UEC, CSOs break deadlocks between them

By Aye Min Soe

YANGON, 16 Feb — The Union Election Commission and civil society organizations have gained an understanding of each other as both sides have relaxed some strict rules for observing the upcoming General Elections, breaking some deadlocks between them.

During the meeting between UEC and CSOs Monday in Yangon, the UEC has agreed that the election observers should submit their reports on election observation to the commission instead of the requirement to submit their reports, said U Han Shin Win, an advocate of Bade Dha Moe, who participated in the meeting.

CSOs have felt that the UEC have abolished some strict rules and has removed burdens from the CSOs during the meeting, said Chan Nyein Aung, a participant from the Charity Oriented Myanmar.

Chairman of the Union Election Commission U Tin Aye has pledged that the UEC will make utmost efforts for holding the free and fair general elections which is slated to be held in last week of October or in first week of November 2015.

He also called on political parties to cooperate with the UEC and to do check and balance each other so that the election can become a free and fair one.

In his opening address at the meeting, the chairman has also invited the CSOs to cooperate in voters' registration, voter training and voter education in accordance with the rules and regulations of the general election law and instructions of the UEC. U Tin Aye has urged the CSOs to be free from party bias as they have been permitted to observe from voters registration to objection to voting.

Singapore premier's prostate cancer surgery "successful"

Singapore Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong

SINGAPORE, 16 Feb — Singapore Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong underwent "successful" surgery to remove his cancerous prostate gland on Monday, his office said in a brief statement.

The surgeon who carried out the operation was quoted in the statement as saying, "The surgery went very smoothly, and he is expected to recover fully."

The doctor confirmed

there is "no relationship" between this case of cancer and a previous lymphoma the 63-year-pold Lee was diagnosed with in 1992, after which he underwent chemotherapy and the cancer was said to be in remission.

On Sunday, Lee's office said the surgery would entail removal of his prostate gland through "robot-assisted keyhole prostatectomy" at the state-owned Singapore General Hospital.

Deputy Prime Minister Teo Chee Hean is acting prime minister while Lee is on medical leave for one week. Lee, the elder son of former Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew, became prime minister in 2004.

The main English-language daily The Straits Times reported on Monday that he is expected to be back at work in time for the government's next budget proposal, which will be presented by Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister Tharman Shanmugaratnam in Parliament. Based on comments from analysts and government officials, the daily said the news of Lee's health is not expected to affect government affairs, which are expected to proceed as usual.

However, it could affect when he will call the next general election. There have been moves in recent weeks by both Lee's ruling People's Action Party and the opposition camp to gear up for the next polls, which must be called by January 2017. Singapore's benchmark Straits Times index was hovering around the 3.423 level by early afternoon, just about 0.08 percent down, after hitting a low of 3,406 earlier in the day.

China's foreign minister pushes Iran on nuclear deal

Beijing, 16 Feb — A deal with Iran on its controversial nuclear program would help it escape from sanctions and allow more efforts to be spent on economic development, Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi said during a trip to Teheran.

The negotiations between Iran and the United States, Russia, China, France, Germany and Britain face an initial deadline for a basic framework agreement at the end of March, and a 30 June deadline for a final settlement.

US and Iranian officials suggest those deadlines are unlikely to change. US President Barack Obama said last week extending the March deadline would not be useful if Iran did not agree to a framework assuring world powers it is not pursuing nuclear arms capability through its enrichment of uranium.

"Talks on the Iran nuclear issue face a historic opportunity, and striking a comprehensive deal on schedule is the trend of the times and the desire of the people," Wang told his Iranian counterpart, according to a Chinese Foreign Ministry statement issued on Monday.

"Reaching comprehensive agreement is beneficial to Iran upholding its own legal rights, including the right to the peaceful use of nuclear power, and for the people of Iran to throw off the difficulties of sanctions as early as possible and focus on energetically developing the economy," Wang said.

While Iran denies having any nuclear weapons ambitions, it is subject to wide-ranging Western and United Nations sanctions.

Meeting later with Iranian President Hassan Rouhani, Wang said he appreciated Rouhani's pledge not to develop nuclear weapons and urged Iran to push the talks process forward

"The Iran nuclear talks have reached a crucial stage," Wang was quoted as telling Rouhani.

The broad goal of the negotiations is to restrain Iran's nuclear capacity to remove any concerns it could be put to developing bombs in return for the lifting of sanctions that have ravaged the Iranian economy.

China and Iran have close economic, trade and energy ties.

China's crude oil imports from Iran jumped by nearly 30 percent last year to their highest average level since 2011, as Iran's largest oil client boosted shipments after an interim deal eased sanctions on Teheran

Wang said there was still plenty of room for energy cooperation, adding that he also saw "enormous space for cooperation" on industrial projects.

"China is willing to encourage even more Chinese companies to invest in Iran and build factories via the joint development of industrial parks in accordance with Iran's development needs and China's ability," he said.

Indonesia plays down Australia's rage over drug pair execution

BOGOR, (Indonesia), 16 Feb — The Indonesian government shrugs off the tourism backlash threat by Australia, as Indonesia is going ahead with the execution of two Australian drug smugglers, a minister said here on Monday.

"It is no problem," Indonesian Tourism Minister Arief Yahya said when asked about the impact of Bogor, (Indonesia), the possible Australian tourfeb — The Indonesian ist arrival drawdown.

Over one million Australians visited Indonesia last year and it was expected to rise to 1.2 million this year, Yahya said.

The minister said the dispute is between the two governments, which may not impact on the people to people exchange.

Andrew Chan and Myuran Sukumaran have been on death row, being convicted to death penalty in February 2006 for involving in plot to smuggle over eight kg of heroin to Australia from Bali in 2005. Australian Prime Minister Tony Abott has pleaded clemency for the pair to Indonesian President Joko Widodo.

Australian PM Abbott threatens repercussions over Indonesia executions

Sydney, 16 Feb — Australian Prime Minister Tony Abbott has warned Indonesia of the potential for diplomatic fallout if Jakarta goes ahead with the looming execution of two Australian citizens on death row for drugs charges.

Indonesia has harsh penalties for drug trafficking and resumed executions in 2013 after a five-year gap. Five foreigners were among six people executed last month, the first executions since President Joko Widodo took office in October.

Australia has been pursuing an eleventh-hour campaign to save the lives of Myuran Sukumaran, 33, and Andrew Chan, 31, two Australian members of the so-called Bali Nine, convicted in 2005 as the ringleaders of a plot to smuggle heroin out of Indonesia.

The case has enormous resonance as a domestic political issue in Australia, and Abbott ratcheted up the rhetoric at the weekend amid a growing campaign to boycott travel to Bali, one of the most popular destinations for Australian tourists.

"We will be finding ways to make our displeasure felt," Abbott told Australia's Channel Ten on Sunday.

"Millions of Australians are feeling sickened by what might be about to happen in Indonesia."

It was unclear what measures Abbott was considering, but Australia and Indonesia have a long history of diplomatic tension, which has periodically complicated cooperation on regional issues, including people smuggling and intelligence.

Indonesia recalled its envoy and froze military and intelligence cooperation in 2013 after reports that Canberra had spied on top Indonesian officials, including former president Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono's wife.

Full diplomatic cooperation was restored last May, but Foreign Minister Julie Bishop last month refused to rule out following Brazil and the Netherlands in withdrawing its ambassador from Jakarta if the executions went ahead.

Those two countries withdrew their ambassadors last month after two of their citizens were among six people executed for drugs offences.

Australia outlawed capital punishment in 1973 and public opinion staunchly opposes the death penalty for any crime.

The last Australian citizen executed by a foreign government was Nguyen Tuong Van by Singapore in 2005, also on charges of smuggling heroin. That incident had little effect on bilateral relations. But the execution of two Australians for drug offences in Malaysia in 1986 saw relations plummet.

In Sydney, more than 150,000 people signed a petition for clemency handed to the families of the prisoners at the weekend.

A survey released by the Sydney-based Lowy Institute think tank on Monday showed strong public disapproval for the execution, with 62 percent of the 1,211 people surveyed opposing the move.

"As the date for the executions of Andrew Chan and Myuran Sukumaran appears to draw closer, Australian public and political opposition is crystallizing," Michael Fullilove, executive director of the Lowy Institute, said in a statement.

A boycott campaign has been building on social media, where Australians have been using the Twitter hashtag #BoycottBali to announce the cancellation of their holiday plans.

International pressure is also mounting over the executions.

Better Palestinian living standards vital for peace, Blair says

Gaza, 16 Feb — Any Israeli-Palestinian peace deal must lead to improved living conditions for Palestinians to prevent violence between the two from erupting again, Middle East peace envoy Tony Blair said on Sunday.

"The last conflict left Gaza devastated and its people more downtrodden and impoverished," Blair said in Gaza, the site of the July-August war between the territory's Islamist militants and Israel.

"I am extremely concerned that, if we leave Gaza in the state it is in, you have another eruption in violence and then we are back into a further catastrophe," Blair added.

He said a successful peace drive required "a broad and a profound improvement in the daily life of Palestinians ... unified Palestinian politics ... (and) an enhanced role for the region in alliance with the international community."

Blair said Hamas, the Palestinian faction that runs Gaza, had to declare whether it wanted a peace deal with Israel. The group calls for the destruction of Israel and has rejected any peace accords with Israel signed by the west-Palestinian ern-backed Authority led by President Mahmoud Abbas.

"The international community needs clarity from Hamas. Are they a Palestinian nationalist movement dedicated to the achievement of a Palestinian state ... are they prepared to accept the Palestinian state within the 1967 borders or not?"

Some Hamas leaders have said they would accept a Palestinian state on land Israel occupied in a 1967 war in return for a long-term truce. But they would continue to refuse to recognize Israel's right to exist.

Blair, envoy of the United Nations, the European Union, Russia and the United States — the socalled Ouartet - said that only with a unified Palestinian political stance could the international community "promote reconciliation alongside reconstruction."

Little of the $5.4 billion pledged for Gaza's reconstruction at a Cairo conference of international donors last October has reached the territory, and thousands of Palestinians have been sheltering in tents near destroyed homes.

Thousands more have been living in damaged buildings, using plastic sheeting to keep out rain. Some 20,000 displaced persons are still being housed in UN-run schools.

The Palestinian Authority was meant to oversee rebuilding because Israel and the West fear Hamas would use the materials to build tunnels and fortifications.

Blair added that private enterprise was a vital part of improving the daily lives of Palestinians in Gaza. "Once there was a thriving private sector here and it has to be a thriving private sector again ... ### Japan closes embassy in Yemen due to worsening security situation

Cairo, 16 Feb — Japan closed its embassy in Yemen on Sunday due to the worsening security situation in the country, the Japanese Foreign Ministry said on Monday.

Japanese Ambassador to Yemen Katsuyoshi Hayashi and four embassy officials have already left the Middle Eastern country, the ministry said.

Some of the embassy staff will conduct operations from the Qatari capital of Doha, it said.

The Houthis militant group declared on 6 February that it had seized power. It captured Yemen's capital Sanaa in September 2014.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga told a press briefing in Tokyo that the "the security situation there is extremely severe," adding that other countries are also taking similar steps. Japan's Self-Defence Forces members have been dispatched to Diibouti for an antipiracy mission in waters off Somalia, but the top government spokesman said their operations will not be affected.

Heavy shelling as rebels keep pressure on Ukraine's Debaltseve

Vuhlehirsk,(Ukraine), 16 Feb — Separatists are keeping up attacks on the strategic railway junction of Debaltseve despite a ceasefire in eastern Ukraine, a Kiev military spokesman said on Monday, and witnesses reported heavy shelling in the area.

"The illegal armed groups are not supporting the ceasefire," military spokesman Anatoly Stelmakh told reporters, adding that the Russian-backed rebels were using Grad rockets and tanks to attack government forces holding the town.

"The number of attacks on Debaltseve has even increased in comparison to previous days and they are using all types of weapons," he said. "The terrorists have been given the order to take Debaltseve at all cost."

A Reuters correspondent at Vuhlehirsk, about 10 km (some six miles) to the west of Debaltseve, reported heavy shelling from the direction of the town, with blasts around every 10 seconds.

Underscoring the fragility of the ceasefire, which was negotiated by Ukraine, Russia, Germany and France last week and which came into force at midnight on Sunday, the Kiev military said government positions had been fired on 112 times by rebels in the past 24 hours.

Italy's Renzi defies opposition over Senate reform

ROME, 16 Feb — Italian Prime Minister Matteo Renzi has moved a step closer to pushing through constitutional reforms he says will create a more stable government, after a raucous debate that saw opposition parties walk out of parliament.

After a marathon session that ended in the early hours of Saturday, deputies in Renzi's majority coalition approved the measures in a half-empty chamber that had been deserted by most of the opposition.

The measures, central to Renzi's promised reforms of the political system, are intended to allow more stable government by shrinking the Senate and removing its power to block laws, leaving the Chamber of Deputies dominant in the legislature.

The result still must be passed by the Senate itself, where Renzi's coalition has a much smaller majority. He also will lack support from former Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi, who withdrew his backing after the 40 year-old Renzi pushed through the election of Sergio Mattarella as president last month, against Berlusconi's objec-

Previously, the two leaders had agreed to cooperate on constitutional reforms under an accord known as the "Nazarene Pact", named after the headquarters of Renzi's center-left Democratic Party, where it was sealed last year. The bill passed the vote in the lower house without Berlusconi's help.

Renzi drew bitter criticism from opposition parties for ramming a key constitutional measure through without broad support from parliament, which was powerless to stop it despite rowdy clashes.

Renato Brunetta, lower house floor leader of Berlusconi's Forza Italia party, accused Renzi of a "slide into authoritarianism". The anti-establishment 5-Star Movement said Italy was on the verge of a "bloodless

"There is only one way out: to dissolve parliament and go to new elections," the 5-Star leader, Beppe Grillo, said on his blog.

Renzi himself defended the decision to proceed with the vote and promised to push on with his reform agenda. "We did everything we could to make sure the opposition was at the negotiating table," he told RAI state television. "What can we do if they go off?"

In the Senate, Renzi has a smaller majority. He also faces not just opposition parties but also a significant number of dissidents in his Democratic Party. A final vote is expected in early March, but the proposals, which Renzi said would be put to a referendum, are not expected to become law until at least the end of the year.

Paris, 16 Feb French Prime Minister Manuel Valls said on Monday the threat of militant attacks in the country remained "particularly high" and that exceptional security measures would remain in place as long as needed after attacks in Copenhagen. France has deployed some 10,000 military personnel to protect public sites and announced thousands of new hires in the intelligence sector after 17 people were killed in a series of attacks by Islamist gunmen in January.

Valls said two attack at the weekend in Copenhagen, which targeted a synagogue and a free speech event involving an artist who had caricatured Mohammad, underscored the need for prolonged action against what he called "Islamo-fascism".

"We will prolong these measures as long as necessary, as long as the threat remains so high,"

Valls told RTL radio of a security plan involving deployment of troops and police in public places and near sensitive sites.

Separately, French police opened an inquiry on Sunday after more than 200 tombs were damaged in a Jewish cemetery near the northeastern city of Strasbourg.

Valls called upon French Jews to remain in France and promised the "strongest possible" legal response after Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu called anew upon European Jews to emigrate to Israel after the Copenhagen attacks.

"My message French Jews is as follows: France is as hurt as you are and France does not want you to leave," he said.

Valls said authorities believed the cemetery attacks were the work of several people but there were no firm leads at present.—Reuters

Merkel's conservatives suffer blow in state vote, eurosceptics gain

The anti-euro Alternative for Germany (AfD) party looked set to win its first seats in a regional assembly in the west of the country on Sunday after an election in Hamburg which also saw Angela Merkel's conservatives suffer their worst result since World War Two.

Exit polls showed the AfD just above the 5 percent threshold needed to enter the state parliament. If confirmed, the result could help establish the anti-bailout party as a force beyond the former communist east, where it posted big gains in three regional votes last year.

The Social Democrats (SPD) handily won the vote in Hamburg, a northern port city that has traditionally been a stronghold for the center-left party, winning around 47 percent of the vote. To stay in office, popular SPD state premier Olaf Scholz will probably have to form a coalition with the environmentalist Christian (CDU) were the big losers on the night, coming in a distant second at about 16 percent.

Still, Merkel remains hugely popular in Germany and experts had cautioned ahead of the vote that the result should not be seen as a reflection of the national

The conservatives put up a candidate widely viewed as a weak alternative to Scholz, a centrist whose steady leadership has been likened to that of Merkel.

Paul Ziemiak, who leads the youth wing of Merkel's CDU, called the result a "serious wakeup call" for his party, but Michael Grosse-Broem-Chancellor Merkel's er, parliamentary whip for Democrats the CDU in Berlin, played it down, saying it was "an election in a big city nothing more and nothing less". Worries that Greece's new anti-austerity government could unleash a fresh wave of turmoil in the euro zone may have given the AfD a boost in Hamburg.

The result will help silence those who predicted the AfD would fizzle out or that its appeal was limited to eastern Germany, where its law-and-order, anti-immigration stances are popular. Founded in 2013, the AfD is one of a number of new parties across Europe that have lured voters worried about the economic costs of euro membership.

Another interesting development in Hamburg was a strong score for the business-friendly Democrats (FDP), an influential kingmaker in postwar German politics which shockingly failed to win enough votes to make it into the federal parliament in 2013. The FDP was on track to win some 7 percent of the vote in Hamburg, breaking a string of embarrassing losses and signaling that the party's prospects may be brightening.

Opium poppy cultivation must be eliminated

By Myint Win Thein

ultivation of opium poppy and manufacturing of narcotic drugs have been a great problem in Myanmar which damages the image of the country.

Although the practice of opium poppy cultivation was brought into the country by colonialists about a century ago, it can still have a negative impact on the history of the country enormously. Another problem at the border areas is the manufacturing of stimulant tablets by illegal groups. As a result, stimulant tablets are available in a number of places in the country as well as in other countries.

On the other hand, successive governments of the country internationally vowed a number of times to eliminate cultivation of opium poppy and manufacturing of narcotic drugs at the particular time without success. Actually, the problem of drugs not only affects Myanmar but also hurt the entire world.

In addition, Myanmar is put into danger not only but narcotic drugs itself but also from the money generated from drug trafficking. Recently, Senior General Min Aung Hlaing said that the problem of opium cultivation and narcotic drugs must be eliminated once and for all since the problem is putting the mankind into danger. It is high time the problem were addressed once and for all.

ue to a range of reasons and complex circumstances over the past decades, my loving son first went to Japan and then to Australia to pursue further education. After obtaining two diplomas in Canberra, Capital of Australia, he came back home in Yangon in quest of a suitable and sustainable career. Despite his devoted and dedicated efforts to engage in an honest business in Yangon for a certain length of time, it was futile and pointless.

When there was no scope and space for a decent and proper livelihood back in our beloved country in those years of uncertain and unclear economic environment, he and his family migrated to Australia.

During the school holidays of our grand children, they visited us in Yangon once every two to three years.

In January 2015, my son and his family members visited Singapore on vacation. The rendezvous point was at the condominium of our loving daughter Thuzar at Taman Serasi, just across the Singapore Botanical Gardens. Thuzar is on government assignment for three years in that country.

I and my better half have had a good time and full of fun with our grand kids for two weeks in Singapore. They went back home in Sydney on 31 January 2015.

Since my arrival in Singapore on 12 January, I have written five English articles entitled (1) [Significant features of "Singapore Expo" and "John Little Mega Expo Sale" in Singapore: January 2015]; (2) [National University of Singapore: A University stands and shines top in Asia]; (3) [ICT in brief and pragmatic application of E-Governance in Singapore]; and (4) [Education in Singapore: Pre-school Playgroup to Junior College]; and (5) Education in Singapore: Universities and International Schools in the Global New Light of Myanmar in January and February 2015.

Just two days before our departure from Singapore for home in Yangon, my loving daughter Thuzar accompanied me to the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies (ISEAS) in Singapore, which is well-known throughout the region, especially for its rich depository of knowledge resources on Southeast Asia at the ISEAS Library. Our trip to ISEAS had a two-fold interest, as one of Thuzar's good friends and former colleague, Moe Moe, is at ISEAS as a lead researcher at the ASEAN Studies Centre, and also a member of the ISEAS Myanmar Studies Program. I had the chance to catch up with Moe Moe, after quite some years, and see her place of

Bahrain sends warplanes to Jordan to fight Islamic State

Dubai, 16 Feb — Bahrain has deployed war planes to Jordan, the state news agency BNA said on Sunday, becoming the second Gulf Arab country to send warplanes to help in the fight against Islamist militants in Syria and Iraq.

Jordan has taken a leading role in conducting air strikes against Islamic State strongholds in Syria and Iraq since the militants killed a Jordanian pilot, Mouath al-Kasaesbeh, who was captured by the group after his plane crashed in Syria in December.

"A group of Bahraini Royal Air Force planes have landed in the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan to participate in the international effort to annihilate terrorism," BNA said.

It did not say how many aircraft or what kind were sent.

Westerners join Iraqi Christian militia to fight Islamic State

Duнoк, 16 Feb — Saint Michael, the archangel of battle, is tattooed across the back of a US army veteran who recently returned to Iraq and joined a Christian militia fighting Islamic State in what he sees as a biblical war between good and evil.

Brett, 28, carries the same thumb-worn pocket Bible he did whilst deployed to Iraq in 2006 — a picture of the Virgin Mary tucked inside its pages and his favorite verses highlighted.

"It's very different," he said, asked how the experiences compared. "Here I'm fighting for a people and for a faith, and the enemy is much bigger and more brutal." Thousands of foreigners have flocked to Iraq and Syria in the past two years, mostly to join Islamic State, but a handful of idealistic Westerners are enlisting as well, citing frustration their governments are not doing more to combat the ultra-radical Islamists or prevent the suffering of innocents.

The militia they joined is called Dwekh Nawsha meaning self-sacrifice in the ancient Aramaic language spoken by Christ and still used by Assyrian Christians, who consider themselves the indigenous people of Iraq.

A map on the wall in the office of the Assyrian political party affiliated with Dwekh Nawsha marks the Christian towns in northern Iraq, fanning out around the city of Mosul.

The majority are now under control of Islamic State, which overran Mosul last summer and issued am ultimatum to Christians: pay a tax, convert to Islam, or die by the sword. Most fled.

Dwekh Nawsha operates alongside Kurdish peshmerga forces to protect Christian villages on the frontline in Nineveh province. "These are some of the only towns in Nineveh where church bells ring. In every other town the bells have gone silent, and that's unacceptable," said Brett, who has "The King of Nineveh" written in Arabic on the front of his army vest.

Brett, who like other foreign volunteers withheld his last name out of concern for his family's safety, is the only one to have engaged in fighting so far. ### Australian food company recalls berries after hepatitis A outbreak linked to China

Sydney, 16 Feb — An Australian company has recalled its frozen berry products following a hepatitis A outbreak linked to poor hygiene and water supplies in a Chinese packaging plant, reigniting fears about the safety of the Asian giant's food exports.

Australian authorities were investigating on Monday after as many as nine people were diagnosed with the disease after eating the Patties Foods Ltd berries, which were grown in Chile and China before being packaged at the Chinese factory.

"We do expect to see more cases," Sonya Bennett, senior director of Queensland state's communicable diseases unit, told reporters.

Department stores beef up service for Chinese ahead of Lunar New Year

Токуо, 16 Feb — Major department stores in Japan have been beefing up their service for Chinese customers ahead of the Lunar New Year holiday season starting on Wednesday, in a bid to attract big-spending tourists amid a slump in domestic spending.

To cope with rising Chinese visitor numbers, which have been further boosted by a weaker yen and an expansion of duty-free items, some department stores have been giving Chinese lessons to their workers or providing them tablet computers to aid communication.

According to the Japan Tourism Agency, the average spending per Chinese tourist last year including accommodation fees and shopping amounted to 231,753 yen (about $1,955), up about 10 percent from the previous Daimaru Tokyo Store near Tokyo Station has offered lessons of simple Chinese conversations for its employees. The store also plans to have workers attend Chinese and English language schools from April as it expects the number of foreign customers will rise over the long term.

Fortunes of UK workers diverge as many miss out on pay rises

Workers cross the road in Whitehall in central London on 20 Oct, 2010.—REUTERS

London, 16 Feb — Two fifths of British workers landed significant pay rises last year but a similar number endured stagnant Monday.

salaries as the fortunes of the workforce diverged sharply, a human resources organization said on

The Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development (CIPD) warned of a "tale of two workforces" as its quarterly labour market report showed 40 percent of employees enjoyed pay rises of 2 percent or more while 39 percent saw their pay frozen and 3 percent suffered pay

Another 18 percent rein the year to December.

The findings suggest that a large part of the British workforce is still feeling the pinch ahead of national elections in May, even though the average wage increase has outpaced inflation in recent months.

"The figures show a clear gap between employees that have comfortably exceeded the current inflation rate in their pay packets and those who haven't seen any increase at all," CIPD analyst Gerwyn Davies said.

That may help explain why Prime Minister David Cameron's Conservaceived a pay rise between tive Party is still narrowly 0.1 percent and 2 percent trailing the opposition Labour Party in most polls, despite the UK's headline economic performance being among the strongest in Europe.

The CIPD survey showed public sector workers were hit the hardest, with 54 percent of public employers saying their wages were frozen.

The Bank of England said on Thursday it expected below-zero inflation in coming months.

Manufacturing firms were among the strongest performers with 54 percent reporting pay hikes of 2 percent or more, but more than a third of manufacturing and production firms froze pay.

Davies said firms across all sectors were more likely to have awarded large pay increases if their strategy was to maximise value rather than trim costs.

"Therefore, the role for government is ... to understand the levers that can help more firms increase their workplace productivity and move up the quality chain," he said.

Cambodia bans drone cameras in country's capital

Phnom Penh, 16 Feb tive issued on Monday. Cambodian authorities on Monday banned the use of drone cameras to capture footage in the country's capital over concern that it violates people's privacy and public security.

The Phnom Penh municipal office decided to ban the use of the cameras "to ensure respect for the rights of the people and to maintain security, safety and public order," according to a direc-

But in case such use is necessary, users must seek prior permission from the municipal government, it said. Violators, if found, will be punished according to the law, but the authorities did not specify the possible extent of punishment. Police sources told Kvodo News that the move came after a German man was found flying a remote-controlled drone camera over the Royal Palace in the capital on Sat- director general of the Camurday afternoon when Queen Mother Monineath Sihanouk was taking exercise. The palace is the residence of both King Norodom Sihamoni and his mother. The man was detained on Saturday for questioning by local authorities soon after a Royal Palace security official made a complaint and was released the same day, the sources said.

Som Chhaya, deputy bodian Broadcasting Service, an umbrella of three local TV channels CNC, CTN and MyTV, said his staff began using drone cameras about two years ago, adding that aerial footage taken by the devices have been very popular.

But he said the ban is "appropriate" as long as there are concerns about security and public order.

Nagasaki Prefecture reprimands three at child centre over murder by girl

Nagasaki, 16 Feb — The Nagasaki prefectural government on Monday reprimanded three officials of a local child consultation centre for their inaction prior to a teenager killing her high school classmate in Sasebo last July. The centre did not properly deal with information from a psychiatrist one month before the killing that the 16-year-old girl, on whom the doctor had performed a psychiatric evaluation, could kill somebody if left unattended, according to the local government.

The centre did not formally accept the psychiatrist's report as a formal consultation request, conduct any follow-up studies or meet the doctor.

The prefectural government has found the centre "failed to fulfill its duties as a consultation facility." The three officials are the 57-year-old head of the centre, a 52-year-old section chief and a 50-yearold official.

The section chief is found to have abused his power over subordinates and hampered the organization's ability to handle cases, preventing an employee who received the psychiatrist's inquiry from discussing the matter with the section chief, the prefectural government said.

The girl is alleged to have strangled her senior high school classmate and then mutilated her body at an apartment in Sasebo, where the suspect lived by herself. She was arrested a day after the killing on 26 July last year. She has been reported as saying she had "a desire to kill someone from around the time I was a junior high school student."

In January, prosecutors sent her to a family court to seek a decision on whether the case involving a minor merited criminal prosecution. She was served with another arrest warrant that month on suspicion of attempting to murder her father by hitting him in the head several times with a metal baseball bat in March 2014.

Her father committed suicide in October.

The boy allegedly created and possessed a 2.08-metre-long air gun that can shoot through a steel can with a metal bullet from a distance of around 1 metre at his home then located in the western Japan city of Itami during the period from last June to November.

China to abolish temporary residence permits

Shanghai, 16 Feb — China plans to abolish temporary residence permits as part of a broader reform of the country's household registration system, the official Xinhua news agency reported, in a move that could boost consumer spending.

Citing a public security reform plan released on Sunday, Xinhua said that temporary permits for migrant workers will be replaced by permanent residency, which offers many of the same privileges as those enjoyed by locals, such as permission to buy flats and cars as well as social security.

Temporary permits are held by hundreds of millions of Chinese workers, who have to obtain the permits before they can live or work in a new city.

The system has been criticized for creating instability and China's leaders have pledged to loosen their grip on residence registration, known as hukou, to try to speed the country's urbanization drive.

The government is also keen to stem any further slowdown in the economy, which in 2014 recorded its weakest growth in 24 years.

London, 16 Feb — Bradford City's unlikely FA Cup journey continued as they knocked over Sunderland 2-0 to reach the quarter-finals on Sunday at a rocking Valley Parade.

The League One (third tier) side continued where they left off in a stunning 4-2 defeat of Premier League leaders Chelsea in the previous round to ease past Gus Poyet's side.

Roared on by a fervent crowd, Bradford were ahead in the third minute through his own goal. Jon Stead sealed victory just past the hour to put the Yorkshire club in the last eight for the first time since beat Leicester City 2-1.

Bradford continued to inject some magic into the competition though as they deservedly beat a poor Sunderland side.

"There is always a danger because the expectancy might have been we would win this one after beating Chelsea but we have kept that underdog spirit," manager Phil Parkison told the BBC.

"It was a good, old fashioned cup tie, a really good advert for the FA Cup."

Sunderland made a torrid start at Valley Parade.

Although Sunderland slowly began to assert their authority before the break they were limited to longrange efforts.

The visitors started the second half brightly but it was Bradford who doubled their lead when England international Adam Johnson was harried into giving the ball away and Stead calmly converted to maintain his record of scoring in every round of this season's competition.
