International Monetary Fund trims Myanmar growth outlook

By Ye Myint

YANGON, 14 Feb—The International Monetary Fund revised its projection for Myanmar’s real economic growth that was forecast at the October annual meeting at 8.5 percent in 2014 to a decelerated 7.8 percent this fiscal year from 8.3 percent in previous fiscal year.

The revision is due to slower growth in the agricultural sector, said Yang Yongzheng who led a recent IMF team’s visit to Myanmar from 28 January to 5 February, in a statement released on Wednesday on conclusion of a nine-day mission to the country.

The IMF also warned of inflation which is forecast to pick up to around 6 percent year-on-year in 2014-2015 FY, up from 5.8 percent in 2013-2014 FY.

It also pointed out the country’s net international reserves fell to $4.5 billion at end-December due to an increase in the trade deficit to 5.5 percent of GDP caused by a 25% rise in imports in April-December while export growth was flat.

The country’s economic outlook is “favourable” over the medium term, but there has been a noticeable increase in downside risks for near term, Yang warned in the statement, noting fiscal risks that are likely to result from spending pressures, including a potential large increase in public-sector wages that will lead to a rise in inflation expectations.

“The external current account deficit could widen further, and shortfalls in foreign direct investments and other capital inflows could result in slower reserve accumulation,” Yang added.

He noted that fiscal decentralization should refrain from more fund allotments to region/state governments without a corresponding devolution of responsibilities, also highlighting the importance of strengthened natural resources revenue management.

The IMF in the statement welcomed the country's introduction of treasury securities auctions last month, describing it as a move to establish a non-inflationary alternative to the CBM deficit financing and helping develop the financial market.

It noted that maintaining a flexible exchange rate is critical for Myanmar to absorb external shocks and build up its international reserve buffer, urging state-owned banks to take part in the auctions and interbank trading.

The Fund acknowledged the progress modernizing the financial sector and strengthening supervision and stressed the need of implementing modernized regulations given the expected entry of foreign banks.

"The CBM should employ measures that would prevent excessive flows and implement rules on foreign exchange lending that avoid excessive risk-taking. The issuance of new domestic licenses for policy banks should be carefully controlled to minimize risks," it added.

Abe visits tsunami-hit Iwate, Miyagi, says rebuilding at new stage

KESENUMA, (Japan), 14 Feb — Prime Minister Shinzo Abe on Saturday visited Ofunato in Iwate Prefecture and Kesenuma in Miyagi Prefecture, both of which were hit hard by the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami, and said he feels rebuilding efforts are shifting to a “new stage.”

The trip to the northeastern Japan region ravaged by the natural disaster was Abe’s first since last October and is meant to demonstrate his desire to expedite reconstruction work ahead of the fourth anniversary of the deadly earthquake and tsunami on 11 March.

“I felt firsthand that rebuilding was finally moving to a new stage,” Abe told reporters after inspecting in the port city of Kesenuma a garment manufacturer founded after the disaster and a public housing facility that had just begun accepting people displaced by the tsunami.

Abe suggested that the government will focus on helping job creation and assisting efforts to provide mental health care to those affected by the disaster.

Survivors of WWII Manila battle seek apology from Japan

MANILA, 14 Feb — Survivors and descendants of the victims of a major battle in Manila during World War II pressed Japan on Saturday to apologize for atrocities committed by Japanese forces that left tens of thousands dead.

Juan Jose Rocha, head of Memorare Manila 1945 Foundation, a group of Battle of Manila survivors and descendants of noncombatant victims, said during a memorial ceremony that an apology by Japan “is long overdue.”

“The purpose of our group is not to recriminate, nor to seek compensation, but just to commemorate and request Japan to recognize what they did here,” Rocha said at the ceremony held in front of a monument erected by his group 20 years ago in memory of the 100,000 civilians who died during the battle in Manila that lasted from 3 February to 3 March, 1945.

Rocha said around 70,000 of the civilians who died were “victims of heinous crimes or massacres” perpetrated by the Japanese forces, while the remaining 30,000 died in crossfire between US-led Allied and Japanese forces. The battle ended almost three years of Japanese military occupation of the Philippines.

Rocha, who was 7 years old at the time, said among the noncombatant victims were his mother and 13 other relatives.

“The war is over. We are close friends now with Japan, as we should be. But history is history,” Rocha said.

“We ask Japan, please stop trying to rewrite history. Come to terms with your past,” he said.

In his remarks during the ceremony, Kazuya Asakawa of the Japanese nonprofit organization Bridge For Peace lamented that most Japanese are not aware of the human tragedies of the Battle of Manila.

“Learning history is the first step. But it’s not enough. For more than 10 years, Bridge for Peace has been interviewing survivors, Japanese veterans, former Japanese soldiers, and victims of the massacres,” Asakawa said.

He urged the next generation of Filipinos and Japanese to hold further dialogue and said the friendship of the two peoples “will make the future.”

Ricardo Jose, a history professor at the University of the Philippines, said the commitment to remember the events of the Battle of Manila is not intended to rekindle feelings of anger but to give value and meaning to the lives that were lost.

“In looking back at the past, at what happened 70 years ago, we also look towards the future so that these tragedies will never ever be repeated,” he said.

Speaking at the ceremony, former Philippine President Fidel Ramos said that more than 1.1 million Filipinos died during World War II and irreparable damage was inflicted on the Philippines’ cultural heritage, especially in Manila.

Bilateral ties tested as Indonesia plans to execute Australians in drug cases

JAKARTA, 14 Feb — Bilateral ties between Indonesia and Australia were tested once again following plans of the Indonesian government to execute two Australian nationals for smuggling drugs into Indonesian territory.

Indonesian authorities are finalizing preparations related to the executions against the two Australian citizens, Myuran Sukumaran and Andrew Chan, as their pleas for life were rejected by a local court in Bali earlier this month.

The executions will likely be conducted in the near future in a place outside Bali where they and the rest of their gang, Bali Nine, were caught smuggling 8.2 kilogram of heroin worth 40 billion rupiah (about 3.1 million US dollars) into the country in 2005.

“In line with the calls submitted by several parties in Bali, the execution should not be conducted there. We are still studying places for their execution outside Bali,” Sudjonggo, head of Kerobokan jail where the two Australian convicts were imprisoned, was quoted as saying by local media on Friday.

Meanwhile, Australian Foreign Minister Julie Bishop told local media that Australian tourists might boycott Indonesia should the executions take place.

“I think the Australian people will demonstrate their deep disapproval of this action, including by making decisions about where they wish to holiday,” she told Fairfax radio Friday.

She had earlier said she would not rule out recalling Australia’s ambassador if the executions went ahead.

Responding to the developing situations concerning the execution plan, an Indonesian official at the foreign ministry said that Indonesia still regards Australia as its friendly country.—Xinhua

6.2-magnitude quake jolts off Taipei, delays trains

TAIPEI / BEIJING, 14 Feb — An earthquake measuring 6.2 on the Richter scale jolted southern Taipei on Saturday morning, delaying trains that affected nearly 3,000 passengers.

The 6.2-magnitude earthquake wobbled areas off Taitung in eastern Taipei at 4:06 am on Saturday (Beijing Time), according to the China Earthquake Networks Centre.

The epicentre was monitored at 22.6 degrees north latitude and 121.5 degrees east longitude, or sea area as 33.6 km east of Taitung. The quake struck at a depth of 18.4 km, the centre said.

There have been no casualties in the first earthquake above the 6.0-magnitude that hit Taipei this year but railways operator said later at least 36 train services have been delayed as of 9:30 am due to the earthquake.

All railway facilities were checked before normal operations resumed, which led to delays of up to 45 minutes, the railways company said, adding there will be no compensation for the passengers because the delays were caused by a natural disaster.

Taipei’s earthquake monitoring department said that the quake can be felt to different extent in all cities felt to varied intensities. An unnamed tourist near the Sun Moon Lake in central Taipei told Xinhua that the bed was shaking for about half a minute. The quake was not clearly felt in Taipei.

Jeb Bush hands out cash to win allies ahead of 2016 election

WASHINGTON, 14 Feb — Former Florida Governor Jeb Bush said on Friday he is giving out more than $100,000 to fellow Republicans, in a sign that he is banking on his fundraising prowess to build allies across the country ahead of a potential White House bid.

The brother of former President George W Bush and son of former President George HW Bush has emerged as an early front-runner in what could be a crowded Republican field in the 2016 presidential election.

Bush's political committee, Right to Rise, announced it was handing out $10,000 to Republican state parties in Iowa, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Nevada and Florida — states that will be among the first to hold nominating contests in the 2016 primaries that decide the party candidates for the election.

His committee also gave out $5,200, the legal maximum, to 14 Republican lawmakers. Among the recipients: Senator Chuck Grassley and Representative David Young of Iowa; Senator Kelly Ayotte and Representative Frank Guinta of New Hampshire;

Japan, US to cooperate for success of Abe's US trip

TOKYO, 14 Feb — Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida and US Deputy Secretary of State Antony Blinken agreed on Friday the two governments will cooperate for success of a planned visit by Prime Minister Shinzo Abe to the United States, the Foreign Ministry said.

The two governments are arranging for Abe's official trip between late April and early May for a summit with US President Barack Obama, according to diplomatic sources.

In a meeting with Blinken in Tokyo, Kishida expressed sympathy over the death of US aid worker Kayla Mueller who had been held captive by Islamic State militants, the ministry said.

Referring to the recent killing of two Japanese men taken hostage by Islamic State, an extremist organization operating in Iraq and Syria, Kishida said Japan "will never give in to terrorism" and that it will promote the fight against terrorism in partnership with the international community.

He expressed appreciation for US cooperation and solidarity over the course of Japan's bid, which ended in failure, to rescue the two hostages.

In the meeting, part of which was open to the media, Kishida said that with this year marking the 70th anniversary of the end of World War II, Japan will continue its commitment to peace and stability in the region and the world as a robust ally of the United States.

Blinken said that especially in the 70th anniversary year, the alliance "sets an incredibly powerful example for the rest of the world" about what is possible from the two allies working together for a common cause.

Kishida and Blinken also discussed the situation in the Asia-Pacific region and the crisis in Ukraine, according to the ministry.

In a separate meeting, Blinken and Vice Foreign Minister Akitaka Saiki reaffirmed bilateral and trilateral cooperation with South Korea in dealing with issues involving North Korea such as its missile and nuclear weapons development, as well as Pyongyang's past abductions of Japanese nationals.

Blinken was on the last leg of his three-nation East Asian tour that has taken him to South Korea and China. It is his first overseas trip since taking up the post on 9 January.

5,000 Hezbollah, Iranian fighters spearhead battles near Israeli borders

DAMASCUS, 14 Feb — As many as 5,000 fighters of the Lebanese Hezbollah backed by Iranian and Syrian fighters are spearheading the current battles against the rebels in southern Syria, close to the borders with the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights, a monitoring group reported on Saturday.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said the battle in southern Syria, specifically the triangle between southern the capital Damascus, southern Qunaitera and northern Daraa provinces, aimed at capturing key hills and towns that fell to the rebels in recent months.

It said another 5,000 fighters could also join the battle upon the request of those fighters to consolidate their positions, mainly in Qunaitera. Meanwhile, the Syrian National Coalition, the main opposition umbrella in exile, criticized the international community's inaction toward the battles in the southern region, in terms of the overt involvement of Hezbollah and other Iranian militants in the battles. The wide-scale offensive in southern Syria started last Sunday, and a Syrian officer told the Syrian state TV last week that the battles there are fought in cooperation with Hezbollah. Both the opposition activists and state media outlets acknowledged the advancement of the Syrian troops and its allies in that region. Military experts believe that opening the southern front near Israel is part of Hezbollah and Iran's response to the presumed Israeli attack that killed an Iranian general and Hezbollah fighters in Qunaitera last month.—Xinhua

Obama denounces 'outrageous murders' of three US Muslims

WINSTON-SALEM, (NC), 14 Feb — US President Barack Obama on Friday described the deaths of three young Muslims gunned down in North Carolina this week as "brutal and outrageous murders" and said no one in the United States should be targeted for their religion.

The president's statement came as the US Justice Department said it would join the FBI's preliminary inquiry to determine whether the man accused in the Chapel Hill shooting on Tuesday broke any federal laws, including hate crime laws.

"No one in the United States of America should ever be targeted because of who they are, what they look like, or how they worship," Obama said in a statement, offering his condolences to the victims' families.

The families had called on Obama to insist that federal authorities investigate whether the murder suspect, 46-year-old paralegal student Craig Stephen Hicks, was motivated by hatred towards the victims because they were Muslim.

Police seized more than a dozen firearms and a large amount of ammunition from his home, according to search warrants filed on Friday, WRAL-TV reported.

Newlywed Deah Shaddy Barakat, 23, a University of North Carolina dental student, his wife, Yusor Mohammad Abu-Salha, 21, and her sister, Razan Mohammad Abu-Salha, 19, a student at North Carolina State University, were killed in a condominium about two miles (three km) from the UNC campus.

According to the warrants, a friend of the victims' stopped police and directed them to the condo, where authorities found Barakat dead and bleeding from his head in the front doorway, the television station reported.

One of the sisters was found in the kitchen and the other in its doorway, according to WRAL-TV.

On Thursday, Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan criticized Obama and other US leaders for their silence about the incident, which has garnered international attention and left some US Muslims feeling concerned about their safety.

United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon on Friday praised the three victims, who were all involved in humanitarian aid work, as representing the best values of global citizenship and said he was deeply moved by scenes of thousands of people mourning their deaths.

A Justice Department spokeswoman said its Civil Rights Division and the US Attorney's Office for the Middle District of North Carolina would participate in the FBI inquiry announced in the case on Thursday evening.

Muslim advocates on Friday called the inquiries a key first step towards the full federal investigation they are seeking.

In a separate investigation, local police have cited a parking dispute as Hicks' motive but said they were also looking into whether religious hatred played a role.

Neighbours said Hicks, who posted anti-religion messages and a photo of a gun he said belonged to him on his Facebook page, was known in the condo community as someone prone to grow angry over parking troubles and noise.

Mohammad Abu-Salha, the father of the two female victims, told CNN that his daughter Yusor had said Hicks made her feel uncomfortable after she moved into a neighbouring condo where her new husband lived.

Curable if treated in good time

By Aung Khin

One child is diagnosed with cancer every three minutes somewhere in the world. International Childhood Cancer Day on February 15 is dedicated to the more than the estimated 250,000 children diagnosed with cancer each year worldwide. It is not like other commemorative day, but a day for people around the world to stand up and speak out for kids with cancer, survivors and their families.

Cancer is horrible for people of any age, and it is especially so for kids and their families. It is estimated that childhood cancer has an incidence of more than 175,000 cases per year in the world, with an approximate mortality rate of 96,000 per year— 80 percent in the developing world.

Many developed countries have also unfortunately seen a slow increase of childhood cancer rates each year. In the United States, an estimated 15,780 children and adolescents ages 0 to 19 were diagnosed with cancer in 2014.

The most common cancers in children are leukemia (34 percent), brain tumors (23 percent), and lymphomas (12 percent). Pediatric oncology is the branch of medicine concerned with the diagnosis and treatment of cancer in children.

According to the 2014 report of US National Library of Medicine, an estimated 85 to 92 percent of Myanmar children with cancer are undiagnosed or not receiving treatment. Abandonment of treatment is as high as 60 percent.

Many Myanmar families cannot afford the costs for treatment and supportive care. More measures are needed to support development of preventive, diagnostic, curative and palliative care for children's cancer in Myanmar from the outset.

Local and international partnerships are essential in the interim to support and provide assistance to Myanmar children who are suffering from cancer— a curable disease if treated early.

The 60-year old papier mâché artisan rejected the recent report in a weekly-journal that the Burmese folk art of papier mâché is facing extinction because the toy market in Myanmar is increasingly dominated by imported plastic toys and stuffed animals.

Myanmar's papier

mâché toy artisans, including U Kyin Soe, who consider the demand for papier mâché toys at pagoda festivals as a reliable barometer for the future of the traditional folk art have seen a decrease in demand for papier mâché animals, but not cows, at the festivals.

Some traditional toys such as jockeys, dolls, nurses, zawgyi alchemists with supernatural powers, zebras, dogs, and elephants have even disappeared from the markets.

But the papier mâché cows are in greater than ever at pagoda festivals that attract mostly people from rural areas, said U Kyin Soe as he worked his wonder with waste paper from a weekly journal and home-made glue to trans-

And demand for cow toys at the shops at the famed Shwedagon Pagoda remains as high as ever, said U Kyin Soe who supplied his art works to the shops there before he moved to Bago, about 50 miles north-east of Yangon.

The traditional cow toys attract not only local children but also children shops near the pagoda and to customers who order custom-made toys directly from him.

"I have to store cow toys from U Kyin Soe during the rainy season to sell them to visitors in the opening season because the demand is high then," said U Maung Hla, who has opened a souvenir shop near the Hinthagon Pagoda and is one of the main customers of U Kyin Soe.

The artisans now generally make their papier mâché toys with used paper from weekly journals because it is easier to find that raw material than paper cement bags, which have also been used.

But U Kyin Soe doesn't mind the varied tastes.

The Outcomes of 3rd MDCF and New Resolution: towards Sustainable Development Goals after Millennium Development Goals

Nanda Hmun
Director-General
Ministry of Culture

Since Myanmar is about to embark on the next phase of its remarkable journey to the democratic state, a journey that has propelled it to the top tier of the Dream of Myanmar people and which will lift hundreds of people out of poverty in a remarkably short period of time. This new transformation with firm destination, a clear roadmap, and a deep sense of responsibility has undertaken with Three Waves: Myanmar's first wave of reform dealt with the introduction of a multi-party democratic system and the transition from the old to a new system, while the second wave of reform put emphasis on strategies for executive, economic, political and social reforms which have been supported by the international community. The Third Wave calls for the emergence of a new, strong democracy alongside higher living standard for the people.

Moreover, the political reform is the most critical and the most subtle of all, it has been called by the President on the government bodies and the public to cooperate in order to avoid internal conflicts similar to those of some countries which are in a transitional period. Since Myanmar has been left behind by the lengthy conflicts and instability further than others in terms of development, political parties are urged to avoid confrontation and enter into negotiation as a gesture of practicing political culture for a stable and peaceful political reform. With regard to the measures being taken in line with the Framework on Economic and Social Reform, changes in taxation systems, alleviation of some trade and investment rules, arrangement for the launch of an e-government system and projects for rural development and poverty alleviation are being called for.

Most international organizations expressed on Myanmar's transition in 2011, following decades of isolation, and the way it embarked on an unprecedented reform process, raising hopes for a new democracy. These reforms have been welcomed by the international community along with the rising levels of aid. These Cooperations of Development Partners supports are helping Myanmar to reduce inequality, provide essential services, build resilience, and promote sustainable investment.

By aiming for higher quality, more inclusive, and more sustainable growth and those Reforms, which outline the reforms needed to reach the destination. These reforms are ambitious to overcome those challenges of Myanmar since its Independence. Keeping its financial stability, environmental sustainability, and the global rules of the game through those forum for this kind of cooperation, made a strengthened partnership with Myanmar and its Development Partners. They are in fact part of aspirations that will secure the "Myanmar dream" for the next generation.

The initiatives of the government by adopting a people-centered approach in line with the Framework on Economic and Social Reform (FESR) were done by reforming the 10 priority areas such as finance and revenue, relaxation of restrictions on trade and foreign investment, development of the private sector, education and health sectors, food security and development of the agricultural sector, transparency in government, the mobile phone and internet systems, and development of the basic infrastructure. The administrative and management reforms as the third stage of the reform process is now being undertaken. In order to help achieve economic growth and raise the living standard for all citizens, the government is striving to foster good governance and promote clean government throughout the country.

Various reforms were undertaken within twenty one months of its assumption of duty. Because of these reforms, the international community has made significant changes in their respective policies towards Myanmar, most visibly in the last six months. Starting from 2013 Myanmar Development Cooperation Forum (MDCF) was held mainly because the international donors who wish to help and partner with Myanmar in its reform process would like to know the priority sectors and areas in the country's reform strategy and development plans.

We have witnessed that the government's economic policies focusing on the development of the agricultural sector, creation of a modern industrialized country, narrowing the development gap between States and Regions as well as urban and rural areas, establishing an accurate and reliable statistical data base, and improving the statistical data collection system are on their right tracks. While cooperating with donor countries and organizations in accordance with the five principles of the Paris Declaration—ownership, alignment, harmonization, result-oriented, and mutual accountability—the importance of the effectiveness of development assistance for developing countries are mainly prior.

We also convince the improvements in the living standard of citizens only when all stakeholders in the social and economic sectors work together. These stakeholders may come from the government, the general public, the private sector, civil society organizations ranging from local non-governmental organizations (INGOs) to international non-governmental organizations (INGOs), and the international donor community. While taking the driver's seat, all ministries have been urged to effectively utilize the development assistance receive in ways that will help achieve the millennium development goals and strengthen the relationship with the development partners. In order to ensure the effectiveness of the development assistance, a monitoring and evaluation mechanism has to be instituted. By regularly sharing information about the projects and the programs that are being implemented with development partners will enhance economic growth, and utilize the technological knowhow and resources, received from the international community.

One of the Milestones of the achievements during these years is that government can hold the First Myanmar Development Cooperation Forum which was held from 19 to 20 January 2013, the Second Myanmar Development Cooperation Forum from 27 to 28 January 2014 and the Third on 7 to 8 February 2015 respectively in Nay Pyi Taw. At the 1st MDCF, "Nay Pyi Taw Accord for Effective Development Cooperation" was adopted and made public. The Nay Pyi Taw Accord includes both the Government of Myanmar and development partners' commitments and obligations. It is observed that the Government's commitments under Nay Pyi Taw Accord are also in conformity with the current reform processes being undertaken by the Government. Moreover, to strengthen cooperation with global partners to ensure better public service delivery, President U Thein Sein highlighted in his Speech at the 1st MDCF on the National Comprehensive Development Plan (NCDP), which consists of a set of four five-year plans covering a twenty year period from 2011-2031, as part of the second stage of the reform process to enhance economic development and raise the living standard of Myanmar people. The 1st MDCF was held with the Theme: "Partnerships for Actions, Implementations for Success".

During the 2nd MDCF, to maintain and accelerate the momentum of development processes, the theme of Forum was chosen as "Accelerating Actions for Progress through Enhancing Inclusive Coordination". By that theme, we are committed to accelerate our progress with actions; we will achieve tangible results and outcomes through enhancing coordination between the government and development partners, and making our development cooperation to become more inclusive process. Since in 2014, Myanmar has projected 9.1% GDP growth rate for the fiscal year 2014-

2015. In order to achieve this targeted growth rate, we systematically managed and utilized development aids and concessional loans, technical assistance, attract local and foreign investment which will support the development of our country. The Government has also formulated first five-year national development plan as well as Myanmar Comprehensive Development Plan. In this regard, these can help our Development Partners to better align their aids, supports and assistance with the country's development priorities and plans, to continue cooperating with the Government in our reform processes and make their development aids more effective.

Even during its 30 months of assuming the Office, the Government has undertaken four phases of reform process with momentum; namely political reforms, economic reforms, public administration reforms and private sector development reforms. Due to the first phase of political reform measures, favorable conditions for national reconciliation have been created and mutual understanding with the ethnic minority groups has been built in our country.

The second phase of economic and social reforms has been implemented with the people-centered approach. Due to these reform processes, we have achieved good socio-economic development outcome for our country. We have also achieved 7.3% GDP growth rate in 2012-2013 which exceeded more than projected growth rate of 6.7%. This is one of the tangible results of economic development achieved through successful cooperation and collaborations among the State, our People and our development partners.

Here again in 2015, on its remarkable reform process and tackling with its challenges, we are able to hold this 3rd MDCF under the Theme: "Building Upon Foundations-Focusing Towards Future Inclusive Development". Discussion at a two-day forum centred on development pathways of strategic importance to Myanmar, human capacity enhancement, land resources management, social protection, rural development and poverty alleviation, the framework for economic and social reforms, policies for national development projects, foreign aid, and future cooperation. The forum also discussed matters related to elections, peace processes and business transactions with development partners. The Union Minister for National Planning and Economic Development, chaired the Day One forum and the discussions of progress on the implementation of the Nay Pyi Taw Accord for Effective Development Cooperation were presented by the Deputy Minister for MNPED and Advisor to the President.

At the 3rd MDCF, the Joint Statement by the European Union was released and expressed their positive views and commended what the Government of Myanmar for all they have achieved and remarkable process of reform, signaling their commitment to engage the country on another path, to listen to aspirations of the people and to work towards improving their lives. Another remarkable significance of 3rd MDCF was that the new Aid Information Management System (AIMS) been provided by EU was launched on the first day of the Forum. EU also committed to continue their technical assistance and increase development assistance in the main areas like peace building, governance-including police reform and elections-rural development, health education, and trade and private sector development.

When we try to make a review on those assistance and partnerships, we can clearly see that they also pledged to strengthen government capacity to lead Myanmar's development efforts and engage with public and private actors in the planning and implementation process, the development assistance to be more effectively use for all citizens, including the most vulnerable, and help them benefit from and be involved in shaping Myanmar's transition.

Yemeni Houthi fighters fire on protesters after clashes kill 26

SANNA, 14 Feb — Tens of thousands of Yemenis demonstrated in several cities on Saturday against the rule of the Shi'ite Muslim Houthi movement whose gunmen fired on protesters in the central town of Ibb and wounded four, medics said. It was the second day of nationwide demonstrations against the Iranian-backed Houthis in less than a week after its dissolution of parliament this month unravelled security and sent Western and Arab embassies packing.

Activists said they were enraged by the death on Saturday of Saleh al-Bashiri, who they say was detained by gunmen as they broke up an anti-Houthi protest in Sanaa two weeks ago and was released to a hospital with signs of torture on his body on Thursday. There was no immediate comment from the Houthis.

Yemen's upheaval has drawn international concern as it shares a long border with top world oil exporter Saudi Arabia, and the country is also fighting one of the most formidable branches of al-Qaeda with the help of US drone strikes.

Heavy clashes between Houthi fighters and Sunni Muslim tribesmen fighting alongside al-Qaeda militants in the southern mountainous province of al-Bayda on Saturday killed 16 Houthi rebels along with 10 Sunni tribesmen and militants, security officials and tribal sources told Reuters. The state faces collapse in impoverished, strife-torn Yemen two weeks after the Houthis took formal control of the country and continued an armed push southward.

Greece promises to do 'whatever we can' as debt talks cheer markets

BRUSSELS, 14 Feb — The Greek government promised to do "whatever we can" to secure a deal with its international creditors next week, cheering investors as experts from both sides began technical talks on Friday to lay the ground for an accord.

Fear of financial chaos have seen savers taking their cash out of Greek banks. Banking sources said this was the reason the European Central Bank offered more emergency funding for Greek banks on Thursday until after crunch talks among euro zone finance ministers on Monday.

Greek markets rose strongly after new prime minister Alexis Tsipras, elected on a promise to scrap a bailout deal he says has impoverished millions, agreed to have aides sit down with officials from the European Union, European Central Bank and the International Monetary Fund - commonly known as the "troika". However, the Dutch finance minister, who will chair a meeting on Monday of euro zone colleagues, continued to play down the chances of a rapid conclusion to negotiations on Monday. "I'm really still

UN chief appeals to Indonesia to stop death row executions

UNITED NATIONS, 14 Feb — United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon appealed to Indonesia on Friday not to execute prisoners on death row for drug crimes, including citizens of Australia, Brazil, France, Ghana, Indonesia, Nigeria and the Philippines.

Indonesia has harsh penalties for drug trafficking and resumed executions in 2013 after a five-year gap. Five foreigners were among six people executed last month, the first executions since President Joko Widodo took office in October.

UN spokesman Stephane Dujarric said Ban had spoken with Indonesian Foreign Minister Retno Marsudi on Thursday "to express his concern at the recent application of capital punishment in Indonesia."

"The United Nations opposes the death penalty under all circumstances," Dujarric said in a statement on Friday. "The Secretary-General appeals to the Indonesian authorities that the executions of the remaining prisoners on death row for drug-related offences not be carried out." Indonesia's Attorney General HM Prasetyo said this month that two Australians — Myuran Sukumaran, 33, and Andrew Chan, 31 — are among eight prisoners due to be executed after Widodo rejected their clemency pleas in January.

Nationals of Brazil, Malawi, the Netherlands, Nigeria and Vietnam were executed by firing squad in January. The case of the two Australian men threatens to strain already fragile relations between Australia and Indonesia. The two were identified as leaders of the so-called Bali Nine, a group of nine arrested on the resort island in 2005 and convicted of attempting to smuggle some 18 lb (8 kg) of heroin to Australia. Other members of the group have been sentenced to long prison terms.

Indonesia's foreign ministry spokesman said the death penalty was in accordance with Indonesian law and did not conflict with respect for human rights as governed by the constitution.

"The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights states that the death penalty can be imposed for the most serious crimes," spokesman Armanatha Nasir said by text message.

"Indonesia is of the view that drug crimes constitute most serious crimes that have indiscriminately made millions of victims suffer and caused many deaths."

Australia is pursuing a last-ditch deal with Indonesia to save its citizens, Foreign Minister Julie Bishop said on Thursday. She said last month she would not rule out recalling Australia's envoy if the executions went ahead. Brazil and the Netherlands recalled their ambassadors in Indonesia, and Nigeria summoned Indonesia's ambassador in Abuja, after last month's executions.

G-7 "concerned" about ongoing battle in run-up to Ukraine cease-fire

WASHINGTON, 14 Feb — The Group of Seven major nations voiced concern on Friday about continued fighting in eastern Ukraine in the run-up to the recently negotiated cease-fire between Ukrainian troops and separatists.

The United States, Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy and Japan in a joint statement warned of possible additional sanctions against Russia if the promised truce that takes effect Sunday is broken.

The G-7 countries said they "welcome" the agreement on the planned cease-fire reached by Russia and Ukraine as well as France and Germany on Thursday after their marathon talks in Minsk. Implementation of the so-called Minsk Package "offers a way forward to a comprehensive, sustainable and peaceful resolution to the crisis in eastern Ukraine," the G-7 said.

"However, the G-7 remains concerned about the situation in Ukraine, in particular in view of the fighting around Debaltseve," causing numerous civilian casualties, it said.

The G-7 urged "all sides" to adhere strictly to the provisions of Thursday's cease-fire deal.

The G-7 "stands ready to adopt appropriate measures against those who violate the 'Minsk package' and therefore intensify the costs for them," it said.

On Wednesday, euro zone finance ministers failed even to agree a broad common statement on how to maintain funding for Greece following the expiry at the end of this month of the three-year-old bailout package - hated by many Greeks along with the troika that has enforced its terms.

Tsipras wants a new financial package, freed of unpopular terminology and the most burdensome conditions. But Germany, backed solidly so far by the other 17 euro zone states, insists his government should extend the current terms for some months, giving it time to develop a new strategy if it wishes. Greek spokesman Gabriel Sakellariadis also said that if euro zone finance ministers failed to get a deal in Brussels on Monday evening, that would not be catastrophic. That view is not entirely shared in some other European capitals, especially those like Berlin and Helsinki where any deal with Greece will need to be ratified by local parliaments.

Gov't urged Japanese woman in October not to go to Islamic State areas

TOKYO, 14 Feb — A Japanese woman who went missing with her French husband in November was urged by the Japanese government in October not to go to areas controlled by the Islamic State militant group after public authorities were alerted that she was planning to go.

According to a written response to an opposition lawmaker approved by the Cabinet on Friday, the Foreign Ministry asked the woman not to travel to Syria, much of which is controlled by Islamic State, in mid- and late October.

The government said it does not know whether the woman is currently in Islamic State territory.

The woman and her husband, who is of Algerian descent, are both Muslims in their 20s and have said they want to engage in humanitarian activities, according to the authorities.

key, which borders Syria, in early November.

In a separate response to criticism over Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's speech in January pledging $200 million in non-military aid to "countries contending with ISIL," the government said it was "natural that ISIL, which is threatening the entire international community, would be mentioned."

ISIL is an acronym referring to Islamic State.

Iraqi army repels attack on base hosting US Marines, officials say

Tribal fighters take part in a military training to prepare for fighting against Islamic State militants, at the Ain al-Assad military base in Anbar Province on 15 Nov, 2014.

REUTERS

BAGHDAD, 14 Feb — About 25 Islamic State fighters led by several suicide bombers attacked Ain al-Asad air base in Iraq's Anbar Province on Friday but were repulsed by Iraqi security forces guarding the perimeter who killed most of the assailants, the Pentagon said.

Rear Admiral John Kirby, the Pentagon press secretary, told reporters in Washington that US Marines training Iraqi military troops at the sprawling base were about 2 miles (3.5 km) away and were not involved in the fight.

US forces scrambled drones and Apache helicopters to assist but the fighting was over by the time they arrived and they never fired a shot, said Army Colonel Steve Warren, a Pentagon spokesman.

Kirby said the latest information from Iraq indicated the attack was carried out by "somewhere in the neighbourhood of 20 to 25" Islamic State fighters and was led by several suicide bombers, some of whom evidently detonated their vests.

The battle took place at the perimeter of the base and it was not immediately clear whether the attackers were able to penetrate into the facility. Kirby cautioned that the information was preliminary and some details could change as Iraqi officials get a better understanding of how the attack unfolded.

"It does appear now that most, if not all of them, were wearing Iraqi uniforms," Kirby said of the attackers.

Militants from the jihadist group had attacked the Ain al-Asad base and the nearby town of al-Baghdadi a day earlier, leading to sporadic clashes in the town overnight.

An Iraqi official said Islamic State had been cleared from most of al-Baghdadi, with the remaining fighting centred around a police station.

That conflicted with reports from a tribal leader who said the jihadists were still in control of much of the town. Kirby said US assessments indicated Islamic State fighters were in control of al-Baghdadi.

Ongoing clashes and poor communications in the area made it difficult to confirm such reports.

Al-Baghdadi has been besieged for months by Islamic State, which captured swathes of northern and western Iraq last year, prompting a campaign of US-led air strikes and the deployment of hundreds of US military advisers to the country.

About 320 US Marines are training members of the Iraqi 7th Division at the base, which has been struck by mortar fire on at least one previous occasion since December.

WASHINGTON, /AMMAN, 14 Feb — The United States is readying plans to resupply Jordan with munitions in the coming weeks, possibly including precision-guided arms, expediting support for the kingdom as it expands its role in air strikes against the Islamic State (IS), officials say.

The State Department and Pentagon declined comment on any future moves to assist Jordan with requests for weapons. But several US officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that planning was well underway to help replenish Jordan's supplies of ordnance.

US efforts to expedite delivery of munitions and other weapons follow a vocal appeal from Jordan's King Abdullah to American lawmakers last week for greater US support.

A source close to the Jordanian government told Reuters the kingdom believed its supplies of bombs are being stretched too thin as it expands its role in strikes following the Islamic State's grisly execution of a Jordanian pilot.

Islamic State's release of a video early this month showing pilot Muath al-Kasaesbeh burnt alive in a cage has triggered a public backlash in Jordan and sharpened the focus of Arab allies contributing to the war effort. Jordan is among a group of Arab countries, which includes Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, and the United Arab Emirates, that have joined US air strikes on IS, which controls large swathes of Iraq and Syria. Kurds regain Syrian villages from Islamic State

BEIRUT, 14 Feb — Kurdish forces backed by US-led air strikes have re-

driving back Islamic State militants in the past three weeks, a group monitoring the conflict said on Saturday.

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said that although the Kurds had recaptured many villages since winning back Kobani in late January, their progress had been slowed by renewed clashes to the west and southwest of the town, where Islamic State had redirected its fighters.

The battle for the predominantly Kurdish town, known as Ayn al-Arab in Arabic, became a focal point for the US-led air campaign against the al-Qaeda offshoot in Syria.

Islamic State controls large areas of northern and eastern Syria, including a strip of territory across the northern Aleppo countryside and a corridor stretching southeast from Raqqa Province to the frontier with Iraq.

The Syrian Kurds, who also received military support from Iraqi Kurdish peshmerga forces, said they drove Islamic State from the town near the Turkish border on 26 January. US-led forces have carried out almost daily air strikes on Islamic State targets around the area since late last year.

The Kurds were joined by several hundred rebel fighters in the battles for areas surrounding the town, the Observatory's founder Rami Abdulrahman said. The rebel groups included the Shams al-Shamal brigade and the Raqqa Revolutionaries Brigade, anti-Islamic State fighters from northern Syria who had battled alongside the Kurds to win back territory.

Islamic State's advance on Kobani last year with heavy weapons drove tens of thousands of residents over the border into Turkey. The Kurds, armed with mainly light weapons, called for international help and the town now lies in ruins.—Reuters

Tokyo, 14 Feb — Honda Motor Co will show off the flight of its HondaJet small aircraft for the first time in Japan in April, its aircraft development subsidiary's president said on Friday.

Honda Aircraft Co President Michimasa Fujino unveiled the plan to reporters in Asahikawa, Hokkaido. The first HondaJet for mass production successfully made its maiden flight last June in the United States.

A test-ride event of the aircraft is now being planned for government officials and the press in Japan, with Fujino saying the company is considering a route between Narita airport near Tokyo and a regional airport.

Wealthy individuals are targeted as potential buyers of the small aircraft.

The company has already received orders for more than 100 HondaJets in the United States and Europe, with the delivery planned to start by the end of June.

Honda has yet to decide the release date of the aircraft in Japan.

Austria calling on UN members to back anti-nuke statement

VIENNA, 14 Feb — Austria has called on members of the United Nations to back a written statement denouncing nuclear weapons and pledging to work toward banning them, diplomatic sources said. In the statement, distributed to all UN member states in mid-January, Austria "calls on all states parties to the NPT (Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty)...to identify and pursue effective measures to fill the legal gap for the prohibition and elimination of nuclear weapons."

The move is aimed at giving momentum to discussions on nuclear disarmament ahead of a meeting to review the cornerstone treaty from late April and 70 years on from the US atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. It is expected to meet resistance from nuclear weapons states including Britain, China, France, Russia and the United States. Japan, which is protected by the US nuclear umbrella and opposes an outright ban, is facing a difficult decision. A Japanese government official said, "We will make our stance clear by the review conference." The statement is based on an earlier one at the third international conference on the humanitarian impact of nuclear arms held in Vienna in December. It does not directly address the creation of a nuclear ban treaty. The Austrian government is seeking as many UN members as possible to express support for the statement and plans to present the results at the NPT review conference to be held in New York from 27 April to 22 May. —Kyodo News

Mexico must probe thousands of 'disappearances' — UN

GENEVA, 14 Feb — A United Nations watchdog called on Mexico on Friday to probe and prosecute alleged complicity of state forces in thousands of "disappearances", including a notorious case of 43 students believed murdered last year.

Mexico's delegation told the UN Committee on Enforced Disappearances at a review last week that 11,300 people were unaccounted for. Amnesty International said in a statement that more than 22,600 had gone missing in the past eight years amid "a huge problem of impunity".

In their findings, the committee's 10 independent experts said they had received information that "illustrates a context of generalised disappearances in a great part of the territory (of Mexico), many of which could be qualified as enforced disappearances".

"Enforced disappearances" are those linked to detention or abduction by state agents such as police or security forces, or their allies, who conceal the victim's fate.

"The state has informed us that in contrast to the thousands of enforced disappearances that we assume ... there are exactly six persons put to trial and sentenced for this crime," committee member Rainer Huhle told a news briefing.

The panel urged Mexico to establish a special prosecutor's office to lead investigations and prosecutions.

It said Mexican authorities should step up searches for all missing, including migrants from Central America who have vanished on their way to the United States, and share DNA samples from unidentified bodies.

In a statement, Mexico's government said it was fully committed to improving the way the country handles disappearances.

Mexico's Attorney General Jesus Murillo has said there is no doubt that the 43 students were murdered last September and their remains incinerated and dumped into a river in the nearby town of Cocula.

Officials say they were abducted by corrupt police officers, who handed them over to a local drug gang. The former mayor of the southwestern town of Iguala has been arrested.

Parents of the students met the UN panel to appeal for help in seeking justice, saying they had no faith in the government's ability to investigate the crime.

"The grave case of the 43 students subjected to enforced disappearance in September 2014 in the state of Guerrero illustrates the serious challenges Mexico is facing in terms of the prevention, investigation and punishment for enforced disappearances and searching for the disappeared," the UN panel said. —Reuters

Canadian police say Valentine's Day mass shooting plot foiled

TORONTO, 14 Feb — Canadian police said on Friday they foiled a plot in which at least two people allegedly planned to commit a mass shooting in the East Coast province of Nova Scotia on Valentine's Day.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) said in a statement the plot involved a 19-year-old man from Timberlea, Nova Scotia, and a 23-year-old woman from Geneva, Illinois.

Police said they obtained information that suggested the two had access to firearms and intended to go to a public venue in the Halifax, Nova Scotia, region on 14 February to kill people, and then themselves.

The police statement did not suggest a possible motive, but officers told a media briefing they would not characterize it as a "terrorist event."

"I would classify it as a group of individuals that had some beliefs and were willing to carry out violent acts against citizens, but there's nothing in the investigation to classify it as a terrorist attack," said Nova Scotia RCMP Commanding Officer Brian Brennan, according to CBC News.

"I can tell you that it's not culturally based."

Evidence suggested two other Nova Scotia males, aged 20 and 17, were involved, though their role is still to be determined, police said.

Police said they found the 19-year-old male dead at a residence early on Friday and the 20-year-old male and 23-year-old female were arrested at the Halifax airport. The 17-year-old male was arrested elsewhere.

"We believe we have apprehended all known individuals in this matter and eliminated the threat. We are not seeking any further suspects at this time," the statement said. —Reuters

BRICS cooperation expands to population issues

BRASILIA, 14 Feb — The BRICS bloc of emerging economies has adopted a five-year agenda to jointly tackle population issues, including women's rights, aging and migration.

Ministers and high-level envoys from bloc members Brazil, Russia, India, China and South Africa, which have a combined population of nearly 2.9 billion, announced the decision late Thursday in Brazil's capital Brasilia, following three days of talks.

The approval of the 2015-2020 agenda means the bloc, which has already consolidated cooperation in political, financial and economic fields, will now work together on social and demographic matters.

Alexandre Ghislene, director of human rights and social affairs at Brazil's Foreign Affairs Ministry, said the measure helps bolster not only the bloc, which includes four of the world's 10 most populous nations, but also “south-south cooperation.”

“BRICS countries want to share our experience not just among ourselves, but also with other developing nations that are interested,” Ghislene said.

President of Brazil's National Population and Development Commission Ricardo Paes de Barros highlighted the importance of cooperation, saying China has rich experience in migration management during its urbanization as well as in training, health care and education.

Brazil can learn from China how to manage the floating population, increase the presence of women in the workplace and reduce maternal mortality, said Paes.

Deputy Minister of China's National Health and Family Planning Commission Wang Pei'an underscored the importance of adequately attending to an aging population, especially in a country with 200 million people over the age of 65, to offer this segment a better quality of life.

Russia's Deputy Minister of Labour and Social Protection Sergey Velmyaykin said “aging and waves of migration” are among the problems affecting bloc members, so it makes sense to work together towards “mutual goals.”

His Indian counterpart, SK Sikdar, noted only 30 percent of India's population currently lives in urban areas, but the figure is expected to reach 90 percent in the next 70 years, leading India to take an interest in others' experience in rural-to-urban migration.

The next BRICS ministerial meeting on population issues will be hosted by China in 2018, along with a series of technical meetings over the coming years on each of the agenda's six themes.

Gowns steal the show in new 'Cinderella' movie, actresses say

Actresses Helena Bonham Carter and Lily James (R) arrive for the screening of the movie 'Cinderella' at the 65th Berlinale International Film Festival in Berlin on 13 Feb, 2015.—REUTERS

BERLIN, 14 Feb — The gowns almost steal the show in the new Disney live-action version of "Cinderella", actresses Lily James and Helena Bonham Carter said on Friday at the film's world premiere, but neither would recommend their dresses for street wear.

James, in the title role, wears a gorgeous blue confection by British designer Sandy Powell for the ball where she and the prince, played by Richard Madden, sweep each other off their feet — but the British actress said the ball gown and other outfits she wore were very constricting.

"They kind of do pretty much all the acting sometimes for you," she told journalists at the Berlin International Film Festival where Disney's animated version of the fairytale also made its debut 65 years ago.

"They're so magical and you put them on and you suddenly stand different and you feel different and then it's all part of that magic — but they were quite painful, they fit so tight."

Bonham Carter, who plays the loopy fairy godmother, electrifies the screen in a silver-white number that glows in the dark — courtesy of 4,000 LED lights powered by a 15-pound (7 kg) battery pack she said was attached to her posterior.

"I was a walking lamp," Bonham Carter said, adding it had not crossed her mind that she would be acting at night for the scene where she turns a pumpkin into a coach, mice into horses and fits Cinderella out with the gown and glass slippers.

"There was a lovely young man, Belgian, who came all the way from Belgium, from (electronics company) Philips and he'd come and turn me on ... before we'd start shooting," Bonham Carter said, to laughter.

"But it was an extraordinary dress ... It was a magnificent creation."

Designer Powell said she had had a lot of fun making the gowns.

"I think for me the biggest challenge was to live up to the expectations of Cinderella and not disappoint every six-year-old with something that didn't work," she said.

"The story is a costume-designer's dream. You get to do the good, kind princess and the handsome prince and then the baddies and the baddies really are the best fun," she said.

Cate Blanchett, dolled up like a high-society courtesan, plays the evil stepmother, while Sophie McShera and Holliday Grainger, in pastel and polka-dot horrors, play the stepsisters.

The film, directed by Kenneth Branagh, opens next month.

James Franco joins Stephen King's adaptation

LOS ANGELES, 14 Feb — James Franco is set to take part in '11/22/63', an adaptation of King's novel of the same name which is about a time-travel John F Kennedy assassination.

The thriller from J J Abrams' Bad Robot Productions and Warner Bros TV will be a nine-hour miniseries, reported Ace showbiz.

In the upcoming project, Franco, 36, will play Jake Epping. He is a high-school English teacher who travels back in time to early September 1958 and tries to prevent President Kennedy from being shot.

Epping's mission, however, is threatened by Lee Harvey Oswald and the past which doesn't want to change.

The '11/22/63' project was announced last year.

"I've been a fan of Stephen King since I was in junior high school. The chance to work with him at all, let alone on a story so compelling, emotional and imaginative, is a dream," Abrams said in a statement back then.

Oscar winner behind 'Birdman' filming daunted by one long shot

LOS ANGELES, 14 Feb — Cinematographer Emmanuel Lubezki was finishing the complex filming of "Gravity" when director Alejandro G Inarritu approached him with a daunting proposal: To film "Birdman" in a way that makes the movie appear to be one continuous shot.

In an interview with Reuters, Lubezki said his first thought was: "I hope I don't get to do this" because it was such a big challenge and I didn't want it to be gimmicky."

Known popularly as "Chivo" ('goat' in Spanish), Lubezki is a favourite to win the Academy Award on 22 February for best cinematography, a year after the Mexican earned his first for space thriller "Gravity."

"Birdman" is also a front-runner for best picture.

A seven-time Oscar nominee, the 50-year-old Lubezki has what Inarritu describes as "beautiful talent and exquisite taste," and together they have created a "terrific process." They are now making their second film.

When Inarritu won the Directors Guild award last weekend, he joked with "Gravity" director and fellow Mexican Alfonso Cuarón about their "shared secret weapon."

Still, Lubezki gives Inarritu full credit for the idea of the long, unbroken shot: From the beginning, the director wanted to immerse the audience in Riggan Thomson, played by Michael Keaton, and the collapse of his life as the former superhero actor attempting a comeback in his own Broadway play.

"He wanted this one shot not to be completely objective, so that made it very hard," Lubezki said. "The shot is sometimes very subjective, so you are feeling what he is feeling and you are watching what he is watching, and then goes back to reveal the environment."

It was a formidable challenge for the actors to be filmed in long takes, accustomed as they are to working in tiny bursts of scenes. Keaton felt the full burden.

"He realized that this was no joke, that he had to learn all the dialogue and go through this whole emotional grind in very, very, long takes," Lubezki said.

Only recently did Lubezki realize that "Michael Keaton is playing, like, five characters" in Riggan's different states of mind.

"Sometimes he goes from one character to another, to another, in the same take with no safety net, so it is really, really hard," he said.

The whole undertaking would have been much more taxing for Lubezki if Inarritu had gotten his wish of truly doing the movie in one unbroken shot, in a theatre that had everything they needed.

"I just got lucky that we couldn't find a theatre to do all the guts of the theatre and all the hallways and dressing rooms that worked," he said. "And because of that, we had to chop."

When they were nearly done shooting and they started to put a lot of the movie together, Lubezki said he suddenly felt "the pay-off was immense."

"I have seen a lot of movies that have very long shots, but I have never seen a movie that is partly a comedy, that uses the close-ups these ways," he said. "There was something very special about it."

BEIJING, 14 Feb — The Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences handed out its Scientific and Technical Achievement Awards to the visual effects, sound and technical wizards two weeks before the Oscars.

It's typically held two weeks prior to the Oscars, and though the average moviegoer probably wouldn't recognize many of the award winners, who play vital part of making movies.

China stresses tourist safety for coming holidays

BEIJING, 14 Feb — The State Council, China's cabinet, has called for strengthened safety measures for tourists for the upcoming dual holidays after a deadly stampede in Shanghai on the New Year eve.

"(Related departments) should be on alert of potential risks and keep a strong sense of responsibility so as to map out sound arrangements and safety measures to ensure the security of tourists' lives and assets," said a circular from the cabinet on tourists' safety for the Spring Festival holiday and the Lantern Festival in early March.

The circular cited the deadly stampede in the Bund, Shanghai's riverfront tourist hotspot where 36 were killed on 31 December while people gathered to usher in the new year. The tragedy saw 11 local officials punished.

"The lessons from the Shanghai stampede and similar accidents should be well learned," it said.

According to the document, local governments at or above the county level are responsible for coordinating efforts to ensure tourists' safety within their jurisdictions, and detailed obligations must be delegated to specific people.

The cabinet vowed to pursue the liabilities of officials for inadequate safety measures, slack supervision or duty negligence that lead to severe tourist safety accidents. The circular called on local authorities to focus on mass gatherings and celebration activities, urging key tourist attractions and large hotels to map out emergency response plans in case of stampede and fire.

It also stressed safety checks targeting accommodations, shopping malls, passenger vehicles, cable cars, elevators and other facilities in popular tourist sites.—Xinhua

Germany returns books worth 2.5 million euros stolen from Italian libraries

MUNICH, 14 Feb — German authorities on Friday returned 500 historical books including original works by Renaissance scientists Galileo Galilei and Nicolaus Copernicus, stolen from Italian libraries three years ago, to Naples prosecutors.

Most of the books, worth around 2.5 million euros, were stolen from the Girolamini library in Naples, according to Italian prosecutors. German authorities seized them in a Munich auction house at the Italians' request.

The former director of the library, Massimo De Caro, was convicted of stealing the books and served a jail sentence before being put under house arrest.

"As director his role was to do all he could to protect and preserve the books. However, he reversed his function. By taking advantage of his position, he was able to remove books," said prosecutor Vincenzo Piscitelli, in Munich to collect the works.

"He deactivated the security alarm systems, carried out his activities during night hours or during the holidays when library staff were not there. He was alone, he had the keys, everyone knew he was the director. Therefore he was able to work in complete freedom," he added.

Cursed striker Carroll faces another long lay-off

LONDON, 14 Feb — Type the name of West Ham United striker Andy Carroll into any internet search engine and you will be greeted with page after page chronicling various failing parts of his body. You will also find a few more describing those all too rare days when he was fit enough to terrorise defences for club and country.

A torn knee ligament, and surgery on Tuesday, means there will be no more of those this season for the man who cost West Ham a club record of around 16 million pounds ($24.63 million) to sign from Liverpool in 2013.

Past history suggests Carroll's recovery time will be anything but speedy.

"The recovery phase is expected to keep Carroll out for the remainder of the 2014/15 season," a club statement said.

It is a familiar tale of woe.

When Carroll finally made his move permanent in the summer of 2013, he spent the first half of the season sidelined with a foot injury more commonly associated with ballerinas.

On returning he scored twice in 16 appearances. Before the start of this season Carroll injured his ankle on a pre-season tour of New Zealand and needed surgery in the United States that kept him out until November.

Porto close gap at top in Portugal to one point

LISBON, 14 Feb — Yacine Brahimi scored the only goal of the game to give Porto a 1-0 victory over Guimaraes on Friday that closed the gap at the top of the table in the Portuguese league to within a single point of Benfica.

Brahimi's goal came in the 30th minute after Danilo's cross had been brought down by Oliver in the area and with one swift turn later, the Algerian was left with a relatively easy chance to slot home, which moved them to 49 points on the table.

With Porto due to travel to Basel for their Champions League round of 16 game next Wednesday, they will be happy to have got the potentially tricky game out of the way before their European commitments.

They can now wait to see if Benfica (50) and Sporting (43) can maintain the status quo this weekend, with wins over Setubal and Belenenses respectively. Os Encarnados disposed of Setubal in midweek to reach the Taça de Liga (League Cup) final and must now play them for the second time in four days on Sunday.

Sporting have the seemingly harder task where they must try to defeat a resurgent Belenenses side who are showing good form under coach Lito Vidigal and then need to restart their Europa League campaign against Wolfsburg next week.

Although Benfica have been temporarily pegged back, of the three leaders they appear to have by far the easiest run of fixtures ahead of them, with the added bonus of no European commitments to distract them. — Reuters

Atletico squad is even stronger than last season — Juanfran

MADRID, 14 Feb — After they sold top scorer Diego Costa and fullback Felipe Luis to Chelsea, some predicted Atletico Madrid would struggle to repeat their achievements in 2013-14 when they won La Liga and reached the Champions League final.

The high-profile departures also included goalkeeper Thibaut Courtois, who returned to parent club Chelsea after a loan deal, but defender Juanfran believes the arrival of the likes of Mario Mandzukic, Antoine Griezmann and, most recently, Fernando Torres means the current squad is even better.

Results on the pitch suggest he may be right.

Atletico are third in La Liga, three points behind Barcelona and four adrift of leaders Real Madrid following their 4-0 humiliation of their city rivals at the Calderon last weekend.

They are also through to the last 16 of Europe's elite club competition to face Bundesliga side Bayer Leverkusen.

As Juanfran and his team mates prepare for Sunday's La Liga game at Celta Vigo, the Spain international praised the ability of the club and coach Diego Simeone to bolster the squad effectively and maintain the team's competitiveness.

"The club has made a big effort to keep great players and bring in other very important ones who have lifted the level of the team," Juanfran told a news conference on Friday.

"The squad is better every year ... and that speaks very well of the work the club and the coach are doing," he added.

"It is very difficult for Atletico Madrid to prevent key players leaving given what we are achieving.

"But this year, for me, the squad is the best ever and I hope that next year it's better again so we can continue to challenge the big clubs."

Atletico have proved they remain one of Europe's top teams and their drubbing of Real, who beat them in last season's Champions League final, was their second success against their neighbours in La Liga in 2014-15.

They also beat Real 2-1 on aggregate to win the Spanish Super Cup in August and knocked them out of the King's Cup 4-2 over two legs last month.

"The truth is we played a great match the other day but we have already put it out of our minds," Juanfran said. "For us they were three more points to help us in our goal of achieving great things. It has given us a lot of confidence to approach an extremely tough game against Celta." — Reuters

Serena, Bouchard pull out of Dubai event

DUBAI, 14 Feb — Australian Open champion Serena Williams has pulled out of this week's Dubai Tennis Championships, organisers said on Saturday.

Officials released a brief message on Twitter saying Williams and Canada's Genie Bouchard had withdrawn from the lucrative WTA event.

Williams recently won her sixth Australian Open title but the world number one sat out last week's Fed Cup tie for the United States because of a persistent, nagging cough. No reason was given for Bouchard's withdrawal, after she was awarded a wild card in the event. LONDON, 14 Feb — Louis van Gaal came under fresh attack on Friday over his style of play at Manchester United and acknowledged he was still struggling to come up with a preferred system.

Former England midfielder Paul Scholes labelled recent performances under the Dutch manager as "miserable" and questioned whether he was prepared to play risky, attacking football.

Van Gaal, who this week produced written charts to try and disprove West Ham United manager Sam Allardyce's suggestion that United were playing long-ball football, told a news conference he was not worried by the comments of former players like Scholes.

However, he said he was still grappling with the right balance for a side that contains some of the world's best attacking talents in Angel Di Maria, Wayne Rooney, Robin van Persie and Radamel Falcao.

"I have already played five or six systems and I am looking still for the balance," said Van Gaal whose side are in FA Cup fifth-round action against third tier Preston North End on Monday.

"In spite of the fact we are looking for the balance, our results are not bad and our defensive organisation is not bad. We also score a lot of goals so I cannot say I am very disappointed about that."

With United third in the Premier League, 12 points behind leaders Chelsea, a title challenge is unlikely but the FA Cup offers Van Gaal a chance to mark his first season with a trophy.

After labouring against fourth tier Cambridge United in the fourth round though, he is taking nothing for granted.

"It is fantastic. I have already described, we have to play for the third time a lower team," he said.

"You know the world is against you, the environment is against you because everyone is with the underdog. But the chance that you can survive is higher because you are playing against lower qualities."

Van Gaal is waiting on fitness doubts Phil Jones, Daley Blind and Robin van Persie ahead of Monday's clash.

Jones limped off with a knee problem during the 3-1 win over Burnley on Wednesday while Blind suffered a blow to his head.
