of 20 finance chiefs may discuss how to deal with money-laundering at their two-day meeting early next week in Istanbul. The hostage crisis broke out just days after Abe pledged $200 million in nonmilitary and humanitarian assistance to Middle East countries struggling against Islamic State. Australian Prime Minister sought loyalty promise from deputy but refused

SYDNEY, 3 Feb — Australian Prime Minister Tony Abbott sought a commitment from deputy party leader Julie Bishop that she would not challenge him, Sky News reported on Tuesday, a promise that the Foreign Minister refused to give.

Australian Foreign Minister Julie Bishop

Abbott, 16 months in the top job, has faced a barrage of criticism in recent weeks following a slump in opinion polls, raising speculation that a leadership contest will emerge.

At a meeting on Monday, Abbott sought the promise from Foreign Minister Bishop, Sky News reported.

When asked about the report on Australian television, Abbott declined to refute the account.

“What (people) are looking for is politicians who are not endlessly navel gazing, not fighting amongst themselves, but are getting on with the government of this country,” Abbott said.

Abbott sought to solidify his leadership on Monday, dropping a signature plan and vowing to engage more collaboratively with colleagues.

In the speech, dubbed by some commentators as the most important of his short tenure, Abbott said he believed he had the full support of Bishop, who along with former Liberal Party leader Malcolm Turnbull, has been touted as a potential replacement.

US dialogue offer falls through due to N Korea’s insistence

SEOUL, 3 Feb — The US point man on North Korea had offered to meet with a top diplomat from the North, but the proposed meeting did not materialize because the North insisted on a meeting in Pyongyang, Yonhap News Agency reported from Washington on Tuesday, citing a source. Sung Kim, special representative for North Korea policy, wanted to meet with North Korean First Vice Foreign Minister Kim Kye Gwan, the former chief nuclear negotiator, and conveyed a meeting proposal via the North’s mission to the United Nations, the report said.

The proposal was made before Kim embarked on a trip to Japan last week to hold discussions with the top nuclear envoys from South Korea and Japan in Tokyo.

After the trilateral talks, Kim visited Beijing and held talks with his Chinese counterpart Wu Dawei.

US-India nuclear ‘breakthrough’ could be finalized within year

NEW DELHI / WASHINGTON, 3 Feb — A “breakthrough understanding” to open India’s nuclear power sector to US firms reached during President Barack Obama’s visit to New Delhi last month could be finalised this year, Indian officials say.

The 25 January announcement by Obama and Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi followed six weeks of intensive talks, but few details were released beyond a framework based on India’s acceptance of the principle that plant operators should bear primary liability in the event of a nuclear disaster.

Significant work remains on the fine print of a deal aimed at unlocking projects worth tens of billions of dollars that have been stuck the drawing board for years. India wants to nearly treble its installed nuclear capacity, which would make it the world’s second biggest market after China.

US officials say details of an insurance scheme to protect suppliers from crippling lawsuits need to be thrashed out and India still has to ratify a UN nuclear convention. Indian officials do not rule out completing the process this year.

“We are committed to moving ahead on all implementation issues at an early date,” said Syed Akbaruddin, chief spokesman at India’s Ministry of External Affairs. “There are no policy hurdles left.”

General Electric and Westinghouse, a unit of Japan’s Toshiba, were fully briefed on the meetings of a nuclear “contact group” that hammered out the nuclear compromise in London, say sources with direct knowledge of the talks.

Bringing them into the mix was crucial because the prospect of huge lawsuits, like those against Union Carbide over the 1984 Bhopal gas disaster, has until now kept US and other foreign firms on the sidelines.

India and the United States signed a landmark agreement to cooperate on nuclear power back in 2008. Yet an expected bonanza never materialized because India later passed a law that would expose reactor makers to liability if there was an accident.

The liability issue has become a metaphor for the unrealized potential of the bilateral business relationship and a question mark against Modi’s “Make in India” mantra.

As the days counted down to Obama’s visit, Indian officials persuaded their US counterparts that their law was “not incompatible” with international standards that place the burden of liability on the operator, said one senior US official.

New Delhi also proposed setting up an insurance pool with a liability cap of 15 billion rupees ($244 million). The state-run Nuclear Power Corporation of India would pay premiums to cover its liability. Suppliers would take out separate insurance against their secondary liability — which could not exceed that of the operator — at a “fraction” of the cost. India must still ratify the International Atomic Energy Agency’s Convention on Supplementary Compensation for Nuclear Damage (CSC), which requires signatories to channel liability to the operator and offers access to relief funds.

“We would be looking at how quickly we can ratify the CSC — this is part of our assurance to the suppliers, along with the insurance pool,” said an Indian member of the contact group, set up by Obama and Modi at a Washington summit last year.

The US official said Washington expects the Indians to ratify with the IAEA in the near future, along with documentation “stating what their law intends” on the issue of liability, which should offer further reassurance to US firms.

The US industry would have preferred the issue to be settled by amending the liability law, something considered politically impossible for Modi to achieve at the moment.

“We want to see all the detail before we say: ‘Yes, it works for us,’” Westinghouse President and CEO Daniel Roderick, who joined Obama’s delegation, told Reuters. That note of caution, however, masks the extent to which negotiators engaged with the industry to address fears that it could end up on the hook in a disaster on the scale of the 2011 reactor blasts at Tepco’s plant in Fukushima, Japan.

“For the first time, we had a comprehensive inventory of concerns,” said the Indian negotiator.

Westinghouse has been granted land in Modi’s home state of Gujarat to build six reactors, while GE Hitachi Nuclear Energy is eyeing a similar project in Andhra Pradesh. The liability roadblock has prevented commercial talks from starting on the projects, with a combined capacity of 10,000 megawatts.

India has 21 nuclear reactors with an installed capacity of 21,300 MW. It plans to launch construction of 40,000 MW of capacity in the next decade.—Reuters

Not beyond us

By Aung Khin

Healthy living is important for a happy life. Doing good practices, keeping the thoughts away from miserable experiences, living in suitable surroundings and having hygienic food are fundamentals for a healthy life.

The number of life-threatening diseases is increasing in the world. Modern medical science has provided treatments and medicines to cure these diseases even though they are not totally wiped out. Many acute diseases can be prevented or cured in these days. Cancer is one of them. It is not beyond us.

World Cancer Day takes place on 4 February to raise awareness there is much that can be done at an individual, community and governmental level to harness and mobilize these solutions and catalyze positive change.

Empowering people to make healthy choices and reducing the social and environmental risk factors for cancer are key to achieving the global goal of reducing premature deaths from non-communicable diseases (NCDs) by 25 per cent by 2025 and reaching the targets of the World Cancer Declaration.

The World Cancer Declaration Targets are to be achieved by 2025 through four key areas of focus: Choosing healthy lives, Delivering early detection, Achieving treatment for all and Maximizing quality of life.

To reach the goal, awareness programmes are being launched for better health systems to ensure sustained delivery of effective and comprehensive, patient-centred cancer control programmes across the life-course. Various types of tobacco consumption, obesity, unhealthy diet, alcohol intake, and levels of physical inactivity, as well as exposure to other known risk factors are related with cancer.

At least one-third of the most common cancers can be prevented through reducing alcohol consumption, healthier diets and improved physical activity levels. If smoking is included the figure is about 50 per cent. An early detection programme also helps improving knowledge of cancer among communities, health professionals and policy makers and increase awareness around the options for early detection.

Therefore, the government should invest in health systems that support healthy lives of the people through awareness programmes.

The price of one basket of green gram beans has risen to between K36,000 to K37,000 in February from about K30,000 per basket in the same period last year, according to farmers in Kawa, a country town about 40 miles north-east of Yangon.

Bean prices are heavily dependent on the Indian market, with about 80 percent of locally grown beans exported to India, and about 12 to 13 per cent exported to the ASEAN market yearly, according to the Myanmar Pulses, Beans and Sesame Seeds Merchants Association. The bean market opened at around K750,000 per ton in December 2014, up sharply from around K500,000 to K600,000 per ton in the same period the previous year.

Bean prices usually fall in November and December. However, the prices have been surging this year due to demand from India and lower stock at home.

The most popular kinds were black mung bean, green gram and chickpeas. Most beans are grown in Bago, Yangon, Mandalay, Ayeyawady and Sagaing regions from November to February.

Farmers grow peas and beans as a second crop.

Joint Ministerial Working Committee (JMWC)

Press Release

At the end of her visit to Myanmar from January 6 to 16, 2015, Ms. Yang Hee Lee, the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the Human Rights situation in Myanmar, made some observations when she met the press on 16 January 2015. Many of the concerns she raised in her statement do not reflect the overall positive aspect of an issue. Selectivity is often exercised. On some occasions, interfering on issues which falls within state sovereignty and domestic jurisdiction is evident. In this connection, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs expresses the following points:

- On the use of term "Rohingya" in her statement, Myanmar rejects such use of nomenclature unequivocally. Myanmar never recognizes such terminology which as never been included among over 100 national races of Myanmar or even in the census records of the British colonial period. Insistence on using this controversial terminology will only pose a barrier on the road to resolving this important issue. Use of such term by the United Nations would certainly draw strong resentments of the people of Myanmar making the government's efforts more difficult in addressing the issue.
- On a package of four draft bills, they are being drafted in pursuant to the will of the people of Myanmar. They are widely published, and views and feedbacks from the public are also considered and incorporated, as appropriate, to the bills.

Consequently, they have been forwarded to the Parliaments for a debate, consideration and a decision. They are subject to under stringent scrutiny by the people's representatives in the Hluttaws. It will be done with the view to serving the best interest of the Myanmar people. This due process on the bills is far from completion. Prejudging the outcome if this domestic legislation process constitutes an attempt to make undue influence on the public opinion and incitement among the people.

- On land issue, it should be reminded that Myanmar is an agro-based country, and as such the land and the farmers are primary assets of the country and are highly valued. In order to deal with land issues with transparency and effectiveness, the Central Committee on land use management has been endeavouring its utmost. In this mission, a great number of land disputes are caused by hindrances including outdated laws, rules and procedures, lack of concrete evidences for ownership. However, the government is committed to implement land reforms which will ensure effective resolution, and safeguarding the interest of people and returning the land to their rightful owners. In light of vast land in the country, such process cannot be completed overnight.
- On the mentioning of political prisoners, the scrutiny process on a few remaining has been carried out with special consideration. Release of political prisoners is done with a view to enabling them to participate in political process, stability of the State and implementation of durable peace. In order to continue looking into the affairs of political prisoners, the membership has been expanded and reconstituted. It will continue in line with relevant existing law.

Greater media freedom has been granted in the country by abolishing press censorship, permitting the publication of private daily newspaper and enacting new media laws in line with international norms and practices. Accusations of backtracking in some areas have been made. The arrests of some journalists were cited previously. No journalists were apprehended for exercising their due rights but for the offences they had committed such as breaking into a restricted area. No country will tolerate a breach of national security by any person. The state of Myanmar's media freedom can be compared not only with that of countries' in the region but also rest of the world.

The special Rapporteur should fulfill her mandate in a professional and prudent manner. Her visit should not leave the country and people of Myanmar with discord, distrust and incitement.

In relation to the media statement by UN High Commissioner for Human Rights released on 21 January 2015, it is firmly reiterated that Myanmar will not tolerate any acts or expressions that would lead to hatred between religions and races.

As US faces new threats, Pentagon seeks bigger defence budget

WASHINGTON, 3 Feb — Facing new security challenges in the Middle East and Ukraine, the Obama administration on Monday proposed an increased $534 billion Pentagon base budget plus $51 billion in war funds as it urged Congress to end cuts it says erode US military power.

Defence officials said the higher spending level was necessary to carry out President Barack Obama's national security strategy, including the planned stationing of more forces in the Asia-Pacific in response to the rise of China.

The proposed base budget exceeded the $499 billion federal spending cap for fiscal year 2016, forcing a debate with Congress over whether to continue deep cuts to federal discretionary spending or to amend the limits set in a 2011 law that sought to narrow the US budget deficit.

Defence officials acknowledged the request exceeded federal spending limits, but General Martin Dempsey, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the budget "represents the minimum resource level necessary to remain a capable, ready and appropriately sized force able to meet our global commitments."

Defence officials said the budget included funding for additional P-8 submarine-hunter aircraft and development of a new long-range strike aircraft seen as necessary for the Asia-Pacific region.

The proposed budget included $5.3 billion to fund operations against Islamic State militants in Syria and Iraq, including $1.3 billion to train and equip Syrian opposition fighters.

To reassure European allies worried about Russia's actions in Ukraine and elsewhere in the region, it proposed $789 million to bolster US military rotational deployments and increase military exercises and training with partners in Europe.

"The geopolitical

US President Barack Obama speaks about the FY2016 budget at the Department of Homeland Security in Washington on 2 Feb, 2015.—REUTERS events of the past year only reinforce the need to re-source DoD (Department of Defence) at the president's requested funding level as opposed to current law," the Pentagon said in a statement.

The budget follows several years of deep cuts, also known as sequestration. Projected defence spending was supposed to be reduced by about a trillion dollars over a decade but defence officials say the cuts are eroding military capabilities after 15 years of war.

"As the budget makes clear, a return to sequester-level funding would be irresponsible and dangerous, resulting in a force too small and ill-equipped to respond to the full range of potential threats to the nation," the Pentagon said.

The proposed budget would enable the US Army to fund an active-duty force of 475,000 soldiers, down slightly from its plan to retain 490,000 after the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. The Pentagon has warned that if the 2011 budget limits remained in force, it would have to cut the Army to about 420,000 troops.

The Pentagon again sought approval for several reforms hotly opposed in Congress, including retirement of the A-10 "Warthog" close-air support aircraft, conducting a new round of US base closures and curbing the rising cost of military pay and benefits.

Britain's Labour party to lose 30 seats in Scotland to nationalists

LONDON, 3 Feb — Britain's opposition Labour party will lose as many as 30 Scottish seats to nationalists in the 7 May election, a poll showed on Tuesday, reducing Labour leader Ed Miliband's chances of unseating Prime Minister David Cameron.

Scots voted to stay part of the United Kingdom in a 18 September referendum, but support for the Scottish National Party has since soared on the perception that London will not deliver the extra powers it promised to swing the poll result.

The Times/YouGov poll shows the Scottish National Party has a 21-point lead in Scotland and would take 48 percent of the vote to Labour's 27 percent, the Times newspaper reported. The Liberal Democrats were on 4 percent and Conservatives on 15 percent in Scotland, the poll showed.

The Times said that when plugged into a model, the results would give the SNP 48 out of 59 seats in Scotland, up from the 6 it won in 2010, leaving Labour just 11 seats, down from the 41 it won in 2010.

The nationalists aim to usurp Labour in Scotland and win the balance of power in an election that will decide who rules the world's sixth-largest economy and whether voters will get a referendum by 2017 on membership of the European Union.—Reuters

Cuba sounds warning ahead of next round of US talks

HAVANA, 3 Feb — Cuba warned the United States on Monday that it wants American diplomats to scale back aid for Cuban dissidents before the two countries can reopen embassies in each other's capitals.

The long-time adversaries are negotiating the restoration of diplomatic relations as a first step toward reversing more than five decades of confrontation. Officials for both governments met in Havana in January and a second round of talks is expected to be held in Washington this month.

But Cuba's lead negotiator said in an interview broadcast on state television that if the United States wants free movement for its diplomats in Cuba, it must stop using them to support the political opposition.

"The way those (US) diplomats act should change in terms of stimulating, organizing, training, supplying and financing elements within our country that act against the interests of ... the government of the Cuban people," Josefina Vidal said.

"The total freedom of movement, which the US

Josefina Vidal, director of US affairs at the Cuban foreign ministry, speaks during a news conference in Havana on 22 Jan, 2015.—REUTERS side is posing, is tied to a change in the behaviour of its diplomatic mission and its officials," said Vidal, Cuba's top official for US affairs.

Washington has long criticized the communist government for repressing opponents of the one-party system. While public support for dissidents is limited, they receive plenty of attention from US and Western diplomats.

The United States says it supports Cuban activists who exercise their right to freedom of expression.

The restoration of diplomatic ties could happen before a regional summit in Panama in April, when

US President Barack Obama and Cuban President Raul Castro would meet for the first time since shaking hands at the funeral of Nelson Mandela in December 2013.

Obama and Castro spoke on the phone the day before their separate but simultaneous announcements on 17 December that they would attempt to end their Cold War-era hostilities.

The warning by Vidal suggested there were obstacles to restoring diplomatic ties, which has been seen as a relatively easy first step before the two sides try to resolve deeper differences on matters such as human rights and the US economic embargo of Cuba.

Vidal said the conduct of Cuban diplomats in Washington was "impeccable", while suggesting the Americans were meddling in internal Cuban affairs.

"Matters of the internal affairs in Cuba are not negotiable," Vidal said. "Nor are we going to negotiate matters of an internal nature regarding Cuban sovereignty in exchange for lifting the embargo. Beyond that, everything else is a process of negotiation."—Reuters

UN's highest court to rule on Serb, Croat genocide cases

THE HAGUE, 3 Feb — The United Nations' highest court will rule on Tuesday on genocide cases filed by Serbia and Croatia over atrocities allegedly committed during the violent breakup of Yugoslavia in the 1990s.

The countries filed complaints against each other at the International Court of Justice (ICJ), which could award financial compensation if it finds either side violated the 1948 Genocide Convention.

The cases, filed 16 years ago, are part of the long legal fall-out from the break-up of Yugoslavia into seven states in wars that lasted eight years and left more than 100,000 dead in Europe's worst conflagration since World War Two.

The ruling, which is due to start at 0900 GMT (4:00 am ET), could stoke political tensions in both countries.

"What's really at stake is both states trying to justify their wars," said Eric Gordy, a professor at London's School of Slavonic and East European Studies.

"The strongest arguments they have to say they are justifying their wars is that they were defending their citizens against genocide," he added.

The Peace Palace, which houses The International Court of Justice, is seen in The Hague on 22 July, 2010.—REUTERS

The UN tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, which is also in The Hague, has long since ruled that genocide was committed in Bosnia, where more than 8,000 Bosnian Muslim men and boys were killed when the UN 'safe haven' of Srebrenica fell to Bosnian Serb forces in 1995.

Despite widespread atrocities against all sides, no court has ruled that ethnic Croats or Serbs were victims of genocide. Recent acquittals of suspects at the Yugoslav tribunal stoked anger in the two countries.

Many experts believe Tuesday's ruling is unlikely to find Croatia or Serbia liable for genocide if no individuals from either country have been convicted of the crime.

Croatia alleges that Serbia's destruction of towns and expulsion of ethnic Croats in Slavonia amounted to genocide. In turn, Serbia accuses Croatia of genocide over the expulsion of Serbs from Krajina.

In an earlier ruling from 2007 in a case brought by Bosnia, the same court found that Serbia was not responsible for genocide, but that it had breached the genocide convention by failing to prevent the massacre in Srebrenica.

DOHA, 3 Feb — Egypt could free Canadian-Egyptian journalist Mohamed Fahmy within hours, Qatar-based news channel Al Jazeera English reported on Tuesday.

Fahmy's colleague, Peter Greste, an Australian citizen, was released on Sunday. A third journalist, Baher Mohamed, an Egyptian national, is still in prison in Cairo.

The three men were sentenced last June to between seven and 10 years on charges including spreading lies to help "a terrorist organization" — a reference to the now-outlawed Muslim Brotherhood.

Al Jazeera journalist Mohammed Fahmy stands behind bars at a court in Cairo on 15 May, 2014.

Al Jazeera said that Fahmy had renounced his Egyptian citizenship, in a move that paves the way for him to be deported under a presidential decree.

On Monday, Canadian Foreign Minister John Baird told the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation that Fahmy's release was "imminent". Baird did not elaborate, however, as to whether he meant hours or days.

A security source said on Sunday that Fahmy was expected to be released and deported to Canada within days. Egyptian authorities accuse Qatar-based Al Jazeera of being a mouthpiece of the Muslim Brotherhood, the Qatari-backed movement which President Abdel Fattah al-Sisi toppled in 2013 when he was Egypt's army chief.

French police arrest eight in anti-jihadi operation

PARIS, 3 Feb — French anti-terrorism police arrested eight people on Tuesday on suspicion of being part of a network linked to recruiting young people for jihad in Syria, Interior Minister Bernard Cazeneuve said.

The suspects, who can be held for up to 96 hours without charge, were arrested in the northern suburbs of Paris and the Lyon region, he said, according to remarks published on the ministry's Twitter feed.

"They are now in the hands of the police. It is a Syria issue," an official at the Paris prosecutor's office said.

The government estimates that about 1,300 French citizens have links to recruitment cells for Syria and Iraq, of which about 400 are already fighting alongside militants.

The arrests come after President Francois Hollande's Socialist government unveiled a raft of new security measures in response to attacks in Paris in January by homegrown Islamist militants in which 20 people were killed, including the three attackers.—Reuters

French troops kill around a dozen Islamist militants in Mali

DAKAR, 3 Feb — French forces in northern Mali have killed around a dozen Islamist militants in the region of the Adrar des Ifoghas mountains, France's defence ministry said on Monday. No French soldiers were killed in the attack which took place on Saturday night, the statement said.

Malian military sources said the French operation was conducted between Boureissa and Abeissa, some 120 km (75 miles) from the northern desert town of Kidal, a stronghold of Tuareg separatist rebels. The Islamist group was spotted by aerial surveillance, and engaged by French ground forces, one Malian source said.—Reuters

Iraqi cabinet approves draft law to set up national guard

BAGHDAD, 3 Feb — Iraq's cabinet approved on Tuesday two draft laws aimed at ending sectarian rifts: one creating a national guard and the other reforming government policies towards ex-members of the Baath party.

The bills will now be passed on to the parliament for approval, said Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi's spokesman Rafid Jaboori.

The creation of a national guard has been a key demand of Sunni politicians in order to fight Islamic State. Ending the ban on ex-members of the Baath party, which ruled Iraq before the US-led invasion in 2003, from public service has also been a key Sunni demand. — Reuters

WFP alarmed by pictures of ISIS logos on its Syria food parcels

GENEVA, 3 Feb — The UN World Food Programme (WFP) has declared itself "extremely concerned" by photographs showing its food parcels being handed out in Syria with Islamic State logos on them.

Images circulating on social media show food being distributed from cardboard boxes with "Islamic State in Syria" labels pasted over the WFP logo.

The militant Islamist group, which controls large swaths of Syria and northern Iraq, is known as Islamic State or Islamic State in Syria (ISIS).

"WFP condemns this manipulation of desperately needed food aid inside Syria," said Muhannad Hadi, WFP Emergency Regional Coordinator, in a statement late on Monday. The agency was trying to confirm the authenticity of those images, it said.

The photographs seemed to have been taken in Deir Hafr village, about 50 km from Aleppo, where WFP last August delivered enough food to feed 8,500 people for a month. WFP rations are distributed in many areas by the Syrian Arab Red Crescent (SARC). In September, ISIS raided SARC warehouses where food rations may have been stored, WFP said. — Reuters

Blast kills one in Alexandria, bombs found at Cairo airport

CAIRO, 3 Feb — A man was killed in a bomb blast in Egypt's second city of Alexandria on Tuesday, hours after two devices were discovered at Cairo airport and another went off in the centre of the capital without casualties, security sources said.

A bomb exploded in front of Alexandria's Mabaret Al-Asafra Hospital, killing a 27-year-old man and wounding three others, the city's assistant interior minister said.

Earlier, Cairo airport authorities tightened security after finding two unexploded bombs near the arrivals hall. Security officials were reviewing video footage to try to determine who planted them, security sources said.

State news agency MENA quoted Cairo security chief Khaled Youssef as saying a device that detonated in central Cairo was a sound bomb and that there were no casualties.

Islamist militants seeking to topple the government have carried out numerous bomb attacks on soldiers and police since the army toppled President Mohamed Mursi of the Muslim Brotherhood in July 2013.

Last week, Islamic State's Egyptian affiliate claimed responsibility for coordinated attacks in the Sinai Peninsula which killed more than 30 security personnel.

Egypt has been trying to project an image of stability ahead of an investment conference in the resort of Sharm el-Sheikh in March that the government hopes will generate ventures worth billions of dollars.

The bulk of attacks on security forces have occurred in the Sinai, which borders Israel and the Gaza Strip, but the insurgency has spread to other parts of Egypt, a US ally. Over the past year, police have frequently discovered homemade bombs planted near their vehicles and in public places in Cairo. Blast at Nigeria pro-Jonathan rally was female suicide bomber

Security personnel rush towards the site of a car bomb explosion near a stadium in the northeastern Nigerian city of Gombe on 2 Feb, 2015.—REUTERS

campaign rally was the work of a female suicide bomber, police said on Tuesday. The bomb exploded near a stadium in the northeastern Nigerian city of Gombe on Monday, setting a car ablaze, killing one person and wounding 18.

Gombe state police spokesman Fwaje Atajiri said by telephone that the bomb had been a female with explosives strapped to her, a sign it was the work of Islamist militant group Boko Haram, although no one has claimed responsibility.

Nigeria is due to hold a presidential election on 14 February, pitting the ruling People's Democratic Party's (PDP) Jonathan against former military ruler Muhammadu Buhari for the opposition All Progressives Congress (APC).

Boko Haram militants are stepping up their campaign of violence ahead of the election. The military repelled an attack by insurgents on the outskirts of the northeast's main city of Maiduguri on Sunday, their second assault in a week on a city they hope to make the capital of a breakaway Islamist state.—Reuters

Cuba's Fidel Castro appears in first photographs since August

HAVANA, 3 Feb — Photographs of former Cuban leader Fidel Castro, 88, appeared in official media on Monday for the first time since August, showing him slightly hunched over while seated, but appearing animated as he spoke with a student leader.

Speculation over Castro's health has intensified since the historic 17 December announcement by his younger brother, and current president, Raul Castro, and US President Barack Obama, that the two longtime adversaries would restore diplomatic ties.

Castro, who periodically writes a column, went silent after the announcement until finally commenting a week ago, when he offered lukewarm support for the pact his brother reached with Obama.

The pictures of Castro with student leader Randy Perdomo were taken on 23 January, according to Perdomo's account, which appeared with the photos on the website of the Communist Party newspaper Granma on Monday night.

Granma published 21 pictures of the two men talking, with Castro in various poses of engaged conversation, viewing a video and flipping through a newspaper.

A Brazilian theologian who met Castro last week said the former leader was in good health, appearing skinny but lucid.

Castro stepped down from power due to poor health, handing over to his brother provisionally in 2006 and definitively in 2008.

Though he receives visitors, he has not appeared in public for more than a year.—Reuters

Snow batters Northeast US for second time in week

NEW YORK / BOSTON, 3 Feb — A deadly winter snowstorm was forecast to lift on Monday night after walloping the Northeastern United States, forcing the delay of Boston's Super Bowl victory parade and snarling air traffic at several major airports.

The second major storm in less than a week pummeled residents from New York City to Boston with snow, freezing rain and gusty winds. Weather conditions were a factor in at least 10 deaths, including some in the Midwest where the storm hit heavily on Sunday into Monday.

Boston, already blanketed by 2 feet (60 cm) of snow from a blizzard last week and predicted to get a further foot, set a record for the snowiest seven-day period in the city's history. The 34.2 inches (87 cm) measured by 1 pm on Monday surpassed the 31.2 inches (79 cm) set in January 1996.

Deep snow prompted Mayor Marty Walsh to postpone by one day until Wednesday the parade to celebrate the New England Patriots' 28-24 win over the Seattle Seahawks in Sunday's Super Bowl. Jury selection for the federal trial of accused Boston Marathon bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev was also delayed until Wednesday.

Bradley Cooper says surprised by 'American Sniper' debate

REUTERS

BEVERLY HILLS, (California), 3 Feb — Bradley Cooper, who earned a best actor Oscar nomination for his performance as a deadly marksman in Clint Eastwood's "American Sniper," said on Monday that he did not foresee how the Iraq war biopic could become a charged political conversation.

"You never know when you make a movie if anybody's going to see it, so to have the audacity to think that it would cause any sort of effect at all would be pretty presumptuous," Cooper told reporters at the Academy Awards nominees luncheon.

"American Sniper," which tops the US box office and has so far grossed nearly $250 million (£166.3 million), tells the real-life story of late US Navy SEAL sharpshooter Chris Kyle, whose 160 kills in Iraq is considered the highest count ever in US military history. The film has been nominated for six Oscars including best picture. It has become a flashpoint in US public debate with some liberals and conservatives sparring over its portrayal of war, soldiers, and Eastwood's interpretation of the history leading up to the 2003 Iraq invasion.—Reuters

'Uptown Funk' holds onto British music chart top spot

LONDON, 3 Feb — "Uptown Funk" by English DJ and producer Mark Ronson secured a seventh week at the top of the British singles chart on Sunday, the Official Charts Company said.

The single, which features Hawaii-born singer Bruno Mars, outsold Irish artist Hozier's song about love and religion "Take me to Church", which came in second place, and "LA Love" by Fergie in third.

The top five was completed by "Lips are Movin'" by Meghan Trainor in fourth and new entry "Four Five Seconds" by Barbadian star Rihanna, which also features Kanye West and Paul McCartney. Ronson could not hold

Lindsay Lohan sues Fox for defamation over cocaine comments

NEW YORK, 3 Feb — Actress Lindsay Lohan and her mother Dina on Monday sued the Fox News Network, TV host Sean Hannity and commentator Michelle Fields for defamation over a comment by Fields accusing the Lohans of "doing cocaine" with each other. According to a complaint filed in a New York state court in Manhattan, Fields made the comment on Hannity's show on 4 February, 2014, two days after Oscar-winning actor Philip Seymour Hoffman died of a heroin overdose. Fields' comment came in a segment on the show where guests talked about celebrities like Whitney Houston, Elvis Presley and Amy Winehouse, whose deaths were linked to substance abuse, the complaint said. The Lohans said Fields declared it a "matter of fact" that they used cocaine together and said the comment and show's theme amounted to a "totally irresponsible and malicious innuendo" to suggest that Lindsay Lohan, 28, might be next to join the celebrity "obituary list." Fox News, a unit of Twenty-First Century Fox Inc, said in a statement: "Our legal team has not reviewed this yet so we cannot comment." The lawsuit seeks unspecified compensatory and punitive damages for defamation and intentional infliction of emotional distress, and to stop Fox News from distributing the 4 February broadcast. Once one of Hollywood's most sought-after young actresses, Lindsay Lohan has starred in films such as 1998's "The Parent Trap" and 2004's "Mean Girls." But has in recent years she has become known for her legal troubles and rehabilitation stints. Mark Heller, a lawyer for the Lohans, said the defendants had yet to apologise for, or retract Fields' comment.—Reuters

Whitney Houston's daughter 'fighting for her life' — family statement

ATLANTA, 3 Feb — The daughter of late pop star Whitney Houston is fighting for her life two days after being found unresponsive in a bathtub at her suburban Atlanta home, her family said on Monday.

Bobbi Kristina Brown, Houston's 21-year-old daughter with singer Bobby Brown, was rushed to a hospital in Roswell, Georgia, Saturday morning after her husband and a friend found her in the tub and her husband performed CPR.

"Bobbi Kristina is fighting for her life and is surrounded by immediate family," the Houston family said in a statement. "As her father already stated, we are asking you to honour our request for privacy during this difficult time."

Citing an unidentified source close to the family, CNN reported she was in a medically induced coma and breathing with the help of a ventilator.

Her brain function will not be known until doctors reduce the sedatives she is receiving, the source told CNN.

Tara Landy, a spokeswoman for North Fulton Hospital, declined to comment on Brown's condition.

A police report released on Monday said officers responded to the home in reference to a drowning. The narrative of the incident offered no information about the young woman's condition or the circumstances leading to her being found.

Officer Lisa Holland, spokeswoman for the Roswell Police Department, said a search warrant and recording of the 911 call in the case would not be made public until police finish their investigation.

Veteran actors share gratitude for Oscar nominations

BEVERLY HILLS, 3 Feb — As the nominees for this year's Oscars gathered at a luncheon in Beverly Hills on Monday, industry veterans took the opportunity to reminisce on their journey, some for the first time, to the Academy Awards platform.

"This nomination would not have come when I was in my twenties, because I was figuring out how to do this," said JK Simmons, best supporting actor favourite for "Whiplash."

His sentiments were echoed by fellow nominees including Michael Keaton, Steve Carell, Laura Dern and Reese Witherspoon, all of whom have been acting for more than two decades.

"At 46, it's really beautiful, I can appreciate how meaningful it is," said "Boyhood" best supporting actress contender Arquette, a first-time Oscar nominee.

Simmons and Arquette joined more than 200 nominees across all branches of the film industry at the annual power lunch hosted by the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences, organizers of the glitzy Oscars ceremony on 22 February, hosted by Neil Patrick Harris.

Most of this year's 20 acting contenders are veterans of the film industry, who shared their appreciation at being recognised for Hollywood's top honour at later stages in their career.

"The word grateful, I'm just going to keep saying it," said best actor

Shanghai's mayor had said last week that basic construction should be completed in 2015, while Chief Executive Officer Robert Iger had also affirmed in April that the park would open in 2015, the WSJ added.

Beijing will start on the construction of a Universal Studios theme park this year, which will be open to the public in 2019, the China Daily newspaper said.

Neither Walt Disney's spokeswoman nor Shanghai Disney were immediately available to comment on the report.—Reuters

Work begins to build interim nuclear soil storage in Fukushima

FUKUSHIMA, 3 Feb — Workers on Tuesday launched the construction of interim facilities near the crippled Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant to store contaminated soil and other waste collected during radiation cleanup activities within Fukushima Prefecture.

The storage facilities on around 16 square kilometres of land in the seaside towns of Okuma and Futaba are expected to be capable of storing 30 million tons of soil and other radioactive waste, such as burned ash. They are not for storing tainted waste generated within the crippled plant. Construction work has been delayed due to difficulties in obtaining agreement from the local municipalities and residents.

The government, which had hoped to begin moving radioactive waste to the interim storage sites in January, now plans to begin doing so by 11 March, the fourth anniversary of the 2011 earthquake-tsunami disaster that triggered the nuclear crisis.

The government plans to spend 1.1 trillion yen on the project.

On Tuesday morning, work began to prepare outside storage yards on some 2 hectares of land. But it remains unclear when the government will be able to start setting up other key storage buildings, an environment ministry official said.

The waste to be temporarily kept at the sites will be permanently disposed of outside the prefecture within 30 years, as requested by the prefectural government in accepting the facilities. But the issue of finding permanent disposal sites remains unresolved.

Meanwhile, Tokyo Electric Power Co on Tuesday resumed part of the decommissioning work at its Fukushima Daiichi complex after a two-week hiatus in the wake of two separate fatal accidents last month.

The company had suspended all of work at the site on 21 January to conduct safety checks following the deaths of two workers at the Daiichi and nearby Daini site.

Eto'o "lacked respect" in missing training, says coach

MILAN, 3 Feb — Sampdoria coach Sinisa Mihajlovic said forward Samuel Eto'o had shown a "serious lack of respect" by missing an extra training session on Monday following their 5-1 Serie A defeat at Torino.

Mihajlovic had scheduled two training sessions on Monday, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, as a reprisal for his team's performance.

But Eto'o, who only joined Sampdoria last week from English club Everton, left after the morning session without speaking to the coach and did not return, Italian media reported. "I don't know where he's gone and I don't know what the club intends to do," Mihajlovic was quoted as saying in the Gazzetta dello Sport.

"The only thing that is certain is that the player did not give me any explanation; I consider it to be a serious lack of respect to myself and the rest of the team.

"That's the only truth today, the rest is pure fantasy.

"There hasn't been a row with Eto'o, simply because you need two people to have an argument and he has done everything on his own," he added. "I haven't seen him since the morning training and haven't spoken to him either."

Mihajlovic, a notoriously tough taskmaster who has revived Sampdoria's fortunes in his 15 months in charge, said he was ashamed by

Super Bowl draws US record 114.4 million TV audience

NEW YORK, 3 Feb — The New England Patriots' heart-stopping 28-24 victory over the Seattle Seahawks in the Super Bowl delivered the largest television audience in US history with an average of 114.4 million viewers, network NBC said.

Sunday's National Football League championship game in Glendale, Arizona, topped last year's record audience of 112.2 million live viewers on network Fox.

The figures compiled by Nielsen are fast national data and could be revised later.

Viewership peaked to 120.8 million between 9:45 and 10 pm EST (0245-0300 GMT) during the Patriots' game-winning fourth-quarter drive, Comcast Corp-owned NBC said.

Pop star Katy Perry's halftime performance with rapper Missy Elliott and rocker Lenny Kravitz also scored 118.5 million viewers, 3 million more than last year's show featuring singer Bruno Mars and Red Hot Chili Peppers.

The Super Bowl is the most expensive TV programme for advertisers, who were willing to pay up to $4.5 million for a 30-second commercial this year.

Nielsen revised down the Super Bowl's rating - the percentage of households watching the game on TV — to 47.5 from 49.7. That makes it the fourth-highest rated Super Bowl as measured in percentage of households since 1986.

Quiet day at the sales as deadline day lacks drama

LONDON, 3 Feb — The last-minute shopping spree often associated with the closing of the January transfer window failed to materialise on Monday as Europe's top clubs largely kept their powder dry.

Even in England, where the 20 Premier League can usually be relied upon to splash some of the cash they earn from a mega TV deal, trading was unusually light, leaving presenters of Sky Sports News' much-hyped deadline day coverage desperately searching for something to talk about.

Leaders Chelsea spent 35 million euros (26.42 million pounds) to bring Colombian Juan Cuadrado to Stamford Bridge, recouping most of that by selling Andre Schuerrle to Bundesliga side VfL

Wolfsburg, but Manchester United, Manchester City and Arsenal did no significant late business.

English champions City signed Ivory Coast striker Wilfried Bony from Swansea City last month for 25 million pounds ($37.6 million) while United's only arrival of note was former Barcelona keeper Victor Valdes on a free transfer. While a few late deals could push the total January spend in the Premier League past the 100 million pounds mark, the head-spinning transfer frenzy, for now at least, appears to have been replaced by a calmer, more measured approach.

UEFA's Financial Fair Play rules have made it less likely that clubs sign players without first off-loading some of their squad, stalling the usual merry-go-round.

Transfers of players from the Premier League to other European leagues is also hindered by the huge salaries.

The reluctance of club managers to part with players at such a delicate phase of the season has also become an increasing factor in the mid-season window.

While Premier League spending this season is running at around 900 million pounds, the vast majority of that dates back to pre-season when squads were being assembled.

Liverpool, chasing a top-four finish in the Premier League, failed to add to their squad in January, while Arsenal limited their activity to Legia Warsaw youngster Krystian Bielik and Gabriel from Villarreal.

Loan deals such as former England winger Aaron Lennon joining Everton from Tottenham Hotspur and high-flying Southampton taking Serbia's Filip Djuricic from Benfica and Eljero Elia from Werder Bremen caught the eye.

However, managers of the clubs battling against relegation were left frustrated in their attempts to strengthen.

None more so than Queens Park Rangers boss Harry Redknapp, one of England's most adept deadline day dealers.

Apart from Mauro Zarate from West Ham United, Redknapp failed to bolster QPR's squad, having tried and failed with a late attempt to sign striker Emmanuel Adebayor from Tottenham.

Speaking to the BBC,

Colombia's Juan Cuadrado celebrates after scoring a penalty goal against Japan during their 2014 World Cup Group C soccer match at the Pantanal arena in Cuiaba on 24 June, 2014.—REUTERS former Hull City chairman Paul Duffen explained the lack of January activity.

"Getting players out in the market, there are problems such as liquidity. Clubs don't have it, apart from Chelsea today," he said. "There is the danger in January for a player that if it goes wrong, it could harm their career.

"They could find they go on-loan at a club who get relegated and end up in a worse situation than they were."

McIlroy prepares for multi-million dollar courtroom battle

LONDON, 3 Feb — Rory McIlroy may be able to stay calm on the golf course but the world number one must hold his nerve in the courtroom when a multi-million dollar legal battle with his former agents gets underway in Dublin on Tuesday.

The 25-year-old terminated his contract with Horizon Sports Management in September 2013 to form his own management company, prompting a protracted legal dispute that is expected to last six to eight weeks in Dublin.

The Northern Irishman signed a deal with Horizon until 2017, with the Dublin-based company expected to receive a percentage of his financial dealings.

After signing a number of lucrative sponsorship agreements, including a deal with Nike in early 2013 worth a guaranteed $100 million (67 million pounds) over five years, McIlroy decided that his relationship with Horizon was no longer in his best interests.

McIlroy, who may have to spend up to six days in the Dublin courtroom, is suing his former agents over the "unconscionable" contract he signed, while Horizon are counter-suing him on the grounds that he owes them millions of dollars in commission on contracts up to 2017.

McIlroy said before last week's Dubai Desert

Classic that he would have to do his "homework" on a "very tedious and nasty process".

However, the four-time major winner has been seemingly unaffected on the course.

In his last seven European Tour events, McIlroy, who won the British Open and the US PGA titles last year, has claimed four wins and three runner-up finishes.

McIlroy shot a final round 70 to win the Dubai Desert Classic title by three shots on Sunday, finishing on a tournament record equalling 22-under-par.

"Let me enjoy this win for an hour or two," McIlroy told reporters after claiming his 10th European Tour success.

"It's not the best thing to be looking forward to, but it will be all over in a few weeks."

Dubai was McIlroy's final European Tour appearance before he starts his preparations for April's US Masters in Augusta.

"It's important to put in some good performances... and feel what it's like in the heat of the moment, because that's when you really know how your game is and how it holds up under some pressure," McIlroy said.

However, the world number one will have to deal with the pressure of the courtroom first.

Bony steps into Drogba's big boots at Nations Cup

MALABO, 3 Feb — Wilfried Bony was the main man on Sunday as Ivory Coast beat Algeria 3-1 in the African Nations Cup to set up a semi-final clash with Democratic Republic of Congo.

Ivory Coast are contesting their first international competition without former talisman Didier Drogba since the 2002 Nations Cup.

There were signs that they missed the Chelsea striker, who retired from international duty after last year's World Cup, during the group stage as they stuttered to draws against Guinea and Mali.

"If Drogba is not here it's not because of us but because of him," coach Herve Renard told reporters. "However if you lose Drogba and find Bony you're doing pretty well."

Against Algeria, Bony demonstrated that after flattering to deceive for the national side he is finally ready to take up Drogba's mantle.

The new Manchester City signing scored two fine headers, from a Max Gradel cross and a Yaya Toure free kick, ensuring the Ivorians progressed to the semi-finals.

"Bony was the top scorer in England in 2014," Renard added. "When you say that, you understand everything."

"Things are much easier when you have players of his and Gervinho's quality."

Gervinho, who scored a late third for Ivory Coast, also acknowledged that Bony's form was helping the team forget Drogba.

"We can't think about Drogba anymore," he said. "Bony is a different style of player he's a player who brings us another dimension.

"He has a personality that works well with Ivory Coast he works hard for us and it suits us."
